161. — A course of procedure prescribed by the mortgages, to be pursued in case of a sale by the trustee without foreclosure, is not binding upon the court in proceedings to foreclose such mortgages. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Green Bay and Minnesota R. R. Co., 6 Federal Reporter, 100; 10 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 208, 1881.

162. — Therefore, upon a foreclosure sale, the court is not bound to adopt the provisions of the mortgages, as to the application of the bonds upon the bid of a purchaser, or as to the proportion in which such bonds shall be so received, or as to the manner in which their value shall be ascertained. Ib.

163. — A provision in the decree that the purchaser, after the payment of a certain specified amount in cash, could pay the balance of his bid in outstanding bonds and coupons, secured by the first mortgage. "at such percentage of the face value thereof as this court shall, at the approval of said sale, authorize and direct," is not erroneous, and is similar to that inserted in all railroad mortgage foreclosure sales entered in the seventh circuit. Ib.

164. — vacation of decree. A purchaser at a receiver's sale of a railroad, who, on the ground of the interest thereby acquired, was admitted as a defendant in a suit to foreclose a first mortgage on the property of the railroad, but with the right only to appear at the taking of the account of the amount due on the mortgage, and to be notified of the taking of the account (a decree had been made that the complainants were entitled to a sale of the mortgaged premises to pay the amount due thereon), but who, before the master's report was made, had lost all his interest in the mortgaged premises by reason of a sale thereof under foreclosure of a second mortgage, has no interest in the suit to entitle him to have the final decree therein opened, and the execution set aside, because he was not notified of the taking of the account. Ward v. Montclair R'y Co., 26 N. J. Eq., 260, 1875.

165. — Where a bill was filed in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in behalf of some of many bondholders under railway mortgages, impeaching the proceeding in a cause in equity instituted by the trustees in said mortgages in the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Texas, and the title of the purchaser, under such proceedings; and where the bill shows that the circuit court obtained jurisdiction of the cause, and that the same is still pending in said court, and that the relief which is sought here can be obtained therein on proper application,—held, such a bill is bad on demurrer. Fayolle v. Texas and Pacific Ry Co., 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Dist. Col.), 532. 1882.

166. — A ruling in a foreclosure suit, denying the petition of stockholders to be made parties in the suit brought against their corporation, is not a bar to an independent suit to set aside the decree for fraud. Tazewell County v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 12 Federal Reporter, 752. 1883.

167. — A suit to set aside a decree of foreclosure and sale thereunder is not so far a mere continuation of the original foreclosure suit as to authorize the service of subpoenas upon persons without the territorial jurisdiction of the court. Pacific R. R. Co. v. Missouri Pacific Ry Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 772; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 647. 1890.

168. — Where a court has jurisdiction of a suit brought to impeach a former decree for fraud, if the decree has been carried into execution the party complaining of the former decree may be put into the situation in which he would have been if the decree had not been executed. Osborn v. Michigan Air Line R. R. Co., 2 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 503. 1879.

169. Default; fraud. Where a railway company suffers default in the payment of its bonds secured by mortgage on its line and franchises, and in consequence the mortgage is foreclosed and property sold, the sale cannot be attacked on the ground that the directors of the corporation were actuated by corrupt motives in suffering the default, and that this was known to the trustee, in the absence of any claim of collusion between him and the directors. Harpending v. Munson, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (N. Y.), 408. 1883.

170. Earnings; mortgage in sections. Where, under a decree of foreclosure against a railroad company, reference had been made to a master to ascertain the gross earnings and expenses of a certain section of the road covered by a mortgage, it is not an erroneous principle for the master to make a pro rata estimate of the earnings and expenses of the whole road, it being shown before him that such section had not been operated separately, but as a part of the whole road, and no separate accounts kept of the income or expenses of any particular part. Though such a rule leads not to actual results, but to approximation merely, it is the best which could be adopted. Pullan v. Cincinnati and Chicago Air Line R. R. Co., 5 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 237. 1873.

171. Floating debt. The president and directors of a railroad company had contracted a floating debt to pay interest on its bonds, and for supplies and repairs for which certain persons interested in the road had become individually liable. Held, in a suit in equity brought by the trustees of the first mortgage on the railroad property, to foreclose the same, that the court had no power, without the consent of the bondholders, to direct the application of the income of the road to the payment of the floating debt, although it was made to appear that it could be paid on favorable terms, and that it was equitable and probably for the interest of the bondholders that such application should be made. Duncan v. Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 542. 1876.

172. Injury to employes; liability of purchaser. A railway property and franchises were bought at judicial sale by H. and others, who subsequently, under the provisions of the act of April 8, 1861, organized a railway company. Held, that the company was not liable for the operation of the road, during the time intervening between the purchase and the organization of the company, unless the possession of the company was affirmatively shown. The presumption was that H. and not the company was in possession of the road between the date of the sale and the time of filing the certificate of organization. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis Ry Co. v. Fierst, 96 Pa. St., 144, 1880; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 437.

173. Intervention. A party who has intervened in an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage, to which there are several parties defendant, will not, upon the rendering of a decree and the dismissal of all the parties save one, from whom the intervenor claims relief, lose his standing in the action. Joliet Iron and Steel Co. v. C. C. and W. R. R. Co., 51 Ia., 800. 1879.

174. — The court will not allow the petitioner to intervene upon affidavits alone, and to stay the sale under a decree of foreclosure, which on its face is regular and legal, and more especially where it appears from the papers that the plaintiff, as a co-plaintiff with others, has a suit then pending in which the validity of all the proceedings in the foreclosure suit is questioned. People v. Erie R'y Co., 56 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 122. 1878.

175. Interest. Where a bondholder alleged the trustee had filed a bill and obtained a decree of foreclosure for the principal of the bonds not due, as well as for the interest which was due, without the written request of the holders of one-third in amount of the bonds, which it was claimed was a necessary prerequisite by the terms of the mortgage to the exercise of the power to declare the principal debt due, and sought for this reason to avoid the foreclosure proceedings, held, that it was competent for the trustee to file a bill to foreclose for the interest due; and that the plaintiff ratified the action of the trustee by filing and proving with the master more than one-third of the bonds issued. Credit Co. v. Arkansas Central R'y Co., 15 Federal Reporter, 46. 1892.

176. Judgment creditors. Railway debentures were granted, by which the "undertaking and all tolls and sums of money, arising by virtue of the act, and all estate, right and interest of the company," were assigned to the debenture creditors. Other creditors subsequently obtained judgments against the company, and afterwards, by authority of an act of parliament, the railway was sold and the purchase money paid into court. Held, that the debentures, being prior in date, had priority over the judgments as against the purchase money. Furness v. Caterham R'y Co., 27 Beavan (Eng. Ch.), 358. 1859.

177. — Where a railroad mortgage has been foreclosed and bought in for the benefit of the bondholders, most of whom united in organizing and carrying on a new corporation, and afterwards certain creditors, by judgments subsequent to the mortgage, succeeded in obtaining a decree on a bill filed to set aside the foreclosure and subject the property to payment of their judgments, held, that the decree rendered the foreclosure invalid only as to the creditors who filed the bill, and those who took stock in the new company cannot again claim under the mortgage, nor can the trustee under the mortgage maintain a new bill of foreclosure for their benefit. Barnes v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. Co., 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 514. 1879.

178. — minor. The guardian ad litem appointed for an infant judgment creditor made a defendant in foreclosure, who had no notice of his appointment until after final judgment, should then, if he applies promptly, be allowed to answer; especially if the priority of the lien of his judgment is in dispute. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Erie R'y Co., 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 264. 1878.

179. Jurisdiction. The constitution of 1874 takes from the supreme court jurisdiction to decree a sale of the property, etc., of a corporation under a mortgage. Fargo v. Oil Creek and Allegheny River R'y Co., 81½ Pa. St., 266. 1875.

180. Law and equity. Where the plaintiff, who held income bonds of the Union Pacific R'y Co., eastern division, the coupons of which were payable out of "net earnings," on the first of March and September in each year, brought an equity suit in March, 1880, claiming an account of net earnings by reason of a default on March 1, 1880, and thereafter brought suit at law to recover coupons on other bonds of the same issue held by him but not included in the equity suits, for defaults arising September 1, 1880, March 1 and September 1, 1881, and March 1, 1882, held, that plaintiff was entitled to an account in the equity suits, not merely for net earnings prior to the commencement of such equity suit, to pay the coupons then due, but also for all coupons due and net earnings received after the commencement of the suit until the accounts were stated, and afterwards, on the foot of the decree in the equity suit, and that the law suits could all be stayed without prejudice to plaintiff, as all his rights hereafter to recover could be protected in the equity suit. Morgan v. Union Pacific R'y Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 692. 1883.

181. Maturity. Plaintiff filed a bill to foreclose a mortgage for default in the payment of interest on the railway and appurtenances of the defendant. The defense was that the promoters of the suit had extended the time of payment beyond the date at which the suit was brought. The facts relating to this defense stated, and held not to amount to an agreement to extend, nor to estop the trustee from maintaining the bill, but only to a waiver of payment of interest at the covenant day, which may be terminated on notice and demand for full payment. Union Trust Co. v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Ry Co., 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 1. 1878.

182. On portion of railway. If a mortgage is given by a railway company upon its entire road to secure bonds issued by it, and it procures the grading of only a part of the road in the middle, and then abandons the work, leaving each end of the road unfinished, and another company organizes and completes the road, on a bill to foreclose the mortgage given by the first company, it is erroneous to decree a sale of the middle portion of the road, leaving the two ends worthless. If any foreclosure can be had the entire road must be sold, and the proceeds distributed as between the bondholders of the original company and the new company in the proportion the work done by the first company bears to the cost or value of the entire road as completed. Chicago, Danville and Vincennes Ry Co. v. Laewenthal, 93 Ill., 488. 1879.

183. Ownership of bonds. If a party to a foreclosure proceeding in his pleadings claims the ownership of bonds secured by the mortgage, it is error to enter up a decree in his favor as pledgee. Chouteau v. Allen, 70 Mo., 290. 1879.

184. Parties. If a railway company executes a mortgage to trustees to secure the payment of certain bonds, and afterwards executes a second mortgage to the same trustees to secure other bonds, the bondholders under the second mortgage are not necessary parties to a bill in equity by the bondholders under the first mortgage to compel the trustees to take possession of the mortgaged property. National Fire Ins. Co. v. Salisbury, 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Mass.), 480. 1881.

185. — A party interested in the res in controversy, not made a party in the bill, may, on his motion or petition, be made a party by amendment of the bill. Scott v. Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co., 2 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 15. 1877.

186. — Bondholders are not necessary parties to a bill for foreclosure, by their trustees, of the mortgage given to secure the bonds. Under the circumstances of this case, the petitioners are not proper parties complainant, but they will be admitted as defendants, if they desire. Williamson v. New Jersey Southern R. R. Co., 25 N. J. Eq., 18. 1874.

187. — The state, being a party in court, is bound as much as other parties by the judgment in a foreclosure. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 18 So. Car., 467. 1890.

188. — Whether the United States can compulsorily be made a defendant to a foreclosure bill where it holds a lien or mortgage on the property in respect of which the foreclosure is sought, query? Meier v. Kansas Pacific Ry Co., 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 378. 1877.

189. Pleadings. The pleadings in the foreclosure of a railway mortgage examined. Williamson v. N. J. Southern R. R. Co., 25 N. J. Eq., 13. 1874.

190. — Where the cross-bill of the defendant sets up new matter which is intimately connected with the subject matter of the original bill, and which if true, as alleged, entitles the defendant to affirmative relief, it is error to strike it from the files and refuse leave to defendant to refile and prosecute it. Peoria and Springfield R. R. Co. v. Bryan, 5 Bradwell (Ill.), 387. 1879.

191. — Where none of the rights of a party asking leave to file a cross-bill in proceedings to foreclose a railroad mortgage will be lost to him by the refusal of the court to grant such leave, such refusal is clearly within the discretion of the court. Indiana Southern R. R. Co. v. Liverpool, London and Globe Ins. Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 548. 1893.

192. — A bill to foreclose a deed of trust to secure bonds issued and put in circulation by a corporation and made payable to bearer is not demurrable because it fails to allege to whom such bonds were negotiated in the first instance, or how much was paid for them, or when they were issued. Sufficiency of the pleadings determined. Savannah and Memphis R. R. Co. et al. v. Lancaster, 62 Ala., 555. 1878.

193. — Interrogatories are not to be framed and limited upon the theory that everything stated in the bill is precisely and in every detail true. Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans R. R. Co. v. Macomb, 2 Federal Reporter, 18. 1880.

194. Possession. A provision in a railway mortgage authorizing the trustee, on default of the company to pay interest, to take possession of the road, operate it and receive its income, and, upon notice, to sell it, is a cumulative remedy, and does not affect the right to foreclose by bill in equity. Alexander v. Central R. R. Co. of Iowa, 8 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 487. 1874.

195. Priority. The defendant in a mortgage foreclosure, claiming that a trust deed of the premises, executed to a third person, is prior to the mortgage, has a right to have that question determined in the action, and for that purpose to have the grantee in such deed made a defendant. Buass v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 39 Wis., 296. 1876.

196. — There was no error, therefore, in refusing to vacate an order that such grantee be made a defendant, although plaintiff offered to stipulate, "for the purposes of this case," that the lien of said deed was prior to that of his mortgage; such stipulation not being conclusive of the question as against other parties, nor, perhaps, as against the plaintiff himself, in any other action or proceeding. Id.

197. — Where there was no provision in the mortgage for a pro rata dividend, it was held that unpaid coupons, belonging to a class in which a part of the coupons had been paid, should be paid before any coupons falling due at a later period, and before the principal of any of the bonds; and that detached coupons in the hands of others than the holders of the bonds from which they were detached should be paid before such bonds. Stevens v. N. Y. and Oswego Midland R. R. Co., 13 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 412. 1876.

198. — It is not error to order the payment of undisputed claims, having an undoubted priority, in advance of the adjustment of the rights of other creditors, whose claims are of an inferior rank. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 13 So. Car., 467. 1880.

199. Proceedings. Proceedings in foreclosure examined. Miltenerberger v. Loganport R'y Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 464; 106 U. S., 236. 1882.

200. Railway in several states. Where a railway is situated in several states the foreclosure of a mortgage may be made in one of them. Blackburn v. Selma, Marion and Memphis R. R. Co., 2 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 525. 1879.

201. — Where part of a railroad is in South Carolina and part in another state, the court should order a sale of the entire road, so much thereof as lay in the other state being sold subject to the liens existing in that state. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 12 So. Car., 314. 1879.

202. — A mortgage was made by a railway company whose road ran through parts of the states of Delaware and Pennsylvania, of all its property, franchises, etc., to trustees, to secure the payment of certain bonds; default was made in payment of the interest, and as the trustees declined to sell the Delaware franchises and the Birdsboro extension of the road, the plaintiff, a bondholder, filed a bill asking for a decree directing the mortgaged premises to be sold as one property. Held, that the court had power to decree relief, notwithstanding that part of the railroad was in the state of Delaware. Randolph v. Wilmington and Reading R. R. Co., 11 Philadelphia (U. S. C. C.), 502. 1876.

203. — If two railroad corporations, created by different states, join in making a trust deed conveying their joint property to secure bonds issued by them jointly, and suit is brought to enforce the trust in the district where one of the corporations resides, and it is served with process, and the other corporation, being a non-resident of the state or district where the suit is brought, enters its appearance, and files an answer jointly with the other, both will be bound by the decree of the court. Wilmer v. Atlanta and Richmond Air Line R'y Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 447. 1875.

Foreclosure.

204. — The N. G. and W. R. Co. was incorporated under the laws of the states of Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York. A mortgage upon the Ohio division was executed to M., as trustee, and another and subsequent mortgage upon all the property in the three states was executed to T. and D., as trustees, who brought suit in each of the three states to foreclose the same. An agreement was entered into between M. and a majority of the bondholders under the Ohio mortgage and T. and D. extending the time of payment of the Ohio mortgage for three years, and changing the interest during such extended term from currency to gold. This agreement was not to take effect until confirmed by the courts in each of the three states. It has been confirmed by the court in Ohio, and is now presented to this court and a confirmatory order asked for upon the basis of the Ohio order, which application is opposed by some of the second mortgage bondholders. Held, that the agreement itself contemplates a distinct and independent approval by the courts of each one of the states in which actions are pending for the foreclosure of the mortgage and the sale of the company's property. A distinct and separate approval was what was in terms required, according to the conclusions reached as to the propriety of the agreement by the courts respectively of these different states; and that rendered an examination of the facts, upon which the application has been made, necessary for the purpose of determining whether such approval ought to be given. Taylor v. Atlantic and Great Western R'y Co., 55 Howard's Practice (N. Y.). 275. 1877.

205. — A receiver was appointed under the petition for foreclosure in the state of New York. Held, that the courts of New York could not delegate the control of the receiver to the courts of Ohio. Taylor v. Atlantic and Great Western R. R. Co., 57 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 9. 1878.

206. — For foreclosure in case of a mortgage in several states, and the questions of practice arising thereunder, see Taylor v. Atlantic and Great Western R. R. Co., 55 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 275, 1877; 57 ib., 9, 1878; 57 ib., 26, 1873; U. S. Rolling Stock Co., In re, 55 ib., 286, 1878; 57 ib., 16, 1878.

207. Reorganization. A plan for the reorganization of an insolvent railway company, which, among other things, provides that the holders of unsecured indebtedness shall receive second preferred income bonds of the new company at par to the full amount of their respective debts and interest, and also provides that the stockholders of the old company shall receive stock of the new company in exchange at a certain ratio, is not fraudulent and void as to the holders of the unsecured indebtedness. Hancock v. Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw R. R. Co., 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 148. 1882. Reorganization contract construed. Child v. New York and New England R. R. Co., 129 Mass., 170, 1890; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 329; Hancock v. Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw R. R. Co., 9 Federal Reporter, 738. 1882.

208. — Plaintiff's complaint alleged in substance that the property and franchises of the T. W. and W. R. R. Co., of which he was a stockholder, were sold under a decree of foreclosure and were bid off by a committee of the holders of the bonds secured by the mortgage; that a portion of the stockholders disputed the validity of the sale, and a litigation arose which resulted in an arrangement under which said stockholders withdrew all opposition and were accorded by the purchasers of the road the right to take stock in a new company to be organized, upon certain terms specified, among others, that the option so to do must be made within thirty days, otherwise all rights should be forfeited; that in pursuance of this arrangement, defendant, the W. R. Co., was organized and is operating the road, and possesses the rights and property of the old company and has issued stock under the agreement; that plaintiff had no knowledge or notice of this agreement until after the expiration of the thirty days; that when notified he tendered performance on his part and demanded his proportionate share of the new stock, which was refused. The other defendants were the purchasing committee, who were authorized to carry out the said agreement. Plaintiff asked damages for the refusal. Held, that a demurrer to the complaint was properly sustained. If the foreclosure sale was valid, the plaintiff's legal rights were cut off; if invalid, his right to attack it was not impaired by the agreement unless he elected to come in and ratify it, in which case he could not vary its terms. Thornton v. Wabash R'y Co., 81 N. Y., 462. 1880.

209. — The right of a stockholder in a railroad company to demand an exchange of stock, pursuant to a plan for reorganization after foreclosure of the road, is not forfeited by failure to pay the assessment pursuant to a notice published in the newspapers, which is not brought home to his knowledge, where the stock of the new company to which he would otherwise be entitled has not been sold or disposed of. In such case notices published in New York are admissible in evidence, but those published in a foreign country are not. Vatable v. N. Y., Lake Erie and Western R. R. Co., 11 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 138. 1883. See, also, Same v. Same, 9 ib., 271. 1881.

210. — Certain persons projected the formation of a new railway company, founded on a foreclosure sale of a company already existing, and published a scheme of reorganization, and it directed the holders of first mortgage bonds, who wished to join in such reorganization, to deposit their bonds with the Central Trust Co. of New York, and appointed a permanent committee, having a president and secretary, with a place of business in New York city. A bondholder presented his bond to the Central Trust Co., but, on account of some irregularity in it, was referred to the committee above referred to. The president and secretary accepted the bond. Held, that such acceptance bound the new company, the committee having been held out to the public as its general agent in the business of organizing the new company. Midland R. R. Co. of New Jersey v. Hitchcock, 37 N. J. Eq., 549. 1883.

211. — The provisions of the Railroad Acts (§ 1, ch. 282, Laws 1834; § 1, ch. 469, Laws of 1873; § 1, ch. 710, Laws of 1878) authorizing the purchasers on foreclosure sale of the property and franchises of a railroad company, to organize a new corporation for the purposes of the transfer, do not prevent a sale or transfer by such a purchaser to a company already existing, and capable of holding the property and exercising ing the franchises; the authority so given was intended to meet a case where there is no such existing corporation. People v. Brooklyn, Flatbush and Coney Island R'y Co., 89 N. Y., 75, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 454.

212. Rights of mortgage creditors. Persons belonging to a class represented in the suit, such as mortgage creditors represented by the trustees of the mortgage, are regarded as quasi parties, and may be heard on petition or motion. Anderson v. Jacksonville, etc., R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 628. 1873.

213. Right of way of railroad; town lot. The judgment of foreclosure, where the mortgage is paramount to the right of way, should direct the sale of the property, subject to the right of way, or, that being insufficient to pay the mortgage debt, then the sale of such right of way, either with the lot or independent of it, as shall be most advantageous. Severin v. B., C. R. and M. R'y Co., 38 Ia., 463. 1874.

214. Set-off. The Wallkill Valley R'y Co. having made default in the payment of the interest on the mortgage bonds issued by it, the plaintiffs, the trustees under the mortgage, in pursuance of the terms thereof, entered into possession of the road in May, 1873, and received the rents and tolls for the benefit of the bondholders. Subsequently the mortgage was foreclosed and the road sold to the plaintiffs. An action was brought to recover money due to the road for transporting the mails for the half year ending December 31, 1873, received by the defendant, who had acted as agent for the road in collecting such money from the treasury department, and which he refused to pay over, he claiming to be entitled to set off against this amount a note given by the company to him in October, 1872, due one year after date. Held, that, as the plaintiff's right to receive the earnings of the road became absolute in May, 1873, at which time defendant's note had not yet become due, no set-off thereof could be made in this action. Murray v. Deyo, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 3. 1877.

215. Sinking fund. Provision for the payment of bonds secured by a mortgage on defendant's railway was made by agreement that the defendant should deposit a fixed amount of money annually, as a sinking fund, with the complainant as trustee, and the bonds themselves prescribed that the sinking fund should be invested in certain other specified bonds of the defendant. Held, that the court would not, in the absence of the bondholders, direct the trustee to invest the sinking fund in other bonds of the defendant than those specified as secured by the same mortgage, but bearing a lower rate of interest, merely because the bonds required by the terms of the trust could only be purchased at a premium. Fidelity Insurance, Trust and Safe Deposit Co. v. United New Jersey R. R. and Canal Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 404; 86 N. J. Eq., 405. 1883.

216. State and federal courts. Where the supreme court of the state has declared a foreclosure of a mortgage to be bona fide, such decision is obligatory upon the federal courts. Sullivan v. Portland and Kennebec R. R. Co., 4 Clifford (U. S. C. C.), 212. 1874.

217. — A trustee of a first mortgage upon a portion of a railroad cannot plead the pendency of suit by him for foreclosure in the United States court in bar of a foreclosure suit in a state court against him and others, by trustees of a subsequent mortgage, covering the entire property of the company, including that mortgaged to him, especially when, on account of their citizenship, his bill in the United States court was dismissed as to the complainants in the state court. Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala., 237, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 454.

218. — The rule that of two courts of concurrent jurisdiction, the one first giving jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter of a suit retains it to the exclusion of the other, applies only where suits brought in the two courts involve the same parties and the same subject matter. Boston and Providence R. R. Corp. v. New York and New England R. R. Co., 12 R. I., 220. 1878.

219. — Where a suit for foreclosure was pending in the state courts, but the parties were not identical, and the same relief was not asked in both cases, it was held that the suit in the state court would not prevent the prosecution of an action in the federal courts for foreclosure of the same mortgage. Brooks v. Vermont Central R. R. Co., 14 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 463. 1878.

220. — Where a receiver has been appointed by the state court the federal court will proceed with the cause, but will not interfere with the possession of the receiver of the state court. Mercantile Trust Co. v. La-moille Valley R. R. Co., 16 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 324. 1879.

221. — A creditor who is not a party to a general creditor's bill may sue upon his mortgage lien in the federal court, notwithstanding the pendency of such bill in the state courts. Parsons v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 1 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 279.

222. Stockholders. Where the stockholders, having full knowledge of all the facts and an opportunity to move in the original suit before decree, or to file a bill immediately upon the rendition of the decree, failed to do either for a period of four years, and in the meantime the decree had been fully executed, the property sold thereunder to a new company and the sale confirmed, and the stock and bonds of the new company gone into the market, it is too late for them to obtain relief from a decree alleged to have been obtained by fraud. Pacific R. R. Co. v. Missouri Pacific R'y Co., 12 Federal Reporter, 641; 2 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 227. 1881.

223. — Upon the question of notice there is no distinction between the corporation and its officers or stockholders; so, if stockholders were advised of the foreclosure suit, and of the facts charged as constituting fraud in the execution of the bonds and mortgages sued on in the original suit, and had an opportunity to intervene and defend, and did not do so, the corporation is concluded by their laches. Ib.

224. — A stockholder of a defunct corporation has such an interest as entitles him to defend a suit brought to foreclose a mortgage alleged to have been executed by the corporation in its life-time. So has one who has acquired an independent title to part of the lands embraced in the mortgage. Chouteau v. Allen, 70 Mo., 290. 1879.

225. Unpaid land damages. A railway company, being unable to agree with a land owner for a right of way, gave a bond and took possession for railway purposes. Subsequently the railway and property were sold under foreclosure of a mortgage. Held, in a proceeding by scire facias against the purchasers to compel the payment of land damages, that the purchaser took a clear title, and that the owner of the land was thrown back upon the bond for his said damages. Fries v. Southern Pennsylvania R. R., etc., Co., 85 Pa. St., 78, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 375.

226. — A railway company took a tract of land under the right of eminent domain. Subsequently it mortgaged its property to trustees to secure bonds to a certain amount, which stated that "the mortgage was the first and only lien on the property and franchises of the company when the existing mortgage debt is retired." The making of this mortgage was ratified by the legislature. The mortgage was afterwards foreclosed, and the bondholders formed a new corporation; and their acts were confirmed by the legislature, and the new company was vested with all the franchises, powers and privileges of the old company, and made subject to all the restrictions, duties and liabilities set forth in the general law relating to railway companies, then or thereafter in force. Held, that the new company might properly be made a party respondent to a petition for damages, originally filed by the person whose land had been taken against the old corporation, and might be restrained from using or occupying the land, unless the damages were paid or secured to the land owner. Drury v. Midland R. R. Co., 127 Mass., 571. 1879.

XI. SALES.

227. Charter. Act 96 of 1859 permits the purchasers on a foreclosure sale of the property of a railway company to exercise the charter powers of the corporation on certain conditions, and frees them from liability for any debts embraced in the foreclosure. Cook v. Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee R'y Co., 43 Mich., 849, 1880; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 443.

228. Combination of bidders. A combination of bidders held not to be inequitable under the facts of the case. Walker v. Mont- clair and Greenwood Lake R'y Co., 30 N. J. Eq., 525. 1879.

229. Combination of creditors. The creditors of a mortgagor may fairly combine to purchase the property of the debtor at mortgage sale, and other creditors are not, by such combination, deprived of the right to bid at such sale. Kropholler v. St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba R'y Co., 2 Federal Reporter, 302; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 299. 1880.

230. Costs. Where a decree of foreclosure of a mortgage upon a railroad had been obtained by the mortgage bondholders and a sale of the road had taken place thereunder, at which a certain corporation not a party to the foreclosure was the bidder, and the transfer of its bid to the trustees of the bondholders was subsequently approved by the court rendering the decree, it was held that the officer's fees for the sale should be the same as if the execution plaintiffs had been the immediate purchasers. Gilman v. Des Moines Valley R. R. Co., 42 Ia., 495. 1876.

231. Deed of trust; sale on notice. A sale on notice, under the provisions of a trust deed, is effectual to divest the title of a railway company without foreclosure in the courts. Brunswick and Albany R. R. Co. v. Hughes, 52 Ga., 557, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 137.

232. Earnest money. Upon the sale of a railway, it is customary and reasonable to require cash sufficient to pay costs and other claims demanding immediate payment. But the officer conducting the sale should not be authorized to exact a cash advance previous to the close of the biddings. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 13 So. Car., 467; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 488. 1881.

233. Execution. A railway may be levied upon and sold under execution on a judgment in favor of a mortgage creditor. Reversing County of Drummond v. South Eastern R'y Co., 23 Lower Canada, Jurist, 25, 1878; Same v. Same, 24 ib., 276, 1879.

234. Fraud. Where the local managers and officers of an embarrassed railway company holding a small portion of its bonds, of which a much greater portion was held by non-residents, got an order of sale under a mortgage, and proceeded in a hasty and rather secret way to sell it, and to buy it at a price much below its value, for themselves, the conditions of sale being made such as to render it difficult for persons generally to purchase, and the whole proceeding of sale being attended also with evidences of gross disregard of the interests of the bondholders generally, and of course of the stockholders, held, that the sale should be set aside. Jackson v. Ludeling, 21 Wallace (U. S.), 616, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 457.

235. — Where a sale is set aside for fraud, the purchasers, under the Civil Code of Louisiana, are entitled to compensation for repairs. Jackson v. Ludeling, 99 U. S., 518. 1878.

236. — The second mortgage not covering certain portions of the property of the North Missouri R. R. Co., the Illinois, Missouri and Kansas association, for the express purpose of acquiring those portions, bought up the greater part of the floating debt of the company at a discount, caused judgments to be obtained against the company on these claims at their face value, in the name of individual members of the association, had the road with all its property again sold under these judgments, and became the purchaser. The directors of the North Missouri R. R. Co. were at the time members of this association, but they were also creditors of the company to a very large amount, and were liable on its obligations as indorsers, and other members of the association were also creditors to a large amount. Held, that none of these circumstances rendered the sale per se fraudulent and void. The judgment for the face value of the claims may have been excessive and improper, but before there could be a divestiture of the title acquired under the sale, equity would, at the very least, require the plaintiffs to repay the amount actually expended in purchasing them. Kitchen v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 69 Mo., 224. 1878.

237. — The Northern Missouri R. R. Co. being heavily indebted and unable to negotiate a sale of its bonds, an association was formed, the object of which, as expressed in its articles, was the purchase of the bonds, and ultimately, if found profitable to do so, the purchase of the road itself, provided the association could obtain control of the company. The bonds were subsequently purchased of the company, and the association was allowed to name a majority of the directors. This transaction being assailed as fraudulent, because the control of the company was surrendered to the association, and because the association looked to the ultimate acquisition of the road, held, that these facts did not establish fraud. The control of the directory was nothing more than a proper security for the due application of the money advanced on the bonds. Ib.

238. — The law does not prohibit the creditors of a corporation from combining for the purpose of protecting themselves, by purchasing its property when legally brought to sale, provided it is no part of the agreement to prevent competition at the sale or to use any unfair advantage. Ib.

239. Jurisdiction. Where a judicial sale of a railway was made by the Fayette circuit court, and the supervision of the property sold was retained by that court for the purpose of carrying out the terms of sale, the Kenton circuit court has jurisdiction in an original action to charge the purchaser as a trustee for the corporation. Neither court will be required to subordinate itself to the other. Covington and Lexington R. R. Co. v. Bowler, 9 Bush (Ky.), 468. 1872.

240. Payment in bonds. If bondholders secured by a mortgage on a railroad purchase the entire property at a foreclosure sale, they have an equitable right, after satisfying the costs and charges of the litigation and trust, to pay the residue of their bid in bonds, so far as to cover their own proportion of such residue. Duncan v. Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co., 8 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 597. 1879.

241. Postponement of sale. The fact that a railroad begins, after a period of financial adversity, to show a prosperous state of earnings, indicating that in a few years it will be able to pay off an accumulation of overdue and unpaid interest, does not furnish ground for a postponement of its sale in foreclosure;—especially if the company owning the railroad offers no guaranty that such prosperity will continue. But a court of equity will take the responsibility of delaying a sale to await a better condition of financial prosperity that exists at the time of the decree. Duncan v. Atlantic, Miss. and Ohio R. R. Co., 4 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 125. 1882.

242. Proceedings to set aside sale. Application to set aside a master's sale refused, no improper control of complainant's solicitor over the adjournments, nor any surprise upon the petitioner, appearing; nor that any greater price could be obtained upon a resale, or that a resale could in any way benefit the petitioner. Hewitt v. Montclair R'y Co., 25 N. J. Eq., 392. 1874.

243. — In order to set aside a master's sale in foreclosure proceedings on account of the inadequacy of the bid, it is not sufficient to show that the property has not realized its full value; the price must be so inadequate as to show that it is not the result of fair dealing and an honest purchase. Turner v. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R'y Co., 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 380. 1878.

244. — Where this court modified a decree of foreclosure, giving the mortgagor the right to have an account taken against the party in possession of the road up to the date of the master's deed, or up to the time of the rendition of a new decree in case the sale was set aside, and giving the mortgagor leave to move the court below to vacate the sale, and the mortgagor came into court and requested it not to set aside the sale, but to have an account stated up to the time the master made the deed, it was held that this action was a waiver of the right to afterwards insist upon a motion to vacate the sale. Racine and Mississippi R. R. Co. v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 86 Ill., 187. 1877.

245. — Where a bill for relief was brought fourteen years after the making of a railroad mortgage, ten years after the commencement of bankruptcy proceedings against the railroad corporation, nine years after the entry of the decree of foreclosure of the railroad mortgage, and seven years after the decree of foreclosure became absolute, and the road was conveyed to the new corporation by trustees lawfully appointed, and during all this time the records of the courts, upon which appear all the proceedings by which the alleged fraud is claimed to have been consummated, have been open to inspection and examination, and what has been done might have been known to plaintiff if he had made inquiry, a court of equity will not grant relief. Graham v. Boston, Hartford and Erie R. R. Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 753. 1883.

246. Proceeds of sale. The city of Logansport issued its bonds to aid the L. C. and S. W. R'y. The contract between the parties required the railway to be finished to the city, and in case of failure the company was bound to pay $40,000 penalty as liquidated damages. The road was not finished and passed into the hands of a receiver. The city issued its bonds as agreed. Upon the sale of the railway, the city applied for the payment of the penalty out of the proceeds of the sale. Held, that the proceeds could not be so applied. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Logansport, Crawfordsville and South Western R'y Co., 4 Federal Reporter, 184. 1890.

247. Purchase by president of the company. Where the property of a railroad company is sold under a decree of foreclosure, at which all persons are authorized to bid, the fact that it is purchased by the president of the company in his individual right will not in itself raise a trust relation between him and a holder of the bonds of the company which will entitle the latter to treat him as a trustee of the property so purchased. Credit Co. v. Arkansas Central R'y Co., 15 Federal Reporter, 46. 1882. See, also, Covington and Lexington R. R. Co. v. Bowler, 9 Bush (Ky.), 468. 1872.

248. Purchase by solicitor. The purchase by the solicitor of a railroad company of its property at a judicial sale, made pursuant to a decree in a foreclosure suit, is not of itself necessarily invalid. It will, however, be closely scrutinized, but, until impeached, must stand. Pacific Railroad Co. v. Kelchum, 101 U. S., 289. 1879.

249. Purchase by trustee. The trustees who made a sale under a mortgage were themselves members of the association which made the purchase, their interest amounting to one thirty-fourth part of the whole capital of the association. Held, that this fact did not render the sale void, but it gave the company the right to redeem, provided the right was exercised within a reasonable time and before the intervention of new equities. Kitchen v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Ry Co., 69 Mo., 324. 1878.

250. — In the mortgage of a railroad it was covenanted and agreed by all the parties thereto, that, in case of a foreclosure sale of the mortgaged property under a decree, the trustee named in the mortgage should, on the written request of the holders of a majority of the then outstanding bonds thereby secured, purchase the property at such sale for the use and benefit of the holders of such bonds, and that the right and title thereto should vest in him, no holder to have any claim to the proceeds except his pro rata share thereof, as represented in a new company or corporation, to be formed for their use and benefit; and that the trustee might take such lawful measures to organize a new company for their benefit, upon such terms, conditions and limitations as the holders of a majority of the bonds should in writing request or direct, and he should thereupon reconvey the premises so purchased to such new company. On default of payment a suit was brought by the trustee against the mortgagor and subsequent mortgagees, praying for a foreclosure of the first mortgage and for general relief. Held, that such an agreement inures equally to the benefit of such bondholders, and that each holds his interest subject to the controlling power given to the majority of them. Sage v. Central R. R. Co., 99 U. S., 334. 1878.

251. Purchaser's liability. A common law action for the debt of a railway company cannot be maintained against those who have obtained control of its franchises by a purchase of its track and appurtenances on foreclosure of a mortgage securing other indebtedness. Cook v. Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee Ry Co., 43 Mich., 349, 1880; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 443.

252. — A railroad having been sold by order of court to pay the debts of the corporation, the purchaser is not responsible for injuries done by the railroad to adjoining lands before the sale. Hammond v. Port Royal and Augusta R. R. Co., 15 So. Car., 10, 1880; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 352.

253. — A. and B., two railway companies, entered into an agreement under seal, by which B. was admitted to the permanent use, jointly with A., of a portion of the track owned by A., on certain expressed terms. The portion of the track subject to the contract was used by A. and B. jointly for some time, until B., becoming insolvent, its franchise, together with its line of road and all its tangible property, was sold and purchased by C., another and distinct company, and thereupon C. for some time used the said portion of A.'s track, but afterwards abandoned its use. Held, that C. had become liable to A. to perform obligations which the terms of the contract imposed upon B. South Carolina R. R. Co. v. Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta R. R. Co., 7 So. Car., 410. 1875.

254. — C. became the purchaser under a decree to foreclose certain mortgages, some of which bore date before the contract between A. and B. Held, that this did not discharge C. from its obligations under the contract. Ib.

255. — A railway company organized under the provisions of § 1820, R. S., with power to purchase the franchises and property of an older company, previously sold under a mortgage, as well as to construct and operate other lines, is not, by virtue of such purchase, an assignee of the older company so as to be bound by any of its contracts except such as are a lien upon or otherwise bind the property and franchises thus purchased. City of Menasha v. Milwaukee and Northern R. R. Co., 52 Wis., 414, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 800.

256. — A railway company, having power to extend its track from its depot in the plaintiff city through the city of Neenah, so as to connect with the Wisconsin Central Railroad, entered into a contract with the city, for a valuable consideration, not to make such connection. Held, that this (if valid) was a mere personal contract, binding only said company and such persons as may be, in a strict sense, its successors or assignees. Ib.

257. — The property of a railway company having been conveyed to a trustee for the benefit of its bondholders, by a trust deed or mortgage providing that he should receive the earnings and pay the running expenses of the road, which road, with all its appurtenances, having been sold to the bondholders to satisfy such indebtedness, a company was reorganized and the line run under a new corporate name; whereupon the holder of a judgment which had been obtained against the old company during the management of the trustee, for killing stock, brought suit against the new company to obtain the amount of such judgment, alleging that the trustee had failed to pay the same, but had paid all the earnings to the bondholders. Held, on demurrer, the complaint not alleging what amount, if any, of the earnings had ever been received by such trustee, that it is insufficient. Nicholson v. Louisville, New Albany and Chicago R'y Co., 55 Ind., 504, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 258.

258. Sale pending litigation. Where the amount of claims to be allowed against a railroad depends upon a long course of litigation, it is proper for the court to order the property sold, to be subject to such claims as are finally adjudicated. Turner v. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R'y Co., 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 380. 1878.

259. Subsequent proceedings. After confirmation of the sale of a railroad under decree of foreclosure, holders of the mortgage bonds will not be allowed at a subsequent term to be made parties to the original foreclosure suit, for the purpose of impeaching the decree, sale and confirmation as fraudulent, although in the order of confirmation the power to make further orders is expressly reserved. Wetmore v. St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 177; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 466. 1880.

260. Time of sale. Where the rights of the several classes of creditors of a railway company have been declared, and the condition of the railroad demands an early sale, such sale will not be postponed until the interests of individual creditors have been adjusted, and the class to which their demands belong has been ascertained. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 13 So. Car., 467. 1880.

XII. REDEMPTION.

261. Bill to redeem; operation by trustee. A railroad corporation executed a mortgage of its road and other property to a trustee, to secure payment of its bonds. The bonds not being paid at maturity, the trustee took possession under the mortgage, and for several years controlled and managed the road and property on behalf of the bondholders. On a bill in equity, brought by the corporation and several stockholders therein, against the trustee and others for an accounting, and to redeem, held, that the trustee, while so in possession, must be regarded as the trustee of the corporation as well as of the bondholders. Ashuelot R. R. Co. v. Elliot, 57 N. H., 397. 1874.

262. Costs. A rule of the federal court requiring a person redeeming from a mortgage sale to pay, in addition to the amount required to effect redemption, a commission of one per cent. to the clerk, sustained. Blair v. Chicago and Pacific R. R. Co., 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 820, 1882; Blair v. Chicago and Pacific R. R. Co., 12 Federal Reporter, 750, 1882.

263. Equity of redemption. Where the owner of the equity of redemption in mortgaged lands has assigned for the benefit of his creditors, he retains such an interest that he may apply to set aside a sale of the lands under foreclosure, notwithstanding the assignment. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co. v. Scranton, 84 N. J. Eq., 429. 1881.

264. — rights of creditors. A railway company cannot defeat the right of its creditors to sell the equity of redemption by executing a deed of trust with long time to run, etc. To hold that it could would be a violation of the Code (§ 2414). Nor are the judgment creditors limited to a bill to obtain satisfaction of their judgments to the earnings or the income of the company. To so hold would not only deprive them of what they are entitled to under the law, but would recognize the right of a railroad company to secure itself in the possession and enjoyment of its property for an indefinite time, and compel all of its creditors to resort to the means it has provided for their payment, and not to those the law has given. Vicksburg and Meridian R. R. Co. v. McCutchen, 52 Miss., 645. 1876.

265. Judgment creditors. Real estate sold at judicial sale, in part satisfaction of a personal judgment and decree foreclosing a prior mortgage lien, may, upon being redeemed from such sale by a purchaser thereof at a sheriff's sale of the same on a junior judgment lien, be sold to satisfy the residue of such mortgage judgment, notwithstanding the fact that, at the time of the latter sale, the debtor has other property subject to execution. Cauthorn v. Indianapolis and Vincennes R. R. Co., 58 Ind., 14. 1877.

268. No redemption. There is no redemption from the sale of railroad property under foreclosure proceedings in the federal courts in the seventh circuit. Turner v. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R'y Co., 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 380. 1878.

267. — Where a railroad, its appurtenances and franchises, are mortgaged as a whole, there is no power or authority to sell them separately. Such property not being, strictly speaking, either real or personal estate, when sold on a decree of foreclosure is properly sold without any right of redemption. The rule is founded partly upon considerations of public policy. Peoria and Springfield R. R. Co. v. Thompson, 103 Ill., 187, 1832; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 101.

268. Rents. A mortgage of real property was assigned as collateral security for a debt other than the mortgage debt to the commissioners of the sinking fund of the Western R. R. Co., who held their offices under the St. of 1839, ch. 50, and was foreclosed by them. Subsequently, by a bill in equity brought by A. against the assignor, a decree was entered by consent that A. was entitled to the land, subject to the mortgage held by the commissioners. A. took possession of the land and received the rents and profits, and afterwards, the interest and taxes not being paid, surrendered the land to the commissioners, and they took possession, and, acting with proper care, appointed an agent, who, by reason of wilful or gross negligence, failed to collect such rents from the property as a prudent owner, by the exercise of reasonable care, might have realized. Held, on a bill in equity by A. to redeem, that the commissioners were bound to exercise such care and diligence in the management of the land as a prudent owner would exercise under like circumstances, and were liable for the negligence of the agent. Montague v.

Boston and Albany R. R. Co., 124 Mass., 242. 1878.

269. Stay of proceedings. A mortgagor, who incumbers an embarrassed title, cannot obtain a stay of proceedings on account of an apprehension that the mortgaged premises will not bring their full value at a judicial sale. His remedy is by redemption. American Dock Co. v. Trustees of Public Schools, 35 N. J. Eq., 181. 1832.

270. Time. Redemption may be made at any time before confirmation of the sale. Howell v. Western R. R. Co., 94 U. S., 463, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 188; Chicago and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Fosdick, 106 U. S., 47, 1882.

271. Trustee. An application to compel a trustee for mortgage bondholders to redeem certain property refused; the necessities of the trust estate not being regarded by the court such as to make it its duty to make the order. Williamson v. New Jersey Southern R. R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq., 225. 1876.

XIII. TRUSTEES.

272. Appointment. The appointment of trustees under the St. of 1876, ch. 236, to receive a mortgage to be made to them by the Eastern R. R. Co., may be made in the exercise of the equity jurisdiction of the court; and the trustees so appointed may be ordered at any time thereafter to report or account to the court, without any express provision to that effect in the statute or in the order of appointment. Eastern R. R. Co., In re, 120 Mass., 412. 1876.

273. Bonds. The trustee can enforce the payment of bonds given to him to secure a just debt; but he cannot do so when the money for which the debt was incurred did not go to increase the fund from which the bondholders are entitled to payment. Duncomb v. N. Y., Housatonic and Northern R. R. Co., 22 Hun (N. Y.), 138. 1880.

274. Compensation. A trustee held entitled to the compensation agreed upon, notwithstanding that the mortgage was not fully issued, and another issued in its stead. Maury v. Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co., 27 Grattan (Va.), 698. 1876.

275. — When a mortgage upon a railway and its lands stipulated, inter alia, that the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged lands were to constitute a sinking fund for the discharge of the bonds secured by the mortgage; that the holders of any mortgage bonds should have the privilege of purchasing lands with the same at not less than a fixed minimum price; that the trustees of the bondholders should be required to cancel the bonds so received, and that "for services in selling and conveying the lands herein described, and applying the proceeds to the sinking fund," the trustees were to receive "two per cent. on the par amount of the bonds canceled," held, that a sale of lands and payment in bonds were equivalent to a sale for cash, and that the trustees were entitled to two per cent. on the par value of bonds received in exchange for lands and canceled. Gilman v. Des Moines Valley R. R. Co., 41 Ia., 22. 1875.

276. — A trust deed by a railroad company provides that upon a sale of the trust property by the trustees out of the proceeds of sale, after satisfying the costs and expenses of sale and of this trust, the trustee shall pay to the holders of the bonds secured thereby the amount so held by them. If the trustee has performed services in executing the bonds, etc., for which he is entitled to compensation, he is entitled to be paid for these services in preference to the bondholders secured by the deed. Smith v. Washington, Va. Midland, etc., R. R. Co., 33 Grattan (Va.), 617, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 493.

277. — A trustee having removed to a foreign country, and thus having become incapacitated from performing the trust, cannot delegate his trust to another so as to entitle himself to the compensation of a trustee. So held where the bondholders had selected another trustee. Hughes v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 47 N. Y. Superior Ct., 531. 1881.

278. — The sufficiency of the pleadings determined. Hughes v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 45 N. Y. Superior Ct., 114. 1879.

279. Death of a trustee. Where, to secure bonds issued by a railroad company, the franchise, road-bed and appurtenances are conveyed to trustees jointly, the trust does not, upon the death of one, descend to his heirs, but vests in the other; and it is unnecessary to make the heirs of the deceased trustee parties to a bill in chancery to foreclose a prior mortgage. McAllister v. Plant, 54 Miss., 106. 1876.

280. — A mortgage of railway property was made to one, his heirs and assigns, as trustee for bondholders. Under proceedings for foreclosure, the mortgagee being dead, another trustee was substituted and decree of foreclosure rendered. Afterwards a petition was filed by a son of the original mortgagee, claiming to be his heir-at-law, and praying to be made a party. Petition dismissed. Gibbes v. G. and C. R. R. Co., 13 So. Car., 228, 1879; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 459.

281. Expenses of trustee. Trustees have an inherent equitable right to be reimbursed for all expenses reasonably incurred in the execution of the trust; and it is immaterial that there are no provisions for such expenses in the instrument of trust. All such expenses are a lien upon the trust property; and the trustee will not be compelled to part with the property until such expenses are paid. Rensselaer and Saratoga R. R. Co. v. Miller, 47 Vt., 146. 1874.

282. Power of corporation to execute mortgage. Trustees in junior mortgage, who are parties defendant to a bill to foreclose a senior mortgage given by a railroad company on its franchise, road-bed and appurtenances, cannot be heard to say that the corporation had no power to execute such an instrument. McAllister v. Plant, 54 Miss., 106. 1876.

283. Powers of trustees. A mortgage of a railroad to trustees, which gives them power to take possession of the road and use it in certain contingencies, and, at their discretion, on certain conditions, to sell it, contemplates that they may do the former only, or both. The trustees need not confine themselves to either measure, but may first enter and then sell, using the road for the purposes of the trust until a sale is effected. Macon and Augusta R. R. Co. v. Ga. R. R. Co., 63 Ga., 103, 1879; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 378.

284. — The trustee represents the bondholders in all legal proceedings carried on by him affecting his trust, to which they are not actual parties, and whatever binds him, if he acts in good faith, binds them. Shaw v. Railroad Co., 100 U. S., 605. 1879.

285. — Where trustees under the mortgage, of whom it is alleged in the bill that they had refused to proceed to realize on the security, apply to come in and be admitted as complainants, they must control the proceeding. Richards v. Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co., 1 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 28. 1875.

286. — By the terms of a mortgage executed by the W. S. E. P. R. Co., defendant C., as trustee, was authorized, in case of default, to commence foreclosure on request of holders of bonds to a certain amount; also, on written request of a majority of the bondholders, he was authorized to purchase on foreclosure sale, and to take measures to organize a new company for the benefit of the bondholders, upon such terms as a majority of them should direct, to which company he should convey the property. A default having occurred, and the proper request having been made, C. commenced foreclosure. Before sale plaintiff herein, as a bondholder, presented a petition asking for a stay of proceedings. An order was entered in the action, to which plaintiff's counsel assented, by which C. was directed to bid, "for the benefit of all the holders of the bonds," up to $450,000. C. bid $750,000, and took the title to the property. No request was made by a majority of the bondholders for C. to make the purchase. In an action brought by plaintiff to recover the amount of his bonds, held, that as against the plaintiff C. had the right, and it was his duty, to make the purchase, and as no restraint as to the price was put upon him by the mortgage, and as the order did not forbid the offer of a higher price than that specified, but simply fixed the minimum price at which he should allow others to purchase, he had the right in his discretion to bid over that sum. C., after such purchase, upon a request of a majority of the bondholders, advertised the property for sale and sold it at public auction to the N. Y. E. R. Co. for $100,000. Held, that such sale was unlawful; that the request of a majority of the bondholders gave no authority to make it, so long as any bondholder dissented and insisted upon the performance of the trust; that if for any reason the due execution of the trust seemed to the trustee to be impossible, he should have sought the direction of the court. James v. Cowing, 82 N. Y., 449, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 336.

287. Removal of trustee. When a court of equity was called on, for the purpose of preserving a trust estate situate mainly within its jurisdiction, to remove a non-resident trustee and appoint another in his stead, it had the power to do so ex parte, in a case where service on the absent trustee was impossible. The fact that such absent trustee was within the territory of a country at war with the country in which the court was sitting did not detract from the power of the court to remove him and appoint another, but furnished a good reason for its exercise. Ketchum v. Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 532. 1876.

288. — Pending an action to remove the trustees under a mortgage made to secure the bondholders of a railroad, the defendants cannot, by bringing an action in another department against the prosecuting bondholders, on the theory that such bondholders are improperly resisting a scheme to which a large majority of the bondholders have assented, and which is for the best interest of all, obtain an injunction perpetually staying the action for their removal. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. McHenry, 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 235. 1878.

289. — The defendant was appointed by the plaintiff company trustee of a sinking fund to pay the debts of the corporation, and it was provided in the trust deed that the moneys of said fund might be invested, in the discretion of the trustee, in such securities as the president of the company or its board of directors might recommend. The trustee, without any previous direction, loaned a portion of said moneys to a banking firm of which he was the senior member, and which soon thereafter became insolvent. Held, that such action constituted a breach of trust, which it was not in the power of the board of directors to condone, their relation to the company being that of an agent to his principal. North Carolina R. R. Co. v. Wilson, 81 N. C., 223. 1879.

Receiver—Injunction—Lease.

290. Suit by bondholders. It is the positive duty of each trustee to protect the trust estate from any misfeasance on the part of his co-trustees, and to institute such proceedings as shall prevent it. Wheetjen v. Vibbard, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 265. 1875.

291. Vacancy. The manner of filling vacancies in trusteeships under the statutes of Maine determined. Pillsbury v. Consolidated European and North American R'y Co., 69 Me., 394. 1879.

292. — removal of trustee to foreign country. The rights and duties acquired by and imposed upon a trustee under a mortgage executed by a railroad company are personal in their character and incapable of delegation. Where such trustee voluntarily removes to and becomes a resident of a foreign country, he incapacitates himself from discharging the duties of his office, and thereby vacates the same. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Hughes, 11 Hun (N. Y.), 180. 1877.

XIV. RECEIVER.

293. When receiver may be appointed. The mere fact that there has been a default in the payment of the debt is no ground for the appointment of a receiver, unless there be a stipulation in the mortgage that the mortgagee shall have the rents. Tyssen v. Wabash R'y Co., 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 247. 1878.

XV. INJUNCTION.

294. Action by bondholder; parties. Where an action is brought by a bondholder of a corporation for an accounting and an injunction against a railroad company, wherein he makes the trustee under an income mortgage defendant, it must be alleged and proved that such trustee has been requested to bring such action, and that he neglected and failed to do so, and that he is, therefore, made a defendant in the action. Morgan v. Kansas Pacific R'y Co., 15 Federal Reporter, 55. 1882.

295. — A party who is a sole trustee under an income mortgage of a railroad company is a necessary party to a suit against such company for an accounting and an injunction, and on failure to join him as such the bill will be dismissed, although it is shown that he was not and could not be found within the district to be served with process, when the issue is as to whether he was requested and refused to sue. Ib.

XVI. LEASE.

296. Redemption; ultra vires. The H., P. and F. R. R. Co., a Rhode Island corporation, executed in 1863 an agreement and lease to the B., H. and E. R. R. Co., a Connecticut corporation, whereby all the property and business of the former was transferred in perpetuity to the latter, the stockholders of the former to be remunerated by receiving stock in the latter, or by receiving a fixed price per share in money. This transfer was ratified by the legislature of Rhode Island in 1865. In 1866 the B., H. and E. R. R. Co. mortgaged its road. It subsequently became bankrupt, and was dissolved by a decree in Connecticut in 1873. The mortgagees foreclosed by equity proceedings in Rhode Island in 1875, and formed the N. Y. and N. E. R. R. Co., into whose possession the road passed by deeds from the mortgage trustees and from the assignees of the B., H. and E. R. R. Co. In December, 1875, certain stockholders of the H., P. and F. R. R. Co. filed in Rhode Island a bill in equity to set aside the agreement and lease to the B., H. and E. R. R. Co., and to redeem the H., P. and F. R. R. Co. from the mortgages executed by the B., H. and E. R. R. Co., alleging that the agreement and lease were ultra vires, that they were obtained by fraud, and that they were subject to certain conditions precedent, which had not been fulfilled. Held, that the agreement and lease were ultra vires and violated the rights of the dissenting minority of the stockholders of the H., P. and F. R. R. Co. Boston and Providence R. R. Co. v. New York and New England R. R. Co., 13 R. L., 260, 1881; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 300.

297. Rents; garnishment. A railway company leased its line to another corporation for five years, and afterwards mortgaged the same property to trustees, the mortgage providing that the mortgagees, on default of the payment of the semi-annual interest on the bonds for six months, might enter and take possession of the property and receive the rents and income. The mortgagees entered for default of payment of interest, and gave notice to the lessees to pay to them all rents then due or thereafter to accrue. At this time a large sum was due from the lessees for rent, and a few days after the entry a creditor of the lessors garnished the lessees as debtors of the lessors for the rents overdue. Held, that these rents were not taken by the attachment, but belonged to the mortgagees. King v. Housatonic R. R. Co., 45 Conn., 226. 1877.

XVII. GENERAL MATTERS.

298. Bankruptcy; costs. Where the general creditors of a railway company obtained an order for the sale of the property in bankruptcy proceedings, and the property only sold for the amount of the liens thereon, the costs of the bankruptcy proceedings are not chargeable against the fund realized from the sale. Only the costs of the sale are properly chargeable against the fund. And, in such a case, the court has no power to adjust the claims of the trustee under the mortgage, nor to ascertain what is due to his counsel. Blue Ridge R. R. Co., In re, 2 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 224. 1874.

299. Canadian statute; change of bonds. Bonds were executed in Canada, payable in New York. Subsequently the parliament of Canada passed an act authorizing the company to issue new bonds at a lower rate of interest, in substitution, and declaring the assent of the bondholders thereto. Held, that the owners of the bonds in the United States were not bound by the statute. Gebhard v. Canada Southern R'y Co., 17 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 416, 1890; 1 Federal Reporter, 387, 1880.

300. Certificates. Where mortgage bonds of a railway company, past due, were funded by the company into registered certificates bearing a higher rate of interest, and giving additional time for the payment of the bonds, and there was no agreement, express or implied, between the bondholders and the company, that the acceptance of the certificates should operate as a waiver of the lien of the bonds, held, that the lien remained in force. Skiddy v. Atlantic, Miss. and Ohio R. R. Co., 8 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 320. 1877.

301. Charter. The Cornwall Minerals R'y Co.'s charter construed. Harrison v. Cornwall Minerals R'y Co., 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Eng. Ch.), 606, 1881; Same v. Same, 1 ib., 601, 1880.

302. Consolidation of railway. The holder of the bonds of a railway and telegraph company payable to bearer, with interest semi-annually, secured on the income from the sale of its land and the operation of its road and line, which have passed by consolidation to another company, is a creditor having a specific lien upon the income of the property which has gone from his debtor into the hands of the other company, and he may file a bill in equity to enforce such lien after the default in payment of the principal of such bonds and interest according to the terms thereof. Rutten v. Union Pacific R'y Co., 17 Federal Reporter, 480. 1883.

303. — One of these consolidated railroad companies, not having been able to pay the interest on its bonds, gave to the holders of the interest coupons the coupon bonds of the company for the amount of said interest. This was not a novation of the debt for the interest, and these bonds are secured by the mortgage. Gibert v. Washington, Va. Midland, etc., R. R. Co., 83 Grattan (Va.), 526, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 473.

304. — The Vermont Central R. R. Co., of which the Vermont and Canada R. R. Co. was an extension, leased the whole line of road, and subsequently a contract was made that, upon default in payment of rent for four months, the Canada Company might enter upon both roads, and take the whole income of them until the rent should be paid up, when the Central Company might resume control. The state court, in construing this lease and agreement, held, that the Vermont Central Company became the owner of the whole line, including the two roads, subject to certain rights and interests in the property of its mortgage bondholders, and the rent claims of the Vermont and Canada Company, and that the Vermont and Canada Company held and owned the right to a fixed annual rent, as a first charge on the income, arising from the use of said lines of road, and a right to compel the application of such income to the extinguishment of such rents, if in arrear. Subsequently the roads consolidated as the Consolidated R. R. Co. of Vermont, which issued $7,000,000 of bonds, secured by mortgage of its roads and property to the American Loan and Trust Company, as trustee for the bondholders, to further secure which a mortgage was executed by the Canada Company, and the bonds delivered to the same trustee; $1,000,000 of which, as a compromise, it was agreed should be accepted by the security holders of the Canada Company in place of all claim for rent, past and future. Held, that the mortgage executed by the Canada Company was a mortgage of the rent charge only, and that, as it had the right to deal with the rent, it had the right to change the security by the issue of the bonds as proposed; and, as it appeared to be for the benefit of the stockholders that such compromise should be carried out, the delivery of the bonds of the Consolidated Company to the stockholders of the Vermont and Canada Company would not be restrained. Hazard v. Vermont and Canada R. R. Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. C. C.), 388. 1883.

305. Constitutional law. The New York and Erie R. R. Co., by various laws of Pennsylvania, was authorized to procure rights of way and construct its road through certain counties of that state. It purchased real estate and then executed several mortgages upon its property. An act was passed for the appointment of a commissioner to decide what portion of said lands were necessary for the use of the line, and that the residue might be sold; and, upon the mortgagees releasing their mortgages as to the residue, the mortgages should be ratified as to the other property of the corporation. The commissioner reported that lands, describing them, and containing eighty acres, were necessary for the use of the line, and his report was confirmed. The mortgagees released the residue. Held, that this was an executed grant on the part of the commonwealth, and was under the protection of the constitution of the United States, art. I, § 10, forbidding state laws to impair the obligation of contracts, and the constitution of Pennsylvania, art. IX, § 17, forbidding the passage of such laws. Drew v. New York and Erie R. R. Co., 81 Pa. St., 48. 1870.

306. Contractor's lien. In an indenture of mortgage executed by a railroad corporation to trustees to secure bonds issued to raise moneys to pay off its existing indebtedness, and to complete and equip its road, the corporation covenanted with the trustees, among other things, that the expenditure of all sums of money realized from the sale of the bonds should be made with the approval of at least one of the trustees, and that his assent in writing should be necessary to all contracts made by the company before the same should be a charge upon any of the sums received from such sales; held, that a contractor, agreeing with the corporation to construct a portion of the road, and obtaining the assent of two of the trustees to his contract, and subsequently doing the work, did not acquire any lien for the payment of his work, under this covenant of the indenture, upon the funds received by the corporation from the bonds. Dillon v. Barnard, 21 Wallace, 430. 1874.

307. — To create, for future services of a contractor, a lien upon particular funds of his employer, there must be not only the express promise of the employer to apply them in payment of such services, upon which the contractor relies, but there must be some act of appropriation on the part of the employer relinquishing control of the funds, and conferring upon the contractor the right to have them so applied when the services are rendered. Ib.

308. Earnings. Where it is clearly implied by the terms of a mortgage executed by a railroad company that the latter was to hold possession and receive the earnings of the road until the mortgagees should take it or the proper judicial authority intervene, such possession gives the right to the whole fund derived therefrom, and renders it, therefore, liable to the creditors of the company as if no mortgage existed. Gilman v. Illinois and Mississippi Tel. Co., 91 U. S., 603. 1875.

309. Exchange of bonds; ratification. A corporation having the power to issue its bonds to another corporation for the purpose of enabling it to exchange them for the bonds of the state, may ratify and affirm a former irregular issue of such bonds. State v. Florida Central R. R. Co., 15 Fla., 690. 1876.

810. Execution. The bonds of a corporation cannot, before delivery, be levied upon under an execution. Sickles v. Richardson, 23 Hun (N. Y.), 559. 1881.

811. Forged bonds. Nine bonds were stolen from the T. and N. R. R. Co. At the time they were taken they were incomplete; the seal of the company and the certificate of the Union Trust Co., requisite to their validity, not having been affixed. Subsequently these were forged and affixed to the bonds, and the same were purchased by the plaintiff for value, and in good faith. In an action brought by him upon the bonds, held, that the company was not liable thereon. Maas v. Missouri, Kansas and Texas R'y Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.), 8. 1877.

812. Indorsement by state. The remedies afforded by the statute are given to, and enforceable by, the state alone; they cannot be set up by the purchasers of the road, in a contest between them and the holders of indorsed bonds, secured also by the corporation's mortgage, to defeat the latter in foreclosing such mortgage, whatever might be their effect if the state were a party, and the holders of indorsed bonds, secured also by the corporation's mortgage, should seek to set up rights under the mortgage to embarrass the state in pursuing its remedies. Kelly v. Ala. and Cincinnati R. R. Co., 58 Ala., 489, 1877; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 188.

813. — Although railroad bonds be indorsed by the state in contravention and fraud of the internal improvement law, and the indorsement be therefore void, this will not release the corporation of its liability for such bonds, which the corporation has secured by a deed of trust upon its property. Ib.

814. Irredeemable bonds. The grant to a railway company of the general power to borrow money, and to issue bonds below par, will not authorize it to issue irredeemable bonds at a rate below par, entitling the holder to a contingent share in the profits, nor to execute a mortgage to secure such bonds. McCalmont v. Philadelphia and

Reading R. R. Co., 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. C. C.), 168. 1881.

815. — A railway company has the power, without any specific authority being conferred by the charter, to accept a perpetual loan and to issue irredeemable bonds to the lenders. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co.'s Appeal, 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Pa.), 118. 1882.

816. Limitations. A mortgage is not barred in less than twenty years under the laws of Maryland. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Trimble, 51 Md., 99. 1878.

817. Lost bonds. The holders of lost bonds refused a distributive share, under the facts in the case. Gibbes v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 15 So. Car., 224; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 860. 1880.

818. — Certain persons holding ten first mortgage bonds and thirty-seven non-mortgage bonds of a railway company, all of which were alleged to have been destroyed, but there was difficulty in establishing the loss, made, through their attorney, with the corporation, an agreement by which, in settlement of their claims, they received interest-fund bonds to the amount of $8,600 for their first mortgage bonds and state guarantied bonds to the amount of $16,000, and interest-fund bonds for $6,725 for their non-mortgage bonds; and upon such bonds they collected interest for four years. The corporation afterwards became insolvent, and, upon sale, realized enough to pay its first mortgage and state guarantied bonds in full, but the non-mortgage and interest-fund bonds proved to be worthless. These parties, retaining their state guarantied bonds, offered to return their interest-fund bonds of $8,600, and to establish their ten lost first mortgage bonds, claiming the lien of the first mortgage, and that the substituted bonds were ultra vires. This court concurred with the referee and circuit judge in holding that the intention of the settlement was payment and not substitution, and, for that reason, and because it was a compromise of a doubtful right, made with full knowledge of the facts, and an arrangement which was a unity, refused to permit the petitioners to establish the ten lost bonds, or to claim for the substituted bonds the lien of the first mortgage. Ib.

General Matters.

819. Mechanics' liens. Claims of contractors and laborers for labor performed in the construction of a railroad subsequent to the execution of a mortgage on the road will not be allowed, except as postponed to the mortgage debt, and this whether or not mechanics' or laborers' liens have been filed in the proper court. Tommey v. Spartanburg and Asheville R. R. Co., 4 Hughes (U. S. C.), 640. 1891.

820. Merger. A railway company, after taking and recording a mortgage of land and assigning it to A., who did not record the assignment, acquired the fee of a part of the same land, and then executed a trust deed of the land so held by it in fee (with a large amount of other property) to secure its bonds; and this deed was recorded. On a subsequent foreclosure of the trust deed, the property described in it was sold to persons who organized the M. and St. P. R'y Co., which took and has ever since held possession of the land, putting valuable improvements upon it. In a suit by A. to foreclose his mortgage, held, that there was never any actual merger of the mortgage interest in the fee, the two interests having never met in the same person. Aiken v. Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 37 Wis., 469. 1875.

821. Old material. Old rails taken up from the track are still covered by a deed of trust of the railway. First National Bank of Salem v. Anderson, 75 Va., 250; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 411. 1888.

822. Preferred stock. An agreement that preferred stock shall be a lien of a certain order, if brought to the knowledge of subsequent incumbrancers, creates a valid equitable lien which will be enforced. Skiddy v. Atlanta, Miss. and Ohio R. R. Co., 3 Hughes (U. S. C.), 320. 1877.

823. Reorganization. A bondholder of a former organization has no standing in chancery to dissolve the present organization of a railroad company, for which his agents had voted his bonds, it was alleged, in excess of authority, and to enforce a different plan, where it appears that he had known of what his agent was doing, but had not dissented, and that he had accepted his share of the bonds of the new organization, had offered to buy and sell, and had brought suit for them. Such conduct ratified the act; or, inducing others to believe he had acquiesced in the organization, worked estoppel. Matthews v. Murchison, 15 Federal Reporter, 691. 1893.

824. — The complainant was the holder of a first mortgage bond of the defendant, and agreed to come in under a plan to reorganize the defendant by force of the statute; the bill alleged that the defendant, as reorganized, was about to issue to the other holders of such first mortgage bonds its own bonds, but did not show that such new bonds were to be secured by a mortgage. Held, that such statements did not lay a ground for equitable jurisdiction. Midland R. R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 34 N. J. Eq., 278, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 522.

825. Right of possession. The conveyance of lands by the Southern Pacific R. R. Co. to Mills and Tevis, in trust, to secure the payment of certain "first mortgage bonds," in the usual form of a mortgage, except being to trustees, with a condition of defeasance providing that, upon the payment of the bonds, "this indenture and the estate hereby granted shall cease and determine," etc., reserving to the grantor the "sole and exclusive management and control" of the lands, and only providing for an entry, foreclosure and sale by the trustees upon default and subsequent demand by the bondholders, is in substance and law a mortgage under the California Code, and the right of possession until default, and a demand by the bondholders, remains in the mortgagor or grantor. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Doyle, 11 Federal Reporter, 253. 1882.

826. — Express trusts may be created to sell real property and apply or dispose of the proceeds, but only "in accordance with the instrument creating the trust;" and, in this instance, the lands conveyed by the terms of the deed are left in the sole and exclusive management, control and possession of the grantor till default and demand. Id.

827. — By special provision of its charter the St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co. is empowered to confer upon its mortgagees the right of possession of mortgaged property, upon the common law conditions, or upon any other conditions that may be agreed upon and expressed in the mortgage. The effect is that by these charter provisions it is made competent for the company, by the terms of a mortgage or trust deed, to confer upon its mortgagee or trustee a right to the possession of the mortgaged property upon default in the payment of money secured thereby, and such a right as will entitle the mortgagee or trustee to sustain an action under our practice in the nature of ejectment to obtain possession if it is withheld. Rice v. St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co., 24 Minn., 464. 1878.

328. Statute impairing rights. The creditors of a corporation who are secured by mortgages of its property acquire therein rights of which they cannot be deprived even by an act of the legislature. Montgomery and West Point R. R. Co. v. Branch, 59 Ala., 139. 1877.

329. Sinking fund. Where a deed of trust directs, in plain terms, in what particular securities funds coming into the hands of the trustees shall be invested, and how, until so invested, they shall be held, the court cannot, by its judgment, defeat the intentions of the creator of the trust and the beneficiaries thereunder by directing different investments. Courts cannot change a provision for a sinking fund. Clark v. St. Louis, Alton and Terre Haute R. R. Co., 58 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 21. 1879.

330. Stockholders' rights. It is a general rule that the stockholders of a railroad are only to be paid after the claims of other lien holders, and where they come forward and insist upon having a priority of payment over mortgage creditors, a specific lien beyond all doubt should be shown to exist in their favor. King v. Ohio and Mississippi R. R. Co., 2 Federal Reporter, 86; 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 278. 1880.

331. Stock of corporation. The New Jersey Southern R. R. Co. (formerly the Raritan and Delaware Bay R. R. Co.), under the chartered powers of the latter company, to which it succeeded, had power, when the mortgage in controversy in this suit was given, to mortgage after-acquired property. That mortgage held to cover railroad stock (of another railroad company) subsequently purchased by the mortgagors. Williamson v. New Jersey Southern R. R. Co., 28 N. J. Eq., 393. 1875.

332. — The capital stock of a corporation is not goods and chattels within the meaning of the act concerning chattel mortgages. Hence, a mortgage of such stock need not be filed in accordance with the provisions of that act. Id.

333. Stolen bonds and coupons. Where coupon bonds of a corporation, transferable by delivery, were stolen, and were afterwards sold in the regular course of business to a bona fide purchaser, before they matured, for their market price, held, that the title in them passed to the purchaser, as to the bonds, and as to each coupon which had not yet become payable at the date of the sale, but did not pass as to the coupons which were past due. Gilbough v. Norfolk and Petersburg R. R. Co., 1 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 410. 1877.

334. — The owner of a stolen coupon payable to bearer, and which has not been paid by the promisor, is entitled to judgment against the promisor, on filing a bond of indemnity conditioned to save the defendant harmless against all lawful claims by any other person, and against all costs and expenses by reason of such claims. Hinckley v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 129 Mass., 52. 1880.

335. — The T. and N. R. R. Co. executed a mortgage on its road to secure its bonds to defendant, the U. T. Co., as trustee, and bonds were prepared for issuing, each of which contained a clause that it should not become obligatory until authenticated by an indorsement by the trustee. Said bonds were signed by the proper officers of the company, but, before the company's seal was affixed or the required certificate attached, a portion of them were stolen, a seal and certificate forged thereon, and the bonds sold; plaintiffs purchased them for a valuable consideration and in good faith. The T. and N. Co. was consolidated with defendant, the M., K. and T. R. Co.; by the agreement of consolidation the latter was to take up outstanding bonds of the former company, issuing its own in exchange. In an action to compel such an exchange for plaintiffs' bonds, held, that plaintiffs were bound by the condition in the bonds, making the certificate of the trustee essential to their validity; that neither the payment of value nor good faith on their part created a cause of action; and that the defect in the bonds was not waived by the agreement of consolidation; also, that the failure of the obligor, after discovering that the bonds had been lost or stolen, to notify the public of that fact did not constitute negligence making it liable. Maas v. Missouri, Kansas and Texas R'y Co., 88 N. Y., 223, 1880; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 30.

386. To indorser; release. A mortgage, made to an indorser by the maker of a note merely to secure the indorser, may be released by the latter at his pleasure; but where it is agreed that the indorser shall hold the mortgage not only for his own security, but for the security of the creditor, a conveyance of the mortgaged property to a party who knew of the agreement will not defeat the equitable rights of the creditor. Hartford and New York Transportation Co. v. First National Bank, 46 Conn., 569. 1879.

MUNICIPAL AID AND BONDS.

[The decisions in relation to such aid and bonds are to be found under the titles of Subscriptions by Cities and Towns and Subscriptions by Counties.]

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

See FEDERAL COURTS; HIGHWAY; INJURIES TO PERSONS ON THE TRACK; SEWERS; SUBSCRIPTIONS BY CITIES AND TOWNS; SUBSCRIPTIONS BY COUNTIES; WHARVES.

1. Incorporation. Proceedings for incorporation under the statutes of Indiana examined. Baltimore, Ohio and Chicago R. R. Co. v. Commissioners of St. Joseph County, 73 Ind., 218. 1881.

2. Speed of trains. Municipal corporations have power, as a police regulation, to pass ordinances regulating the speed of trains within the corporate limits, but such regulations must be reasonable and proper. Meyers v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 57 Ia., 555, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 406.

3. — Where an ordinance of a city limits the speed of railway trains to four miles per hour, and the road passes through agricultural lands, fenced on both sides, for three miles after entering the limits of the city, and before reaching the inhabited portion thereof, such ordinance operates as a restraint upon commerce, as to such portion of the road, and is unreasonable and void. Ib.

NAME OF CORPORATION.

1. Change. A change in the name of a corporation can only be effected by changing the articles of incorporation, and of this change the best evidence is the articles themselves. C., D. and M. R. R. Co. v. Keisel, 43 Ia., 89. 1876.

2. — The presumption is that a change of name, authorized by the articles of incorporation, has been made in accordance with the law. Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Oregon Ry and Navigation Co., 8 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 600. 1883.

3. — The resolution changing the name of the St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co. to St. Paul and Chicago R. R. Co. held inoperative. Morris v. St. Paul and Chicago R. R. Co., 19 Minn., 528, 1873; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 289.

4. Evidence. Where a corporation was spoken of in the evidence as the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Railroad, instead of railroad company, held, that if this description was not sufficient it was cured by other testimony descriptive of the corporation. Louisville, New Albany and Chicago R'y Co. v. Grubb, 88 Ind., 85. 1882.

NEGLIGENCE.

[Most of the decisions upon questions of negligence will be found under other heads. Nearly every title contains some decision in which questions of negligence are considered.]

1. Children. An infant, to avoid the imputation of negligence, is bound only to exercise that degree of care which can reasonably be expected of one of its age. Byrne v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 83 N. Y., 620, 1881; reversing Same v. Same, 14 Hun (N. Y.), 322, 1878; Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Delaney, 82 Ill., 198, 1876; Mobile and Montgomery R'y Co. v. Crenshaw, 65 Ala.,

Comparative.

556, 1880; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 840; Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Lammert, 12 Bradwell (Ill.), 408, 1883; Dowling v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 78; 90 N. Y., 670, 1882; McMillan v. Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co., 46 Ia., 281, 1877; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 239; Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Murray, 71 Ill., 601, 1874.

2. — An infant under six years of age is not of sufficient discretion to be guilty of contributory negligence. Bay Shore R. R. Co. v. Harris, 67 Ala., 6, 1880.

3. — The question whether the capacity of a child is such that he can be charged with contributory negligence is one of fact which must be determined by the jury. Moore v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 2 Mackey (Dist. Col.), 487, 1888.

4. — Where a child is the plaintiff, whether the fault is that of the child or the negligence of the person having the care of the child, the doctrine of contributory negligence applies. Hathaway v. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co., 46 Ind., 25, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 399; Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. Miller, 76 Ill., 278, 1875. See, also, Higgins v. Jeffersonville, etc., R. R. Co., 52 Ind., 110, 1875.

5. — Negligence cannot be imputed to a child not of sufficient capacity or discretion to understand the danger and guard against it. Pittsburgh, etc., R'y Co. v. Caldwell, 74 Pa. St., 421, 1878; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 100; Pennsylvania Co. v. James, 81½ Pa. St., 194, 1874; Government St. R. R. Co. v. Hanlon, 53 Ala., 70, 1875; Cleveland, etc., R. R. Co. v. Manson, 80 Ohio St., 451, 1876; Evansich v. G., C. and S. F. R'y Co., 57 Tex., 126, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 182.

6. — A child two years and ten months old cannot be guilty of contributory negligence. Neither is it bound by the neglect of its parents. Norfolk and Petersburg R. R. Co. v. Ormsby, 27 Grattan (Va.), 455, 1876. See, also, Government St. R. R. Co. v. Hanlon, 53 Ala., 70, 1875.

7. — Where a parent sues for the loss of services of a child by reason of injuries resulting from the defendant's negligence, contributory negligence on the part of the parent is a complete defense; but it is otherwise if the child sues by the parent or any other next friend. Moore v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 2 Mackey (Dist. Col.), 487, 1888; Bellefontaine R'y Co. v. Snyder, 24 Ohio St., 670, 1874.

8. — A railway company will not be held liable for injuries received by a child while attempting to get upon one of its cars, in consequence of an invitation from one of its servants in charge of the car, where the evidence shows no authority on the part of the servant to permit persons to ride on the car, and it does not appear that the invitation or permission were in furtherance of the interests of the road or connected in any manner with the service which the servant was employed to render. Snyder v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 60 Mo., 413, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 254.

9. Comparative. The doctrine of comparative negligence denied. Houston and Texas Central R'y Co. v. Gorbett, 49 Tex., 578, 1878; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Richter, 42 N. J. Law, 180, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 220; Terre Haute and Indianapolis R. R. Co. v. Graham, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 77, 1888; Kansas Pacific R'y Co. v. Peavey, 29 Kans., 169, 1883; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 260; St. Louis and Southeastern R'y Co. v. Britz, 72 Ill., 256, 1874; Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Evans, 88 Ill., 63, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 284; Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. Spencer, 66 Ill., 528, 1873; Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Cragin, 71 Ill., 177, 1873; Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Hammer, 72 Ill., 847, 1874; Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Clark, 70 Ill., 276, 1873; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Dunn, 61 Ill., 385, 1871; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 427; Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Langley, 2 Bradwell (Ill.), 505, 1877; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Colwell, 3 Bradwell (Ill.), 545, 1878; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Avery, 8 Bradwell (Ill.), 188, 1880; Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Brookshire, 3 Bradwell (Ill.), 225, 1878; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Dougherty, 12 Bradwell (Ill.), 181, 1882; Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co. v. Berlinsk, 2 Bradwell (Ill.), 427, 1878; Wabash R'y Co. v. Jones, 5 Bradwell (Ill.), 607, 1879.

10. — The plaintiff may recover if his negligence is slight and that of the defendant is great. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Maffit, 61 Ill., 431, 1873; Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Patterson, 93 Ill., 290, 1879; Stratton v. Central City Horse R'y Co., 95 Ill., 25, 1880; Schmidt v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 83 Ill., 405, 1876; Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Dimick, 96 Ill., 42, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 201.

11. — In an action to recover damages for a personal injury, where the plaintiff is chargeable with contributory negligence, it is erroneous to instruct the jury, in substance, that the plaintiff may recover, though guilty of slight negligence, if the defendant's employees fell short, in any degree, of the exercise of that high degree of care as, under the circumstances, it was reasonable to have used to prevent the injury. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Hammer, 85 Ill., 526. 1877.

12. — An instruction attempting to state the rule as to contributory negligence must refer to a standard of comparison of the negligence of both parties. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Shannon, 11 Bradwell (Ill.), 222. 1882.

13. — Where the vital question was the comparative negligence of the plaintiff with that of the defendant, and the evidence on this point was conflicting and difficult to resolve, the court, in two instructions for the plaintiff, substantially told the jury that if the defendant, by its servants, the engine-driver and fireman of the engine that caused the injury, was guilty of negligence in managing the engine, then the defendant was liable for such negligence. Held, that the instructions in themselves were erroneous. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Murray, 62 Ill., 326. 1872.

14. — In an action against a railroad company to recover for injuries to the plaintiff, occasioned by the alleged negligence of the defendant, the court, at the instance of the plaintiff, instructed the jury incorrectly in regard to the rule of comparative negligence. Held, as the evidence showed no negligence on the part of the plaintiff to compare with that of the defendant, the latter could not be heard to complain of the erroneous instruction. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Dickson, 63 Ill., 151, 1872; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 45.

15. — The onus of establishing the relative degrees of negligence of the plaintiff or the deceased, and of the defendant, is not upon the latter. The gross negligence of the defendant is as indispensable an element in the rule of comparative negligence as the slight negligence of the plaintiff, or the plaintiff's intestate, and unless both are proved as alleged, no recovery can be had, although neither party in the first instance is presumed to have been negligent. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Harwood, 90 Ill., 425. 1878.

16. — Where there is negligence on the part of an injured party, or on the part of those charged with the care of the injured party, as, a child of tender years, contributing directly to produce the injury, there can be no recovery, unless such negligence is slight, and that of the defendant is gross in comparison, in regard to that which produced the injury. It is not sufficient that the defendant may have been guilty of a greater degree of negligence in regard to the producing cause of the injury. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. Grable, 88 Ill., 441, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 336.

17. Contributory. In an action for damages on account of negligence, an instruction to the effect that the negligence of plaintiff must have contributed "directly" to the injury, to excuse defendant, was held to be correct. Locke v. Sioux City and Pacific R. R. Co., 46 Ia., 109, 1877; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 133.

18. — A person who is guilty of contributory negligence cannot recover damages, even if the defendant contributed to the loss by his negligence. Flemming v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 49 Cal., 253, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 265.

19. — An instruction that, if the deceased, at the time he was killed, was using reasonable care, etc., is erroneous. The language, as it stands, ignores the fact of any previous neglect on the part of the deceased, and, according to the instruction, no matter what previous neglect there had been, if he were not negligent at the time of the collision, a recovery could be had. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Clark, 2 Bradwell (Ill.), 116. 1878.

Contributory.

20. — In a suit for damages for an injury caused by negligence, although the court charges the jury that the plaintiff cannot recover if his own negligence contributed to the injury, yet, in connection with such charge, so instructed the jury that they may reasonably believe that this rule only applies when the defendant is not negligent, such charge is misleading and erroneous. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Whittaker, 24 Ohio St., 642, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 182.

21. — burden of proof. Contributory negligence is a matter of defense, and the burden of proving it is upon the defendant. Carter v. Columbia and Greenville R. R. Co., 19 So. Car., 20, 1882; Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Noel, 77 Ind., 110, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 524; Central R. R. Co. v. Brinson, 64 Ga., 475, 1880; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 343; Randall v. Northwestern Telegraph Co., 54 Wis., 140, 1882; Paducah and Memphis R. R. Co. v. Hoehl, 13 Bush (Ky.), 41, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 338; Kentucky Central R. R. Co. v. Thomas, 79 Ky., 160; 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 79; Robinson v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 48 Cal., 409, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 244; MacDougal v. Central R. R. Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 143 (Cal.), 1883; Chadbourne v. Delaware, Lackawanna, etc., R. R. Co., 6 Daly (N. Y.), 215, 1875; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Weber, 76 Pa. St., 157, 1874; Savannah and Memphis R. R. Co. v. Shearer, 58 Ala., 672, 1877; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 451; Kansas Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pointer, 14 Kans., 37, 1874.

22. — The plaintiff, in an action founded upon negligence, must show that he was free from contributory negligence. Hart v. Hudson River Bridge Co., 80 N. Y., 622, 1880; Patterson v. Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co., 38 Ia., 279, 1874; Nelson v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 38 Ia., 564, 1874; Mitchell v. Chicago and Grand Trunk R'y Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Mich.), 163, 1883; Michigan Central R. R. Co. v. Coleman, 28 Mich., 440, 1874; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 59; Walsh v. Oregon R'y and Navigation Co., 10 Oreg., 250, 1882.

23. — In suits for injuries from negligence, as in other civil actions, all issues of fact are to be determined upon the preponderance of evidence; and it is not necessary that defendant's negligence should be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Quaife v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 48 Wis., 513, 1879.

24. — choice between hazards. Where one, in the face of great danger, and obliged to choose between two hazards, makes such choice as a person of ordinary prudence and care placed in the same situation might make, and is thereby injured, the fact that if he had chosen the other hazard he would have escaped injury will not relieve the one by reason of whose negligence he was put in jeopardy. Haff v. Minneapolis and St. Louis R'y Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 558, 1882; Schultz v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 44 Wis., 638, 1878; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 146; Mark v. St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba R'y Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Minn.), 86, 1883; Moore v. Central R. R. Co. of Iowa, 47 Ia., 688, 1878.

25. — knowledge of neglect of injured party. Where the neglect of the injured party is seen by the employees of the railway company in time to prevent injury from such negligence, their failure to exercise care to prevent the injury will render their employer liable. Morris v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 45 Ia., 29, 1876; Harlan v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 65 Mo., 22, 1877; Yarnall v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 75 Mo., 575, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 726; Karle v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 55 Mo., 476, 1874; Little Rock and Ft. Smith R'y Co. v. Pankhurst, 36 Ark., 371, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 635; Kansas Pacific R'y Co. v. Cranmer, 4 Colo., 524, 1879; Healey v. Dry Dock, etc., R. R. Co., 46 N. Y. Superior Ct., 473, 1881; Cook v. Central R. R. and Banking Co. of Georgia, 87 Ala., 533, 1880; Bunting v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 16 Nev., 277, 1881; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 282; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Johnson, 108 Ill., 512, 1882; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 225.

26. — pleading. If a complaint against a railway company for a personal injury shows by its statement of facts that the plaintiff was himself guilty of negligence contributing to his injury, the complaint is bad, notwithstanding it may contain an avermment that he was without fault. Jeffersonville, etc., R. R. Co. v. Goldsmith, 47 Ind., 48, 1874; 8 Amer. R'y Rep., 815.

27. — proximate cause. Where a passenger upon a street car was himself guilty of a want of care, but it did not contribute to the accident whereby he was injured, or only remotely contributed to it, he will not thereby be prevented from recovering damages from the company, when the negligence of the company was the proximate cause of the injury. Thirteenth and Fifteenth Street Passenger R'y Co. v. Boudrou, 92 Pa. St., 475, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 80.

28. — The rule that plaintiff cannot recover, if his own wrong, as well as that of the defendant, has conduced to the injury which he has sustained, is confined to cases where his wrong or negligence has immediately or proximately contributed to the result. Meeks v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 56 Cal., 513, 1890; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 814; Meyers v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 59 Mo., 223, 1875; 8 Amer. R'y Rep., 473.

29. — Where the plaintiff may have been guilty of negligence, and that negligence may, in fact, have contributed to the accident, yet if the defendant could, by the exercise of ordinary care and diligence, have avoided the mischief which happened, the plaintiff's negligence will not excuse the defendant. Richmond and Danville R. R. Co. v. Anderson, 81 Grattan (Va.), 812, 1879; Meyers v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 59 Mo., 223, 1875; Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Becker, 76 Ill., 25, 1875; Tanner v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 60 Ala., 621, 1877.

30. — verdict. Where a jury found specially facts which, under an instruction given by the court, would entitle the defendant to a verdict, as showing contributory negligence, it was held that a general verdict in favor of the plaintiff should have been set aside. Baird v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 55 Ia., 121, 1880; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 128.

31. — wanton injury. When contributory negligence is relied on as a defense to an action to recover damages for personal injuries, if it be shown that they were inflicted recklessly, wantonly or intentionally, such defense is vitiated and overcome. Cook v. Central R. R. and Banking Co. of Georgia, 67 Ala., 533. 1880.

32. — To avoid the defense of contributory negligence, it is not necessary that the wrongful act of the defendant, or its agents and servants, should be "wanton and intentional," as erroneously stated in the case of Government St. Railroad Co. v. Hanlon, 53 Ala., 70. Tanner v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 60 Ala., 621. 1877.

33. — when a question for the jury. Where the question of contributory negligence depends on a number of circumstances, from which different minds may arrive at different conclusions as to whether there was negligence or not, the question ought to be submitted to the jury under proper instructions. Marietta and Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. Pickseley, 24 Ohio St., 654, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 186; McNarra v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 41 Wis., 69, 1876; McHugh v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 41 Wis., 75, 1876; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Fortney, 90 Pa. St., 323, 1879; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 128; Kansas Pacific R'y Co. v. Ward, 4 Colo., 30, 1877; Corcoran v. New York Elevated R. R. Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.), 863, 1879; Nehrbas v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 62 Cal., 320, 1892.

34. — when a question of law. Contributory negligence becomes a question of law when the facts are clearly settled. Fernandes v. Sacramento City R'y Co., 52 Cal., 45, 1877; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 352; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co. v. Toffey, 38 N. J. Law, 525, 1875; Bonnell v. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co., 39 N. J. Law, 189, 1877; Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Righter, 42 N. J. Law, 180, 1880.

35. — women. It cannot be laid down as a rule of law that a less degree of care is required of a woman than of a man; and an instruction to that effect is erroneous. The rule of reasonable care and prudence knows nothing of sex. Hassenger v. Michigan Central R. R. Co., 48 Mich., 205, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 59.

36. Corporate powers. It is not necessary, to fix the liability, that the wrongful act, or the negligence from which the injury proceeds, should have been committed while the corporation was in the exercise of powers conferred by the charter; it may have been committed while the corporation, or its servants acting under its authority, were exceeding corporate power, or engaged in transactions wholly foreign to its nature. South and North Ala. R. R. Co. v. Chappell, 61 Ala., 527. 1878.

37. Crossings; city ordinance. A person about to cross a railroad upon the street of a city, which has an ordinance limiting the speed of trains, has a right to presume, until the contrary is made apparent, that the company will not run its trains in violation of such ordinance. Correll v. R., C. R. and M. R. R. Co., 38 Ia., 120. 1874.

38. Defined. Negligence is the absence of care, according to the circumstances. Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore R. R. Co. v. Stinger, 78 Pa. St., 219, 1875; Jamison v. San Jose and Santa Clara R. R. Co., 55 Cal., 593, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 350; Marcott v. Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon R. R. Co., 47 Mich., 1, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 548.

39. Evidence. It is not allowable to prove by a witness that the act complained of was not negligent, or objectionable. It is for the jury to say, from all the facts and circumstances, whether an act constitutes negligence. Pennsylvania Co. v. Stoelke, 104 Ill., 201, 1882; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 523.

40. Gross neglect. To instruct the jury that, if the plaintiff failed to exercise ordinary care, he was guilty of gross negligence, and that, if he was injured for the want of ordinary care, no action will lie unless the defendant wilfully inflicted the injury, presents unsound propositions of law. Stratton v. Central City Horse R'y Co., 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ill.), 115. 1880.

41. — Where the jury found that the defendant was guilty of gross negligence, immediately causing the injury, and they also found that the plaintiff was guilty of negligence contributing to the injury, without specifying what degree of negligence, or whether proximately or remotely contributory, held, that it was apparent from the other findings, and the instructions of the court, that they intended only such slight negligence as was consistent with a right to recover compensation. Kansas Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pointer, 14 Kans., 37. 1874.

42. Instructions. Where the term negligence is used without any qualifying word it will be generally understood that ordinary negligence is meant. Ib.

43. — An instruction which attempts to define the character and degree of negligence which would authorize a recovery for an injury, but which omits the essential qualification that the negligence upon which a recovery must be based is such as helped to produce the injury, and such alone, is erroneous. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Carroll, 12 Bradwell (Ill.), 648. 1888.

44. — In a suit against a railroad company for causing the death of a person through negligence, where there is a question as to whether the deceased was guilty of negligence or not, an instruction which directs the jury, if they believe certain facts, to find absolutely for the plaintiff, without containing the requirement of any degree of care whatever on the part of the deceased, is erroneous. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Mock, 72 Ill., 141. 1874.

45. Iowa statute. The following instruction was given: "It is the law of Iowa that every railroad company is liable for all damages sustained by any person, including employees, in consequence of any neglect of the agents or by any mismanagement of the engineers or other employees of the corporation, provided the plaintiff did not contribute to the injury by his own want of proper care or negligence." It was urged by the defendant that the use of the terms "any neglect" and "any mismanagement" implied that defendant was liable for want of extraordinary care; but the court held otherwise, and that the instruction was not erroneous. Hamilton v. Des Moines Valley R. R. Co., 36 Ia., 31. 1872.

46. Master and servant. The true test by which to determine the liability of the employer or master for the negligence or wrongful acts of the servant is, was the wrongful or negligent act done in the course and scope of the servant's employment? If it was, the employer is liable. Johnson v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 58 Ia., 348, 1882; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 206.

Pleading — Wilful Acts.

47. Pleading. Under a general charge of negligence in the running of a train, evidence may be given of any and every degree of negligence. Negligence must be charged in the complaint, but it is the province of the evidence to show in what it consisted. Pennsylvania Co. v. Krick, 47 Ind., 368. 1874.

48. — The due care of the injured party need not be alleged except in cases where the facts stated would, if unexplained, make a prima facie case of contributory negligence. Texas and Pacific R'y Co. v. Murphy, 46 Tex., 356, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 319.

49. Proximate cause. In determining what is proximate cause, the true rule is, the injury must be the natural and probable consequence of the negligence; such a consequence, as from the surrounding circumstances of the case, might and ought to have been foreseen by the wrong-doer as likely to flow from his act. Hoag v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. Co., 85 Pa. St., 293, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 405.

50. — Negligence of the plaintiff which contributes remotely to the injury will not prevent a recovery, if the defendant could, by the exercise of ordinary care and prudence, have avoided the danger. Neier v. Missouri Pacific R'y Co., 12 Mo. App., 25, 1882; Same v. Same, ib., 35, 1882.

51. Rate of speed. No rate of speed in a railroad train is negligence per se except where the law of the state, or of a municipal corporation authorized to do so, prescribes a limit. Maher v. Atlantic and Pacific R. R. Co., 64 Mo., 267. 1876.

52. Third party's neglect; neglect of co-employee. A stranger is not relieved from liability for an injury caused by his negligence to a third person, by the fact that the negligence of a co-employee of the person injured contributed thereto. Busch v. Buffalo Creek R. R. Co., 29 Hun (N. Y.), 112. 1883.

53. Verdicts; successive. Where three successive juries have, on a doubtful question of negligence, found for the plaintiff, this court should be clearly convinced of the existence of error before it orders the setting aside of the third verdict. Kansas Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pointer, 14 Kans., 37. 1874.

54. Where a question of fact. Negligence is a question of fact; and where the inferences to be drawn from the proof are not certain and uncontrovertible, it cannot be decided, as a question of law, by directing a verdict or non-suit, but must be submitted to the jury. Thurber v. Harlem Bridge, Morrisania and Fordham R. R. Co., 60 N. Y., 326. 1875; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 126; Kansas Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pointer, 14 Kans., 37, 1874; McNamara v. North Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Cal., 581, 1875; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 190; Abbett v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 30 Minn., 482, 1888; Bonnell v. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co., 39 N. J. Law, 189, 1877; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 220.

55. When a question of law. When the facts are undisputed the question of negligence becomes one of law. O'Neill v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 505, 1881; Hoag v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. Co., 85 Pa. St., 293. 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 405; Flemming v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 49 Cal., 253, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 265; Solen v. Virginia and Truckee R. R. Co., 13 Nev., 106, 1876; McMahon v. Northern Central R'y Co., 39 Md., 433, 1873; Stockstill v. Dayton and Michigan R. R. Co., 24 Ohio St., 83, 1873.

56. Wilful acts. A corporation is liable for the wilful acts and torts of its employees committed within the general scope of their employment, as well as for acts of negligence; and the corporation is thus bound, although the particular acts have not been previously authorized or subsequently ratified by the employer. The act of the agent, within the general scope of his employment, is the act of the employer, and if wrongful, the master is liable, although the act be unnecessary to the performance of the master's service, and was not intended for that purpose. The liability of the master does not depend upon the necessity of the act or the intent with which it was done, but upon whether the act was wrongful and within the general scope of the employment of the agent. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co. v. Anthony, 43 Ind., 183. 1873.

57. — Where the plaintiff is guilty of ordinary negligence, contributing directly to the injury, he cannot recover, except perhaps in cases of wanton and wilful injury.

Accident — Newly-discovered Evidence.

Kansas Pacific R. R. Co. v. Pointer, 14 Kans. 87. 1874.

58. — When wilful negligence is established, the guilty party must answer in damages, no matter how negligently the person killed may have acted. Contributory negligence is not a question in the case when wilful negligence is established. Ch. 57, Gen. St., §§ 1 and 3. Claxton v. Lexington and Big Sandy R. R. Co., 18 Bush (Ky.), 636. 1878.

59. — In an action for wilful neglect, under § 8 of ch. 57 of Gen. Stats., a special verdict having been demanded, the court should have instructed the jury as to what "wilful neglect" was, and then left it to them, by questions properly framed, to decide whether it existed; and the jury not having passed on the question of wilful neglect, their special verdict is not sufficient to support a judgment for the plaintiff. Paducah and Elizabethtown R. R. Co. v. Letcher, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ky.), 61. 1893.

NEW TRIALS.

See COSTS; EMINENT DOMAIN.

1. Accident. New trial granted because of failure to defend through misinformation as to the time of the term of the court. Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls and Sioux City R. R. Co., 49 Ia., 857. 1878.

2. Arrest of judgment. Sustaining a motion in arrest of judgment is equivalent to granting a new trial. Morehead v. International R. R. Co., 46 Tex., 178, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 814.

3. Concurrent verdicts. Concurrent verdicts will not justify the refusal of a new trial where there has been misconduct on the part of the juries. Brown v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co., 29 Kans., 186, 1883; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 739.

4. Costs. The first trial was had before a judge who was a stockholder in the defendant corporation. On a second trial the plaintiff again recovered a verdict. Held, that he was entitled to costs for two trials. Cregin v. Brooklyn Cross-Town R. R. Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.), 349. 1879.

5. Demurrer to evidence. A demurrer to evidence cannot be made after verdict. A motion for new trial is then the only remedy, and is addressed to the discretion of the trial judge. Aldrich v. Springfield, Athol and Northeastern R. R. Co., 125 Mass., 404. 1878.

6. Evidence. New trial granted under the evidence. Kuse v. N. Y., New Haven and Hartford R. R. Co., 4 Hun (N. Y.), 673, 1875; Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Buttolf, 66 Ill., 847, 1872; Delane v. Central R. R. and Banking Co., 59 Ga., 633, 1877.

7. — Verdict held not contrary to the evidence. Western and Atlantic R. R. Co. v. Brown, 59 Ga., 830, 1877; Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Stover, 63 Ill., 838, 1873; Illinois and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. McClintock, ib., 514, 1873; Marietta and Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. Strader, 29 Ohio St., 448, 1876.

8. Fraud. Issues cannot be retried in another cause, upon allegations of fraud and perjury in the first action. New York Central R. R. Co. v. Harrold, 65 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 89. 1883.

9. Misconduct of jury. Where the natural tendency of what a juror does or says or willingly listens to from others is to bias his mind, or where his misconduct evinces a prejudgment of the case, or ill-will or passion against the losing party, the inference of prejudice in the true sense inevitably follows, because the verdict cannot be said to be the result of a fair trial. The various matters of misconduct of a jury held prejudicial to the plaintiff in a personal injury case, and a new trial awarded. Pool v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 6 Federal Reporter, 844. 1891.

10. Misconduct of prevailing party. Where it appears that during the progress of a trial the prevailing party or his attorney has furnished intoxicating liquors to a juror, it is a good ground for a new trial, unless it is clearly shown that it was not intended to influence his action in the case, and that it had no influence on his mind as a juror. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Porter, 32 Ohio St., 328. 1877.

11. Newly-discovered evidence. The granting of new trials, because of newly-discovered evidence, rests for the most part with the trial court. Cook v. St. Louis and Keokuk R. R. Co., 56 Mo., 380. 1874.

12. — A new trial granted on the ground of newly-discovered evidence. Cairo and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Schumacker, 77 Ill., 583, 1875; Wayt v. B., C. R. and M. R. R. Co., 45 Ia., 217, 1876; Cairo and Fulton R. R. Co. v. Titus, 32 N. J. Eq., 397, 1880; reversing Cairo and Fulton R. R. Co. v. Titus, 30 N. J. Eq., 502, 1879.

13. — A new trial in a personal injury case refused. No sufficient diligence was used in discovering the evidence upon which the application is based. Schultz v. Third Avenue R. R. Co., 47 N. Y. Superior Ct., 285. 1881.

14. — Newly-discovered evidence, which is merely cumulative, will not entitle the party to a new trial. Hickenbottom v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 57 Ia., 704, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 609.

15. — A new trial granted in a personal injury case because of admissions of the plaintiff newly discovered since the trial. Houston and Tex. Central R'y Co. v. Forsyth, 49 Tex., 171. 1878.

16. — A written contract relating to the matter in controversy, made by a former agent of the appellants, and not produced at the trial because the appellants were ignorant of its existence, is material, within the rule requiring newly-discovered evidence, as ground of relief, to be material. Cairo and Fulton R. R. Co. v. Titus, 28 N. J. Eq., 269, 1877; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 28.

17. — The granting a continuance upon a motion for a new trial is a matter of discretion with the trial court. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. McLaughlin, 63 Ill., 389. 1873.

18. — When, in the opinion of the court, the verdict should have been for defendant, upon the evidence, it will not, upon the motion of plaintiff, set aside a verdict in his favor because its amount was less than the evidence showed him to be entitled to, if entitled to recover at all. Reading v. Texas and Pacific R'y Co., 4 Federal Reporter, 134. 1880.

19. Practices. Practice on applications for new trial considered. Steele v. C., C. and A. R. R. Co., 14 So. Car., 324, 1880; Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Indianapolis R. R. Co. v. Long, 24 Ohio St., 133, 1873; Georgia Southern R. R. Co. v. Neel, 68 Ga.,

20. Proceedings in equity. Where a judgment has been recovered at law, and the party who recovered it has been enjoined in chancery from proceeding thereon, and a new trial has been ordered, such new trial may, in a proper case, be had in chancery, or, in the discretion of the chancellor, may be had at law, either by an issue out of this court or in the suit at law; and where a new trial in the suit at law is ordered, unless the party who recovered the judgment will consent to such new trial, he will be perpetually enjoined from enforcing his judgment. Cairo and Fulton R. R. Co. v. Titus, 35 N. J. Eq., 384. 1882.

21. — A court of equity will not grant a new trial in a law action except upon clear testimony. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. Ingram, 85 Ill., 172. 1877.

22. Remittitur. The court below made an order granting the defendant a new trial, unless the plaintiff should remit a specified portion of the damages. The plaintiff declined to do so, and appealed from the order. Held, the practice adopted by the judge below has been several times approved here, and we cannot say the evidence did not justify his action. Gregg v. San Francisco and North Pacific R. R. Co., 59 Cal., 312. 1881.

23. — Upon a motion for a new trial, the trial judge stated that he thought the damages too high and would require a remittitur, if the defendant would abide the judgment and not appeal, to which defendant refused to agree; therefore he allowed the judgment to stand. Such practice is reprehensible. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Garrett, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 438. 1881.

NON-SUIT.

1. Appeal. A non-suit, taken by the plaintiff in consequence of the ruling of the court sustaining a demurrer to his complaint, is voluntary, and not revisable on appeal under section 2759 of the Revised Code. Amerson v. Montgomery and Mobile R. R. Co., 50 Ala., 497. 1874.

2. Evidence. When there was some testimony before the jury sustaining the plaintiff's case, the order allowing a non-suit was error, even though such evidence would have been excluded as inadmissible had it been objected to. Jones v. Mobile and Girard R. R. Co., 55 Ga., 122. 1875.

3. Writ of error. A writ of error will not lie to a voluntary non-suit. Jones v. Mobile and Girard R. R. Co., 64 Ga., 446. 1879.

NOTICE.

1. Claim to land; grading for railway. Where it is shown that grading had been commenced, but subsequently suspended, by a railroad company on a tract of land to which it had no record title; and where the evidence as to the kind and quantity of grading was indefinite, and did not show that the grading indicated the purpose for which it was done; and where there was no evidence that the purchaser of the land knew of or suspected the existence of such grading, — held, that there was no evidence to warrant a finding that the purchaser took with actual notice of the claim of the railroad to the land. Masterson v. West End R. R. Co., 5 Mo. App., 64, 1878; affirmed, 72 Mo., 342. 1880.

2. Lis pendens. Since Laws of 1869, c. 75 (Gen. St. 1878, c. 75, § 34), regulating the filing of notice of lis pendens, a purchaser from one of the parties to an action affecting the title to real estate is not charged with notice of the pendency of the action, nor bound by the judgment, except in favor of a party who filed notice of lis pendens as provided by that act. Jorgensen v. Minneapolis and St. Louis R'y Co., 25 Minn., 206. 1878.

3. — Where a railway extends through several counties a notice of lis pendens would not be operative in the absence of proof that the complaint was filed in some one of the counties. Cornell v. Utica, Ithaca and Elmira R. R. Co., 61 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 184. 1881.

4. — The exception in favor of negotiable paper to the ordinary rule of lis pendens has no application to a suit commenced to enforce a collateral lien created by third persons upon property not belonging to the debtor, and now in the hands of strangers to the obligation of the bonds. The controversies about the lien are independent of and collateral to those controversies about the negotiable securities which are included in the exception. Stevens v. Railroad Companies, 4 Federal Reporter, 97. 1880.

5. Purchase of land by railway company. A railway company contracted for certain lands, and under the conditions of the contract proceeded to build its line across them, receiving at length a deed from the only owner of whose rights it had notice. Meanwhile the same land had been set off by deed of partition to a party who held some unrecorded claim to an undivided interest in the premises, and this party afterwards executed a quit-claim deed to the land, referring to the company's occupancy. Held, that an injunction would lie to restrain proceedings in ejectment brought against the company by the holder of the quit-claim deed. Detroit and Milwaukee R. R. Co. v. Brown, 87 Mich., 538. 1877.

6. Title; possession. The general rule is that possession of land is notice to a purchaser of the possessor's title. But this rule does not apply to a vendor remaining in possession so as to require a purchaser from his grantee to inquire whether he has reserved any interest in the land conveyed. So far as the purchaser is concerned, the vendor's deed is conclusive on the subject. Van Keuren v. Central R. R. Co. of New Jersey, 38 N. J. Law, 165, 1875; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 48.

NUISANCE.

See BRIDGES; EMINENT DOMAIN; HIGHWAYS; INJUNCTIONS; FIRES.

1. Culvert. A railway company is not responsible for the acts of its employees in creating a nuisance by using a culvert under its railroad near the residence of the plaintiff for the purposes of a privy. Hopkins v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Cal., 190, 1875;

Damages — Highway.

12 Amer. R'y Rep., 176. In such an action, evidence to show that the land would sell for less on account of the nuisance is not admissible. Ib.

2. Damages. In an action to recover damages caused to a house and lot by the construction and operation of railroad tracks in a street in close proximity to the plaintiff's property, the true measure of damages is the loss sustained by the nuisance, the injury from jarring the building and the throwing of cinders and smoke upon the plaintiff's premises; and the depreciation of the value of the property by these causes may be considered, but not general depreciation in value from other causes, such as mere inconvenience in approaching or leaving the property, or the noise and confusion in the vicinity. The injury must be physical. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. Co. v. Hall, 90 Ill., 42. 1878.

8. Dwelling near railway. Where, after the construction of a railroad over a portion of a lot, the owner erected a dwelling-house upon the lot, in close proximity to the road, and occupied the same as a residence, it was held that the owner, having built the house with full knowledge that it would be affected by the road, could not recover for the loss which he thus knowingly and voluntarily incurred, but that, so far as the house sustained a direct physical injury by the company, which it was its duty to avoid, as against all adjacent property, the owner was entitled to recover. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R'y Co. v. McLaughlin, 77 Ill., 275. 1875.

4. Equitable relief. A person having the mere naked possession of land has an adequate remedy at law for an injury thereto caused by a nuisance, and cannot maintain an equitable action under ch. 190, Laws of 1882. Denner v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 57 Wis., 218, 1888; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 503.

5. — Where a number of persons living along the line of a railway, running from the main line to a granite quarry, operating under charter, and running through the streets of a town with the consent of the council thereof, brought suits against the company for damages resulting from the making of embankments and cuts in the street which ran in front of their property, and from the use of an improper engine, which cast cinders and soot into plaintiffs' yards and houses, and the running thereof at irregular times, a bill by the company to settle the rights of all parties and to prevent multiplicity of suits was not without equity. Guess v. Stone Mountain Granite and Ry Co., 67 Ga., 215. 1881.

6. Highway — crossing. When a railway company lays its track over a public highway, it is necessary that the company shall have paramount control over its track and the right to regulate the repairs necessary to the use of the public in crossing, and it is therefore responsible to the public as well as individuals for a failure to keep such crossings in repair. Paducah and Elizabethtown R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 80 Ky., 147, 1883; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 318.

7. — A railway company, under its charter, cannot be permitted to destroy the usefulness of a public road by raising its rails so high at a crossing that it is dangerous to persons and animals to pass over appellant's track. Ib.

8. — crossing; bridge. By s. 8 of 18 and 19 Vict., c. 121, the word "nuisances" shall include any premises in such a state as to be a nuisance or injurious to health. The appellant was the owner of a railway bridge over a highway. The rain-water collected on the bridge, and, running through the planks, dripped on to the highway and on persons using the highway. The appellant was summoned, under s. 12 of the above act, for allowing a nuisance to exist on its premises, and the justices ordered its abatement. Held, that the act, being a sanitary act, applied only to such nuisances as were injurious to health; and that as the nuisance complained of was not injurious to health, the justices were wrong in ordering its abatement. Great Western R'y Co. v. Bishop, Law Reports, 7 Queen's Bench Cases, 550. 1872.

9. — signals. It is the duty of a railway company to cause signals to be given where the safety of travelers on intersecting roads demands that a warning should be given of approaching trains. An habitual failure to give such signals, or warnings, is an indictable nuisance. The judgment of the circuit court, imposing a fine upon a railway company on conviction under such an indictment, affirmed. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 13 Bush (Ky.), 388, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 845.

10. — speed of trains. The crossing of a turnpike by trains at the rate of from fifteen to twenty miles an hour, without sufficient warning, is a public nuisance. Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 80 Ky., 143. 1882.

11. — Evidence offered as to the absence of casualties on other roads conducted in a more populous community, and at crossings more generally used than the highway in question, was properly excluded. Ib.

12. Indictment. An indictment will lie against a railway company for the creation and maintenance of a public nuisance. Northern Central R'y Co. v. Commonwealth, 90 Pa. St., 800, 1879; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 318.

13. — contributory negligence of the public. Where a nuisance is public, endangering the community by the careless and incautious exercise of a hazardous business, the contributory negligence of any, or, indeed, all the community, furnishes no defense to the injury to the public. Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 80 Ky., 143. 1882.

14. — non-resident corporation. The Cincinnati R'y Co., by an act of the Kentucky general assembly, is granted all the powers incident to corporations, and should be held, like other railroad companies, liable for any violation of the laws of Kentucky. Cincinnati R'y Co. v. Commonwealth, 80 Ky., 137, 1882; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 91.

15. Injunction. The building of a railroad on a party's land, and maintaining it there, is a permanent injury, and if used for the purpose of continuously removing the owner's sand and soil, would become a nuisance, and when attempted to be done without lawful authority, may be enjoined. Cobb v. Illinois and St. Louis R. R. and Coal Co., 68 Ill., 233. 1873.

16. — Occurrences of nuisance, if temporary and occasional only, are not grounds for the interference of the court of chancery by injunction, except in extreme cases.

Therefore, where a railway company carried down to and deposited on a siding to its line manure which was occasionally not proper manure, and it occasionally allowed it to remain there longer than it ought to have remained, held, in a suit by a neighboring land owner for an injunction to restrain the nuisance and for damages, that the court would not interfere by way of injunction. Swaine v. Great Northern R'y Co., 4 De Gex, Jones & Smith, 211; 69 Eng. Ch., 211. 1864.

17. Joint nuisance. In a suit by a property owner to recover damages against three railroad companies for the laying of their tracks near his dwelling, in the street, whereby smoke, dust and cinders were thrown upon his house and lot, and otherwise creating a nuisance, depreciating the value of his property, where the plaintiff, on the trial, entered a nolle prosequi as to all damages arising from the construction and operation of certain tracks, shown to belong to one of the companies exclusively, a finding of damages for the depreciation caused by all the roads, as well as general depreciation of real estate, after the construction of the several roads, cannot be sustained, and a remittitur of $300 out of $2,000, found by the jury, will not cure the error, as it cannot be known how much the jury allowed for damages occasioned by the tracks to which the nolle applied. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. Co. v. Hall, 90 Ill., 42. 1873.

18. Lessee or grantee. A party, in whose possession and control a railroad is placed, with power to continue its use, is equally liable with the original owner for a nuisance arising from the manner of its construction. Tate v. Missouri, Kansas and Texas R'y Co., 64 Mo., 149. 1876.

19. Mortar mill. Where a railway company for the construction of its works erected a mortar mill on part of its land close to the place of business of the plaintiff, who complained of the injury and annoyance occasioned by the noise and vibration, held, that the mortar mill was not necessary for the construction of the line, and an injunction was granted accordingly. Fenwick v. East London R'y Co., Law Reports, 20 Equity Cases, 544, 1875; 15 Eng. (Moak), 480.

Permanent Injury — Streets.

20. Permanent injury; subsequent grantee. The evidence tending to show a permanent injury resulting from the construction and operation of the railroad, such injury was effectuated when the road was constructed and first put in operation, and any right of action therefor vested in him who was then the owner of the premises. His grantee cannot maintain such action. Chicago and Eastern Illinois R. R. Co. v. Loeb, 8 Bradwell (Ill.), 627. 1881.

21. Pleading. The declaration averred that the plaintiff owned and occupied as a residence certain property fronting on a certain street; that the defendant constructed and operated its railroad upon said street, and that smoke and cinders were cast and thrown from the engines and locomotives in and upon the property of the plaintiff, thereby greatly damaging the same. Held, on demurrer, that the declaration showed a good cause of action. Stone v. Fairbury, Pontiac and Northwestern R. R. Co., 68 Ill., 394. 1873.

22. — equity. Objections to an answer to a bill for nuisance as it stood before amendment cannot be made after amendment, unless the defendant, after being duly called upon to file his answer to the bill as amended, or voluntarily waiving such call, chooses to let it stand as the answer to the amended bill. Angel v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 87 N. J. Eq., 92. 1893.

23. — successive actions. Where the injuries sustained by reason of a nuisance consist in the destruction of crops from year to year, the plaintiff will not be limited to a single action, but may sue from time to time as often as the damage occurs. Dickson v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 538, 1880; 71 Mo., 575.

24. Prescription. A right to maintain a nuisance cannot be acquired by prescription. State v. Louisville, New Albany and Chicago R'y Co., 86 Ind., 114, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 286.

25. Reversioner's rights. In order to entitle a reversioner to maintain an action for an injury to his reversion, it is necessary that the wrong complained of should be in its nature permanent. Therefore, held, that a reversioner could not maintain an action against a railway company for making loud hammering noises in a shed adjoining his house, by reason whereof the tenant quitted, though it appeared that he was afterwards unable to let the house except at a lower rent. Mumford v. Oxford Ry Co., 1 Hurlstone & Norman (Exchequer), 34, 1856; 36 Eng. Law & Equity, 580.

26. Stock killed on railway. Where a railroad company permits a horse, killed by its locomotive, to remain on the side of its track so near a dwelling-house as to render its occupancy unwholesome, it is guilty of a private nuisance, for which it becomes liable to the person in possession of the house. In such case the husband, being the occupier and in rightful possession, is the proper plaintiff, and not the wife, although the sickness resulting from the nuisance is that of the latter. And he may recover damages resulting from that cause, and also from the sickness of any other members of his household. Ellis v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 63 Mo., 131, 1876; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 411.

27. Streets. Abutting owners injured by a public nuisance to the highway can sue for and recover such special damages as they can prove. Grand Rapids and Indiana R. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich., 393, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 260.

28. — In an action to recover special damages caused by placing an obstruction in the nature of a nuisance in the street opposite the plaintiff's residence, the defendant is liable only for the damages actually sustained prior to the commencement of the action. Hopkins v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Cal., 190, 1875; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 176.

29. — If the decreased value of the premises could be considered in such case it would be their decreased market value, and not their decreased value as a family residence; so that evidence of the latter fact is not admissible. Ib.

30. — If an individual is seriously affected by the exercise of unwarrantable powers by a city council in authorizing a railway upon a street he may invoke the aid of a court of chancery for redress. But this is no concern of the general public. Chicago and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. The People, 92 Ill., 170. 1879.

Compensation.

81. — A railroad track in a street is not necessarily, per se, a public nuisance. Nor can it be said, as a matter of law, that it is an obstruction. Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific R'y Co. v. The People, 12 Bradwell (Ill.), 448. 1888. See, also, State v. Louisville, New Albany and Chicago R'y Co., 86 Ind., 114, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 286.

82. — Where a railway company laid a side-track upon the street of a city within six feet of the line of the street, in violation of the provisions of the city ordinance granting it the right of way, which prohibited the construction of any track within eighteen feet of such line, it was held that such track, and the use thereof, constituted a nuisance, for the maintenance of which a property holder who had sustained special damages by reason thereof might maintain an action, the discretion necessary to be exercised in determining the limits to be imposed upon the use of the street by the railroad being vested in the city council. Cain v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 54 Ia., 255, 1880; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 235.

83. — The track, being a side-track, and having been wrongfully constructed in violation of the city ordinance, could not be considered a permanent structure, the damages arising from the maintenance of which would be original and not continuous; nor, being a nuisance, could the right to continue such maintenance be acquired by prescription. Ib.

84. — A steam railway in a street in Denver, which is not occupied by complainant, although in itself a public nuisance, and intended for carrying passengers in the manner pursued by complainant, is not a special injury to complainant's road which equity will enjoin. Denver and Swansea R'y Co. v. Denver City R'y Co., 2 Colo., 678, 1875; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 339.

85. — A railway in the streets of a city is not of itself a nuisance, but an improper and unreasonable exercise of a right to use a street by a railway company may become a nuisance. State v. Louisville, New Albany and Chicago R'y Co., 86 Ind., 114, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 286.

86. — Under provisions in a town charter giving the board of trustees the control and supervision of the highways, streets, alleys, public grounds and parks within its limits, and power "to define and declare what shall be deemed nuisances, and to prevent and abate the same, and provide for the punishment of offenders against any order or ordinance passed concerning the same by fine or imprisonment, or both," the town authorities are warranted in passing an ordinance declaring the use of steam as a motor upon any street railway, located or running upon or along any street in the town, to be a nuisance, and prohibit, in the absence of any legislative grant authorizing it, the use of steam in propelling street cars. North Chicago City R'y Co. v. Lake View, 105 Ill., 207. 1888.

87. — Where a railroad is built in a public street, the escape of soot, smoke and smells from the locomotives, the obstructions of the street with cars, and the jarring of the earth and neighboring buildings by passing trains, to the inconvenience, discomfort and danger of adjoining proprietors, do not, in law, constitute a nuisance, if the charter of the company authorizes the laying of the track, unless the road is negligently or unskilfully built or operated. Randle v. Pacific R. R. Co., 65 Mo., 325. 1877.

88. Workshops. A railway workshop adjoining a church declared a nuisance. Baltimore and Potomac R. R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 15. 1888.

OFFICERS OF CORPORATIONS.

1. Compensation. The vice-president of a corporation, performing services for the corporation, is not entitled to compensation without the authority of the board of directors. Bailey v. Buffalo Crosstown R. R. Co., 14 Hun (N. Y.), 483. 1878.

2. — A proposal to give large sums to the chairman, secretary and some other officials of a dissolved company in acknowledgment of past services was beyond the power of the company, such a disposal of the funds not being an administration for the purpose of paying debts or claims due by the company, and an interdict was granted against such application of the funds. Clouston v. Edinburgh and Glasgow R'y Co., 4 Scotch Session Cases (3d series), 207. 1865.

3. — The president of a street railway performed services as a master builder about the erection of a depot for the company. Held, that there was no implied obligation on the part of the company to pay him therefor. Levisse v. Shreveport City R. R. Co., 27 La. An., 641. 1875.

4. — The president and directors of a railway company, occupying the position of trustees of the funds and property of the company, are not entitled to any compensation for their ordinary services as such officers, unless the salary is fixed by the by-laws or a resolution of the board before the services are performed. Gridley v. Lafayette, Bloomington and Mississippi R'y Co., 71 Ill., 200. 1873.

5. — If the president of a railway company or a director performs extraordinary duties, not pertaining to his office, or expends money of his own while discharging the duties of his office, he will be entitled to recover for the same. Ib.

6. Conflicting boards of directors; trespass. In a suit to recover damages for certain trespasses brought by one board of directors of a corporation against another board, claiming to be the legally appointed directors of the same corporation, it was held that the board de facto in possession of the franchises of the corporation may maintain an action for any trespass respecting the corporate property; and that the acts of such de facto officers cannot be collaterally impeached; the proper way of trying the right or title to the office being by an action in the nature of a quo warranto. Held, that the defendants could not justify such alleged trespasses under color of proceedings had by a justice of the peace under the provisions of the Rev. Code, chap. 49 (Forcible Entry and Detainer), as the justice in such case had no jurisdiction. Atlantic, Tennessee and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Johnston, 70 N. C., 348. 1874; Same v. Sharpe, ib., 509.

7. Contract. An express contract between the director of a corporation and his company is not void, but is voidable at the option of the cestui que trust exercised within a reasonable time. No consideration of its apparent or intrinsic fairness will induce a court, either of law or equity, to enforce it against the resisting cestui que trust. Stewart v. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co., 38 N. J. Law, 505, 1875; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 54.

8. Contract against public policy. An action was brought to enforce a contract between the plaintiffs and the defendant M., which had been subsequently assigned by M. to the defendant railway company under an agreement upon its part to carry its provisions into effect. At the time of the making of the contract the plaintiff, Munson, was a director and president and the holder of a portion of the mortgage bonds of a certain railway company (not this defendant), therein referred to. The agreement, after reciting that the company was insolvent, provided that Munson (its director, president and bondholder) should proceed at once to procure the foreclosure of the mortgage, securing the bonds issued by it, and obtain a sale of all the property, rights of way and interests of the said company; that he should purchase the property on such sale or sales and convey the same to the defendant M., or to a railway company which it was then proposed to organize. M. agreed, in consideration thereof, to deliver to the plaintiffs the first mortgage bonds of the new company to an amount equal to fifty per cent. of the principal and interest of the bonds held or represented by the plaintiffs in the insolvent company. Held, that the agreement was void, as being against public policy. Munson v. Syracuse, etc., R'y Co., 29 Hun (N. Y.), 76. 1883.

9. Contract for their benefit. It is illegal for directors of a railway company to become members of a company with whom they have made a contract to build and equip the road, so as to share in the profits; and if they do, they will, in equity, be compelled to account for the profits realized. Gilman, Clinton and Springfield R. R. Co. v. Kelly, 77 Ill., 426, 1875; Keeler v. Brooklyn Elevated R. R. Co., 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 166, 1880; Thomas v. Brownville, Fort Kearney and Pacific R'y Co., 2 Federal Reporter, 877; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 392, 1880. See, also, Aberdeen R'y Co. v. Blaikie, 1 McQueen, House of Lords, Scotch App., 481, 1853; Blaikie v. Aberdeen R'y Co., 14 Scotch Session Cases (2d series), 66, 1851; Same v. Same, 1 Patterson, House of Lords, Scotch App., 894, 1854; 18 Scotch Session Cases (2d series), House of Lords, 20, 1854.

10. — The president of a railroad company made a contract with contractors for the construction of the road for the sum of $5,000 per mile, to be paid in bonds, but afterward agreed to increase the amount to $6,500 per mile in consideration that the additional $1,500 be divided between the contractors, the president and the plaintiff. The $1,500 per mile was to be paid the contractors by the company when they had laid the iron. The directors of the company ratified the contract, but without any knowledge of the agreement as to the division of the $1,500. The contractors gave an order on the company in favor of the plaintiff for his share of the bonds under the agreement as to the division, in terms payable out of the $1,500 per mile; which order the company accepted. Afterward, and before the iron was laid, the contractors assigned their contract to the president of the road, who completed it. In an action by the plaintiff to recover the bonds under the order, held, that the company, having treated the president as a contractor while the work was being done, was estopped from treating him afterward as a trustee. Risley v. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R. R. Co., 62 N. Y., 240, 1875; reversing Same v. Same, 4 Thompson & Cook, 13; 1 Hun (N. Y.), 202, 1874. The fraudulent conduct of the president had not been pleaded and could not be inquired into. Ib.

11. Directors; purchase of stock. Directors are not technical parties, but only trustees in a general sense, as are agents and bailees intrusted with the care and management of property. They may purchase stock from stockholders without being subject to the stringent rule governing dealings between trustee and cestui que trust. Deadrick v. Wilson, 8 Baxter (Tenn.), 108. 1874.

12. Discovery, bill of. An officer of a corporation cannot be made a party defendant to a cross-bill, for the purpose of discovery, when he did not derive the desired information in his official capacity. McComb v. Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans R. R. Co., 7 Federal Reporter, 426. 1881.

13. Earnings of company; authority to dispose of. The officers of a railway company hold the earnings and profits as a trust fund for the payment of its debts. But in the absence of contract liens or rights created by legal proceedings they may exercise a reasonable and proper discretion as to the order in which the debts of the company shall be paid, and this discretion cannot be taken from them by notice to the company that a particular creditor intends to demand a preference. Newport and Cincinnati Bridge Co. v. Douglass, 12 Bush (Ky.), 878, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 231.

14. Fraud. An action to recover the property and assets, which are claimed to have been illegally or fraudulently disposed of or converted by the trustees or directors of a corporation, should be brought in the name of the corporation itself. But should the corporation, upon application of stockholders, decline to bring the action, the stockholders may sue, making the corporation a defendant. Allen v. New Jersey Southern R. R. Co., 49 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 14. 1875.

15. — The officers of a railway company are directly responsible to its stockholders upon the general principles of equity for losses and defalcation, occasioned as well by their neglect as by their positive misconduct and breach of trust. Shea v. Knoxville and Ky. R. R. Co., 6 Baxter (Tenn.), 277. 1878.

16. — To a bill of such a character, charging embezzlement by the directors of the company, and an appropriation by them of a sum of money for purposes of bribery and corruption, it is no ground of demurrer that the charges made are felonies involving criminal liability, to which, if true, they are not bound to subject themselves. Ib.

17. — A railway company furnished a director with a large sum of money, to enable him to purchase the "concession" of another line. He purchased it, as it turned out, from himself, he being the concealed owner of it. Held, that the transaction could not stand, but that the company must adopt or repudiate the transaction altogether; and the company having sold the concession pending a suit impeaching the transaction, held, also, that it could have no relief, either as to the application of the money or otherwise. Great Luxembourg Ry Co. v. Magnay, 25 Beavan (Eng. Ch.), 536. 1858.

Order for Examination — Powers.

18. Order for examination. Where the party, whose examination is desired, is a corporation, the moving affidavits must state the name of the officer or director of such corporation whose testimony is necessary and material. Williams v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 1 N. Y. Civil Procedure Reports, 294. 1881.

19. Powers — directors. Under the ordinary powers granted to a railroad having its termini in this state, the directory has no power to purchase other railroads without the sanction of the stockholders. Deaderick v. Wilson, 8 Baxter (Tenn.), 103. 1874.

20. — managing director. The managing director of a corporation may properly have the custody of its assets; and, if the company permits him, without objection, to hold himself out as competent to dispose of its assets, strangers are entitled to presume that he has authority to do so. Walker v. Detroit Transit Ry Co., 47 Mich., 338. 1883.

21. — It is immaterial, as against strangers, whether the person acting as managing director received a specific appointment to that position from the directors, if he has long acted in that capacity without objection, and if his services as such have been invariably accepted. Ib.

22. — The president of a corporation purchased its interest in certain stock certificates from its assignee at public auction, but the certificates had previously passed by indorsement into other hands by the act of a member of the corporation who had been allowed by the president and company to act as managing director. Held, that, as between the president and a bona fide purchaser of the assets, the title of the latter could not be disturbed. Ib.

23. — president. A president de facto of a railroad company, when a suit is pending in which his right to the office is to be tried, and just before the decision of such suit, has no right to make a distribution of the funds of the company to such creditors as he may elect to give preference. Walker v. Flemming, 70 N. C., 483. 1874.

24. — Authority conferred on the president of a railway company to act as "the business and financial agent" of the corporation only authorizes the transaction of the ordinary business of the company. He is not authorized to execute a mortgage upon the corporate property. Luse v. Isthmus Transit Ry Co., 6 Oreg., 125. 1876.

25. — The authority of G. to sell bonds of the company will not be inferred from his position as director of the company, nor from the fact that the president of the company gave him a power of attorney to sell. The authority of the president to execute such power of attorney must be shown. Titus v. Cairo and Fulton R. R. Co., 37 N. J. Law, 98. 1874.

26. — secretary. A secretary of a railway company, without the authority of the directors, pledged certain demands coming to the company as security for the payment of the company's debt and thereby obtained an extension of time upon the debt. Held, that his action was unauthorized and that his agreement could not be enforced against the company. Hamilton and Port Dover Ry Co. v. Gore Bank, 20 Grant Ch. (Upper Canada), 190. 1873.

27. — superintendent. The plaintiff had some quicks which were carried at his expense by the railway company to the N. station on its line. By the leave of F., the general superintendent of the railway, the plaintiff put them into a piece of ground of the company's, adjoining the station, to keep them alive. Afterwards, wishing to remove them, he applied to the station clerk, who would not permit him to take them, but referred him to F., who refused to let him have the quicks. He subsequently applied to B., the managing director of the company, and met with a like refusal. The plaintiff thereupon brought trover against the company, but offered no evidence to show what were the respective duties of the general superintendent or managing director of the railway. Held, that it was the duty of a railway company trading largely as a carrier on its lines, to have some servants authorized to give directions, and act for the company on all occasions as the exigency of the traffic might require; that the jury might therefore infer that the general superintendent and managing director had authority to act for the company in all matters in the course of the ordinary business of the company as a carrier. Taff Vale R'y Co. v. Giles, 22 Eng. Law & Equity, 202; 23 Law Jour. Rep., N. S. (Q. B.), 43; 2 Ellis & Blackburn, 822; 75 E. C. L., 823. 1838.

28. Quorum; directors. By express statute, a quorum of the directors of a railway corporation are competent to act within the scope of their authority, and to bind the corporation, although the meeting be not regularly called, and no notice given to the other directors. State ex rel. v. Smith, 48 Vt., 266; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 394. 1876.

29. Speculation in company's claims. The president and directors of railroad companies are not allowed to buy up and speculate upon claims against such companies—such contracts being in every respect against good morals, and against public policy. McDonald v. Haughton, 70 N. C., 393. 1874.

30. Stockholder's suit. Persons buying stock, in order to bring suits for past wrongful acts of directors, are not favored by courts of equity. Kingman v. Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburgh R. R. Co., 30 Hun (N. Y.), 73. 1883.

31. Trusts; accounting for aid bonds. Township aid bonds were delivered by a railway company to one of its directors to pay for depot buildings which he had erected and agreed to convey, but did not do so. Held, on a bill for an accounting, that he should be charged with the bonds. Michigan Air Line R'y Co. v. Mellen, 44 Mich., 321, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 245.

32. Unauthorized act; ratification. Notice to the officers of a corporation of the unauthorized acts of their predecessors in office is notice to the corporation, and, if no dissent is expressed, ratification will be presumed, and the acts will become binding upon the corporation and its stockholders. Chouteau v. Allen, 70 Mo., 290. 1879.

OMNIBUS AND HACK LINES.

1. Preference at depot grounds. A railway company made arrangements, at one of its stations, with A., the proprietor of an omnibus running between the station and K., to provide omnibus accommodation for all passengers by any of its trains to and from K., and allowed A. the exclusive privilege of driving his vehicle into the station yard for the purpose of taking up and setting down passengers at the door of the booking office. Held, that, in the absence of special circumstances showing it to be reasonable, the granting of such exclusive privilege to one proprietor and refusing to grant the like facilities to another, who also brought passengers from K., as well as from other places beyond, was a breach of the prohibition against the granting of undue and unreasonable preferences contained in the 17 and 18 Vict., c. 81, s. 2. Marriott v. London and South Western R'y Co., 1 Common Bench (N. S.), 499; 87 E. C. L., 498, 1857; 40 Eng. Law & Equity, 250.

2. — A railway company agreed with a cab proprietor, in consideration of his paying it 600*l.* per annum, to allow him the exclusive liberty of plying for hire within its station. The court refused to grant a writ of injunction against the company, under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (17 and 18 Vict., c. 81), at the instance of another cab proprietor,—no inconvenience to the public being shown to have arisen from the arrangement. Beadell v. Eastern Counties R'y Co., 2 Common Bench (N. S.), 509; 89 E. C. L., 509, 1857; 1 Neville & McNamara, 56, 1857; Painter v. London, Brighton and South Coast R'y Co., 2 Common Bench (N. S.), 702; 89 E. C. L., 701, 1857.

3. — An omnibus proprietor who carries passengers and their luggage for hire, to and from a railway station, cannot maintain an action against the company for refusing to allow him to drive his vehicle into the station yard. Barker v. Midland R'y Co., 18 Common Bench, 46; 86 E. C. L., 45, 1856; 36 Eng. Law & Equity, 253.

OPERATION OF RAILWAYS.

1. Rate of speed. The general law of this state imposes no restrictions upon railroad companies as to the rate of speed their trains may run. When not prohibited by municipal regulation they may adopt such rate of speed as they may desire, provided always it is reasonably safe to the passengers being transported. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Robinson, 9 Bradwell (Ill.), 89. 1881.

2. Bridge; negligence. The plaintiffs, colliery owners, had a siding adjoining the defendant's line, which was crossed by a bridge, and on to which the defendant was in the habit of conveying the plaintiffs' trucks from its line, the plaintiffs removing them thence as they thought fit. The defendant brought on to the plaintiffs' siding and left there, after working hours, trucks of the plaintiffs, one of which was loaded with a broken truck to such a height that it would not pass under the bridge. More than twenty-four hours afterwards, but before work was resumed at plaintiffs' works, the defendant, after dark, pushed on to the siding other trucks of the plaintiffs, and pushed the loaded truck up to the bridge, by which means the train of trucks was arrested. The defendant's employes, not being aware of the cause of the obstruction, pushed the train of trucks forward with so much force that the loaded truck knocked down the bridge. In an action for the damage so done, the jury having found that the plaintiffs were guilty of contributory negligence in not removing the loaded truck, held, that there was no evidence of contributory negligence to go to the jury. Radley v. London and North Western R'y Co., Law Reports, 9 Exchequer Cases, 71; 8 Eng. (Moak), 516. 1874.

3. Control by the courts. To justify the interference of the courts to enforce the running of through trains on a continuous line of railway, under the 17 and 18 Vict., c. 81, s. 2, it must be shown that public convenience requires it, and that it can reasonably be done. They will not interfere at the instance of an individual, where there is a continuous line by which through tickets may be obtained, though by a somewhat longer route, no additional cost or serious loss of time being thereby incurred, and no substantial inconvenience being thereby occasioned to the public, and it appearing that no complaints had been made of the inadequacy of the existing accommodation. Barrett v. Great Northern R'y Co., 1 Common Bench (N. S.), 428, 1857; 38 Eng. Law & Equity, 218; 1 Neville & McNamara, 38.

4. — mandamus. The remedy for the enforcement of a duty imposed upon a corporation by its charter is by mandamus or by proceedings in the name of the state for a forfeiture of the charter. McCann v. South Nashville R. R. Co., 2 Tenn. Ch., 778. 1877.

5. — stations. It is not a sufficient ground for the interference of the court under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act (17 and 18 Vict., c. 81) that a railway company charges higher fares for distances on one of its branch lines than it charges for equal distances on another, nor that it issues third-class return tickets on one branch line and not on another. Nor will the court interfere with the arrangements of a railway company respecting the number of trains that stop, or the times at which they stop, at any particular station, unless it be distinctly shown that such arrangements do not sufficiently provide for the accommodation of the public. A railway company issued third-class return tickets to stations a certain distance only down its line. The court refused to enjoin it to issue such tickets to stations beyond that distance. Caterham R'y Co. v. London and Brighton R'y Co., 40 Eng. Law & Equity, 259, 1856; 1 Neville & McNamara, 32; 1 Common Bench (N. S.), 410; 26 Law Journal (Common Pleas), 16; 87 E. C. L., 410.

 ORDER.

1. For payment out of future fund. Plaintiff was employed by the L., C. and D. R. R. Co. to find contractors to build its road. He procured defendants to agree to enter into such contract. It was agreed that the company was to pay, as part of the consideration for the work, $250,000. At the close of the negotiation, and when the agreement was being reduced to writing, it was further agreed that the sum should be increased to $255,000; that defendants should give to plaintiff, as compensation for his services, their order on the company for $5,000, payable pro rata, as the money became due under the contract. The agreement was carried out, the contract executed and the order given and accepted by the company. The contract was subsequently, and before any money became due under it, surrendered by defendants and canceled. In an action to recover the amount of the order, held, that it was given for a good consideration, and could not be defeated by default of the defendants, and that defendants were liable. Risley v. Smith, 64 N. Y., 578. 1876.

ORGANIZATION OF CORPORATION.

See CHARTER; SUBSCRIPTIONS BY CITIES AND TOWNS; SUBSCRIPTIONS BY COUNTIES; SUBSCRIPTIONS BY INDIVIDUALS.

1. Managing committee. A. and B. were the registered promoters under the Stat. 7 and 8 Vict., c. 110, of a railway company. A provisional committee was afterwards formed, at a meeting of which A. was appointed secretary, and B. solicitor to the company, and other persons a managing committee. Held, that A. could not, merely upon these facts, recover against an acting member of the managing committee for services afterwards performed by him as secretary. Wilson v. Curzon, 15 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer), 532. 1846.

2. Preliminary expenses. The articles of association of a joint-stock company provided that the company should defray such expenses incurred in its establishment as the directors should consider might be deemed and treated as preliminary expenses, to an amount not exceeding 2,000*l*. The plaintiffs, who were promoters of the company, had incurred preliminary expenses in the establishment of the company. Held, that no action would lie at the suit of the plaintiffs against the company for non-payment of such preliminary expenses in accordance with the articles of association. Melhado v. Porto Alegre R'y Co., Law Reports, 9 Common Pleas Cases, 503. 1874.

3. — Defendant was, by his consent, a member of the provisional committee of a projected company. According to the prospectus, the affairs were to be under the control of a managing committee. A managing committee was appointed, and then the provisional committee ceased to act. After this, the solicitor to the company, who had been appointed by the provisional committee, gave orders for the publication of advertisements. In an action against defendant for the expense of inserting these, it was proved that he had twice attended meetings of the provisional committee, but that he was not on the managing committee nor a shareholder. Held, that these facts constituted no evidence for a jury of the defendant having authorized the insertion of the advertisements, nor of his liability. Cooke v. Tonkin, 9 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 936; 58 E. C. L., 935. 1847.

4. — The defendant, in answer to an application from the secretary of a railway company, to allow his name to be placed on the provisional committee, wrote to him consenting to do so, and stating that "he concluded his liability would be limited to the amount of his shares." His name was accordingly published in the newspapers as one of the provisional committee, and on one occasion he attended and acted as chairman at a meeting of the committee. Held, that he was liable for the price of stationery supplied by the plaintiff on the order of the secretary, and used by the committee, after the date of his letter to the secretary. Barnett v. Lambert, 15 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer), 489. 1846.

5. Undertaking abandoned. An association to form a corporation does not amount to a partnership, although the proceedings are abandoned. Walstab v. Spottiswoode, 15 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer), 501. 1846. See, also, Reynell v. Lewis, 15 ib., 517. 1846.

OVERCHARGES.

1. Agreement. When unexpected difficulties occur in the carriage of goods by a carrier, and the consignor agrees, in view of them, to pay a sum in addition to what had been previously fixed upon, and pays the same, he cannot recover it back as paid without consideration. Detroit and Bay City R'y Co. v. McKenzie, 43 Mich., 609, 1880; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 157.

2. Jurisdiction. A bill against several defendants for a discovery, accounting and repayment of alleged unlawful overcharges for freight, the liability therefor being purely legal and enforceable at law, cannot be sustained, on the ground that one defendant is liable as the lessee of several short lines of railroad, and that the other defendants, the lessors, are also liable, and that, if complainant be compelled to resort to law for redress, he must sue each defendant for a fractional part of each overcharge. Scott v. Erie R'y Co., 34 N. J. Eq., 354. 1881.

3. Remedy. Money paid for the use of a railway, under protest, as overcharges, was afterwards paid into court under an order made by consent, and vested in the public stocks, to abide final judgment in an action brought to try the legality of the charges, which the judgment declared to be illegal. Held, that the party who paid the money was entitled to the stocks and dividends and accumulations thereof. After the judgment at law finding payments, made to the railway company, to be overcharges, a bill filed, pending a writ of error on that judgment, to restrain the company from continuing the overcharges, and for an account, etc., is not improper nor premature, and the plaintiffs are entitled to the costs. Barrett v. Stockton and Darlington R. R. Co., 1 House of Lords Cases, 18. 1847.

PACIFIC RAILROADS.

1. Action against. The act of March 3, 1878 (17 Stat., 509), is a valid and constitutional exercise of legislative power. Congress, by requiring the attorney-general to bring a suit in equity in the name of the United States in any circuit court against the Union Pacific R. R. Co. and others, intended not to change the substantial rights of the parties to the suit, but to provide a specific mode of procedure, which, by removing certain restrictions on the jurisdiction, process and pleading which are in other cases imposed, would give a larger scope to the action of the court, and a more economical and efficient remedy than before existed. United States v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 98 U. S., 569. 1878.

2. Central Pacific Railway. The Central Pacific R. R. Co. did not become liable to apply five per cent. of its net earnings annually to the payment of the United States subsidy bonds until October 1, 1874, the day of the completion of the road. United States v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 4 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 341. 1877.

3. Charter. The several state railway corporations incorporated into the Pacific railroad system by the act of congress chartering the Union Pacific R. R. Co., approved July 12, 1862, and which were authorized to construct branches, and received aid from the United States, are subject to the terms and conditions imposed by said act of congress. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Union Pacific R'y Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 1; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 581. 1880.

4. Crossing of other railways. The charter of the Northern Pacific R. R. Co., obtained from the general government, does not exempt its right of way from the operation of the laws of the state of Minnesota, and forbid a railroad company organized under the general law of the state to exercise the right of eminent domain. Northern Pacific R. R. Co. v. St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba R'y Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 702; 1 McCrary, (U. S. C. C.), 802; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 12. 1890. See, also, Union Pacific R'y Co. v. Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 106; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 452. 1880.

5. Eastern terminus. The charter of the Union Pacific R. R. Co. (12 Stat. at Large, 489, § 12) required its Iowa branch to be constructed westward from a point on the western boundary of the state of Iowa, to be fixed by the president of the United States. Held, on a consideration of various provisions of the charter, that the eastern terminus of said branch was on the Iowa shore of the Missouri river, and not on the Nebraska shore, nor at a point "on the middle of the main channel" of the river, although that was the legal western boundary of the state of Iowa. United States ex rel. Hall v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 479. 1875.

6. — The initial point of the Iowa branch of the Union Pacific Railroad was fixed by the act of congress of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat., 489), on the Iowa bank of the Missouri river. The order of the president of the United States, bearing date March 7, 1864, established and designated, in strict conformity to law, the eastern terminus of said branch at a point on the western boundary of Iowa east of and opposite a certain point in the territory of Nebraska. The bridge constructed by the Union Pacific R. R. Co., over the Missouri river, between Omaha and Council Bluffs, in Iowa, is a part of the railroad. The company was authorized to build it only for the uses of the road, and is bound to operate and run the whole road, including the bridge, as one connected and continuous line. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S., 343. 1875.

7. — The act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stats. at Large, 509), gives to the proper circuit court jurisdiction in mandamus to compel the Union Pacific R. R. Co. to operate its road as required by law. There must be jurisdiction over the company by service upon it to enable the court to exercise the power conferred by the act. Hall v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 515. 1875. See, also, United States ex rel. v. Same, ib., 524. 1875.

8. — The term "transfer," as employed in § 1310 of the Code, refers to the act of moving freight, passengers and express matter, and is intended to cover the removal of cars with their burdens, from one road to another, as well as the change of their burdens from the cars of one company to those of another. Council Bluffs v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 45 Ia., 338. 1876.

9. — Any regulation of the transportation of goods from one state to another, upon railroads, operates as a regulation of commerce, and a statute prescribing such a regulation is unconstitutional and void. Ib.

10. — Sections 1310-1316, inclusive, of the Code, requiring railway companies connecting with the Union Pacific R'y to transfer their freight, passengers and express matter at Council Bluffs, is in conflict with the acts of congress, approved, respectively, July 1, 1862, and June 15, 1866, and cannot, therefore, be enforced. Ib.

11. Fraud. The United States cannot maintain a suit in equity to compel the refunding of money obtained by fraudulent contracts from the Union Pacific R. R. Co. The corporation alone can maintain such action. United States v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 98 U. S., 569. 1878.

12. Government aid; interest. The solution of the question, whether the Union Pacific R. R. Co. is required to pay the interest before the maturity of the principal of the bonds issued by the United States to the company, depends on the meaning of §§ 5 and 6 of the original act of 1862, "to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean, and to secure to the government the use of the same for postal, military and other purposes," and of § 5 of the amendatory act of 1864. Held, upon consideration of said sections, of the scheme of said original act, and of the purposes contemplated by it, that it was not the intention of congress to require the company to pay the interest before the maturity of the principal of the bonds. United States v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 91 U. S., 72, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 411.

13. Irrigating ditches. The Pacific railroad companies, by virtue of the acts of congress of 1862 and 1864, granting them lands, did not acquire a right to abate ditches on such lands as a nuisance, provided the ditch had acquired a right to the use of water which was recognized by the local customs and decisions of the courts prior to the passage of the act of congress of July 26, 1866, granting the right of way to ditch owners over the public lands. Broder v. Natoma Water and Mining Co., 50 Cal., 621. 1875.

14. Military reservation. The grant of a depot site in the Ft. Riley military reservation construed. Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas Pacific R. R. Co., 92 U. S., 315. 1875.

15. Mortgage. The mortgage upon the Southern Pacific R. R. Co. construed. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Doyle, 8 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 60. 1882.

16. — By § 8 of the act of congress, approved July 1, 1862, incorporating the Union Pacific R. R. Co., lands were granted to the company "for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the railroad and telegraph line, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war and public stores thereon;" and it was enacted that all such lands "not sold or disposed of" by the company before the expiration of three years after the completion of the entire road should be subject to settlement and pre-emption like other lands. Upon a consideration of this and other provisions of the act, and of the amendatory act of July 2, 1864, held, that these provisions should be so construed as to effect their primary object, which was to furnish aid in and during the construction of the road, and that it cannot be controlled or defeated by the secondary and subordinate purpose of opening to settlement and pre-emption such of the lands as should not be sold or disposed of within the designated period. Mortgaging their lands is a disposition of them within the meaning of the law. Platt v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 99 U. S., 48. 1878.

17. Net earnings. Under the act of congress of July 1, 1862 (12 Stats. at Large, 489), construing the charter of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and of the other companies therein named, the United States may recover of the companies receiving its bonds, until such bonds and interest are paid, five per cent. of the net income earned after the completion of the roads. United States v. Kansas Pacific Ry Co., 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 367. 1876.

18. Right of way. The right of way granted to the Central Pacific R. R. Co. by act of congress is exclusive in its character, and the company may maintain ejectment against a trespasser thereon. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Benity, 5 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 118. 1878.

19. Sinking fund. The legislation of congress in relation to the Central Pacific R. R. Co. and the Western Pacific R. R. Co.—the latter now, by consolidation, a part of the former—considered, and held that, to the extent of the powers, rights, privileges and immunities thereby granted, congress retains the right of amendment, and, by exercising it, may, in a manner not inconsistent with the original charter granted by California, as modified by the act of that state passed in 1864, accepting what had been done by congress, regulate the administration of the affairs of the company in reference to the debts created by it under authority of such legislation. That the establishment of the sinking fund by the act of May 7, 1878, does not conflict with anything in said charter. Sinking-Fund Cases; Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. United States; Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Gallatin, 99 U. S., 700. 1878.

20. — So far as it establishes in the treasury of the United States a sinking fund, the act of congress approved May 7, 1878 (20 Stat., 56), entitled "An act to alter and amend the act entitled 'An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean, and to secure to the government the use of the same for postal, military and other purposes,' approved July 1, 1862, and also to alter and amend the act of congress approved July 2, 1864, in amendment of said first named act," is not unconstitutional. Id.

21. Taxation. The doctrine of federal exemption from state taxation applied to the case of a tax by a state upon the real and personal property, as distinguished from its franchises, of the Union Pacific R. R. Co., which company congress assisted by donations and loans and of whose board of directors the government appoints two, whose operations as well as its rates of toll are subject to regulations imposed by its charter, and to such further regulations as congress may hereafter make, on whose failure to comply with the terms and conditions of its charter, or to keep the road in repair and use, congress may assume the control and management thereof, and devote the income to the use of the United States, the loan of the United States to which, amounting to many millions, is a lien on all the property, and on failure to redeem which loan, the secretary of the treasury is authorized to take possession of the road for the use and benefit of the United States; and, finally, where all the grants made to the company are declared to be upon the condition that, besides paying the government bonds advanced, the company shall keep the railroad and telegraph lines in repair and use, and shall at all times transmit dispatches and transport mails, troops and munitions of war, supplies and public stores for the government, whenever required to do so by any department thereof; and in addition to which control and the obligations and liabilities of the company, congress, not forbidding a state tax, reserves the right to add to, alter, amend or repeal the charter. Railroad Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wallace, 5, 1873; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 369.

22. Transportation for the United States. The act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean, and to secure to the government the use of the same for postal, military and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862 (12 Stat., 489), after providing for the issue of patents for land and of bonds to the Union Pacific R. Co. and other companies, from time to time, as successive sections of their respective roads should be completed, requires the companies to perform all government transportation of mails, troops, etc., and to credit the compensation therefor on the government loan, and then adds that, "after said road is completed, until said bonds and interest are paid, at least five per centum of the net earnings of said road shall also be annually applied to the payment thereof." Held, that the liability of the Union Pacific R. R. Co. to make this payment accrued when it reported, and the president of the United States accepted, its road as completed for the purpose of issuing the bonds, though the acceptance was provisional, and security was required that all deficiencies in construction should be supplied. That the company, having obtained the bonds and agreed in regard to the security, is estopped from denying that the road was then completed. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. United States, 99 U. S., 403, 1878; United States v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., ib., 443, 1878; United States v. Kansas Pacific R'y Co., ib., 455, 1878; United States v. Sioux City and Pacific R. R. Co., ib., 491, 1878.

23. — The Denver Pacific R'y and Telegraph Co. is not liable for the debt incurred by the Kansas Pacific R'y Co. on account of subsidy bonds; and although it is bound to perform the government service stipulated by the Pacific railroad acts at the rates therein prescribed, and is subject to their provisions, so far as they are applicable to it, no part of the compensation due it for such service can be retained by the United States. United States v. Denver Pacific R'y Co., 99 U. S., 460. 1878.

24. Transportation of mails. The sixth section of the act of congress of July 1, 1862, ch. 120, incorporating the Union Pacific R. R. Co. (12 Stat., 439), constitutes a contract between the United States and the company, whereunder the latter, for its services in transporting upon its road the mails, and the agents and clerks employed in connection therewith, is entitled to compensation at fair and reasonable rates, not to exceed those paid by private parties for the same kind of service. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. United States, 104 U. S., 662, 1881; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 54.

25. Ultra vires. Certain contracts entered into by the Union Pacific R. R. Co., assigning a large part of its franchise, and alienating property which was necessary to the performance of its obligations and duties to the government and to the public, held ultra vires. American Union Telegraph Co. v. Union Pacific R'y Co., 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 188. 1880.

26. Union Pacific Railroad. The act of congress of March 3, 1873 (17 U. S. Stat. at Large, 509), in relation to an action against the Union Pacific R. R. Co., construed. United States v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 11 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 385. 1873.

27. — The gifts of bonds and lands to the Union Pacific R. R. Co. are not in the nature of a trust, but are absolute and unconditioned. United States v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 11 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 385. 1873.

1. Contributory negligence. The authorities upon the question of the effect of contributory negligence of the parents collated. Galveston, Houston, etc., R'y Co. v. Moore, 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 745 (Tex.). 1883.

2. — In an action to recover damages from a railroad company, for injuries to a child between five and six years old, alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the defendant's agents, the plaintiff is entitled to recover, if it appear from the evidence that the injuries resulted directly from the want of ordinary care and prudence on the part of the defendant's agents, and not from the want of such care and prudence on the part of the child, as ought, under the circumstances, to be reasonably expected from one of his age and intelligence, nor from the want of ordinary care and prudence on the part of his parents, directly contributing to the accident. McMahon v. Northern Central R'y Co., 39 Md., 438. 1873.

3. — Where a child of tender years is left by its mother in the care of another person, such person must be charged with the duty of exercising reasonable care for its safety; and if for the want of such care the child is killed, there can be no recovery therefor by the next of kin. In this case the evidence shows due care on the part of the railroad company to prevent the accident, and gross negligence on the part of the person in whose care the child was left. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Schumilowsky, 8 Bradwell (Ill.), 613. 1881.

4. — Circumstances considered under which the court regarded it as unnecessary to express any opinion as to how far the negligence of the mother, or person left in charge of the child by the mother, should be imputed to the infant. Texas and Pacific R'y Co. v. O'Donnell, 58 Tex., 27. 1882. See Same v. Same, 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 712. 1882.

5. — The contributory negligence of the parent will not exonerate a railway company from liability for damages for injury to the child. Norfolk and Petersburg R. R. Co. v. Ormsby, 27 Grattan (Va.), 455. 1876.

6. Damages. An action may be maintained by a parent for the loss of his child's services during minority, and for all necessary expenses and losses incurred in attention to it while sick from an injury caused by the negligence of another, and this notwithstanding an action may be maintained in behalf of the child for such injury as results in personal damage to himself. Evansich v. G., C. and S. F. R'y Co., 57 Tex., 123, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 182.

7. — The "necessary injury" resulting to a parent from the negligent killing of his minor child, within the meaning of § 3 of the Damage Act (R. S. 1879, § 2123), consists in the loss of services of the deceased during minority, the cost of nursing, surgical and medical attendance and appropriate funeral expenses. Rains v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R'y Co., 71 Mo., 164, 1879; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 610.

8. — Where a minor employe is injured, the father is entitled to recover the value of the services of the son up to the time of his arrival at the age of twenty-one years, together with the necessary expenses attending the care of the injured son. Houston and Great Northern R. R. Co. v. Miller, 49 Tex., 332, 1878. See, also, Frick v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 75 Mo., 542, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 776.

9. — An action by a parent against a railway company for the loss of service of his child, caused by an injury to the child through the negligence of an employe of the company, is not barred by the fact that the child, by his parent as next friend, has already recovered damages against the corporation for the same injury. Willon v. Middlesex R. R. Co., 125 Mass., 130. 1878.

10. — In an action by a father against a person for negligently causing a personal injury to his child, he can recover such damages only as he has himself sustained, leaving to the infant a further right of recovery of such damages as are personal to himself. In such action it is error to instruct the jury that their verdict should be the amount of money which would compensate the child for his injuries. Durkee v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 56 Cal., 338, 1890; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 331.

11. — In such action it is proper to instruct the jury that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover damages for the pain or suffering which his son experienced from the injuries which he received, or from his disfigurement therefrom. Ib.

12. — It seems that a general instruction to the jury, in an action by a parent for the negligent killing of his infant child, that in determining the amount of the verdict they should have "regard to the mitigating and aggravating circumstances," is bad; the instruction should designate what circumstances are to be considered as mitigating or aggravating damages. Nugel v. Missouri Pacific R'y Co., 75 Mo., 633, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 702.

13. Death of mother; damages. In an action by a child for the death of its mother, the measure of damages is the support of the child from the date of the mother's death until the child is of age. Atlanta and West Point R. R. Co. v. Venable, 67 Ga., 697, 1881.

14. — In such case it is not error to charge the jury that they may consider the probable support which the mother would give the child; as to whether the amount would increase or diminish as the child advanced in years. Ib.

15. Employment. A railway company employing a minor child, in opposition to the known will of the parents, is liable to the parents for the services of the child. Grand Rapids and Indiana R. R. Co. v. Showers, 71 Ind., 451, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 9.

16. Injuries causing death. Under the statute of Georgia, the action of the mother for the loss of service by reason of a tort committed upon her child is not barred by the fact of the death of the child from the injury. Chick v. Southwestern R. R. Co., 57 Ga., 357, 1876.

17. Injury to child; action by parent and child jointly. At the time of the trial the minor had attained his majority, and upon his motion he was joined with his mother as a party plaintiff. Held, error; that it would have been proper to substitute him as the sole plaintiff in her place, but having no joint interest in the cause of action they could not be united as plaintiffs. This was an action for malicious prosecution against a corporation. Ricord v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 15 Nev., 167, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 304.

2. Practice. At common law the general rule is, that all parties must join and be joined by their names in an action; and such is the general import of the Code, which provides that the precipe and petition must contain the names of the parties to an action, and their names, both direct and inverse, shall be entered in the index. Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co. v. Chambers, 71 Ill., 519. 1874.

2. Failure to stop for passenger; damages. Where a train wrongfully fails to stop to take on a passenger, he is entitled to recover nominal damages, and such actual damages as he may sustain by reason of the delay; but he has no right to inflict injury on himself to enhance the damages. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R'y Co. v. Birney, 71 Ill., 391. 1874.

8. — And where, in such a case, the passenger, instead of procuring a comfortable and safe conveyance to the place he desired to reach, or waiting a few hours for another train, went there on foot, unnecessarily, and thereby brought on sickness, he was not entitled to recover damages on account of such sickness. Ib.

PATENTS.

1. Action at law. Where, in the nature of the invention, there can be no profits, the patentee cannot sue in equity, as he has an adequate remedy by an action at law for damages. A suit in equity for an accounting of profits in the use of car brakes was dismissed. Vaughan v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 4 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 280. 1877.

2. Damages; infringement. The use of a combination of a swing-truck with a locomotive having flanges on all its driving-wheels, not shown to have any advantage over the use of a locomotive with plain forward driving-wheels and a rigid truck. Hence the patentee is not entitled to any allowance as profits. Locomotive Safety Truck Co. v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 2 Federal Reporter, 677. 1880.

8. — But where there are profits, in case of infringement they will be computed and allowed to the patentee. Williams v. Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburgh R. R. Co., 2 Federal Reporter, 702. 1880.

4. Equity. A suit in equity upon two separate patents may be joined when the effect will not embarrass the defendant and produce confusion in the case. The plaintiff was permitted to join in the same action a suit upon two patents for registering car fares. Horman Patent Co. v. Brooklyn City R. R. Co., 15 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 444. 1879.

6. — Suit for infringements, where otherwise maintainable, are of equitable cognizance, although no injunction has issued, and although brought after the expiration of the original or extended term of the patent. Stevens v. Kansas Pacific R'y Co., 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 486, 1879; Sayles v. Dubuque and Sioux City R. R. Co., ib., 561, 1878.

6. — A bill in equity, since the Revised Statutes, will not lie solely to recover damages for the infringement of a patent; but if it pray for an injunction or a discovery, and an account for profits, it will be sustained. Vaughan v. East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia R. R. Co., 1 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 621. 1877.

7. Escrow. Where the question was whether the license to use a patent, produced on the hearing of the case by the railway company, had been delivered to the president of the company as an escrow, or as a completed instrument, the evidence of the president and another credible witness must outweigh that of plaintiff alone. Mellon v. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co., 13 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 309. 1883.

8. Fish-plate. Contrivances substantially the same as that set forth in the second claim of the reissued letters, for fastening metals together, wherein, by the use of slotted side-plates and an adjusting bolt, allowance is made for their contraction and expansion caused by changes in temperature, were in use before the issue of the original letters. Johnson v. Railroad Co., 105 U. S., 539. 1881.

9. Injunction. Where the patent is in doubt, where the defendant is solvent and the damages easily ascertained, a preliminary injunction will not be allowed. Pullman v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 4 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 286. 1880.

10. Jurisdiction. A bill for account of profits for the use of a patented article will not be sustained. The patentee must proceed at law, where his patent has expired, and no injunction is allowable. (See cases cited contra in note.) Sayles v. Fredericksburg, etc., R. R. Co., 8 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 172. 1879.

11. — A bill merely for profits and damages cannot be maintained in equity. There is an adequate remedy at law. Root v. Railway Co., 105 U. S., 189, 1881; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 276.

12. License. A license to use a patented invention upon the locomotives used by a railroad company on its road, or on "any road or roads now owned or that may hereafter be owned or operated by said company," embraces not only locomotives in use at the date of the license upon roads then owned and operated by the company, but also such other locomotives as it might thereafter use, and other roads which it might thereafter operate. Matthew v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 8 Federal Reporter, 45. 1881.

13. — A license by one patentee to use the thing patented clothes the licensee with the right to use it, and he becomes liable for the contract price for the license. Dunham v. Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Co., 7 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 223. 1876.

14. Limitations. The limitation contained in s. 55, act July 8, 1870, U. S., was repealed by s. 5536, R. S., but as to all actions arising before such repeal, such limitation was kept in force by s. 5599, R. S.; therefore an action for infringement of a patent, before the date of such repeal, is not within the state statute of limitations. Sayles v. Oregon Central R'y Co., 6 Sawyer U. S. C. C.), 31. 1879.

15. Royalty; car brake. Where there is an established license fee for the use of a car brake, and proof of the profits is difficult, the court will accept that license fee as a proper basis for estimating the complainant's recovery. Emigh v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 4 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 271. 1881.

16. Sleeping-car; injunction. Preliminary injunction refused, because, upon the affidavits produced, the court was not prepared to determine the validity of complainant's patent, or the question of the infringement; because the threatened damage was not of such irreparable character as to require an injunction, and because the threatened damages were easily ascertainable, and the defendant abundantly able to pay. Pullman v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 5 Federal Reporter, 72. 1880.

17. — Various railway patents examined and their validity passed upon. Johnson v. Flushing and North Side R. R. Co., 15 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 192, 1878; Williams v. Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburgh R. R. Co., 15 ib., 200, 1878; Williams v. Boston and Albany R. R. Co., 17 ib., 21, 1879; Williams v. Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburgh R. R. Co., ib., 181, 1880; Stephenson v. Brooklyn Cross Town R. R. Co., 19 ib., 478, 1881; Slawson v. Grand Street, etc., R. R. Co., 17 ib., 512, 1880; Locomotive Co. v. Pa. R. R. Co., 10 Philadelphia (U. S. C. C.), 252, 1874; Emigh v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 6 Federal Reporter, 283, 1881; Nathan v. New York Elevated R. R. Co., 2 ib., 225, 1880; Electric R. R. Signal Co. v. Hall R. R. Signal Co., 6 ib., 603, 1881; Morgan Elevated R'y Co. v. Pullman, 14 ib., 648, 1882; Slawson v. Grand Street, Prospect Park and Flatbush R. R. Co., 4 ib., 531, 1880; Stephenson v. Brooklyn Cross-Town R. R. Co., 14 ib., 457, 1881; Ashcroft v. Boston and Lowell R. R. Co., 1 Holmes (U. S. C. C.), 866, 1874; Pike v. Providence and Worcester R. R. Co., 1 ib., 445, 1874; Railroad Co. v. Mellon, 104 U. S., 112, 1881; Ashcroft v. Railroad Co., 97 ib., 189, 1877; Railway Co. v. Sayles, 97 ib., 554, 1878; Slawson v. Grand Street R. R. Co., 107 ib., 649, 1882; Turrill v. Ill. Central R. R. Co., 5 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 344, 1878; *National Car Brake Shoe Co. v. PAUPERS.

1. Liability for bringing paupers into state. The provisions of the Gen. Sts., ch. 71, § 25, and of the St. of 1863, ch. 272, § 1, making any one, by whose means a person not having a settlement in the commonwealth is brought within it, liable for such person's support if he becomes a pauper, do not apply to a railway company which has brought such person into the commonwealth in the ordinary course of business, and without any reason to suspect that he would become a pauper. Inhabitants of Fitchburg v. Cheshire R. R. Co., 110 Mass., 210. 1872.

PAYMENT.

1. Freight charges; bank check. The reception of a bank check for freight charges on goods, held not to be a payment, under the facts of a particular case. Syracuse, Binghampton and New York R. R. Co. v. Collins, 57 N. Y., 611; 1 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 47, 1874.

PENALTIES.

See CHARTER; FERRIES; INJURIES TO DOMESTIC ANIMALS; LIMITATIONS; SUBSCRIPTIONS BY INDIVIDUALS; RATES.

1. Action; rights of assignee. A number of actions against a railway company were gotten up by one McCarthy, the attorney for the plaintiffs, and one Bonnell, upon an agreement to divide between them the costs and a considerable part of the penalty to be recovered in such actions, the several plaintiffs consenting thereto, and conveying to McCarthy their rights to such portions of the penalties. After issue joined, the defendant's attorney, for the purpose of preventing McCarthy from recovering such costs and portions of the penalties, procured from each of the plaintiffs an instrument, under seal, releasing the defendant from the cause of action and the costs, and agreeing that the actions be discontinued, and that orders to that effect might be entered on filing the stipulation. Defendant's attorney accordingly entered orders to that effect, without notice to plaintiffs' attorney. On a motion by the latter to set aside such orders as irregularly entered, and as entered with intent to cheat and defraud him, held, that, as the causes of action were not assignable, he acquired no interest in the subject of the actions by his agreement with the plaintiffs, and that the court would not set aside the orders of discontinuance to protect his right to the costs. McBratney v. Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg R. R. Co., 17 Hun (N. Y.), 385. 1879.

2. Constitutional law. Under the provision of the constitution of Kansas (art. 6, § 6), which provides that "the proceeds of fines for any breach of the penal laws shall be exclusively applied" "to the support of common schools," all the proceeds of penalties imposed as punishment for a breach of a penal statute (and not imposed as damages, where loss has been sustained) must "be exclusively applied to the support of common schools;" and any enactment of the legislature providing otherwise is unconstitutional and void. Hence an act of the legislature giving to an informer, who has sustained no loss, one half of such proceeds, is unconstitutional and void. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Sanders, 23 Kans., 1. 1879.

3. — Sec. 2424, Code of 1871, which requires railroad companies to erect sign-boards where they cross highways, and imposes a penalty for failure to do so, is unconstitutional in so far as it gives to the county the fine collected. The suit permitted by it is a civil suit, and the state has no interest in it. The fine, when collected, belongs to the school fund, and the state board of education are the proper parties to bring the suit for a violation of its provisions. The term "highway," as used in this section, means a public road in the country, and not a street in a town or city. Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co. v. The State, 51 Miss., 137. 1875.

4. — Where a law, when a corporation is formed, or which it afterwards accepted, exacts certain duties of it, a subsequent statute imposing a penalty, where none existed before, for a failure to perform such duties, does not impair any corporate right or otherwise violate the constitution. Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co. v. Steiner, 61 Ala., 559. 1878.

5. — The act of April 20, 1874 (71 Ohio L., 146), giving a penalty of $150 to the party aggrieved by a railway company for overcharging for the transportation of passengers or property, is not unconstitutional. Cincinnati, Sandusky and Cleveland R. R. Co. v. Cook, 37 Ohio St., 255, 1881; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 817.

6. Construction of statute. The rigid rule of the common law, in reference to the liability of common carriers, should not be applied in a case involving the violation of a penal statute. Whitehead v. Wilmington and Weldon R. R. Co., 87 N. C., 255, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 168.

7. — A court cannot create a penalty by construction, but should avoid it by construction, unless it is brought within the letter and the necessary meaning of the act creating it. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Axtell, 69 Ind., 199. 1879.

8. Cruelty to animals; appeal. In an action for a penalty under § 18 of the act for the prevention of cruelty to animals (Laws 1873, p. 13), an appeal will lie to the court of common pleas. Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. New Jersey Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, 39 N. J. Law, 400. 1877.

9. Delay. A railway company is not relieved of liability to the penalty of $25 per day, under the act of 1875, ch. 240, for delay of shipment of goods beyond five days after receipt of same, by reason of its alleged inability to procure the necessary transportation on account of the large accumulation of freight. It is the duty of the company to provide a sufficient number of cars. Keeter v. Wilmington and Weldon R. R. Co., 86 N. C., 848, 1832; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 165.

10. — In the statute providing for a penalty for delay of five days in shipment, the words "five days" in the act mean five full running days, including Sunday, whenever it intervenes. Ib.

11. — The company would not incur the penalty until the full expiration of the sixth day after the receipt of the goods — the law not regarding the fraction of a day in the enforcement of a penal statute. Ib.

12. — In an action by the plaintiff against a railway company for the penalty for delay in shipment of cotton, under the act of 1874-75, ch. 240, caused by increase of freight; by the refusal of a connecting road of the same through line to transfer defendant's flat-cars over its road loaded with cotton; by the detention of defendant's box-cars at terminus of said connecting road; and by its inability to procure other cars in time to ship plaintiff's cotton, and not by its competition with other lines for through freight, the defendant not being responsible for the causes of delay, it was held that the burden was on the defendant to show an agreement to waive such penalty. Whitehead v. Wilmington and Weldon R. R. Co., 87 N. C., 255. 1882.

13. Evidence. Recovery reduced to one excess of fares paid and one penalty, upon the facts of a particular case. Barker v. N. Y. Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 61 N. Y., 653. 1875.

14. Failure to stop train at railway crossing. In an action against a railway company to recover the penalty for neglecting to stop its train before crossing another railroad on the same level, there is no error in refusing to allow the defendant to prove that the company had rules requiring the engine-driver to comply with the law, and that the rules were in his hands. A railroad company must see that its servants obey the law, and is liable for neglect to do so. Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. The People, 91 Ill., 452. 1879.

15. Forfeiture of franchise. An act of the legislature making any discrimination on the part of railroad companies in their charges for freight a penal offense, and providing for a forfeiture of all their franchises for any wilful violation of the act, without any other penalty for the first offense, is in violation of the spirit of the constitutional provision which requires all penalties to be proportioned to the nature of the offense, and also of § 15 of art. 11, under which such a law is framed, which only authorizes the penalty to extend to forfeiture of franchises and property, "when necessary for that purpose." Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. The People, 67 Ill., 11. 1878.

16. Form of action. A state's attorney will not be allowed to bring an action for a statute penalty for his own use and gain. People v. Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific R'y Co., 12 Bradwell (Ill.), 263. 1882.

17. Jurisdiction. Where the evidence, in an action by the people to recover the penalty given by law against a railway company for not coming to a full stop before crossing another railroad track, showed a similar violation of the statute at another and different road about a quarter of a mile distant, it was held that the people were not compelled to unite the two causes of action, and thereby defeat the justice's jurisdiction. Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. The People, 91 Ill., 452. 1879.

18. Overcharge. The act of April 25, 1873, amendatory of § 13 of the act of May 1, 1852 (70 Ohio L., 161), which prohibits any corporation operating a railroad in Ohio from demanding and receiving for the transportation of passengers more than three cents per mile for a distance of more than eight miles, gives the party aggrieved a right to recover from such corporation a forfeiture of not less than $25 for each case of overcharge. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Moore, 33 Ohio St., 384. 1878.

19. — Where the complaint was for three times the amount of the aggregate of overcharges upon a number of different articles, and a bill of particulars was annexed, it was too late after judgment to object for the first time to the form of pleading, even if it was defective. Streeter v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 40 Wis., 294, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 439.

20. — The fact that shippers or consignees of goods, under the act of 1874, paid illegal railway charges thereon with full knowledge of the facts, and without protest, will not prevent a recovery. Ib.

21. — While ch. 273 of 1874 was in force, defendant, a railway company of Wisconsin, received plaintiff's goods from another company of that state, paying as back charges thereon a greater sum than such other company could lawfully charge, and, on delivery of the goods to plaintiffs, collected from them the amount of such back charges, together with illegal charges for carriage upon its own road. Held, that plaintiffs can recover from defendant only three times the excess in its charges for carriage on its own road, and not for the excess in the charges of the other company. Ib.

22. Passengers; by-laws; notice. By s. 109 of the 8 and 9 Vict., c. 20, the company is empowered to make by-laws to enforce the observance of its regulations by means of fines; and s. 110 requires that the substance of such by-laws, when confirmed and allowed, "shall be painted on boards, or printed on paper and pasted on boards, and hung up and affixed and continued on the front or other conspicuous part of every wharf or station belonging to the company, according to the nature or subject matter of such by-laws, respectively, and so as to give public notice thereof to the parties interested therein or affected thereby; and such boards shall from time to time be renewed, etc.; and no penalty imposed by any such by-law shall be recoverable unless the same shall have been published and kept published in manner aforesaid." And s. 111 enacts that, "for proof of the publication of any such by-laws, it shall be sufficient to prove that a printed paper or painted board, containing a copy of such by-laws, was affixed and continued in manner by this act directed," etc. A by-law imposed a penalty not exceeding 40s. upon a passenger getting into or out of a carriage whilst in motion. Upon a summons before justices for a breach of this by-law, held (dissentiente Williams, J.), that it was sufficient to show that the by-laws were affixed at the stations at which the party entered and quitted the train, without showing publication at every station on the line. Motteram v. Eastern Counties R'y Co., 7 Common Bench (N. S.), 58; 97 E. C. L., 58. 1859.

23. Personal injury. Where plaintiff sets up a claim against a railroad corporation for penalty incurred for excessive fare taken on one trip, and damages for personal injuries for unlawful ejection from defendant's car on a subsequent trip, and defendant demurs to the complaint on the ground that two causes of action have been improperly united, held, that under § 488 of the New York Code of Civil Procedure a cause of action for penalty cannot be joined with a cause of action for personal injuries, even where they are claims arising out of the same transaction. But § 448 should be construed to refer to cases of two or more "good causes of action" well pleaded; and the claim for a penalty in this case being insufficient in form and substance, the complaint contains but one cause of action, and that for personal injuries, and the demurrer should, therefore, be overruled, and the irrelevant matter in reference to the penalty should be stricken out. Sullivan v. N. Y. New Haven and Hartford R. R. Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 848. 1881. See, also, Sullivan v. New York, New Haven and Hartford R. R. Co., 1 N. Y. Civil Procedure Reports, 285. 1881.

24. Pleading. A petition under the act of April 20, 1874, against a corporation, for demanding and receiving excessive fare in the sale of a passenger ticket to a person desirous of traveling on its road between the points named on the ticket, is not bad, on demurrer, for want of an averment that the purchaser of the ticket was, in fact, transported on the ticket for which excessive fare was exacted. Cincinnati, Sandusky and Cleveland R. R. Co. v. Cook, 37 Ohio St., 265, 1881; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 317.

25. Repeal of statute. After the repeal of ch. 273 of 1874 (the Potter Law), no recovery could be had in any action then pending under the penal provisions of that act, either by virtue of § 33, ch. 119, R. S., or by virtue of the clause in the repealing act (ch. 57 of 1876), which provided that nothing therein contained should "in any manner affect any litigation" then pending in any of the courts of this state or of the United States. Rood v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 43 Wis., 146. 1877.

26. — In this action, originally brought to recover, for an exaction of overcharges for the carriage of goods, the statutory penalty of three times the excess, it was determined that such an action would not lie, by reason of a repeal of the statute. The prayer of the complaint was then amended so as to demand only the illegal excess. This was held to be in effect an amendment of the complaint itself; and that the question whether the action will lie under such an amended complaint is not res adjudicata. That, as the excessive charges are alleged to have been made "wrongfully and fraudulently," the action may be regarded as still one in tort, and the amendment was allowable. That the cause of action at common law, now stated in the complaint, was not repealed or suspended by the statute. Smith v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 49 Wis., 443, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 303; Graham v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 49 Wis., 532, 1880.

27. — In an action for three times the excess over legal rates of the charges made by a railway company for carriage of goods, plaintiff, after a repeal of the statute giving such an action, cannot, without amendment of the complaint, recover as in a common law action for the simple excess of such charges above reasonable rates. Streeter v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 44 Wis., 883, 1878; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 333.

28. — The act of 1849 required a bell of at least thirty pounds' weight or a steam whistle to be placed on each locomotive, and that the same should be rung or whistled at least eighty rods from the place where the railroad crossed any other road or street, and be kept ringing or whistling until such other road or street was crossed, "under a penalty of $50 for every neglect," etc. The act of 1869 so amended the law in respect of the penalty for this neglect of duty as to read "under a penalty of not exceeding $100." Held, that, as the latter act allowed a latitude of discretion in respect to the penalty from one cent to $100, it was inconsistent with, and repugnant to, that of 1849 directing an absolute and fixed penalty of $50, and repealed the former by implication. Wilson v. Ohio and Mississippi R'y Co., 64 Ill., 542. 1872.

PLEDGE.

1. Bonds. S. H. borrowed of H. certain railroad bonds, giving in pledge as collateral security for the return thereof two notes and an acceptance made by himself and indorsed by one McD. and by T., the defendant, as accommodation indorsers. H. demanded the bonds of the agent of S. H. on the day on which they were by agreement returnable, tendering the securities in exchange for them, and, after failure on the part of S. H. to return them, sold said securities at public auction at Providence, pursuant to a notice published in a Providence newspaper. They had all fallen due before the notice of sale was given. The plaintiff purchased them at said sale and brought suit against the defendant T. as indorser thereof. Held, that the said notes and acceptance having matured, H., the pledgee, had a right to sell them at auction for his reimbursement. Potter v. Thompson, 10 R. I., 1. 1871.

2. — Held, further, that the sale was not invalid for want of personal notice to the pledgor, it appearing that in the absence of the pledgor (the said S. H.) in Europe, notice of the sale was given at his place of business in New York to one McD., who had been appointed his agent during his absence, with full power to do all things that the said S. H. might do if personally present—the notice given in the absence of the principal to an agent having such unlimited powers being of the same effect as if given to the principal. Ib.

3. — Held, further, that the sale was not invalid because made in Providence rather than in New York, inasmuch as the contract of hypothecation purported to be a Rhode Island contract, and it did not appear that the agent of the defendant, or the defendant himself, who saw the notice of sale, objected to the place of sale previously thereto, when, if it was an improper one, the objection should have been made. Ib.

4. — Held further, that the sale was not invalid because made after the defendant had offered to redeem, such offer not being accompanied by a tender of the money to pay for the bonds, or of the bonds themselves, and the money to pay for their depreciation. Ib.

5. — Held, further, that the pledgee of such securities, selling for the default of the pledgor, sold to the plaintiff all the right or interest which the pledgor could empower him to sell at the time the pledge was given, although the sale was made after the maturity thereof. Ib.

6. Earnings of railway. A railroad company pledged its earnings for advances obtained by its president to pay its semi-annual interest. Held, that this pledge of the earnings was made for the security of the president, and did not prevent him from paying other debts with such earnings, if he found it expedient and for the company's interest to do so. Duncan v. Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co., 8 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 567. 1877.

7. Stock. Where stock in a corporation has been pledged for the "redemption of certificates of debt," and the certificates bound the debtor for the payment of "the sum therein mentioned and the interest thereon," the stock is bound for the payment of the interest itself, and a foreclosure may be decreed on default in payment of any instalment of interest. Swasey v. North Carolina R. R. Co., 1 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 17, 1874; also reported in 71 N. C., 571.

8. To officers of corporation of corporate assets. Any attempt by the directors of a corporation to make a pledge of the assets of the corporation in favor of themselves will be scrutinized by a court of equity with the most rigorous and jealous observation. Chouteru v. Allen, 70 Mo., 290. 1879.

9. Wrongful pledge. The pledgee holding bonds and stock as collateral security for a loan, the securities belonging to several persons, and the loan being made to a person in possession who wrongfully pledged them, should proceed pari passu in applying the securities to the payment of the debt. Gould v. Central Trust Co., 6 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 381. 1879.

PIPE LINES.

1. Injunction. An injunction refused where it was asked to prevent the construction of pipe lines for the conveyance of oil. A railway company has no right to prevent competition by enjoining the laying of such a line. Central R. R. Co. of N. J. v. Standard Oil Co., 33 N. J. Eq., 127, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 36; United N. J. R. R. and Canal Co. v. Standard Oil Co., 33 N. J. Eq., 123, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 286.

2. — After the court had refused a preliminary injunction for the removal of an oil pipe, and to prevent its use by defendants, and had discharged an ad interim order staying the defendants in the premises, and an appeal therefrom had been taken and was pending, an application to this court to continue such ad interim order, merely on the ground of the appeal, was denied. Central R. R. Co. of New Jersey v. Standard Oil Co., 33 N. J. Eq., 372. 1891.

PLANK-ROADS.

1. Crossing. In case of the failure of a railway company to erect a suitable crossing within a reasonable time an action will lie at the instance of the company owning a plank-road. Streetsville Plank-Road Co. v. Hamilton and Toronto Ry Co., 18 Upper Canada (Queen's Bench), 600. 1856.

PLAT OF TOWN.

1. Error of railway company's engineer. A railway company is not responsible for the error in a town plat on which the location of its right of way is incorrectly represented, merely because the persons who prepared and filed it were its engineer and local agent. To make it responsible, there should be proof that these persons were in that respect authorized to act for the company. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co. v. Green, 68 Mo., 169. 1878.

PLEADING.

1. Amendment. The complaint on a former trial of an action was upon an alleged contract of defendant to collect, through its agent at M., a bill against D. of goods consigned to the care of said agent, and to carry and deliver to plaintiff at R. the moneys so collected. After a judgment for plaintiff had been reversed, plaintiff was allowed to amend his complaint so as to allege a cause of action for money had and received. Held, no abuse of discretion. Wells v. American Express Co., 49 Wis., 224, 1880; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 298.

2. — damages to real estate. When a party brings an action to recover damages for an injury to real estate, and upon the trial it appears that he has no title to the property, the court will not, under the acts of May 4, 1852, or April 12, 1858, allow an amendment by inserting the name of the real owner in his stead, especially when it appears that the plaintiff has no merit in his case, independent of the defect in his title. Freeland v. Pa. R. R. Co., 2 Pearson (Pa.), 73. 1870.

3. — name of station. Where a declaration against a carrier alleged that the defendant received sheep of plaintiff, and contracted to transport them to "Elwood, Kan.," and the proof showed an agreement to transport to "Ellinwood, Kansas," it was held no error to allow an amendment of the declaration, by striking out the word "Elwood" and inserting the word "Ellinwood," even after overruling a motion for a new trial, when the motion to amend was made before deciding the motion for a new trial, the words being so nearly alike in sound that the proof could create no surprise. McColom v. Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Co., 94 Ill., 534. 1880.

4. Appeal bond of corporation. Where an appeal bond of a railway company is sued on, and there is no plea under oath denying it is the bond of the company, and it purports on its face to be the bond of the company, and is signed by its president and secretary, with the corporate seal attached, no other proof of its being the bond of the company is necessary. Keithsburg and Eastern R. R. Co. v. Henry, 90 Ill., 255. 1878.

5. Appearance by corporation. In an action of assumpsit against a railroad company, to which the defendant appeared "in its own proper person," and pleaded want of jurisdiction, setting out the facts, it was held that the plea was bad on demurrer, as a plea by a corporation aggregate, which is incapable of personal appearance, must purport to be by attorney. Nispel v. Western Union R. R. Co., 64 Ill., 811. 1872.

6. Bankruptcy. An action was brought upon a conditional promise to pay money to the order of a railway company. The promise was in writing, and was filed with the justice as the sole cause of action. Upon it was indorsed the name of a person who added to his name the word "assignee." The defendant pleaded the general issue, and went to trial. It was shown on the trial that the payee in the promise had been put in bankruptcy, and the indorser of the paper was assignee in bankruptcy thereof. Held, that the objection that the plaintiff did not by its declaration aver its right to recover as assignee would not be sustained on the final submission of the case. Wilcox v. Toledo and Ann Arbor R. R. Co., 43 Mich., 584, 1880; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 161.

7. Bill of lading. In a suit against a carrier to recover damages for non-delivery of goods in proper time, if the action be brought on bills of lading, none will be admissible in evidence on the trial except those set out in the declaration. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Cobb, 64 Ill., 148. 1872.

8. Bond of corporation; assignee. Corporation bonds payable to bearer may be sued in the name of the holder; they are not within the act of 1715. Bunting's Adm'rs v. Camden and Atlantic R. R. Co., 81 Pa. St., 254, 1876; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 570.

9. By corporation. The answer of a municipal corporation to a bill in chancery need not be signed by an officer thereof. Where the name of the corporation is written to such an answer, and there is nothing to show that it is unauthorized, it will be sufficient. Larrison v. Peoria, Atlanta and Decatur R. R. Co., 77 Ill., 11, 1875; 8 Amer. R'y Rep., 67.

10. Corporation. An allegation that the plaintiff is a corporation duly organized and engaged in building a railroad implies that it has assumed the responsibilities of a common carrier. Chicago, Newton and Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Newton, 36 Ia., 299. 1873.

11. — The allegation, in a complaint, that the defendant is a common carrier doing business under the style and firm name of The Adams Express Co., implies that the defendant is a corporation, and not a copartnership. Adams Express Co. v. Hill, 43 Ind., 157. 1873.

12. — An averment in a declaration, that the defendant is a corporation, created by the laws of this state, and engaged in operating a railroad, and carrying corn and grain in cars furnished by itself, upon its own and other roads, is equivalent to an averment that it is a common carrier. Toledo, Wabash and Western Ry Co. v. Roberts, 71 Ill., 540. 1874.

13. — Where a suit is brought against a defendant by a name implying a corporation, and in that name such defendant forms an issue by general denial, and goes to trial, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to introduce any evidence of the existence of the corporation. Adams Express Co. v. Hill, 43 Ind., 157. 1873.

14. — In an action against a railroad company, it is not necessary to aver in the declaration that it is a corporation, nor is it necessary to prove on the trial that the defendant is a corporation, unless with the plea there is filed an affidavit denying that it is. The court will ex officio take notice of the fact. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Sherman, 30 Grattan (Va.), 602. 1878.

15. — The existence of a corporation plaintiff is not put in issue by a general denial of an alleged cause of action. Dietrich v. Lincoln and Northwestern R. R. Co., 13 Neb., 43. 1882.

16. — In an action against a corporation sued by the name of the Montgomery and Mobile Railroad Company, an appearance by attorney and pleadings filed in the name of Montgomery and Mobile Railway Company are a conclusive admission, in a subsequent action on the judgment, of the identity of the two corporations. Mobile and Montgomery R'y Co. v. Yeates, 67 Ala., 164. 1880.

17. — Where suit in the justice's court was against "D. McG., President Davis Avenue R. R. Co.," a complaint in the circuit court against "Davis Avenue R. R. Co." is a departure, and cannot be allowed, as it would introduce an entirely new party. Davis Avenue R. R. Co. v. Mallon, 57 Ala., 163, 1876; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 405.

18. Carriage of merchandise. Evidence that a railway company received and was paid for carrying property, and that after its transportation it was placed by it in its depot, and was not delivered upon a proper demand, will support a declaration alleging that the company received the property, that it agreed to deliver it, and neglected and refused to do so. Lane v. Boston and Albany R. R. Co., 112 Mass., 455. 1873.

19. Corporate existence. Where the complaint alleges a corporate existence in the plaintiff, and no facts or circumstances appear upon the face of the complaint showing in plaintiff a want of corporate authority, or of capacity to sue, a demurrer to the complaint under the Code cannot be sustained. Cheraw and Chester R. R. Co. v. White, 14 So. Car., 51. 1880.

20. Debt; mortgage; bonds. Where the declaration alleged that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of $240, being semi-annual interest on certain mortgage bonds (describing the bonds and coupons), which the defendant, though often requested, had refused to pay, whereby an action had accrued to the plaintiff to have and demand of the defendants said sum of $240, it was held to be a good declaration in debt. New London City Bank v. Ware River R. R. Co., 41 Conn., 542. 1874.

21. Defective machinery. An answer in an action for injury to an employee, which alleges that the plaintiff assumed the risk incident to the use of the machinery complained of, is affirmative in its character, and such defense cannot be proved under a general denial. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Orr, 84 Ind., 50, 1883; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 94.

22. Defective roadway. The particular defects in the defendant's roadway, relied upon as the basis of recovery, should be set up in the pleadings. Madden v. Minneapolis and St. Louis R'y Co., 80 Minn., 458. 1888.

23. Demurrer; affidavit of corporation. An affidavit to a plea on demurrer put in by a corporation is insufficient if made by an attorney or agent in the suit, unless it shows that the officers of the company are absent. McTague v. Pennsylvania and New England R. R. Co., 44 N. J. Law, 62. 1882.

24. False estimates. The complaint alleged that the plaintiff entered into a contract with the S. and M. R. R. Co. (afterward merged into and consolidated with the defendant) for the construction of a tunnel,—the contract price to be paid upon estimates of the chief engineer; and that the engineer, by collusion with the company, and for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiff, omitted certain work from his estimates. Upon the trial the plaintiff offered to prove that he did extra work, on the promise of the engineer (subsequently ratified by the president of the company) that he should be paid for it, as for similar work under the contract. Held, that as the plaintiff had not sued for extra work, but for work done under the original contract, the evidence was not admissible. Hinkle v. San Francisco and North Pacific R. R. Co., 55 Cal., 627. 1880.

25. — The court in effect instructed the jury that, if the estimates of the chief engineer were honestly made, they were conclusive, but the bill of exceptions did not contain the contract, or any of the evidence to which the instruction related. Held, that it could not be said that there was any error in the ruling. Ib.

26. Fraud. The pleadings considered in an action to set aside a conveyance to a railway company for fraud in procuring the same. Silvers v. Junction R. R. Co., 48 Ind., 435. 1878.

27. Injury causing death; parent and child. In an action for the death of a child to enable the parent to recover full damages for the services of the child during his minority, such damages must be specially alleged and demanded in the complaint. Pennsylvania Co. v. Lilly, 73 Ind., 252, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 540.

28. — Where, in such a case, the complaint did not allege and demand damages for the loss of the future services of the child, and there was no evidence tending to show a loss of such services to the parent, a verdict assessing his damages at $1,800 is excessive. Ib.

29. Injury to employee; amendment. This action was brought by Margaret Salmon as administratrix of the estate of Daniel Salmon, deceased, against the Kansas Pacific R'y Co., under § 423 of the Civil Code, for damages resulting from the death of said Daniel, claimed to have been wrongfully caused by the said company. In the original petition it was alleged that Salmon was killed through the negligence of defendant while he was being transported by it as a passenger, but afterwards the petition was so amended as to make it allege that Salmon was killed through the negligence of defendant while he was being transported as an employe of the company. Held, that the court below did not err in allowing said amendment to be made. A pleading may be amended by inserting allegations material to the case, and every material amendment of a petition must of necessity change more or less the nature of the cause of action. Kansas Pacific Ry Co. v. Salmon, 14 Kans., 512. 1875.

80. Injury to team. The pleadings in an action for injury to a team at a crossing examined and held sufficient. Gibbs v. Mo. Pacific Ry Co., 11 Mo. App., 459. 1882.

81. Insane person. An action may be brought in the name of an insane person unless a conservator or guardian has been appointed. Chicago and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Munger, 78 Ill., 300. 1875.

82. Interpleader. The amount due from a plaintiff cannot be the subject of controversy in an action of interpleader; the action can only be maintained where plaintiff admits liability for the full amount claimed to one or the other of the claimants. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Arthur, 90 N. Y., 284. 1882.

83. Joinder. The rule in respect to uniting, in the same complaint, several causes of action arising out of the same transaction, heretofore adopted by this court, approved and followed. Applied to the joining of a law action and equitable suit in the same proceeding, the complainant having sued for an account of the profits of a railway, and for its possession. St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Rice, 25 Minn., 278. 1878.

84. — On motion in arrest of judgment, where it was agreed that the mother of a child that had been killed should be bound by the verdict, the suit being brought by the father, held, that the judgment would not be arrested because an action for the killing of a horse was also joined by the plaintiff. Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Bock, 98 Pa. St., 427, 1830; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 20.

85. Labor contract. In suing a railway company for a labor debt under Comp. L., §§ 2893-95, a declaration on the common counts in assumpsit, with mere allusions to the act and a statement of plaintiff's title by assignment, is not enough; the existence of the facts upon which the statute bases the right of action must be averred. Chicago and Northeastern R. R. Co. v. Sturgis, 44 Mich., 538. 1880.

86. Negligence. A declaration for negligent injury must allege the fact and the manner of negligence; and plaintiff should be confined to what is set forth in his declaration. Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon R. R. Co. v. Marcott, 41 Mich., 433, 1879; Flint and Pere Marquette Ry Co. v. Stark, 38 Mich., 714, 1878.

87. — The defendant is called upon to disprove only the acts of negligence sought to be established. Thus, if the plaintiff relies upon a failure to ring a bell or sound a whistle, the defendant is not bound to show that its fences or cattle-guards were in good condition. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Robinson, 8 Bradwell (Ill.), 140. 1890.

88. — A declaration in an action on the case for injury sustained by the plaintiff through the negligence of the defendant, which does not show that the negligence averred contributed in some degree to the injury complained of, is bad on demurrer. McGanahan v. East St. Louis and Carondelet Ry Co., 72 Ill., 557. 1874.

89. — A passenger in alleging negligence may do so in general terms. Clark v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Ry Co., 4 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 860. 1883.

40. — An allegation in a petition that a railway company "carelessly, negligently, wrongfully and unlawfully" ran its cars over and killed the plaintiff's intestate does not amount to an allegation that the carelessness and negligence were wilful, and the recovery must be confined to compensatory damages. Jacobs v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 10 Bush (Ky.), 263. 1874.

41. — Negligence is the ultimate fact to be pleaded, and forms a part of the act from which an injury arises. It is the absence of the care in the performance of an act, and not the result of such absence. It is not, therefore, a conclusion of law, and may be pleaded generally. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Wolfe, 80 Ky., 82, 1882; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 625.

42. — Whatever is the real ground of complaint ought to be distinctly stated in the petition. Hence, in an action against a railroad company to recover for injuries alleged to have been sustained through the company's negligence, if the negligence consisted in having a defective sand-box on the engine and in keeping a defective frog in the track, the petition should not charge negligence in running the cars. Edens v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 72 Mo., 212, 1890; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 459.

43. — Where neglect of co-employees is charged, their names and employment should be averred. Fraker v. St. Paul, Minncapolis and Manitoba R'y Co., 30 Minn., 103. 1882.

44. — contributory negligence. A complaint for personal injury caused by the negligence of the defendant's servants, averring that the plaintiff "was without fault or negligence," sufficiently shows that the negligence of the plaintiff did not contribute to the injury, unless it otherwise appears by the complaint. Louisville, New Albany and Chicago R'y Co. v. Head, 80 Ind., 117, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 619.

45. — The allegation of due care on the part of the plaintiff is sufficient, unless the facts show that there was contributory negligence. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Wright, 80 Ind., 182, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 628.

46. — In an action to recover for an injury caused by negligence, whether it be an injury to the person or an injury to property, the complaint must show by direct averment, or it must appear from the facts therein alleged, that the plaintiff or party injured was himself guilty of no negligence which contributed to the injury. Louisville, New Albany and Chicago R'y Co. v. Boland, 58 Ind., 398, 1876; Gornley v. Ohio and Mississippi R'y Co., 72 Ind., 81, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 581; Hathaway v. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co., 48 Ind., 25, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 893.

47. — In an action against a railroad company for injuries to the person, occasioned by its negligence, it is not necessary to aver that the plaintiff was in the exercise of reasonable care or without fault; these are matters of defense. Government St. R. R. Co. v. Hanlon, 53 Ala., 70, 1875; Robinson v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 48 Cal., 409, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 244; Houston and Texas Central R'y Co. v. Cowser, 57 Tex., 293, 1882.

48. Overflow; ditches. A petition in an action for flooding the plaintiff's land stated that defendant "failed to keep its road in such condition as to prevent injury to plaintiff; but negligently and carelessly failed to make and keep open proper ditches for the purpose of leading the water off of plaintiff's land." There was no averment of any fact showing that defendant was under any legal obligation to maintain ditches. Held, that for want of such averment the petition was fatally defective. Field v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R'y Co., 76 Mo., 614. 1892.

49. Personal injuries. In a suit against a railway company, to recover damages for a personal injury, it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to prove the injury, but he must also prove the negligence alleged. If it is alleged that a whistle was not sounded, the burden of proving that fact rests upon the plaintiff, and the defendant is not bound to prove that the whistle was sounded. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Cragin, 71 Ill., 177. 1873.

50. — Plaintiff's complaint contained three counts; the first alleged in substance that on October 30, 1877, he got upon the rear platform of one of defendant's cars, as a passenger; that the conductor, without asking him for his fare or giving him an opportunity to pay it, violently threw him off from the car in front of a car passing upon an adjoining track, and he was run over and injured, "to his damage $10,000." The other two counts relate to the same accident, alleging that it occurred through defendant's negligence, each closing "to his damage $10,000." In the prayer for relief plaintiff asked damage to the amount of $20,000. Upon the trial the court ruled in substance that plaintiff could only recover under the first count; he obtained a verdict for $15,000. Defendant claimed that as said count only alleged $10,000 damages, the verdict was unauthorized. Held, untenable; that the general prayer for damages at the close of the complaint controlled; but that if, in order to sustain the recovery, the first count should have alleged $15,000 damages, the defect was one that could be amended on appeal. Schultz v. Third Avenue R. R. Co., 89 N. Y., 242; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 412. 1832. See Same v. Same, 46 N. Y. Superior Ct., 211. 1830.

51. — An order requiring the plaintiff, in a personal injury case, to divide his petition into separate counts, held improper. Hammer v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R'y Co., 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ia.), 772. 1893.

52. — An averment that defendant negligently drove a certain engine upon the railway up to, upon and across a certain public highway crossing, without giving the necessary statutory signals, viz.: ringing a bell or sounding a whistle, is a sufficiently specific statement of defendant's negligence when taken in connection with the allegation of consequential injury, and it would entitle plaintiff to support it by evidence, under defendant's plea to the general issue. Chicago and Northeastern R'y Co. v. Miller, 46 Mich., 532, 1881; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 89.

53. Railway in streets. An action to recover damages for the diminution of the value of adjacent property, occasioned by the location and use of a railway in a public street, is not an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, but at the common law would have been an action on the case. Jeffersonville, etc., R. R. Co. v. Esterle, 13 Bush (Ky.), 667. 1878.

54. Recoupment; sale of railroad ties. In an action to recover the price of a quantity of ties sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, it was pleaded that a certain portion of the ties were, by some person to the defendant unknown, cut and removed from land granted to the defendant by its charter and remaining unsold, and after receiving the same it became, for the first time, apprised of the fact that the ties were taken from its own land; it was held the plea contained no matter of recoupment, as it did not aver possession of the ties in the vendor at the time of the sale, so that a warranty of title could be implied therefrom, nor did it aver any affirmation of title. In the absence of both these elements, the purchaser buys at his own peril. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Leidig, 64 Ill., 151. 1872.

55. Release; infant. A release of damages by an infant having been pleaded, but no proper denial thereof set up under § 448 of the Code, the testimony was admitted, without objection, to show that the infant was incompetent to make the release. Held, that the admissibility of the evidence could not be raised on appeal. Crowley v. City R. R. Co., 60 Cal., 628. 1882.

56. Residence of corporation. In an action against a corporation, an affidavit of claim, filed with the declaration, stating the amount due from defendant to plaintiff, and that the principal office of defendant is in the county where the suit is brought, is sufficient to show that the defendant is a resident of that county, within the meaning of the act providing for the filing of such affidavits. Bank of North America v. Chicago, Danville and Vincennes R. R. Co., 82 Ill., 493. 1876.

57. Specific performance. A bill for specific performance of a contract for conveyance of right of way, held insufficient for want of certainty in the description of the land which complainant claimed. New York, Susquehanna and Western R. R. Co. v. Lawton, 35 N. J. Eq., 396, 1882; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 406.

58. Variance. If the plaintiff, though needlessly, describe the tort, and the means adopted in effecting it, with minuteness and particularity, and the proof substantially varies from the statement, there will be a fatal variance. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co. v. Beam, 11 Bradwell (Ill.), 215. 1882.

59. — Where the declaration charges that the injury was caused by defendant propelling its cars at an immoderate and dangerous rate of speed, and does not call in question the right of defendant to use steam as a motive power, the latter question cannot be insisted upon as ground for recovery. Plaintiff must be confined to the case made by the declaration. Springfield City R'y Co. v. De Camp, 11 Bradwell (Ill.), 475. 1882.

60. — A declaration for negligent injury to a brakeman while uncoupling cars set forth that it was occasioned by a deep hole between the rails. The evidence was that it was between the rails of a side-track. Held, that the declaration would naturally be construed to refer to the main track, and that the variance was material, especially when taken in connection with other variances as to the nature of the hole and the extent of the injury. Batterson v. Chicago and Grand Trunk R'y Co., 49 Mich., 184, 1882; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 123.

61. Various matters of pleading and practice. Pleadings in various actions considered, together with the matters of practice. Sargent v. Railroad Co., 32 Ohio St., 449, 1877; Lane v. Burlington and Southwestern R. R. Co., 52 Ia., 18, 1879; Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co. v. Knudson, 62 Mo., 569, 1875; South and North Ala. R. R. Co. v. San Francisco and Humboldt Bay R. R. Co., 50 Cal., 523, 1875.

62. Work and labor. A complaint in the general form for work and labor done on a railway is not demurrable because it sets out the facts with unnecessary particularity, when the facts stated do not show a special contract, or increase the liability of the defendant beyond such general employment. Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw R. R. Co. v. McDonald, 48 Ind., 241. 1874.

POOLING CONTRACTS.

1. Contract. The B. and M. and E. railroads entered into a contract or arrangement whereby each should retain sixty per cent. of its gross earnings between all competing points of their respective routes and Boston, to pay running expenses, and the remaining forty per cent. of such gross earnings should constitute a common fund, to be equally divided between said roads. Held, that such contract came within the prohibition of the act of 1867, ch. 8, entitled "An act to prevent railroad monopolies." Morrill v. Boston and Maine R. R. Co., 55 N. H., 581, 1875; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 484.

2. Evidence. Upon a bill in equity for an injunction, authorized by Laws of 1867, c. 8, to restrain directors of railroads from "pooling" certain earnings of the roads, it is not necessary to prove the election of the directors by the corporate records. The testimony of one of the defendants, in a deposition, that he is an acting director, is competent evidence. Morrill v. Boston and Maine R. R. Co., 58 N. H., 68. 1877.

Miscellaneous.

POSSESSION OF RAILWAY.

1. Action to recover. A railway is a public work, the possession of which is necessarily attended by the right and duty to employ the franchises granted by the sovereign in connection with it; an action of unlawful detainer will not lie for the recovery of possession of a part thereof, as this involves the right to and the public duty of exercising these franchises. The term "railroad" embraces more than the words "lands and tenements," as used in the statute. Gibbs v. Drew, 16 Fla., 147. 1877.

POWDER.

1. Explosion. The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co., having legislative authority to construct a tunnel through Bergen Hill, contracted with M. to do the work. The tunnel was driven through a rock, was begun in 1878, and completed in 1877. M. constructed near the eastern end of the tunnel, and within the limits of Jersey City, a magazine for the explosive materials which he used in blasting. In 1876, at night, the materials exploded, doing great damage to property, and injuring, among the property, some houses belonging to C. A suit was brought to recover damages for the injury. Held, that the legislative authority to a private corporation, or an individual, to do a work for its or his own profit, does not include authority to use, at whatever hazard to the persons or property of others, dangerous materials, even though they are necessary to the convenient prosecution of the work. They will be liable for the injury, although no negligence or want of skill in executing the work is proved, and liable for actual damages, even though they show that they have done the work in the most careful manner. McAndrews v. Collard, 42 N. J. Law, 189. 1880.

PRACTICE.

See PLEADING.

1. Agreed statement of facts. Agreed statement of facts construed. Kansas City,

PRIVATE RAILROAD.

See CHARTER; LATERAL RAILWAYS.

1. Regulation; gates. A private railway, on private property, made and used exclusively for the proprietor's own purposes, and not for passenger traffic, is not subject to the regulations as to gates and persons in charge at level crossings imposed by the railway statutes; nor are the proprietors bound at common law to erect such gates. Matson v. Baird, Law Reports, 8 Appeal Cases, 1082, 1878; 24 Eng. (Moak), 676.

PRIVATE WAYS AND CROSSINGS.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; INJURIES TO DOMESTIC ANIMALS.

1. Contract. Where a railway company agrees to maintain, and does maintain, two "farm crossings" on a single farm, its obligation in respect to both, as to keeping them in a condition to afford a reasonably safe crossing for the occupants of the farm, is the same as it would be in the case of the single crossing required by the statute (Laws of 1872, ch. 119, § 30). Grasse v. Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western R. R. Co., 36 Wis., 582, 1875.

2. Damage by railway. Judgments refer to the situation of the parties at the commencement of the suit, and, as a general rule, damages are allowed in personal actions only to that date. In the case of continuing injuries, compensation for subsequent loss must be sought in another suit after the damage is sustained. Brewster v. Sussex R. R. Co., 40 N. J. Law, 57, 1878.

Agent.

PROCESS.

See GARNISHMENT; HIGHWAY; SUBSCRIPTIONS BY INDIVIDUALS.

1. Agent. In a suit against an incorporated company, citation may be served upon a local agent representing the company in the county in which such suit may be brought (R. S., 1223). A petition alleged that a defendant incorporated company had an office "for the transaction of business as a common carrier in the city of Austin, Travis county, Texas, at which place the agent of said company is." The suit was brought in Travis county. Held, that the service of citation was sufficient to hold the defendant to answer the petition, and that no judicial ascertainment of the agency was required to authorize a judgment by default. Houston and Texas Central R. R. Co. v. Burke, 55 Tex., 323, 1891; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 59.

2. — In an action against a railroad company, service of the summons upon a local agent of the company is sufficient to bring the defendant into court. Katzenstein v. Raleigh and Gaston R. R. Co., 78 N. C., 286, 1878.

3. — Where the return of the officer states that he read the process to a station agent (naming him) of the defendant, the president and secretary not being residents of the county, it is defective, both because it shows attempted service by reading instead of by copy, and because it does not show that the president could not be found in the county; the fact that he was not a resident of the county does not exclude the idea that he might have been found therein at the time of service. Cairo and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Joiner, 72 Ill., 520, 1874.

4. — Where the receivers of a foreign railway operated a connecting line in Georgia as part of a through line, under a contract by which they were to operate the Georgia branch under the laws of Georgia, furnish their own rolling stock, for which the Georgia line should pay a certain amount, that each road should contribute its proportion of the expenses, and the net proceeds should be divided pro rata, a depot agent on the line of the Georgia corporation was such an agent of the Georgia company as could be served with process against it, though he might have been employed by the receivers and made remittances to them, by whom the proceeds were afterwards distributed under the contract. Georgia Southern R. R. Co. v. Bigelow, 63 Ga., 219, 1881.

5. — In a suit against a corporation created by act of congress, not residing or doing business in Illinois, and having no office or place of business there, service of process upon an agent appointed by the land commissioner of the corporation and its trustees, whose business it is merely to receive and transmit offers for lands and to assist in making sales, will not give the court jurisdiction, such person not being an agent of the corporation in the sense of the statute. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Miller, 87 Ill., 45, 1877.

6. — Under the statute (Tay. Stats., 135, § 20), in all actions for damages against a railway company, summons may be served on any station or depot agent of the company; and this applies to an action on contract for labor and services. Ruthe v. Green Bay and Minnesota R. R. Co., 37 Wis., 344, 1875.

7. — Where a declaration in a justice's court sets out fully a cause of action against a railroad company for damages to personalty, and a summons and a copy of the declaration, attached thereto and referred to therein, were served on the agent of the road, the action against the company was not fatally defective because the summons was directed to the agent as such, instead of being to the road itself. Western and Atlantic R. R. Co. v. Kirkpatrick, 66 Ga., 86, 1880.

8. — An assistant secretary of a foreign railroad company, whose duty consists in making such records as he may be expressly directed to make, is not a managing agent within the meaning of subd. 3 of § 432 of the Code of Civil Procedure, authorizing service upon the corporation by the delivery of a summons to a managing agent. Sterett v. Denver and Rio Grande R'y Co., 17 Hun (N. Y.), 316, 1879.

9. — One Treat, the president of a street railway in Auburn, was, on June 1, 1876, employed by the president of the defendant, a steam railroad company, to superintend the running of horse cars on a portion of de-defendant's road not yet completed. Treat had no authority to make contracts for the defendant, except to purchase horses and feed; nor had he any control over or knowledge of the affairs of the defendant, or its books; his employment was to continue during the president's pleasure. Held, that a summons, in an action against the defendant, could not be served upon him as its "managing agent." Emerson v. Auburn and Owasco Lake R. R. Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.), 150. 1878.

10. Amendment. Where a summons fails to name the form of action, an amendment by inserting the words "in an action of assumpsit," is properly allowed, and is merely formal. Chester and Tamaroa Coal and R. R. Co. v. Lickiss, 73 Ill., 531. 1874.

11. — Judgment by default against a railway company, the summons and return naming it as a railroad company; at the same time the default and judgment were set aside and the plaintiff permitted to amend the summons and return by inserting the name of the defendant as a railway company, and judgment then again taken on default. Held, on appeal, that no error was committed in setting aside the defaults and judgment and permitting the amendment of the writ and service, the record showing that the proper representatives of the company had due notice of the action by such summons. Chicago and Indianapolis R'y Co. v. Johnston, 89 Ind., 88. 1883.

12. — Substituted service must show facts conferring jurisdiction upon a corporation. Caro v. Oregon and California R. R. Co., 10 Oreg., 510. 1882.

13. Constitutional law. A statute which prescribes a mode of serving process upon railroad companies different from that provided for in a charter previously granted to a particular company does not impair the obligation of the contract between such company and the state. Railroad Co. v. Hecht, 95 U. S., 168. 1877.

14. Extinct corporation. Where certain persons were served with process as the representatives of an alleged corporation, the plaintiff cannot preclude them from pleading in their own names the extinction of such corporation. Kelley v. Mississippi Cen- tral R. R. Co., 1 Federal Reporter, 564. 1880.

15. Federal courts. Where foreign corporations engage in business in a state whose laws provide that they may be summoned by process served upon an agent in charge thereof, they are "found" in the district in which such agent is doing business, within the meaning of the act of congress of March 3, 1875 (18 St. at Large, 470), and may be served in that manner in suits brought in the United States courts. McCoy v. Cincinnati, etc., R. R. Co., 18 Federal Reporter, 3. 1892.

16. — Where a defendant in a state court has lost by his inaction the right to object to the defective service of the complaint, and thereafter removes the cause to the circuit court of the United States, he cannot be permitted in such circuit court to plead in abatement such defective service. Wertheim v. Continental R'y and Trust Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 689. 1892.

17. Foreign corporation. The defendant was a Scotch corporation, with running powers over an English railway to Carlisle, and its only officer in England was a booking clerk at a station at Carlisle, whose sole duty was to issue tickets to travelers. The station at Carlisle was wholly under the control of the English company, but the defendant had use of it at a rental payable to that company. The defendant's head office was in Scotland. Held, that the booking clerk was not a head officer or clerk of the defendant, who could be properly served with a writ issued against the defendant. Mackereth v. Glasgow and South Western R'y Co., Law Reports, 8 Exchequer, 149; 5 Eng. (Moak), 842. 1873.

18. — Where a foreign corporation does business and has agents in Illinois with property, service may be had upon such corporation through such agents or officers, the same as upon domestic corporations. Midland Pacific R'y Co. v. McDermid, 91 Ill., 170. 1878.

19. — But where a foreign corporation does not transact its business in such state, and has no office or agents located there, service of process upon one of its officers or agents while temporarily in the state on private business, or passing through it, will confer no jurisdiction on the courts over such corporation. Ib.

20. — Foreign corporations doing business in Illinois are liable to be sued, the same as a domestic corporation or citizen, and process may be served upon its agent in the state; and the word "process" in the Practice Act embraces process of every kind, including garnishee process. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co. v. Crane, 102 Ill., 249. 1882.

21. — Under the statutes of New York, service within the state on the proper officer of a foreign corporation is equivalent to personal service on a non-resident natural person. If such personal service cannot be made, service may be made by publication against corporations in the same cases in which it can be made against non-resident individuals. Barnett v. Chicago and Lake Huron R. R. Co., 4 Hun (N. Y.), 114. 1875.

22. — Service upon a non-resident director found within the state was claimed sufficient, because the corporation had property within the state. The property consisted of a few maps and books of trifling value, used in selling the bonds of the company. Held, that these things did not constitute such property as to give jurisdiction. Barnes v. Mobile and North Western R. R. Co., 12 Hun (N. Y.), 126. 1877.

23. — Proof of service of process upon the "agent" of a foreign corporation in a suit begun before a justice is sufficient under Comp. L., § 1624, which provides for making service in such cases upon some one authorized by power of attorney to receive it. American Express Co. v. Conant, 45 Mich., 642. 1881.

24. Issued by de facto officer. A clerk who held over from the day of a general election, to wit, the first Tuesday in August, until the first Monday in the ensuing September, when his successor was installed, was at least clerk de facto; and his acts cannot be collaterally impeached, and are valid as between third parties. Threadgill v. Carolina Central R'y Co., 73 N. C., 178. 1875.

25. Justice's court. The legal service of summons in a justice's court includes, as a necessary part of such service, service of the complaint. Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v.

Superior Court of Kern County, 59 Cal., 471. 1881.

26. — fires. In an action before a justice of the peace, for setting fire to plaintiff's property, the constable's return, showing that he served the writ by reading it to the agent, etc., is not sufficient. The service of process, as provided for in § 9, art. I, of the statute affecting justices (Wagn. Stat., 810, § 9), is authorized in suits for killing stock. But in the case supposed it should be made conformably to the statute relating to corporations, by service on the chief officer, or by leaving a copy with the agent. Jordan v. Missouri, Kansas and Texas R'y Co., 61 Mo., 52. 1875.

27. Lessee. Leaving a copy of a declaration and process with a depot agent is not sufficient service on an individual lessee of the railroad. Jones v. Ga. Southern R. R. Co., 66 Ga., 558. 1881.

28. — Service upon an agent of a lessee, appointed under the statutes of Vermont for the purpose of receiving service of process, held sufficient. Brownell v. Troy and Boston R. R. Co., 18 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 243, 1880; 3 Federal Reporter, 761, 1880.

29. Plea in abatement. A plea in abatement for want of sufficient service of a writ should contain a direct averment of what the service was, and that no other service was in fact made. An averment that "it appears that the only service of said writ was," etc., is not sufficient. Perry v. New Brunswick R'y Co., 71 Me., 359. 1890.

30. Receiver. For service upon a railroad corporation to be effective by reason of service upon an agent, the agent must, at the time of the service, be its agent. An agent of the state, under a receiver who has possession of the road in consequence of a seizure by the governor for non-payment of interest on bonds which the state has indorsed, is not the agent of the corporation. Cherry v. North and South R. R. Co., 59 Ga., 446, 1877; 62 ib., 178, 1878.

31. Resignation of officer. An officer of a corporation may resign to prevent service of process upon him. Ervin v. Oregon Steam Navigation Co., 22 Hun (N. Y.), 598. 1880.

32. Return. The return on a summons was: "Served the within named railroad company, by reading the same and delivering a copy thereof to O., cashier of said railroad company, this 24th day of March, 1875; the president of said company could not be found in my county, this 5th April, 1875." Held, the last date is evidently the date of the return of the writ, and that the return shows that, on the 24th of March, the day the writ was served, the president could not be found. The service and return of the summons were sufficient and in strict conformity to the statute. Chicago and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Kähler, 79 Ill., 354. 1875.

33. — A sheriff's return of service of summons against a railway corporation, indorsed on the writ, was: "September 4, 1872, served by reading to, and delivering a true copy to, C. D., a director of the defendant, the president of the defendant not residing or being found in my county." Held, on bill to enjoin the collection of the judgment recovered in the suit, that the return was sufficient and gave the court jurisdiction. It sufficiently appeared what was served and of what a copy was delivered. Cairo and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Holbrook, 92 Ill., 297. 1879.

34. — The return of service of process on a corporation under the statute (Wagn. Stat., 294, §§ 26, 27), made by leaving a copy at a business office of the company, with the person having charge thereof, in order to be valid must recite that the chief officer is absent from, or cannot be found in, the county, and not merely and generally that he is absent. The proper inference from the latter recital is that he was absent from his office. Hoen v. Atlantic and Pacific R. R. Co., 64 Mo., 531. 1877.

35. — Under a statute providing that a summons against a corporation may be served on the president, chairman of the board of trustees, or other chief officer; or if its chief officer is not found in the county, upon its cashier, treasurer, secretary, clerk, or managing agent, etc.; when the service is not upon the chief officer, the return must show that he could not be found in the county, also upon whom the summons was served, naming the person and his office. Cairo and Fulton R. R. Co. v. Trout, 32 Ark., 17, 1877; Same v. Rea, ib., 29, 1877.

36. — Service of process upon the president of a corporation must be made by leaving with him "a true and attested" copy thereof; and a return by the sheriff that he gave him "a copy" renders the service void. But under the act of February 19, 1849, process may be served upon the directors as well as the president of a railroad company, even when the latter officer can be found. Commonwealth v. Wilmington and Reading R. R. Co., 2 Pearson (Pa.), 403. 1876.

37. — The sheriff's return on a summons that he served it on a certain person, the superintendent of a certain corporation, is conclusive as to the existence of the company and the official position of the person served, and the party will not be allowed to contradict it. Commonwealth v. Catawissa, etc., R. R. Co., 1 Pearson (Pa.), 841. 1863.

38. — Where a foreign corporation is served with summons under a statute providing that service in such cases may be by delivering a copy of the writ and petition to any officer or agent of such company "in charge of any office or place of business" that it may have, the return of service should state that a copy of the writ and the petition were delivered to an officer or agent in charge of an office or place of business of the defendant. Kiufek v. Merchants' Dispatch Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 282; 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 547. 1882.

39. Service on corporation. The act of April 15, 1846, entitled "An act for the relief of creditors against corporations," and the supplement thereto of March 22, 1865, refer only to the mode of serving process in the higher courts, and not when issued by a justice of the peace. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co. v. Ditton, 36 N. J. Law, 361. 1873.

40. — Service upon a railway company must be made upon one of the officers or in the manner named in §§ 68a, b, and c, ch. 80, §§ 3591-4, Comp. Laws 1879; § 13, ch. 81, § 4285, Comp. Laws 1879; and a return upon a summons that it was served upon M., an agent of the defendant, is of itself no sufficient evidence of service. The service must be upon an agent or officer named in the statute. Union Pacific R'y Co. v. Pillsbury, 29 Kans., 632. 1883.

41. — The act of the general assembly of the state of Indiana of March 29, 1879 (relating to foreign express companies, defining their duties, etc.), providing for the service of process, in actions against such companies, on the officers or agents of such companies within the state, is limited to actions on claims or demands arising out of transactions in the state of Indiana with their agents or employes, and embraces actions in tort as well as in contract, but does not apply to causes of action arising outside the state of Indiana. Grover v. American Express Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 383. 1882.

42. — Under a proper construction of §§ 3049, 3369 and 3403 of the Code, when considered together, an action cannot be brought in the superior court against a railroad company by merely serving the written notice and filing the same in the clerk's office without other pleadings. Holges v. Atlantic and Gulf R. R. Co., 51 Ga., 244. 1874.

43. — Under the act of February 19, 1849, in a transitory action process may be served on the principal officers of a corporation, chartered by the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in any county in the state, wherever they may be found, although the company had neither an office or any part of its works within that county, nor did any of its officers reside there. It is otherwise in local actions, or in the case of a foreign corporation. Hughart v. Bedford and Bridgeport R. R. Co., 2 Pearson (Pa.), 116. 1871.

44. — The statute provides that service may be made upon a corporation by leaving a copy of the summons with the president, secretary, etc., if either can be found in the county; if not, then by leaving a copy of the summons with any director, clerk, etc., of such company found in such county. These constitute two classes, and service upon one class is primary to service upon the other; and before service upon persons of the second class will confer jurisdiction upon the courts, it must appear affirmatively that service could not be had upon persons in the first class. St. Louis, Vandalia and Terre Haute R. R. Co. v. Dawson, 3 Bradwell (Ill.), 118. 1878.

45. — A probate judge can direct how service of notice of appeal from commissioners on a decedent's estate shall be served upon a corporation; and may name the officer, agent, etc., on whom service shall be made. Simpson v. Mansfield, etc., R. R. Co., 38 Mich., 628. 1873.

46. Waiver by appearance. An appearance of a defendant by an attorney and consenting to a continuance of the cause is a substantial act, and dispenses with the service of process. St. Louis, Iron Mt. and Southern Ry Co. v. Barnes, 35 Ark., 95. 1879.

47. Writ of error. In a judgment rendered in favor of the "Southern Pacific R. R. Co.," in suit filed September 6, 1871, held, under the various statutes on the subject, that a petition for writ of error filed July 10, 1873, and directed to the "Texas and Pacific R. R. Co.," was properly directed, and the writ will not be dismissed for want of proper parties. Stephenson v. Texas and Pacific R. R. Co., 42 Tex., 162. 1875.

PUBLIC LANDS.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; LAND GRANTS.

1. Location. The facts considered and determined involving the entry of certain public land in Texas. Houston and Texas Central R. R. Co. v. McGehee, 49 Tex., 491, 1878; Keyes v. Houston and Great Northern R. R. Co., 50 ib., 169, 1878; Snider v. International and Great Northern R. R. Co., 53 ib., 306. 1879.

2. Patents; lines. Patents, by the general government, of public lands bordering on streams, are not limited by the meander lines. St. Paul, Stillwater and Taylor's Falls R. R. Co. v. St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co., 26 Minn., 31. 1879.

3. Right of way. The grant which the act of July 23, 1866, ch. 213 (14 Stat., 210), makes to the St. Joseph and Denver City R. R. Co., "to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said road where it may pass through the public domain," is absolute and in presenti, and a party subsequently acquiring a parcel of such lands takes it subject to that right. Railroad Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S., 426, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 510.

4. Right of way; Grand Canon of the Arkansas. An act entitled "An act granting the right of way through the public lands to the Denver and Rio Grande Ry Co.,” approved June 8, 1872 (17 Stat., 339); an act amendatory thereto, approved March 3, 1877 (19 Stat., 405); and an act entitled “An act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States,” approved March 3, 1875 (18 Stat., 483), considered with reference to the conflicting claims of the Denver and Rio Grande R. R. Co. and the Cañon City and San Juan R’y Co., to occupy and use the Grand or Big Cañon of the Arkansas for railroad purposes. Held, that said act of 1872 granted an immediate beneficial easement in a particular way over which the routes designated in the charter of the Denver Company lay, capable, however, of enjoyment only when such way should actually and in good faith be appropriated for the purposes contemplated by that charter, and then the title thereto would take effect by relation as of the date of the act. Railway Co. v. Alling, 99 U. S., 463. 1878.

5. — Held, that both companies should be allowed to proceed with the construction of their respective roads through said cañon where it is broad enough for them to do so without interfering with each other; but where, in the narrow portions of the defile, this is impracticable, the court below, while recognizing and enforcing the prior title of the Denver Company, should, by proper orders, secure upon just and equitable terms the right of the Cañon City Company, under the act of 1875, to use, in common with the Denver Company, the same road-bed and track, after the same shall have been completed. Ib.

PROHIBITION.

1. Removal of causes. When the removal of a cause into the federal court is sought, and is improperly refused by the state court in which the cause is pending, the party has an adequate remedy under the act of congress of March 3, 1875, and is not entitled to a writ of prohibition or other extraordinary writ from this court. Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co., Ex parte, 63 Ala., 349. 1879.

2. Writ of. A writ of prohibition lies, not for the correction of errors in the exercise of a rightful jurisdiction by a court, but to prevent usurpation, or the exercise of powers beyond and outside of its lawful jurisdiction; and it is only awarded when there is no other appropriate and adequate remedy. Ib.

QUO WARRANTO.

See ASSIGNMENT FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS; CHARTER; MANDAMUS.

1. Corporation office. The office of engineer of the Western North Carolina R. R. Co. is not a public office, and the right to perform its duties cannot be tested by quo warranto proceedings. Eliason v. Coleman, 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (N. C.), 433. 1881.

2. Dissolution of corporation; debts. In case of dissolution by quo warranto the personal property of a corporation will not go to the state, and the real property revert to the original owners, leaving the creditors of the corporation without a remedy; but the mode of procedure will be the same as in the case of a voluntary dissolution of a corporation, and as provided in §§ 8 and 9, ch. 78, R. S. State v. West Wisconsin R’y Co., 34 Wis., 197, 1874; 6 Amer. R’y Rep., 212.

3. Injunction. The pendency of a proceeding by a prosecuting attorney, in the nature of a quo warranto, against a railway company, to procure the forfeiture of its franchises on the ground that it has been organized to do an illegal act, cannot affect or delay the decision in a prior proceeding to enjoin such company from further prosecuting the purpose for which it has been organized. Aurora and Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. City of Lawrenceburgh, 56 Ind., 80, 1877; 18 Amer. R’y Rep., 136.

4. Jury trial. An action in the nature of a quo warranto, brought by the attorney-general in the name of the people of the state, under the provisions of the Code (§§ 432, 440), to try the title to a corporate office to which there are several claimants, is one of legal, not equitable, cognizance, and the issues therein are strictly legal ones. People v. Albany and Susquehanna R. R. Co., 57 N. Y., 161, 1874; 6 Amer. R’y Rep., 73.

5. — The trial of such issues, therefore, by a jury, is the constitutional right of the parties. Ib.

Average Rates — Charter.

6. Legality of corporation. The legality of a corporation, which exists under the form of law, can only be impugned by an application for a writ of quo warranto or by an information in the nature thereof, instituted by the attorney-general. West Jersey R. R. Co. v. Cape May and Schellenger's Landing R. R. Co., 34 N. J. Eq., 164. 1881.

7. Practice. An information in the nature of a quo warranto should be filed and entered at the law term. State v. Portland and Ogdensburgh R. R. Co., 58 N. H., 118. 1877.

8. — The granting of leave to file an information in the nature of a quo warranto is a matter of sound discretion in the court or judge. People ex rel. v. North Chicago R'y Co., 83 Ill., 537, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 359.

9. — Practice on filing informations in the nature of a writ of quo warranto stated. When the attorney-general files such an information ex officio, no leave of the court is requisite. Attorney-General v. Delaware and Bound Brook R. R. Co., 38 N. J. Law, 282. 1876.

10. — Such informations are not prohibited by paragraph 9, art. I, of the constitution of New Jersey. Ib.

11. — It is a general rule that when the statute provides a remedy to test the right to exercise a franchise or office, it is exclusive of all other remedies. An action for the usurpation of an office or franchise is a civil action under the Code of this state, and must be governed by the rules applicable thereto; must be instituted by filing a complaint and issuing a summons, and proceeded with the same as any other action. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. The People, 5 Colo., 60, 1879; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 542.

12. Street railway. Where leave was asked to file an information against a horse railway company, requiring it to show its right to extend the line of its road, and to use steam power over a part of the same, and it did not appear that the relator was either specially, as an individual, or in common with all other citizens of the town, injured by the construction and operation of the road, and it was shown by affidavit that the relator acquired his land, abutting upon the road, long after its construction, and that it was almost the universal desire of the people of the town, and those traveling over the road, that it be operated by steam, and the facts disclosed seemed to show the application was not asked for the public good, but rather for selfish purposes, it was held that leave was properly refused. People ex rel. v. North Chicago R'y Co., 83 Ill., 537, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 359.

RATES.

SEE CARRIAGE OF MERCHANDISE; CARRIAGE OF LIVE STOCK; CONNECTING LINES; DISCRIMINATION; INTERJUNCTION; PENALTY; REGULATION OF RAILWAYS.

1. Average rates. "Average charges" are charges at a mean rate, ascertained by dividing the entire receipts by the whole quantity of tonnage, reduced to a common standard of tons moved one mile. Hersh v. Northern Central R'y Co., 74 Pa. St., 121, 1878; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 531.

2. — By a statute it was provided that "rates for toll and transportation may be regulated in such manner as the company may deem most advisable, provided that the maximum charges for toll and transportation shall not exceed four cents per ton per mile for freight." A subsequent act amended the proviso so as to read "average charges for toll and transportation." Held, that the company might impose more than four cents per mile on some charges, so that by making others less, the general average should not exceed four cents. Ib.

3. Charter. Clauses in acts empowering companies to levy a charge upon the public, as in railway acts, for example, must, where the meaning is doubtful, be construed favorably for the public. Stockton and Darlington R'y Co. v. Barrett, 11 Clark & Finnelly (House of Lords), 590. 1844.

4. — A railway act imposing tolls and duties upon the company is to be construed against the company and in favor of the public. Stockton R'y Co. v. Barrett, 7 Manning & Granger, 870; 49 E. C. L., 860, 1844; Barrett v. Stockton R'y Co., 2 Manning & Granger, 134; 40 E. C. L., 528, 1840.

construed. Baltimore and Yorktown Turnpike Co. v. Boone, 45 Md., 344. 1876.

6. — Where a railroad corporation sets up as a defense that its charter was a grant by the state, giving to the railroad company, without any qualification, the right to prescribe upon what terms and at what rates freight should be transported on the road, and that this grant was protected by the constitution of the United States, and that a subsequent statute of the state upon the subject impairs the validity of such grant in violation of the constitution, such defense involves a question arising under the constitution of the United States, and the case is removable from a state court under § 2 of the act of 1875. State v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 16 Federal Reporter, 706, 1883. See, also, People ex rel. v. Ill. Central R. R. Co., ib., 881. 1883.

7. Classification. An action against a common carrier for the conversion of a part of goods shipped as first-class freight, but which were proved to be double first-class, and defendant is entitled to receive double rates and to be credited therefor. Rice v. Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Co., 3 Mo. App., 27. 1876.

8. Competing points. The Railway and Canal Traffic Act does not prevent railway companies from having special rates of charge to a terminus to which traffic can be carried by other modes of carriage with which theirs is in competition. Foreman v. Great Eastern R'y Co., 2 Neville & McNamara, 202. 1875.

9. Connecting lines. A sending company having two alternative routes for through traffic, one eight miles longer than the other, proposed, for the purpose of a through rate, to carry by the longer one at a double cost and labor in working and maintaining the junctions, with the object of making its own mileage more and the mileage of the forwarding company less; held, that such longer route was not a reasonable route within the meaning of § 11 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873. East and West Junction R'y Co. v. Great Western R'y Co., 1 Neville & McNamara, 331. 1874.

10. — Iron ore was sent from B. to South Wales by alternate routes, one of which was by the N. W. Railway to Southwick, and the other by the E. Railway to Stratford, the continuation in each case being by the G. W. Railway. The G. W. Company refused to agree to a lower through rate between B. and South Wales by the Stafford route than that charged by the Southwick route, although the distance by the former was twenty miles shorter; the G. W. mileage being practically equal in both cases. Upon an application to the commissioners by the company to allow the proposed through rates, which gave the G. W. Company about $\frac{1}{4}$ d. per ton per mile, held, that the apprehension of the G. W. Company that a reduction of the rates by the shorter route would entail a similar reduction of the rates by the longer route, and so render the traffic carried by the latter unprofitable, did not justify it in raising the rates by the shorter route above their natural and proper level; and, as the G. W. Company carried the like traffic under similar circumstances for about $\frac{1}{4}$ d. per ton per mile, the court allowed the rates proposed by the E. Company, on condition that the latter company should maintain a traffic by its route averaging five hundred tons a week. East and West Junction R'y Co. v. Great Western R'y Co., 2 Neville & McNamara, 147. 1875.

11. — It appeared that the S. D. Co., in conveying goods from the B. R'y to a line leading from its own railway, were compelled, though not having any siding or other accommodation at the junction, to convey goods three miles beyond the junction, to a station on its line, and then to send them back to the junction by another train, and it claimed in such cases to credit itself with the mileage one way, namely, the three miles, in estimating the mileage proportion between the two companies; held, that it was entitled to do so. Buckfastleigh, Totnes and South Devon R'y Co. v. South Devon R'y Co., 1 Neville & McNamara, 321. 1874.

12. — An announcement of a rate over a connecting line, made by the general freight agent of the first line, will not bind the connecting line. Hill v. Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern R'y Co., 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ia.), 21. 1882.

13. — Under the provisions of ch. 278, Laws of 1874 (generally known as the "Potter Act"), where timber was shipped at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, by the C. and N. W. R'y Co., consigned to Oconomowoc via Watertown Junction, where the road of said company intersects that of the C., M. and St. P. R'y Co., running thence to Oconomowoc (said C. and N. W. Co. having no road between the last named place and said junction), the highest price which the owner could be compelled to pay for the delivery of it at Oconomowoc (there being no reshipment at Watertown Junction, but the same cars running through from Oshkosh to the place of consignment) was $15 per car-load, although the C. and N. W. Co. would have been entitled to charge the same price for conveying it to Watertown Junction, if it had been consigned to that place. Ackley v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 36 Wis., 252, 1874; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 112.

14. — Where goods are shipped by one railway company in Wisconsin for delivery at some point on the line of a connecting road of another company, and charges at the rates allowed by law for the whole distance are collected by one of the companies, the sum should be divided between the two companies upon some equitable principle, to be determined by the courts in case the companies invoke their aid for that purpose. Ib.

15. Constitutional law. The act of May 2, 1873, to prevent extortion and unjust discrimination in railroads, is a constitutional enactment, and is not in violation of the contract between the state and railroad companies growing out of the granting and accepting their charters containing power to establish such rates of toll for the conveyance of persons and property as they shall, from time to time, direct and determine in the by-laws. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. The People, 95 Ill., 313, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 183.

16. — The act of 1871, ch. 34, entitled "An act to regulate the carrying of freight and passengers on all railroads in this state," and fixing a maximum rate of toll for such carriage, is not unconstitutional. Blake v. Winona and St. Peter R. R. Co., 19 Minn., 418, 1872.

17. — The constitution of 1876, in regard to the carriage of freight by railway companies, left in force the common law rules affecting common carriers, as applicable to such companies, until the act of 1879, which was passed in obedience to art. X, § 2, of that constitution. Houston and Texas Central R. R. Co. v. Rust, 58 Tex., 98, 1883; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 123.

18. — The repeal of the act under which the aid and credit of the state were extended to railroads, upon conditions therein recited, does not have the effect to release them from the restraints imposed by a. 15 of that act as to tolls and charges; nor to release the Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co., to whose rights the appellants succeeded, from the restrictions imposed by a. 8 of the special act under which the Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co. obtained state aid. Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co. v. Steiner, 61 Ala., 359, 1878.

19. — The provision in a railway charter that the company shall fix rates of toll, etc., held not to prevent the regulation of rates by the state. Ruggles v. Illinois, 103 U. S., 526, 1883; Illinois Central R'y Co. v. People, ib., 541, 1883.

20. Contract. A letter from the agent of a railway company to certain shippers contained the following statement of rates: "The rate on iron, from Rising Fawn to Chattanooga, shall be $6 to Chattanooga, and $5 to any point on or beyond the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad, per car-load of two thousand two hundred and sixty-eight pounds." Held, that the reasonable construction of this contract was that the rate should be $6 per car-load when shipped from Rising Fawn only to Chattanooga, and $5 when shipped to any point beyond Chattanooga. The low rate did not apply to iron shipped at Chattanooga. Alabama Great Southern R. R. Co. v. Cureton, 68 Ga., 824, 1892.

21. — A board of directors of a railway company may make lawful contracts for rates of carriage of freights during a fixture future time. C. and M. R. R. Co. v. Himrod Furnace Co., 37 Ohio St., 424; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 471, 1881.

22. — Carriers can change their rates of freight so as to operate upon future contracts, but they cannot increase them so as to affect existing contracts. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. Roberts, 71 Ill., 540, 1874.

Cross Railways — Discrimination.

23. — Where a shipper applies to the local freight agent of a railroad company to get the rates of freight upon a proposed shipment of a certain amount of grain to a given point, and the agent, acting by authority, gives him the rate, and he agrees to ship at that rate, and then goes to the master of trains of the company, and makes an arrangement with him for the requisite number of cars per week, for the purpose of making such shipment, this amounts to a special contract on the part of the company to make the shipment at the rates named by the freight agent, and to furnish the cars in the manner agreed upon by the shipper and master of trains. Ib.

24. — A firm of loggers agreed to build a tram railway and contracted with the company controlling it to carry their lumber at certain rates. The corporation afterward assigned, and its assets went into the hands of one of the parties with whom the agreement to build was made, and through him became the property of a railway company in which he was a principal stockholder. This company refused to fulfil the agreement for carriage, and the loggers sued out a preliminary injunction restraining it from running over so much of the road as they had built except on condition of carrying their lumber at the rates agreed on. Held, that the contract was no more than an ordinary executory contract, was not enforceable in equity, and gave complainants no more control than other contractors over the road-bed; that the preliminary injunction was a final order and void, and that mandamus would lie to set it aside. Tawas and Bay County R. R. Co. v. Iosco Circuit Judge, 44 Mich., 479, 1890; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 534.

25. Cross railways. It is not an illegal discrimination to charge a higher rate per mile upon a cross-line than is charged upon the main line of a railway. Finnie v. Glasgow and South Western Ry Co., 2 McQueen, House of Lords, Scotch App., 177, 1853; 3 ib., 75, 1857; Same v. Same, 1 Patterson, 520, 1855.

26. Discrimination. The plaintiff was a brewer at B., where the defendant, a railway company, and the M. Company, another railway company, had stations.

Three firms of brewers also carried on business at B., and their premises respectively were connected with the M. Railway. The plaintiffs were not connected with either the M. Railway or the defendant's railway. In order to prevent the traffic of the three firms from passing wholly over the M. Railway and to divert some portion of it to its own line, the defendant agreed to cart goods gratuitously between its station at B. and the premises of the three firms respectively, and it also allowed certain deductions from the rates charged to the three firms for the carriage of their goods, the effect of which was that their goods were loaded and unloaded by the defendant gratuitously. The defendant did not cart gratuitously for the plaintiff between his premises and the station, and it did not allow to him deductions similar to those allowed to the three firms. After carting the goods for the three firms gratuitously and allowing them the deductions before mentioned, the defendant derived a profit from the traffic, and it had not any intention to prejudice the plaintiff. Held, affirming the judgment of the queen's bench division, that the gratuitous carting, loading and unloading of the goods for the three firms was an inequality in favor of them and an undue preference granted to them by the defendant, and was in contravention of 8 and 9 Vict., c. 20, s. 90, and 17 and 18 Vict., c. 81, s. 2, and that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action to recover the amounts paid by him to the defendant, which represented the cost of carting his goods between his premises and the station at B., and of loading and unloading the same. Evershed v. London and North Western Ry Co., Law Reports, 3 Queen's Bench Division, 134, 1877; Same v. Same, 2 ib., 254, 1877; 20 Eng. (Moak), 828; London and North Western Ry Co. v. Evershed, Law Reports, 3 Appeal Cases, 1029, 1878; 24 Eng. (Moak), 625.

27. — The act incorporating a railway company authorized the company to levy only such tolls as might be fixed by a by-law of the company, to be sanctioned by the governor, and that the same tolls should be charged at all times equally to all persons. The company, from the circumstance that a firm agreed to furnish certain quantities of lumber for transportation, contracted to give the firm a reduced rate, but no by-law to this effect was passed by the company. Held, that the contract was illegal. Attorney-General v. Ontario, etc., R. R. Co., 6 Grant Ch. (Upper Canada), 446. 1858.

28. — By statute the railroad companies of this state are given the exclusive privilege to carry freight and passengers over their respective roads, "provided that the charge for transportation or conveyance shall not exceed thirty-five cents per one hundred pounds on heavy articles, and ten cents per cubic foot on articles of measurement, for every hundred miles, and five cents a mile for every passenger." Held, that the intention of the legislature was to confer upon each company the right to charge, as a common carrier, for freight and passengers carried over its road, or any part of it; that the intent was not to proportion the charges by any unit of distance, but to fix a maximum beyond which the company could not go, and to leave the tariff of charges, within that limit, to the company, subject to the rule of the common law that the charges should be reasonable, and to the regulating power of the courts and the legislature. Ragan v. Aiken, 9 Lea (Tenn.), 609, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 201.

29. — A common carrier is bound to carry at equal rates for all customers in like condition, but may discriminate in rates of freight between customers not in like condition, if the discrimination be fair and reasonable, and not inconsistent with the public interest. Ib.

30. — A common carrier may discriminate in favor of persons living at a distance from the end of the route, where the object is to secure freight which would otherwise reach its destination by a different route, and other customers not in like condition will have no right of action because of the discrimination, if the charges made against them are reasonable. Ib.

31. — Railway companies, independent of the act of 1879, and before its enactment, were, in the carriage of freight, subject to the following rules: They were held to the strictest impartiality in the conduct of their business, in withholding all privileges or preferences from one customer which were not extended to all others. But the above rule is subject to the qualification, that where a rate of freight is reasonable for all customers, contracts for a less rate might be made in special cases, when, under all the circumstances, the discrimination is reasonable and just. The discrimination must not subject others to unreasonable disadvantages, nor must it be made in order to give one individual a preference to the disadvantage of another; or, one to give preference and advantage to one locality to the prejudice of another locality. A mere discrimination in favor of a customer was not unlawful unless it was an unjust discrimination. Houston and Texas Central R'y Co. v. Rust, 53 Tex., 98, 1892; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 123.

32. Equality. The Allegheny Valley Railroad crosses the Pennsylvania Railroad at Allegheny Junction. To compete more successfully with the river transportation, the Allegheny Valley R. R. Co. carried crude oil to the refineries at Pittsburgh, and the manufactured product back to Allegheny Junction, at a uniform rate, thus giving to the refiner at Pittsburgh as favorable terms as if located at Allegheny Junction, and thereby securing a uniform rate on oil from the oil regions to the sea-board. Held, that to deny the right to make such an arrangement would be an unwarranted interference with the management of the business of the railway and deprive the public of the benefit of the competition to which it is justly entitled. Munhall v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co. 92 Pa. St., 150, 1879; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 337.

33. — Railway companies have an undoubted right to enter into a just and fair arrangement with a corporation or association whereby their business will be increased, although the effect of the arrangement may be to take business from others. With a view of increasing their business they may extend more favorable terms to all shippers, although others engaged in the same business may be incidentally injured thereby. The fact that the public patronize those lines of transportation which give the most favorable terms constitutes no ground of complaint. Ib.

34. Leased lines. A railway company in whose act there was an equal-rates clause, subsequent trip the company's employees refused to accept this ticket as money. In this case there was no allegation that the ticket was not good for the sum named, or that its requirements were unreasonable. Sullivan v. New York, New Haven and Hartford R. R. Co., 19 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 388. 1881.

42. — payment on train. A railway company has the legal right to discriminate between the amounts of fare where a ticket is purchased and where the fare is paid upon the train, and to demand and receive a higher fare in the latter case than the ticket rate; and, when a passenger refuses to pay the fare demanded, the conductor of a train has the right to put such passenger off his train at any time and at any place on the line of the road, without reference to stations and without actual danger to his life or person. When he refuses to pay his fare, the passenger becomes an intruder and trespasser, and he has only the rights of a trespasser. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. Wright, 68 Ind., 536. 1879.

43. — Railway companies may discriminate between the amount of fare where a ticket is purchased and where the fare is paid upon the train. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co. v. Rinard, 46 Ind., 293, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 328; Louisville, Nashville and Great Southern R. R. Co. v. Guinan 11 Lea (Tenn.), 93, 1883.

44. — refusal to sell ticket. A person having duly applied for a ticket, and being refused without just cause, has the same right to be carried upon paying or offering to pay the ticket rate of fare as if he had previously purchased a ticket. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co. v. Rinard, 46 Ind., 293, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 328.

45. — season tickets. A., who was a student over twenty years of age, paid to a railway company the regular price of a season ticket entitling him to transportation over its road, between two stations, for three months. The directors of the company had authorized its president, upon special application, and in his discretion, to allow season tickets to be sold to students over twenty years of age, for the same term, between the same stations, for one-half the price A. paid, and such tickets had been sold. Held, in an action by A. to recover of the corporation one-half of the amount paid by him, that there was no violation of the St. of 1874, ch. 872, § 183, and that the action could not be maintained. Spofford v. Boston and Maine R. R. Co., 128 Mass., 326. 1880.

46. Purchased lines. Where the railroad of one company is purchased by another company, in pursuance of a statute authorizing the purchase, in the absence of any provision of law to the contrary, the road passes to the vendee subject to the same limitations as to rates chargeable for transportation as attached to it in the hands of the vendor. Campbell v. Marietta and Cincinnati R. R. Co., 23 Ohio St., 163, 1872; Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co. v. Steiner, 61 Ala., 559, 1878. See, also, State ex rel. v. Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co., 59 ib., 321. 1877.

47. Railway operated by an individual. The bill alleged that a particular railroad, with all its property, effects and franchises, was sold under proceedings by the state against delinquent railroads, and subsequently resold by the purchaser to an individual named, and by him to the defendant, who had continued to operate the road under the charter of the original corporation, and had charged and received from the complainants excessive freight. Held, upon demurrer, that the defendant was not the corporation, and that the bill was properly filed against him as an individual. Ragan v. Aiken, 9 Lea (Tenn.), 609. 1882.

48. Reasonableness. Reasonableness does not depend upon the profit of the company, but upon what is reasonable to be charged to the person making the payment. Canada Southern R'y Co. v. International Bridge Co., Law Reports, 8 Appeal Cases, 723. 1883.

49. — Where a railway company is authorized to charge for transportation of property "not exceeding five cents per ton per mile, when the same is transported a distance of thirty miles or more, and in case the same is transported for a less distance than thirty miles, such reasonable rate as may be from time to time fixed by the company," it is unreasonable, as a matter of law, that the company should fix a greater rate for a less distance than thirty miles than the maximum allowed for full thirty miles. Camp-

in favor of the latter that the freight was delivered in good order. But, as between the parties, they are not conclusive on the question. Where it appears that the carrier demanded that the receipts should be put in that form, as a condition to the delivery of the goods, and that the receipts were signed under a protest that the goods were not in good order; it is a fair question of fact for the jury, on the evidence, and cannot be disposed of in favor of the carrier, as a question of law. Monell v. Northern Central R. R. Co., 67 Barbour (N. Y.), 531, 1877; Tierney v. N. Y. Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., ib., 538, 1877.

2. — Where the parties to a contract met, at night, and one of them handed the other, through a car window, a receipt, and requested him to sign it, which he did, and thereupon the one taking the receipt handed the one signing it a package of money containing a certain amount, and told him that was all he could pay, to which the one receiving the money replied that he was not satisfied with the amount and would bring suit the next day, it was held that there was no such final settlement made as would bar all further investigation into the state of the accounts between the parties. Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Rose, 72 Ill., 183, 1874.

See APPEALS; CARRIAGE OF MERCHANDISE; FRAUD; HIGHWAYS; INJURIES TO DOMESTIC ANIMALS; INJURIES TO PASSENGERS; MORTGAGE; STOCK.

1. Action by. A complaint by a receiver, appointed in a proceeding supplementary to execution, must allege that the court appointing him authorized him to sue in his own name in matters concerning his receivership. Garver v. Kent, 70 Ind., 428, 1890.

2. — Unless the law of the state, or the order appointing him, authorizes a receiver to sue in his own name, he can sue only in the name of the person in whom the right of action existed before his appointment. Ib.

3. Action against corporation. Notwithstanding the property and franchises of a railroad company may be in the hands of a receiver appointed by the court, it is discretionary in the court to permit a suit to be brought against the company and prosecuted to final judgment, for the purpose of fixing the rights of the parties. Wyatt v. Ohio and Mississippi R. R. Co., 10 Bradwell (Ill.), 289, 1881.

4. — The defendant, a railway company, cannot plead either in bar or abatement that the company was in the hands of a receiver, and that the action was brought without leave of the court in which such receiver was appointed, though by bringing such suit without leave the plaintiff may have been guilty of a contempt. Ohio and Mississippi R'y Co. v. Nickless, 71 Ind., 271, 1880.

5. Actions against receiver. It is not essential to the jurisdiction of a court of law in an action for damages against a defendant corporation which is in the hands of a receiver, or against the receiver, that leave to prosecute should first be obtained of the court appointing the receiver. Allen v. Central R. R. Co. of Ia., 42 Ia., 683, 1876; Wyatt v. Ohio and Mississippi R. R. Co., 10 Bradwell (Ill.), 289, 1881; St. Joseph and Denver R. R. Co. v. Smith, 19 Kans., 225, 1877. Contra, Thompson v. Scott, 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 508, 1876; Barton v. Barbour, 104 U. S., 126, 1881.

6. — The rule that a receiver cannot be sued without leave of the court of equity which appointed him applies to suits against him on a money demand or for damages, as well as to those the object of which is to recover property which he holds by order of that court. The fact that, by such order, he is in possession of a railroad, and engaged in the business of a common carrier thereon, does not so take his case out of the rule as that an action will lie against him for an injury caused by his negligence or that of his servants in conducting that business. If the adjustment of a demand against him involves disputed facts, that court may, in a proper case, either of its own motion or on the prayer of the parties injured, allow him to be sued in a court of law, or direct the trial of a feigned issue to settle the facts. Barton v. Barbour, 104 U. S., 126, 1881; Kennedy v. I., C. and L. R. Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 97; 2 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 704, 1880.

7. — A receiver cannot be sued for the assets placed in his hands, or be disturbed in the possession or management thereof, without first obtaining leave of the appointing court. De Groffenried v. Brunswick and Albany R. R. Co., 57 Ga., 22. 1876.

8. — A court of equity has no jurisdiction of a suit involving a question of unliquidated damages arising from a tort. It will not entertain a bill filed to recover damages for the death of a person through negligence of a railroad company, although the road, at the time of the injury, was in the hands of a receiver and under his entire control, and he has conveyed the road to purchasers, subject to all liabilities incurred by the receiver in operating the road. Brown v. Wabash R'y Co., 96 Ill., 297. 1880.

9. — A person having a legal cause of action sounding merely in tort against a receiver appointed by the court of chancery has a right to pursue his redress by an action at law. Such action cannot be brought without the permission of the chancellor, but such permission cannot be refused unless the claim preferred be manifestly unfounded and vexatious. The power of the chancellor in this respect considered. Palys v. Jewett, Receiver, 32 N. J. Eq., 802. 1880.

10. — As the right of the chancellor to sanction the bringing of the action conferred a scintilla of jurisdiction over the case, and the parties proceeded to try the cause before the vice-chancellor, held, that the court of appeals could lawfully exercise its jurisdiction by way of review, and, the decree being reversed, the complainant's damages were ascertained and adjudged to him on this appeal. Ib.

11. — The defendant railroad company was in possession and management of receivers appointed by the court of chancery. The petitions to recover for the injuries were properly brought to that court. Merrill v. Central Vt. R. R. Co., 54 Vt., 200. 1881. Contra, Wabash R'y Co. v. Brown, 5 Bradwell (Ill.), 590. 1879.

12. — The courts of Vermont have the right to restrain parties within their jurisdiction from prosecuting suits in foreign courts. Vermont and Canada R. R. Co. v. Vt. Central R. R. Co., 46 Vt., 792. 1878.

13. — If a receiver appointed by one court is in possession of property he is not amenable to suit in another court in respect thereto; and if the property has passed beyond his control, he would not in any event be a necessary party in a proceeding to adjudge a lien on such property still subsisting, notwithstanding the proceedings in the court wherein he was appointed receiver. Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co., 13 Federal Reporter, 857. 1882.

14. — A county treasurer filed his petition in the district court against a railroad company, and the receiver of said company appointed by the circuit court of the United States, to recover the taxes levied upon said company for the year 1874. The petition alleged the appointment of the receiver and his possession and control of the road. Without, so far as the record discloses, the issue or service of any process, the company and receiver filed a joint answer, in which they admit that a portion of the taxes are properly chargeable against the company, and consent that judgment may be rendered against them in the action for that amount, and also allege the appointment of the receiver by the United States circuit court, that he is not amenable to the process of the district court, and pray that as to him the suit may be dismissed. Held, that the district court had jurisdiction, and properly rendered judgment against the receiver. St. Joseph and Denver R. R. Co. v. Smith, 19 Kans., 225. 1877.

15. Abatement of former suits. The appointment of a receiver furnishes no ground for the continuance of a suit regularly brought against the corporation prior to such appointment. Putting the property into the hands of a receiver will not abate, continue or bar such pending action. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. Beggs, 85 Ill., 80. 1877.

16. Accounting. Order of court construed, requiring the receivers of a railroad to account before a master. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of Iowa, 2 Federal Reporter, 751; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 352. 1880.

17. Advancements by officers of corporation. A director of an insolvent railroad company is entitled to reimbursement out of the funds in the hands of a receiver, for advances made by him to save the property against an unquestionable lien. To the amount of such advances, his claim is paramount to that of mortgagees whose incumbrances are subordinate to the lien. Coe v. New Jersey Midland R'y Co., 27 N. J. Eq., 110. 1876.

18. — The right of subrogation cannot be enforced until the whole debt is paid. And until the creditor be wholly satisfied, there ought and can be no interference with his rights or his securities, which might, even by bare possibility, prejudice or embarrass him in any way in the collection of the residue of his claim. Receivers New Jersey Midland R'y Co. v. Wortendyke, 27 N. J. Eq., 658. 1876.

19. Appeal. Where, in the progress of a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage, a receiver was appointed, against whom, after the foreclosure and sale of the mortgaged premises, a decree was rendered directing him to pay into court $18,776.25, the balance found due from him on the settlement of his accounts, held, that he had the right to appeal from that decree. Hinckley v. Gilman, Clinton and Springfield R. R. Co., 94 U. S., 437, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 217.

20. Appointment. The ex parte appointment of a receiver, and the ex parte granting of an interlocutory injunction to deprive the directors of control, are more than irregular, and are absolutely void, as beyond the power of the court. People ex rel. v. Judge of St. Clair Circuit, 31 Mich., 456. 1875. See, also, Cook v. Detroit and Milwaukee R. R. Co., 45 Mich., 453. 1881.

21. — A judge of a state circuit court in Illinois cannot, in vacation, appoint a receiver of a railroad corporation. The possession of a receiver so appointed is not that of the court. Hammock v. Loan and Trust Co., 105 U. S., 77, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 465.

22. — A receiver should not be appointed, unless in case of great urgency, without notice. The appointment of a manager of a railway is an extraordinary exercise of power, and such appointment should not be made except in extreme cases clearly justifying such action. State v. Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile R. R. Co. 15 Fla.,

201, 1875; Railway Co. v. Jewett, 37 Ohio St., 649, 1882; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 702.

23. — Where a suit in equity was properly instituted against a railroad company by a stockholder, a bondholder and the trustees for the bondholders named in the land grant mortgages of the company, in behalf of themselves as well as all other stockholders, creditors or bondholders who might desire and be entitled to intervene, and the bill charged that the officers, agents and directors of the company were squandering and embezzling its property, and the purpose of the suit was that the assets of the company might be preserved and administered, and the relief prayed was proper to be granted, and a decree pro confesso had been regularly entered, a receiver properly appointed, an authentic report of the facts made to the court and its judgment passed thereon, individual stockholders were not permitted to intervene in the suit as defendants and file a cross-bill on a general charge of fraud and collusion on the part of the receiver and erroneous judgment on the part of the court in making the order referred to. Forbes v. Memphis, El Paso and Pacific R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 323. 1872.

24. — A court of equity cannot take from the directors of a corporation or vest in a receiver the management and control of the corporate business, except under proceedings under the statutes (Comp. L. 1871, ch. 203, 207) to dissolve the corporation. People ex rel. v. Judge of St. Clair Circuit, 31 Mich., 456, 1875; Cook v. Detroit and Milwaukee R. R. Co., 45 Mich., 453, 1881.

25. — A court of equity will not appoint a receiver of a railroad merely upon a showing that there has been a default in the payment of interest, secured by a mortgage of the properties and income of the company; that upon such default the trustees under the mortgage were entitled to immediate possession; that they have demanded possession, and that the same has been refused. It is necessary, in addition to this, to show that ultimate loss will happen to the beneficiaries under the mortgage by permitting the property to remain in the hands of its owners until final decree and sale, if such decree and sale be made. Union Trust Co. v. St.

Attached Property.

Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R. R. Co., 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 114. 1877.

25. — Without deciding whether a case may not arise in which it would appoint a receiver pending an appeal here, the court declines to do so upon the showing made in this case. Pacific R. R. of Missouri v. Ketchum, 95 U. S., 1. 1877.

27. — Proceedings in relation to the appointment and removal of receivers are special proceedings under § 512 of the Code, and an order affecting a substantial right made in such proceeding is a final order, within the meaning of such section, and is appealable. Cincinnati, Sandusky and Cleveland R. R. Co. v. Sloan, 31 Ohio St., 1, 1876; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 376.

28. — A court of equity will not conduct the business of a corporation through a receiver unless the interests of creditors unmistakably require it; and when a railway company, by collusion with a creditor who prays for the appointment of a receiver, allows its property to go into a receiver's hands, not for the purpose of meeting its obligation to the petitioning creditor, but for the purpose of keeping its property from other creditors, the court which appointed the receiver will, upon information of the facts, discharge him of its own motion. Sage v. Memphis and L. R. R. Co., 18 Federal Reporter, 571. 1833.

29. — The office of receiver should not be conferred upon a party to the cause. Young v. Rollins, 85 N. C., 435. 1881.

30. — Where a receiver has been appointed by the courts of another state, the courts of Pennsylvania, on the ground of the comity existing between the states, will recognize his appointment, provided his claims thereunder do not come into conflict with the rights of citizens of Pennsylvania. Bagby v. Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio R. R. Co., 86 Pa. St., 291. 1878.

31. — Where a receiver of a corporation has been properly appointed in another state, a creditor who resides in that state and is bound by the decree of its court appointing the receiver, cannot, in an attachment execution, recover assets of the corporation in Pennsylvania, which the receiver claims. Ib.

32. — The record of the appointment of a receiver is conclusive evidence of such appointment until it is set aside. Vermont and Canada R. R. Co. v. Vt. Central R. R. Co., 46 Vt., 792. 1878. See, also, Allen v. Central R. R. Co. of Ia., 42 Ia., 683. 1876.

33. — Where an order appointing a receiver is rescinded "without prejudice to any party or claimant," and a possessory warrant has been sued out against the receiver, he must respect the same. Should he deliver the property to the company from which he received it, he does so at his own risk. Peacock v. Pittsburgh Car Works, 52 Ga., 417, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 147.

34. — Where the appointment of a receiver has been properly vacated by the order of a judge at chambers, the validity of such order does not depend on the mere discretion of the court or judge making the appointment. And where the court, without any new showing or change of circumstances calling for judicial action, directs the order to be set aside as a nullity, it assumes authority not warranted by law. Cincinnati, Sandusky and Cleveland R. R. Co. v. Sloan, 31 Ohio St., 1, 1876; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 376.

35. Attached property. Where attachments have been levied on the property of a foreign corporation in this state, and afterwards a receiver is appointed for the corporation in its own state, before he can plead to or defend the attachment suits, he must apply to the courts where they are pending and be made a party. South Carolina R. R. Co. v. People's Savings Institution, 64 Ga., 18. 1879.

36. — Where, after the levy of attachments on the property of a foreign corporation in this state, a receiver is appointed in its own state, and takes possession of all the property, including that levied on, subject to the disposition of the attachments, it is not a proper mode of disposing of them for the receiver to petition the court where they are pending to order the property levied on to be turned over to him. Ib.

37. — The mere pendency of a bill to foreclose a mortgage on a railroad, and for the appointment of a receiver, in the United States circuit court of South Carolina, could not affect the operation of the attachment laws of Georgia, although some of the plaintiffs in attachment were parties defendants before any levy was made, and the others were made so afterwards, the bill not being a general creditors' bill, but a bill to foreclose a mortgage, and no receiver having been appointed prior to the levies. Ib.

38. Attorneys' fees. Where attorneys prosecute a suit for a receiver he may pay them for their services out of the funds realized. But the attorneys cannot intervene in other proceedings and there claim a lien for their compensation. State v. Edgefield and Ky. R. R. Co., 4 Baxter (Tenn.), 92. 1874.

39. — An order appointing a receiver of a railroad company directed him, among other things, to pay debts owing to the laborers and employes "of the company for labor and services actually done in connection with the company's railways." Held, that it included a claim of counsel for professional services rendered by him on employment of the company in litigation relating to the railway, its interests and business. Gurney v. Atlantic and Great Western R'y Co., 58 N. Y., 358, 1874; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 520.

40. — A decree appointing a receiver for a railroad and giving priority to claims for "labor in operation of the road" will be held to include proper compensation for counsel to the receiver for services necessary to the successful management of the road. Bayliss v. Lafayette, Muncie and Bloomington Ry Co., 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 90. 1879.

41. Bankruptcy proceedings. A receiver in possession of mortgaged premises under order of a state court of chancery, in proceedings for foreclosure prior to commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, cannot be dispossessed by order of the district court in the bankruptcy proceedings. Davis v. Railroad Co., 1 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 661. 1878.

42. Bills and notes. After order passed constituting the officers of a railway company, in effect, receivers of the road. the company continued to conduct its business as before, officers were annually elected, and no separate books were opened by them as receivers. During this time a note was given by the company in its corporate name, signed by the president and treasurer as such, in settlement of an account for running expenses. Held, that the existence of the corporation was not interfered with, or its officers displaced, and that the note so given was not made or received with reference to the receiver's fund. Gibbes v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 17 So. Car., 396; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 425. 1881.

43. Bonds purchased by receiver. A referee reported $241,000 of defendant's past-due bonds, secured by the lien of a first mortgage, as still outstanding, to which finding no exceptions were taken, and the report was approved by the circuit court. After the appointment of the receivers, fifty-four of these first mortgage bonds were purchased by the receivers,—some before the report of the referee, and some afterwards, but all before the approval of the report,—and entered upon the books of the company as investments, and not as paid, and for several years reported to the company as still outstanding, and they were then re-issued for value. Held, that these fifty-four bonds had not been paid, and in the hands of their purchasers were secured by the lien of the first mortgage. Gibbes v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 15 So. Car., 304, 1880; Same v. Same, ib., 518, 1880.

44. Certificates. A certificate of indebtedness issued by a receiver, under an order of the court appointing him, to pay debts and expenses incurred by his predecessor, not on account of any indebtedness made by the former receiver or for which the receiver issuing it received any benefit from the payee, or any one else, is not entitled to be paid out of any funds in the hands of the receiver, either at the suit of the payee or holder for value. Turner v. Peoria and Springfield R. R. Co., 95 Ill., 134, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 343.

45. — Certificates of indebtedness issued by a receiver under an order of a court are wanting in nearly every essential quality of negotiable commercial paper, as they are not payable unconditionally out of any fund. Whether they are payable in full, or only pro rata, depends on the fact of the sufficiency of the fund under the control of the court. There is no personal liability on any one for their payment. Only the fund which the court controls is bound, and that only when it is equitable to charge it with the payment of the money evidenced thereby.

Certificates.

Their payment can only be coerced by application to the court having control of the trust property for an order upon its acting officer. Ib.

46. — Except under extraordinary circumstances, the power of the court ought never to be exercised in enabling the trustees, where the railroad is unfinished, to borrow money by means of receiver's certificates which create a paramount lien upon the property, in order to complete the work. Shaw v. Railroad Co., 100 U. S., 605, 1879; Stanton v. Alabama and Chattanooga R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 503, 1875.

47. — A court of equity may authorize the receiver of a railroad to issue certificates of indebtedness and make them a first lien upon the road, for the purpose of raising funds to make necessary repairs and improvements, but it is a power to be sparingly exercised; and when the road cannot be kept running without its exercise, except to a very limited extent, the sound practice is to discharge the receiver or stop running the road and speed the foreclosure. Credit Co. v. Arkansas Central R. R. Co., 15 Federal Reporter, 46, 1892.

48. — It is not a judicial duty to build railroads, and the assent of all the parties interested in the property cannot make it one; and there is no difference in principle between a court building a railroad by the issue of receivers' certificates and making extensive and general repairs and betterments, approximating the original cost of construction by like means. Ib.

49. — An order of court appointing a receiver of a railway company provided that he should "do and perform all the acts and things necessary to be done and performed to construct and complete said line of railroad," and that he should be authorized to borrow such sums of money as were necessary for the further construction, equipment and final completion of the road, and to issue his debentures or certificates therefor, and that such certificates, "whether for money borrowed, material furnished, labor performed, or on account of contracts made by him on account of the construction of the road," should be treated as receiver's indebtedness, and constitute a first lien on the road. Held, that the receiver was not authorized to issue certificates in payment of material until it had been furnished, and having issued his certificates for material contracted to be delivered, but which in fact never was, such certificates were void. Bank of Montreal v. C. C. and W. R. R. Co., 48 Ia., 518, 1878.

50. — Such certificates reciting upon their face that they were issued under the order of court, the holder was chargeable with notice of the order, and in taking them was bound to inquire whether the receiver had power to issue them in payment for material to be delivered at a future time. Ib.

51. — An application by receivers of an insolvent railroad to issue certificates of indebtedness to cover certain expenses, and an order of the court thereon accordingly, does not bind the receivers or the trust fund to pay particular items of such expenses, the propriety of which was not before the court. Coe v. New Jersey Midland R'y Co., 27 N. J. Eq., 37, 1876.

52. — The court should not authorize the issue of receivers' certificates of indebtedness, unless a detailed statement is first made out specifying the items of the sum needed and the purposes to which it is to be applied, supported by clear proof of the correctness thereof, and of the necessity for raising the money, and after proper notice to, and hearing of, the parties interested. Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala., 237, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 451.

53. — negotiability. Obligations in negotiable form issued by a receiver held valid. Langdon v. Vermont and Canada R. R. Co., 53 Vt., 228, 1890; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 83; Humphreys v. Allen, 101 Ill., 490, 1882; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 14; Stanton v. Ala. and Chattanooga R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 506, 1875.

54. — Where a court orders a receiver to issue certificates of indebtedness for a specific purpose, to be made payable to the persons to whom delivered or order, and one is issued to A. B. or bearer, which is negotiated by mere delivery, the holder will take the same subject to all equitable defenses against the payee, and the printed order of the court on its back is notice to him that it was made payable to bearer contrary to the order of the court authorizing the issue.

Change of Line of Railway — Compensation.

Turner v. Peoria and Springfield R. R. Co., 95 Ill., 134, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 348.

55. — A court of chancery has power, after proper notice to and hearing of interested parties, to authorize the issue even of negotiable certificates of indebtedness creating a first lien, displacing other liens to that extent, on the property of a railroad which it is operating through its receiver, whenever it is necessary to raise money for the economical management and conservation of the property. Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala., 237, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 454.

56. — Where a receiver of a railroad was, by order of court, authorized to issue receivers' certificates to a certain amount, the proceeds to be used in operating the road, and to be paid out of the receipts of the road, an issue of certificates in excess of the amount ordered was beyond the power of the receiver, and, as to such excess, the certificates were void even in the hands of an innocent holder, and constituted no claim upon the money in the hands of the receiver. Newbold v. Peoria and Springfield R. R. Co., 5 Bradwell (Ill.), 367. 1879.

57. — Receivers' certificates are not ordinarily negotiable. Where a receiver, acting under a special order of the court, issued a certificate and placed it in the hands of the payee named therein for negotiation and sale, and the same subsequently came into the hands of the petitioner, who purchased it of a third party for forty per cent. of its par value, and with notice of the order under which it was issued, held, that he took it subject to all equities between the receiver and the payee, and that, as it appeared that the latter had never accounted to the receiver for the certificate or its proceeds, the petitioner was not entitled to payment. The negotiation and sale of certificates is a trust personal to the receiver; he cannot delegate it to another and relieve himself from responsibility. Union Trust Co. v. Chicago and Lake Huron R. R. Co., 7 Federal Reporter, 513. 1891.

58. — usury. The chancellor has no power to disregard the laws against usury by authorizing a receiver to borrow money by selling interest-bearing receivers' certificates of indebtedness at less than their face value. Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala., 237, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 454.

59. Change of line of railway. An order for the change of a part of the line of a railway, and the building of a bridge, out of the earnings of the road, should not be made upon the recommendation of the receiver and report of an engineer, but should be done only upon the report of the master, showing the necessity for the change. Hand v. Railroad Co., 10 So. Car., 406. 1878.

60. Change of receiver. A change of incumbent in the office of railroad receiver does not affect the status of claims against the property arising during the receivership. Gibbes v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 15 So. Car., 518. 1890.

61. Compensation. In case the duties of a receiver prove to be more arduous than he or the court expected, or in case he performs duties in addition to those ordinarily required of a receiver, in either case, provided he has faithfully administered his trust without intentional error or fraud, he is entitled to compensation in addition to that fixed by the order under which he was appointed. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Central R. R. of Iowa, 8 Federal Reporter, 60; 2 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 313. 1881.

62. — Compensation of receivers of an insolvent railroad company determined. McArthur v. Montclair R'y Co., 27 N. J. Eq., 77. 1876.

63. — Under the act of 1869-70, ch. 8 (T. & S.'s Statutes, § 1124), providing for the appointment of the president of a delinquent railroad company as its receiver, — his salary as president to be his compensation as receiver, — such compensation was a part of the expense of operating the road, and should have been allowed and retained in the monthly reports of the receiver to the comptroller, required by the act. If the receiver neglected to retain his salary, paying it into the treasury, then the state became his debtor for that amount, but the governor had no authority to order the comptroller to issue his warrant therefor. Relief could be afforded only by a legislative proceeding. Mahry v. Brown, 13 Heiskell (Tenn.), 597. 1873.

64. — A. was appointed a receiver of a railroad: first, under a suit instituted by the stockholders; and second, under a suit brought by the bondholders of a railroad company in a state court. The bondholders' suit was subsequently removed to the federal court, where certain questions connected with the compensation of the receiver were referred to a special master, who found a balance due from the receiver, which he was ordered to pay. Upon appeal this order was affirmed by the United States supreme court. Thereupon the stockholders' suit, which had been stricken from the docket of the state court, was reinstated, and the question of the compensation of the receiver referred to a master by the state court, who found a large amount due to the receiver for compensation and necessary expenditures. The bondholders took no part, however, in these proceedings in the state court. Held, under the circumstances of this case, that, where the receiver had paid into the federal court the amount decreed as due from him in the bondholders' suit, he could not, upon petition to the federal court, have such amount appropriated in part payment of what had been found due to him in the stockholders' suit by the state court. Hinckley, Receiver, In re, 8 Federal Reporter, 556. 1880.

65. — The appointment of a receiver having been determined by the supreme court to be utterly void for want of jurisdiction, it was lawful and proper for the court which made the appointment to order the property of which the defendants had thus been unlawfully deprived to be restored to them, that they might be placed as nearly in statu quo as the nature of things would permit; and it was competent for the court to enforce such order by proceedings as for contempt. Peop'e ex rel. v. Jones, 33 Mich., 303. 1876.

66. — One whose appointment as a receiver has been thus finally determined by the court of last resort to be void for want of jurisdiction, is not entitled, when ordered to account for and make restoration of the property which thus came unlawfully into his hands, to retain anything for his services as such officer. Id.

67. Connecting lines. Claims on a railway company for through fares and freight, for which it may have been accountable, in part, to connecting lines, are nothing more than open accounts, which stand on the same footing as other unsecured debts. Jessup v. Atlantic and Gulf R. R. Co., 3 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 441. 1879.

68. — Payments made by receivers while operating a railroad, to connecting roads, for freights received belonging to them, "according to a necessary usage in the business of connecting railroads," are properly allowed to them as a credit. Meyer v. Johnston, 64 Ala., 605, 1879; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 584; Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala., 237, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 451.

69. Construction of railway. A receiver was authorized by a consent order, without a reference, to construct an extension of a railway at a cost not to exceed an amount stated, to be paid for out of surplus income, and the extension to stand pledged for such payment. The extension was built at a greater cost and then sold as a part of the entire road. Held, that the receiver acted only as agent of the consenting bondholders, but that the extension was covered by a lien, superior to existing liens, in favor of those who furnished the money to build it, and that they were entitled to such ratable proportion of the proceeds of sale as the value of the extension bore to the value of the entire road, considered only in reference to the purchase money of the whole. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 17 So. Car., 219. 1881.

70. — The court may authorize a receiver to take a lease of another railroad or build another line where it is manifestly for the interest of the creditors and the company. And so, on like conditions, the court may authorize its receiver to contribute, out of the accrued revenues in his hands, to the building of another railroad. Gibert v. Washington, Va. Midland, etc., R. R. Co., 33 Grattan (Va.), 586, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 473. But this should only be done in a case of great necessity. Kennedy v. St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co., 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 519. 1878.

71. Contempt. In proceedings for a contempt, the court can proceed in a summary manner, and the accused is not, of right, entitled to a trial by jury. King v. Ohio and Contracts — Debts and Liabilities.

Mississippi R. R. Co., 7-Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 529. 1877.

72. Contracts. All contracts made by the receiver of a railroad corporation are subject to the control of the chancellor, and he may modify them, or disregard them entirely, as to him may seem best. Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of New Jersey, 35 N. J. Eq., 426, 1832; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 479.

73. — The receiver of a railroad corporation has no power, without the authority of the chancellor, to make a contract which will bind the trust. Ib.

74. — free pass for life. A receiver cannot make a valid contract to give a free pass for life over a railway. Martin v. N. Y., Susquehanna and Western R. R. Co., 36 N. J. Eq., 109. 1883.

75. — right of way. By virtue of an agreement with the owner of certain lands, a railway company, before paying the sum stipulated, entered upon the land, built its road thereon, and included it in a general mortgage of their lands, etc. After its insolvency, and the appointment of a receiver, the owner applied for the payment of the amount. It appearing that the sum agreed upon was grossly exorbitant, the court refused to order its payment, but directed that the compensation justly due the owner be ascertained and paid. Coe v. New Jersey Midland R'y Co., 30 N. J. Eq., 21. 1873.

76. Costs. Pending an appeal from a decree of the circuit court, placing the railroad and other property of defendant in the hands of a receiver, a stipulation for dismissal of the cause, signed by the parties, was filed in this court, and the cause was accordingly dismissed, the order providing that neither party should recover costs as against the other, except that the costs of the appeal should be equally divided between them. Afterward, on motion of the receiver in the circuit court, that court made him an allowance for his services, and ordered that the same be taxed as costs, one-half to be paid by defendant. On appeal from this order, held, that if carried into effect, it would annul the former decree of this court as to costs. It was, therefore, reversed. Morse v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 72 Mo., 585. 1893.

77. — A decretal order of the chancellor ascertaining and declaring the compensation of a receiver appointed in the cause, and his solicitor, and directing its taxation as costs against the complainant in the suit,—the equities of the case not having been settled,—is not such a final decree as will support an appeal. State v. Ala. and Chattanooga R. R. Co., 54 Ala., 139. 1875.

78. — Counsel fees and costs should be adjusted on circuit. The costs and fees of all the attorneys, properly chargeable for successful services, should be paid out of the common fund. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 17 So. Car., 219. 1891.

79. Debts and liabilities. While a railway receiver may be protected from an action at law, in respect to the property in the possession of the court, or in his hands as its receiver, or from the consequences of an accident occurring in its management, as to other property the management of which he has assumed under contract and over which the court has no control, he is responsible individually for its control and proper management. Kain v. Smith, 80 N. Y., 438, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 545.

80. — Receivers of a railroad company are vested with its absolute control, and are liable in their representative capacity for injuries resulting from operating the road, to the same extent that the company itself would be liable. Ohio and Mississippi R. R. Co. v. Anderson, 10 Bradwell (Ill.), 313. 1882.

81. — The court may authorize a receiver to contract indebtedness which shall take precedence to the mortgage debt. Mittenberger v. Logansport R'y Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 464; 103 U. S., 283. 1882.

82. — Unless specially authorized by the court to contract debts on the faith of the property, a receiver is restricted to the income and profits of the road. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 17 So. Car., 219, 1891; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (So. Car.), 495, 1881.

83. — The purchaser of the Central R. R. of Iowa held liable for the debts of the receiver under the decree confirming the sale. Sloan v. Central Iowa R'y Co., 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ia.), 145. 1883. See, also, Klein v. Jewett, Receiver, 26 N. J. Eq., 474. 1875.

Decree — Discharge.

84. — negligence. A receiver operating a railroad under the order of a court of equity, stands, in respect to duty and liability, just where the corporation would, were it operating the road, and the question, whether or not the receiver is liable for negligence, must be tested by the same rules that would be applied if the corporation was the actual party defendant before the court. Klein v. Jewett, Receiver, 26 N. J. Eq., 474. 1875.

85. — personal injury. A railway receiver is liable, in his official capacity, for injuries inflicted by himself or his employees engaged in operating the road. Rogers v. Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Tenn.), 442. 1883.

86. — Passengers over a railway and an employe of the company, when entitled to damages for injuries received while the line is operated by a receiver, should be paid out of the fund in court realized from the earnings of the road during the receivership, in preference to mortgage or other debts existing at the time of action brought. Gibbes v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 15 So. Car., 518. 1880.

87. Decree — consent. A consent decree construed; and where a receiver was by such decree, and agreement of the parties, continued in possession of the property, it was held that he became simply a managing agent for the parties, and ceased to be receiver in any legal sense of the term. Vermont and Canada R. R. Co. v. Vt. Central R. R. Co., 50 Vt., 500, 1877; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 497.

88. — marshaling assets. When a bill is filed to marshal the assets of an insolvent railroad company, and a receiver is appointed, and the claims against the company are numerous, complicated and conflicting, and they are referred to a master, who reports upon their justness, amount and priority, and on consideration of his report each case is separately considered, a judgment of the court is had upon it fixing its amount, priority and status, in reference to the other claims before the court, and this being done a decree is taken by consent of all parties, fixing their priorities and liens, and for the sale of the road, and that the proceeds shall be brought in for distribution according to the priorities of the several judgments, held, that it is too late, on the incoming of the proceeds, for one of the claimants, whose claim has been passed upon, to set up new equities, unless in case of fraud, mistake or newly-discovered testimony. Hazlehurst v. Brunswick and Albany R. R. Co., 53 Ga., 248. 1874.

89. Discharge. No action can be maintained against the receiver of a railroad after such officer has been discharged and the property transferred to a purchaser under an order of the court in foreclosure proceedings. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of Iowa, 7 Federal Reporter, 587; 2 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 181. 1880.

90. — Such purchaser, however, takes the property subject to all claims against the receiver when the court has reserved its jurisdiction, upon final decree, to enforce as liens upon the property all liabilities incurred by such receiver. Ib.

91. — The plaintiff brought this action in March, 1880, against the defendant as receiver of the Erie R'y Co., to recover for services rendered to him from December 1, 1875, to January 31, 1877. More than sixty days prior to the commencement of this action all the property and franchises of the old company had been sold, and the purchasers had, pursuant to ch. 430 of 1874, formed a new corporation, and the defendant had been discharged from his receivership. By these facts the plaintiff was, under § 3 of ch. 446 of 1876, prevented from maintaining the action against the receiver, but the new company was thereby subjected to the same liability as had formerly existed against him. Held, that it was proper to allow the plaintiff to amend the summons and complaint by striking out the name of the defendant and substituting that of the new corporation, although issues had been joined in the action and sent to a referee for trial, but that, as the reference had been ordered by consent, that order should be vacated. Abbott v. Jewett, Receiver, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 603. 1881.

92. — An order discharging a receiver is not an appealable order. Colgate v. Michigan Lake Shore R. R. Co., 28 Mich., 288, 1873; Washington and Point Lookout R.

Dismissal of Complaint — Eminent Domain.

R. Co. v. Southern Md. R. R. Co., 55 Md., 153, 1880.

93. Dismissal of complaint. Where a complaint has been dismissed the court may direct the disbursement of funds coming into the hands of a receiver appointed in the proceeding, and may direct the payment of claims incurred in the protection and preservation of the property during the action. State v. Florida Central R. R. Co., 16 Fla., 703, 1878.

94. Discretion of the court. An order of sale may be stayed by the order of the court. This is a matter of discretion. Syracuse Savings Bank v. Syracuse, Chenango and N. Y. R. R. Co., 83 N. Y., 110, 1883; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 535.

95. Discretion of receiver. All outlays of the receiver of a railroad intrusted with its management and operation, made in good faith, in the ordinary course, with a view to advance and promote the business of the road and make it profitable and successful, are fairly within the line of the discretion necessarily allowed him. Cowdrey v. Railroad Co., 1 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 331, 1870.

96. Earnings. The net earnings of a railway, in the hands of a receiver, must be paid upon liens thereon, instead of to the general creditors. Addison v. Lewis, 73 Va., 701, 1881; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 702.

97. — The court in the exercise of a sound discretion may, as a condition of appointing a receiver, impose such terms touching the application of the income arising during the receivership to the payment of outstanding debts for labor, supplies, equipment, or permanent improvement of the property, as, under the circumstances of the case, appear reasonable. Union Trust Co. v. Souther, 107 U. S., 591, 1883; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 707. See Same v. Walker, 107 U. S., 596, 1882. See, also, Calhoun v. St. Louis and Southeastern R'y Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 9; 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 330, 1830.

98. — The net earnings of a railroad, while in the possession of a receiver appointed by the court pending the foreclosure of certain mortgages upon the property, cannot be applied to the payment of claims for damages which accrued during the operation of the road by the company, although such company was then in default for the non-payment of interest upon the mortgage bonds. Dexterville Manuf'g Co. v. Case, Receiver, 4 Federal Reporter, 873, 1880.

99. — The earnings of a railroad in the hands of a receiver are chargeable with the value of goods lost in transportation, and with the damages done to property during his management. Cowdrey v. Galveston, Houston and Henderson R. R. Co., 93 U. S., 352, 1876; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 361.

100. Election of corporate officers. The right of the stockholders of a railway company to elect directors is not affected by the sale of the property of the corporation by a receiver, under an order of court. State ex rel. v. Merchant, 87 Ohio St., 231, 1881; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 516. See, also, Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of New Jersey, 85 N. J. Eq., 349, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 512.

101. Elevator; lease. Under a stipulation in a lease executed by a railroad company, requiring the assent of the superintendent of the railroad to any assignment or subletting, where the railroad passes into the hands of a receiver appointed by the court, the superintendent who acts under the direction of the receiver is to be regarded as the superintendent of the railroad company for the purposes of such a contract. Kansas City Elevator Co. v. Union Pacific R'y Co., 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 463, 1881.

102. Eminent domain. A railway company which has never commenced to acquire the lands or construct the railways authorized by its act is not an "undertaking," within the meaning of § 4 of the Railway Companies Act, 1867, of which a receiver can be appointed under that section. Birmingham and Litchfield Junction R'y Co., In re, 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Eng. Ch.), 616, 1881.

103. — A receiver was required to report to the court his reasons for seeking, by proceedings under the right of eminent domain, to recover back real estate taken from the corporation under a mortgage. Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of New Jersey, 85 N. J. Eq., 379, 1882.

104. — telegraph lines. When a railroad is in the possession of a receiver of the United States court, a telegraph company can acquire no title to its right of way by condemnation proceedings in a state court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co., 7 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 367. 1877.

105. Employes' wages. Back pay due the employes of a railway company at the time the company's property was placed in the hands of a receiver, by extending the order appointing the receiver, was ordered to be paid out of the net earnings of the roads which came to the hands of the receiver, and the bondholders at whose instance the receiver was appointed were postponed until the wages of the employes were first paid out of the net earnings in the hands of the receiver. Douglas v. Cline, 12 Bush (Ky.), 608, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 273.

106. — The mortgagees accepted their securities with knowledge that the company, though technically a private corporation, was under obligations to the state to render certain important public services. The mortgagees knew that the railroads were in a certain sense public highways, and that whoever owned them or held them in pledge was bound to see that they were at all times so operated as to subserve the public convenience. Ib.

107. — Wages due employes and past due for eight months, at the time of the appointment of the receiver, were ordered to be paid where the employes were retained in the service of the receiver. But payment of such claims in the hands of third parties was refused. Skiddy v. Atlantic, Miss. and Ohio R. R. Co., 3 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 320. 1877. See, also, Duncan v. Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co., 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 886 (Richmond, Va., Cir. Ct.).

108. — A person who furnishes the labor or services of others, under a contract to do the whole business of a corporation, or a particular branch of it, is not an employe, but a contractor. Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of New Jersey, 29 N. J. Eq., 252, 1878; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 207.

109. Execution. Property in the hands of a receiver appointed by a court of chancery is not liable to seizure and sale under execution on a judgment at law. Robinson v. O. and P. R. R. Co., 2 Pittsburgh, 257. 1861.

110. — A judgment creditor of a railway company, with an execution in the hands of the sheriff, is entitled to have a receiver appointed to take charge of the earnings of the road and to apply the profits upon his demand. Peto v. Welland Ry Co., 9 Grant Ch. (Upper Canada), 455. 1862.

111. — At the time a receiver is appointed at the suit of trust creditors to take possession of a railroad and carry it on, there are a number of executions against the company in the hands of the sheriff; and there are funds derived from income and balances due from employes in the hands of or due to the company. Held, that the execution creditors are entitled to have these funds and balances applied to the satisfaction of their debts in preference to the trust creditors. If these funds or balances have been applied under the order of the court to other debts, they will be replaced out of the revenues received by the receiver since his appointment. Gibert v. Washington, Va. Midland, etc., R. R. Co., 38 Grattan (Va.), 615, 1881; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 512.

112. Expenditures of receiver. A court has the power to create claims through a receiver, in a suit for the foreclosure of a railroad mortgage, which shall take precedence of the lien of the mortgage. It may therefore provide that the receiver shall pay the arrears due for operating expenses for a period in the past not exceeding ninety days, and pay indebtedness not exceeding $10,000, to other connecting lines, for materials and repairs, and for ticket and freight balances, a part of which had been incurred more than ninety days before the order appointing him was made, and purchase rolling stock, and build six miles of road and a bridge, part of the main line of the road, and making such expenditures a lien prior to the lien of the mortgages. Miltenberger v. Logansport R'y Co., 106 U. S., 286. 1882.

113. — A receiver is not authorized, without the previous direction of the court, to incur any expenses on account of property in his hands, beyond what is absolutely essential to its preservation and use, as contemplated by his appointment. Accordingly, the expenditures of a receiver to defeat a proposed subsidy from a city, to aid in the construction of a railroad parallel with the one in his hands, were properly disallowed in the settlement of his final account, although such road, if constructed, might have diminished the future earnings of the road in his charge. Cowdrey v. Galveston, Houston and Henderson R. R. Co., 98 U. S., 352. 1876.

114. Extinct corporation. When a corporation has become extinct by legislative enactment, and its power and property transferred to a new corporation substituted for it, the courts have no power, on an ex parte application, to appoint a receiver of the assets of the defunct corporation. Young v. Rollins, 85 N. C., 485; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (N. C.), 455. 1881.

115. Fires. A cause of action against a railroad company for damages for the destruction of property along the line of its road, by fire escaping from defective locomotives, is in no proper sense to be considered such a claim as to constitute part of the operating expenses of the road, and is wholly unlike claims for supplies, new equipment, right of way, and new construction, or any claim falling legitimately under the head of operating expenses, which are sometimes ordered paid from the net earnings in the hands of a receiver, as presenting equities superior to those of the bondholders. Hiles v. Case, 14 Federal Reporter, 141; 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 549. 1880.

116. Foreign corporation. Independent of the statute, and simply as a matter of courtesy, the courts of New Jersey may extend their aid to a receiver of a foreign corporation, for the purpose of enabling him to get possession of property which should, in equity, be applied in payment of the debts of the corporation. National Trust Co. v. Miller, 83 N. J. Eq., 155. 1880.

117. — The courts of New Jersey may appoint a receiver of a foreign corporation having property in that state, as auxiliary to the proceedings instituted against it in the state which created it, and confer upon him the same powers that they are authorized to grant to the receiver of a domestic corporation, so far as they may be necessary to the recovery and collection of the assets of the corporation. Ib.

118. Garnishment. If a garnishee, after service of process upon him, delivers property of the principal debtor to a receiver subsequently appointed in another suit to take charge of all the property of the debtor, he does so at his peril, but will have the right to allege and show that such receiver was entitled to the possession of the property as against the plaintiff in garnishment. Crerar v. Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 85 Wis., 67. 1874.

119. — A receiver may be garnished. Phelan, etc., v. Ganabin, 5 Colo., 14. 1879.

120. Income bonds. After the appointment of a receiver of an insolvent corporation, and proceedings in foreclosure, an agreement among the secured and general creditors of the corporation was entered into, whereby certain income bonds were to be issued, "payable in thirty years, with interest at seven per cent., payable half-yearly," and the interest was to be paid, if the company should "be able to pay it by its income, after paying claims prior thereto, within one year," and the annual interest should not be allowed to accumulate. A committee to arrange the details of the plan was appointed. Held, that the committee had authority to consent that the bonds should be made payable, at the option of the company, on or before the expiration of thirty years from the date of their issue; and held, also, that the receiver would not be ordered to pay the interest on the bonds while the floating debt of the company remained unpaid. Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of New Jersey, 84 N. J. Eq., 88. 1881.

121. Injunction; contempt. Where an injunction is granted by a state court and served on a railway company, restraining it and its servants from obstructing a public avenue in a city with its trains, etc., the same will be binding upon a receiver of the company subsequently appointed by the United States court, and such receiver, the same as a subsequent purchaser, will be punishable for contempt for disobeying the mandate of the writ. Safford v. The People, 85 Ill., 558. 1877.

122. — If the receivers of a corporation disobey an injunction against the corporation, made before their appointment, the fact that they have been removed, at the time they were tried for a contempt, affords no defense whatever. Ib.

Insolvent Company — Interest.

122. Insolvent company. A receiver cannot be appointed ex parte in a proceeding by creditors to wind up an insolvent corporation and pending the decision on a demurrer whereby the right to file the bill is put in issue. Cook v. Detroit and Milwaukee R. R. Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Mich.), 459. 1881.

124. — When a receiver will be appointed for an insolvent corporation considered. Pond v. Framingham and Lowell R. R. Co., 180 Mass., 194, 1881; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 551; Kelly v. Ala. and Cincinnati R. R. Co., 58 Ala., 489, 1877; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 138.

125. — The case ought to be one of urgency to justify a court in appointing a receiver to manage and operate the business of a railroad at all; and officers conducting such a business, to whom no fraud or fault is imputed, should not be displaced from the ad interim management, pending litigation, merely because the corporation is insolvent. Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala., 287, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 454.

126. — The plaintiff, a judgment creditor, applied for the appointment of a receiver of the defendant, a corporation, which, as a defense, alleged that the judgment was obtained by the collusion and fraud of the president of the corporation. Upon the hearing, time was given to make a motion to open the judgment on that ground, of which opportunity defendant did not avail itself. Held, that the court was authorized to infer, from its failure so to do, that the defense was without merit. Loder v. New York, Utica and Ogdensburgh R. R. Co., 4 Hun (N. Y.), 22. 1875.

127. — The plaintiff recovered a judgment against the defendant, upon which execution was issued and returned wholly unsatisfied. Upon an affidavit showing these facts, and that the defendant was insolvent, he then applied, upon motion, eight days' notice of which had been given, for an order appointing a receiver. The motion was granted and a receiver appointed. Held, that the proceedings were irregular, as not being authorized by § 3 of ch. 151, Laws 1870, and that the order appointing the receiver should be reversed. Clinch v. South Side R. R. Co. of Long Island, 1 Hun (N. Y.), 636. 1874.

128. Injuries to employees. A receiver appointed under § 1101 of the Code is vested with the powers and duties of the board of directors in managing the affairs of the company, and is a public agent of the state. He is responsible for misfeasance in office, but not for non-feasance. He is responsible for knowingly using unsafe machinery. Erwin v. Davenport, 9 Heiskell (Tenn.), 44, 1871; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 274.

129. — Prior to February 24, 1870, the defendant Smith and others were appointed receivers of the Vermont Central R. R. Co. by the court of chancery of that state. On February 24, 1870, the said receivers, by the authority of the court, and the Vermont and Canada R. R. Co., leased the road of the Ogdensburgh and Lake Champlain R. R. Co., a New York corporation, for a term of years, at a stipulated rent, agreeing to fulfil all the obligations of the latter road either by statute or at common law, as common carriers or otherwise, and to indemnify it from any claim for any accident that might occur upon the road. This action was brought against the receiver, Smith, individually, to recover damages for injuries sustained by the plaintiff, who was employed on the Ogdensburgh and Lake Champlain Railroad, in consequence of being supplied with inadequate tools and machinery. No personal negligence of Smith was alleged. Held, that the action, if maintainable, could be properly brought against one receiver alone, and that the receiver acted officially and as an agent of the Vermont Company in making the lease, and that he was not personally liable for the negligence of his employees. Kain v. Smith, 11 Hun (N. Y.), 552. 1877.

130. Interest. A receiver appointed by a state court in a suit which, under the act of March 8, 1875, was subsequently removed to the circuit court of the United States, reported to the latter, stating the amount of the fund in his hands, and asking for an order to pay therefrom certain liabilities. Held, that the circuit court had authority to require him to account for the fund, and that he is chargeable with interest on so much thereof as he, on receiving, deposited in a bank to his credit as receiver, and then withdrew and deposited on his private account in another bank, he declining to explain the transaction, when he was examined as a witness by the master to whom the court had referred his accounts. Hinckley v. Railroad Co., 100 U. S., 153. 1879.

181. Is agent of the corporation. A receiver of a railway company appointed by the court to manage its business is legally the agent of the company, although under the direction of the court appointing him. Safford v. The People, 85 Ill., 553. 1877.

182. Judgment against receiver. Pending the foreclosure of a railway mortgage the plaintiff commenced an action against the receiver in charge of the road to recover for personal injuries sustained through the alleged negligence of the receiver's employees between the date of the foreclosure sale and the execution of the sheriff's deed thereon. After the receiver had appeared and answered in the action a sheriff's deed was executed, and the receiver made final settlement and was discharged. Held, that the judgment subsequently rendered in the action against the receiver did not become a lien against the property in the hands of the purchaser at the foreclosure sale. White v. Keokuk and Des Moines R. R. Co., 52 Ia., 97. 1879.

183. — A person who has recovered judgment against the receivers of a railroad for injuries received by him while traveling as a passenger upon the road is not entitled to payment out of the earnings of the road or the proceeds of its sale in preference to the first mortgage bondholders, unless it is so provided by the order of the court placing the road in the possession of the receivers. Davenport v. Receivers of Ala., etc., R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 519. 1875.

184. — A receiver of a railroad appointed in foreclosure proceedings is the agent of the bondholders and trustees, and a judgment rendered against him by a court of competent jurisdiction is binding upon the interests of the bondholders. Turner v. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Ry Co., 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 527. 1879.

185. Judgments against corporation. In a case of failure of a railway company to pay, the United States circuit court in equity has jurisdiction at the instance of creditors, and the property is in custodia legis from the time of the taking of possession by a receiver. At the date of registry of plaintiff's judgments, the real estate of the railroad was in the custody of the circuit court, a receiver having been appointed. Judgments recorded after such mortgage has been given and recorded, and after such jurisdiction has vested, do not give rise to a judicial mortgage or lien. Bell v. Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans R. R. Co., 34 La. An., 785. 1882.

186. — Claims for damages sued against a corporation itself while in the hands of receivers, and reduced to judgment (in one case by consent of its officers, who were also the receivers), and afterwards presented and allowed as original claims against the receiver's fund, are not entitled, as against that fund, to interest, either from the date of the judgments or from the order giving to them the right of payment — such order not having fixed the amounts due. Gibbes v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 18 So. Car., 87. 1882.

187. — A judgment recovered against the railroad company is no evidence against the public receiver of the railroad. Connel v. Washington, 2 Tenn. Ch., 323. 1875.

188. Jurisdiction. If a receiver appointed by another court on bill filed pending this controversy takes prior possession of the res, his possession is wrongful and should give way to the prior jurisdiction of this court. Gaylord v. Ft. Wayne, Muncie and Cincinnati R. R. Co., 6 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 286, 1875; Union Trust Co. v. Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis R. R. Co., 6 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 197, 1874.

189. — Where a receiver who has been appointed by a state court in the interest of the creditors of a construction company proceeds with the work of construction by entering into contracts, etc., the fact that a controversy arises between him and a contractor, or between a contractor and other claimants of a common fund, does not entitle the contractor to remove the cause to a federal court, especially after the state court has proceeded, without objection, to adjudicate upon the rights of the parties. Buell v. Cincinnati, etc., Construction Co., 9 Federal Reporter, 851. 1881.

140. — Where a state court, on a petition under the Indiana statutes to dissolve a corporation, has taken jurisdiction, thereby decreed a dissolution of the corporation, appointed a receiver, and taken the custody of the assets, no national court can take jurisdiction of a bill to call on the receiver to render an account, and to collect the assets under the direction of the United States court. Conkling v. Butler, 4 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 22. 1885.

141. — The fact that the property is being administered upon in proceedings taken in a state court, and that the plaintiff might apply to that court for relief, is no bar to the institution of proceedings in the circuit court of the United States. Griswold v. Central Vermont R. R. Co., 9 Federal Reporter, 797. 1881.

142. — When the state court, on a bill of like character with one pending in the United States court, appoints a receiver inadvertently, and without knowledge of the facts in the federal court, and the circumstances indicate collusion in the state court, the appellate court will not interfere with the judge of the state court in revoking the order appointing his receiver, and turning over the property to the receiver of the United States court. May v. Printup, 59 Ga., 128. 1877.

143. — An order was granted by a justice of the supreme court at chambers, in the first district, appointing a receiver of the property, franchise and effects of the defendant. It did not appear that the order had ever been entered in the second department. Held, that, being a chamber order, no appeal from it would lie until it had been so entered. Clinch v. South Side R. R. Co. of Long Island, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 154. 1874.

144. — This court will not decide a question of great importance except in a case where such decision is necessary to protect some substantial right. Therefore, where a conflicting question of jurisdiction arose between the superior courts of two counties in the matter of the appointment of a receiver for the defendant corporation, who, pending the controversy, was duly elected president thereof, held, that this court, without expressing an opinion, should affirm the order below appealed from. Comm'rs of Craven County v. Atlantic and North Carolina R. R. Co., 77 N. C., 297. 1877.

145. Jury trial. The right of trial by jury in a proceeding against a receiver, on a common law cause of action, is not an absolute right, but the granting or withholding thereof lies within the sound discretion of the court. Such a proceeding is not a "suit at law" within the provision of the constitution guarantying the right of trial by jury. So held in a proceeding for damages for a personal injury. Kennedy v. I., C. and L. R. R. Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 97; 2 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 704. 1880.

146. Lease. The mortgagor held a leased road, under a written lease, providing for rent and for payment for depreciation, and for the payment of a monthly rent by the lessor to the lessee for the use of a part of the road. The successive receivers took possession of the leased road and operated it as a continuation of the mortgaged road. Part of the rent which accrued before C. became receiver was unpaid. C., after he became receiver, paid the rent as it accrued. The successive receivers collected the rent monthly from the lessor for the use of a part of the road. The court allowed to the lessor, as a claim preferred to the first mortgage, a sum based on the actual value of the use of the road by the receivers, and for depreciation, and allowed, with a like preference, claims for supplies and materials furnished for the road while so operated. Held, that the allowances were proper, and that the final decree was not erroneous in not requiring the accounts of the receiver to be settled before paying out of the proceeds of sale the debts allowed against him, nor in ordering the sale of the property as an entirety, without separating that acquired by the receiver. Miltenberger v. Logansport R'y Co., 106 U. S., 283. 1882.

147. — A railroad company having, by contract, the right to run over the defendant's road, upon accounting to the defendant by the 15th of each month for the month preceding, and paying the ascertained balance due within ten days thereafter, and being three months in arrears, the receiver of the defendant road severed the connection between the roads. On petition to restore connection, and for damages for interruption of business, held, that, under the circumstances, the petitioners were not entitled to relief on the ground of oppressive and unwarranted conduct on the part of the receiver. Elmira Iron and Steel Rolling Mill Co. v. Erie R'y Co., 26 N. J. Eq., 284. 1875.

148. — A receiver appointed by the governor has no right to so lease a railway as to vest the lessees with an interest which cannot be taken away by a subsequent act of the legislature. McMinnville and Manchester R. R. Co. v. Huggins, 3 Baxter (Tenn.), 177, 1873; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 173.

149. — The E. and G. R. R. was leased to W., who rented it to the Erie R'y Co. Subsequently J. was appointed receiver of the Erie Co. On application to compel J. to comply with the terms of the lease, the court refused, upon motion, to determine the question whether J. was operating the road under the lease. People v. Erie R'y Co., 54 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 59.

150. Leased rolling stock. A railroad company in Iowa, after executing a mortgage to secure its bonds, which was duly recorded, covering all the property which it then possessed or might thereafter acquire, entered into a written contract with A., leasing for a specific period and at a stipulated sum, payable monthly, certain cars whereof he was the owner. It also reserved, but did not exercise, the privilege of purchasing them at the original cost at any time during the existence of the contract. A. retained the right to rescind the contract if the company failed to pay the interest on its bonds. While the contract was in force, the mortgagee filed his bill of foreclosure. The court appointed a receiver, who took charge of the road and used the cars in operating it. The contract was never recorded. Held, that the contract was binding between the parties thereto, and the failure to record it did not, under the statute of Iowa, render the cars subject to the lien of the mortgage. That A. was entitled to the possession of them and to compensation for their use by the receiver, payable out of the fund to the credit of the suit. Myer v. Car Co., 103 U. S., 1, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 375.

151. — Under the construction of the contract and of the order of the court permitting the plaintiff in error to take from the receiver the cars in dispute on his giving up his right to go upon the general fund for the amount of his debt, reserving his right to claim hire and damages, the court below erred in ruling out testimony as to the value of the rent of the cars, and the damages to the cars over and above the wear and tear. Dawson Manuf'g Co. v. Brunswick and Albany R. R. Co., 51 Ga., 186. 1874.

152. — repairs. A receiver is liable for damages to engines rented by him, arising from omission to make necessary repairs. Turner v. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R'y Co., 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 537. 1879.

153. Liability as a common carrier. In the operation and management of railroads by receivers in chancery, they sustain to persons dealing with them the character of common carriers; and though they may at all times invoke the aid of the court of chancery in any matter affecting their duty or liability under their receivership, yet, waiving this, they are amenable in the common law courts to actions for negligence as carriers. Newell v. Smith, 49 Vt., 255. 1877.

154. Liability of corporation for receiver's acts. Where a railroad is in the hands of a receiver, the possession of such receiver is antagonistic to the corporation, and the latter is not liable for injuries resulting from the operation of the road by the receiver. Ohio and Mississippi R. R. Co. v. Anderson, 10 Bradwell (Ill.), 313, 1883; Turner v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 74 Mo., 602, 1881; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 38; Thurman v. Cherokee R. R. Co., 56 Ga., 376 1876; Bell v. Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Lafayette R. R. Co., 53 Ind., 57, 1876; Rogers v. Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Tenn.), 442, 1883; Metz v. Buffalo, Corry and Pittsburgh R. R. Co., 58 N. Y., 61, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 92.

155. Liens. Where, at the instance of bondholders secured by a mortgage lien upon a railroad, a receiver has been appointed to take possession of and preserve the railroad and conduct its business, the proceeds and profits of the business in the hands of the receiver are subject to the charges of administration and management and the liens and trust in behalf of which the receiver was appointed. Neither the railroad company itself, nor any party whose claim is based on the company's rights, can demand any of the income in the receiver's hands until the prior liens have been satisfied. North Carolina R. R. Co. v. Drew, 8 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 691. 1879.

156. — A railroad company, the fruits of whose labor and expenditures are about to be lost by the failure of its enterprise, cannot, in order to raise money to complete it, create liens upon its property which will displace an older lien, and no prerogative of a court of equity arms it with power to do so. Meyer v. Johnston, 58 Ala., 287, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 454.

157. — material and labor. Claimants for materials furnished an insolvent railroad company are not entitled to payment out of a fund in court arising from a sale of the corporate property at the instance of mortgage bondholders, until the bonds are paid. Such claimants have no specific lien upon the property. Denniston v. Chicago, Alton and St. Louis R. R. Co., 4 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 414. 1864.

158. — Promises of payment by the receiver do not change their rights; they can only take the surplus after prior specific liens have been discharged. Id.

159. — The laws of Georgia give no liens superior to a mortgage lien, except for taxes and to laborers and material men who take the proper steps to perfect their liens. Held, therefore, that in distributing the earnings of a mortgaged railroad, while the same were in the hands of a receiver, and the proceeds of its sale, the court would give priority only to those laborers and material men who had perfected their liens according to the state law. Jessup v. Atlantic and Gulf R. R. Co., 8 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 441. 1879.

160. — The net earnings, while the road is in possession of a receiver appointed by the court, may be applied to the payment of claims having superior equities to that of the bondholders. So held, where, from such earnings, payment was made to parties who had, before his appointment, furnished the company with car-springs, and spirals and supplies for its machinery department, which he continued to use in carrying on the business of the road. Hale v. Frost, 99 U. S., 389. 1878. See, also, Williamson v. Wash- ington, Va. Midland, etc., R. R. Co., 38 Grattan (Va.), 624, 1881; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 498; Taylor v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 7 Federal Reporter, 877, 1880.

161. — In this case the petitioner paid an indebtedness of the railway company, incurred on account of construction. Held, that in order to give him a superior equity to the bondholders, it must be alleged and proved that he acted under such inducements from them, and had such dealings with them in the transaction, as estop them from asserting their liens against his claim. It is not sufficient that the original indebtedness was incurred at the request of the bondholders. Kelly v. Receiver Green Bay and Minnesota R. R. Co., 10 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 161. 1881.

162. — vendor's lien. A person who had sold to a railway company some land over which the railway had been made and opened, obtained a decree ordering specific performance, and declaring his lien for the balance of the purchase money. The company having become insolvent, an order was made, on the petition of the vendor, for sale of the land and payment of the deficiency, and for an injunction restraining the company until payment from running any engine over, or otherwise using or continuing in possession of the land. Held (varying the order of James v. C.), that an injunction was not the proper form of relief, as it would make the land useless to both parties. The order for an injunction was therefore discharged, and an order made for a receiver, with a direction to the company to give him immediate possession. Munns v. Isle of Wight R'y Co., Law Reports, 5 Chancery Appeal Cases, 414. 1870.

163. Management. The management and control of the Vermont Central and Vermont and Canada Railways by the receiver of the court examined. Langdon v. Vermont and Canada R. R. Co., 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Vt.), 688. 1881.

164. Maladministration. The court will consider specific complaints of maladministration against a receiver, notwithstanding the irregularity of the method by which they are brought to its notice, e. g., by way of petition under an order for leave to answer, etc., in the name of the receiver in a foreclosure suit. Coe v. New Jersey Midland R'y Co., 28 N. J. Eq., 81, 1877; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 9.

Mandamus — Pleadings.

165. Mandamus. Where the court of common pleas, having jurisdiction in an action against a railway company, has appointed a receiver, who is in possession of the road, and is proceeding in the execution of the trust under the direction and orders of the court, a mandamus will not be issued against such corporation and receiver directing their conduct in operating the road. State ex rel. v. Marietta and Cincinnati R. R. Co., 35 Ohio St., 154. 1878.

166. Mortgage. The court will not, in deference to the mere technical rights of a very small minority of bondholders of a railroad corporation, appoint a receiver, where it appears that such action would imperil, if not destroy, the interests of others whose rights are entitled to equal consideration. Tysen v. Wabash R'y Co., 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 247. 1878. See, also, Newport and Cincinnati Bridge Co. v. Douglass, 12 Bush (Ky.), 678. 1877.

167. — The appointment of a receiver is generally within the sound discretion of the court. But it is a power only to be exercised in strong cases. In no case of a mortgage ought a receiver to be appointed if it is clear that on a foreclosure the mortgaged property will bring enough money to pay the debt, interest and cost. Pullan v. Cincinnati and Chicago R. R. Co., 4 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 85. 1885. See, also, Rice v. St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co., 24 Minn., 464. 1878.

168. — A receiver may be appointed in an action to foreclose a mortgage "where it appears that the mortgaged property is in danger of being lost, removed or materially injured, or that the condition of the mortgage has not been performed," etc. (Civil Code, § 829.) Newport and Cincinnati Bridge Co. v. Douglass, 12 Bush (Ky.), 678, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 221.

169. — line in several states. For proceedings upon separate foreclosures of a mortgage upon a railway in several states, see Taylor v. Atlantic and Great Western R. R. Co., 55 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 275, 1877; 57 ib., 9, 1878; 57 ib., 26, 1878; U. S.

Rolling Stock Co., In re, 55 ib., 236, 1878; 57 ib., 16, 1878.

170. Nuisance. The superior court of one county will not order the abatement of a nuisance erected by a railroad corporation (such nuisance caused in the defective construction of a certain trestle and culvert on the line of the road) when all the corporate property is in the hands of a receiver appointed by the superior court of another county. Brown v. Carolina Central R'y Co., 83 N. C., 128. 1880.

171. Operation by direction of the court. Where a court has been compelled to take possession by its receiver of a railroad, its whole power over it is confined to making necessary repairs and protecting the property. As, from the nature of the property, it must be continued in operation and sold as a going concern, to prevent serious injury and impairment in value, the court may continue the running of trains and the usual business of the road with a view to its economical conservation; and if the income is insufficient for that purpose, may provide the requisite means by creating charges upon the property. Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala., 287, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 451.

172. Order; modification. The appointment of a receiver is an administrative and not a judicial order. It can be changed with the consent of the parties. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., In re, 8 So. Car., 297. 1875.

173. Parties. The court will interfere on an interlocutory application to appoint a receiver, notwithstanding grave doubts as to the propriety of the frame of the suit, and the necessity of making additional parties. Fripp v. Chard R'y Co., 21 Eng. Law & Equity, 53; 17 Jurist, 887; 23 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S.), Chanc., 1009. 1853.

174. Payments. Where a receiver has paid out money upon the order of the court, which order has been appealed from, but without a supersedeas, the receiver is protected by the order, notwithstanding its subsequent reversal upon the appeal. Florida Central R. R. Co. v. Bisbee, 18 Fla., 60. 1881.

175. Pleadings. Semble, that motions in relation to the complaint should be heard before the motion for the appointment of a receiver. People v. Manhattan R. R. Co., 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 448. 1881.

176. — The pleadings in a creditor's action to set aside a sale and to distribute certain assets of a corporation examined, and the complaint held insufficient. Herring v. N. Y., Lake Erie and Western R. R. Co., 68 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 497. 1882.

177. Possession. The court will not appoint a receiver of property which is in the possession of a person not a party to the suit. Searles v. Jacksonville, etc., R. R. Co., 3 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 621. 1878. See, also, Fripp v. Chard R'y Co., 21 Eng. Law & Equity, 53; 17 Jurist, 887; 22 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S.), Chanc., 1009. 1858.

178. — Where a receiver, under the act of February 12, 1874, is appointed, in behalf of the public, to operate a railroad, the road so taken should, as a general rule, be returned to the company which was in possession when the receiver was appointed. The right of possession cannot be settled between two railroad companies, each claiming such right, in a proceeding of this nature. Long Branch and Sea Shore R. R. Co. v. Sneden, 26 N. J. Eq., 539. 1875.

179. — A receiver may be appointed, although the person applying has the legal estate, as against the person whose possession he seeks to oust, where the property is in the nature of a trade. Fripp v. Chard R'y Co., 21 Eng. Law & Equity, 53; 17 Jurist, 887; 22 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S.), Chanc., 1009. 1858.

180. — Property in the custody of a receiver is not subject to attachment. Any interference with it is a contempt of court. Gest v. New Orleans, St. Louis and Chicago R. R. Co., 30 La. An., 23, 1878; Secor v. Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw R. R. Co., 7 Bissell (U. S. S. C.), 513, 1877; Russell v. East Anglian R'y Co., 1 Eng. Law & Equity, 101; 14 Jurist, 1033, 1850.

181. — Powers of receivers considered. Gray v. Davis, 1 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 420, 1811; Schreven v. Clark, 48 Ga., 41, 1873; Birmingham and Litchfield Junction R'y Co., In re, Law Reports, 19 Chancery Division, 155, 1831.

182. Preferred claims. Where a railway company was in financial trouble, and its employees threatened a strike, and certain of its bondholders, at the request of its officers, advanced money to pay the wages of such employees, on the agreement that the money was to be refunded out of the first net earnings of the company, and afterwards the road went into the hands of a receiver, held, that the advances must be paid out of the income accruing while the road is in the custody of the court. Atkins v. Petersburg R. R. Co., 8 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 807. 1879.

183. Priority of claims. Where a receiver is appointed over a railway, the court has jurisdiction to control expenditure in the management and repairs of the railway, though the directors individually are not parties to the suit. The remuneration of directors is a proper expenditure and should be allowed, though the company is insolvent. Repairs and improvements of the line or stations, wire fencing, gas-fittings, and the like, are expenses properly paid out of revenue, if there be no capital immediately available for those purposes. Belfast and County Down R'y Co. v. Belfast, Holywood, etc., R'y Co., 3 Irish Eq., 591. 1869.

184. — For money borrowed by a corporation to pay interest on coupon bonds, the lender is not entitled to be paid out of funds in the hands of the receiver appointed at the instance of the mortgagees. Newport and Cincinnati Bridge Co. v. Douglass, 12 Bush (Ky.), 673, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 221.

185. Proceedings supplemental to execution. Appointment of receivers in supplemental proceedings considered. Garver v. Kent, 70 Ind., 428, 1880; Clinch v. South Side R. R. Co., 4 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 224, 1874. See Same v. Same, ib., 483. 1874.

186. Process. Under the Code (sec. 37), service upon the agent of the receivers of a foreign corporation held sufficient. Ganebin v. Phelan, 5 Colo., 88. 1879.

187. Prohibition. The Sacramento and Placerville R. R. Co. executed a mortgage or deed of trust upon its property to two trustees to secure the payment of the principal and interest of certain bonds, and it was provided that upon default in the payment of the principal of the bonds, or upon default for one year in the payment of the interest, the trustees should take possession of the property and apply the net income to the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds. Default having been made, an action was brought by the surviving trustee to enforce the lien and trust and to obtain possession of the property, and a receiver was appointed. Held, upon an application of the successor in interest of the mortgagor for a writ of prohibition, that the case came within the provision of subd. 6, § 564, of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the court had the jurisdiction to make the order. Sacramento and Placerville R. R. Co. v. Superior Court of San Francisco, 55 Cal., 458. 1890.

188. Purpose of receivership. The court's custody of railroad property, which has been placed in the hands of receivers, is only for the temporary preservation of the property during foreclosure proceedings, and the road should pass with as little delay as is reasonably practicable into the possession of owners, who will best be able to determine how it should be managed. Taylor v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 9 Federal Reporter, 1. 1881.

189. Reference. Consent will not authorize a master in chancery to act as referee at law. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of Iowa, 2 Federal Reporter, 656; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 332. 1890.

190. — Exceptions to a master's report on the accounts of a receiver, involving his management and disposal of the trust property, and the amount of his compensation, considered and overruled. Woolsey v. Cummings Car Works, 83 N. J. Eq., 432. 1891.

191. Refusal to supply water; board of public works. A board of public works of a city is not justified in refusing to supply water for the use of the engines, etc., of a railroad being operated by a receiver under the direction of the court, on the ground that certain water rents, which were due when the railroad was declared insolvent, are unpaid. Coe v. New Jersey Midland R'y Co., 30 N. J. Eq., 440. 1879.

192. Removal of causes. The petition of intervention is in the nature of a suit for relief as against defendants therein named, and the right of removal is not affected by the fact that a receiver had been appointed by the state court to wind up the affairs of the corporation. Iowa and Minnesota Construction Co., In re, 10 Federal Reporter, 401; 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 310. 1882.

193. — The existence of a suit by stockholders of a railroad company, and even possession by trustees under the order of the state court therein, do not affect the right to remove into the federal court a suit brought by bondholders under a deed of trust, which is paramount to the rights of the stockholders; and the possession must follow into the federal court. Scott v. Clinton and Springfield R. R. Co., 6 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 529. 1876. Seizure of res by a state court does not affect the case, for that is necessarily transferred with the case. Osgood v. Chicago, Danville and Vincennes R. R. Co., 6 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 390. 1875.

194. Removal of receiver. A receiver of a company, who had been one of its directors, was charged with having known of and acquiesced in the mismanagement for which the suit was begun, and with being improperly interested in contracts made by the company. Facts were shown tending to prove these charges, many of which were not denied. Held, that he was not a proper person to exercise the powers of a receiver, and that his appointment should be revoked. Held, also, that the fact that the suit was instituted for his benefit would not justify his being continued as a receiver. Keeler v. Brooklyn Elevated R. R. Co., 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 166. 1890.

195. — Neither a non-resident receiver of a railway corporation, nor more than one receiver, should ordinarily be appointed. Where two receivers were originally appointed as the representatives of different interests which became hostile, leading to dissensions and unnecessary expense, both were removed and a single disinterested resident receiver appointed. Meier v. Kansas Pacific R'y Co., 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 476. 1878.

196. — The stockholders of a defendant corporation cannot obtain the removal of a receiver by petition, where it appears from the pleadings that such corporation has a regularly elected board of directors, and that such board is in active sympathy with the petitioners. Fifth National Bank of Repairs — Sale of Property.

Pittsburgh v. Pittsburgh and Castle Shannon R. R. Co., 1 Federal Reporter, 190. 1880.

197. Repairs. The court will authorize a receiver of a railway company to make all necessary repairs, and, if necessary, will charge the expense as a first lien on the property prior to existing mortgages thereon. Hoover v. Montclair and Greenwood Lake R. R. Co., 29 N. J. Eq., 4, 1878; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 565. See, also, Mitchell, Ex parte, 12 So. Car., 83. 1879.

193. Rolling stock; purchase. Rolling stock purchased by the receivers managing the railroad corporation, pending its sale by the court of chancery, is subject to the liens authorized by the court in the order for its purchase, and such liens cannot be superseded or lessened by the trust deed. Meyer v. Johnston, 53 Ala., 237, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 451.

199. — Where the net earnings of a railway which is in the hands of receivers are amply sufficient to pay for a necessary purchase of additional rolling stock, the court will not authorize the receivers to raise money for the same by the creation of a car trust, in order to allow of the application of the income to the bondholders. Taylor v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 9 Federal Reporter, 1, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 177.

200. — Application to compel the receivers of an insolvent railroad company to deliver to creditors certain certificates of indebtedness, which the receivers were authorized by this court to issue, and which they had offered to such creditors in payment of rolling stock, and which the creditors had accepted, refused; the creditors having had it in their power to retake their property at any time, and it appearing that it would have been to the disadvantage of the trust fund for the receivers to have paid the contract price. Coe v. New Jersey Midland R'y Co., 27 N. J. Eq., 87. 1876.

201. Sale of property. A receiver in the present case under the supplement of March 17, 1870, to the Act to Prevent Frauds by Incorporated Companies, directed to sell the property, part free from incumbrances, and part subject thereto, and the order and manner of sale specifically directed. Mid- dleton v. New Jersey West Line R. R. Co., 25 N. J. Eq., 308. 1874.

202. — A purchaser, on new and ample consideration, of bonds constituting a part of the assets of a railway company in the hands of a receiver, without knowledge or notice of the trust, is not liable to the creditors of the corporation for the value of the bonds. Gibbes v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 18 So. Car., 299. 1882.

203. — The indebtedness of the West Line R. R. Co. being more than double its assets, there being no income to meet the expense of the necessary repairs, its property being of such a character as materially to deteriorate in value pending a protracted litigation; and it being clearly for the interest of all concerned in the property that it should be sold as early as possible, and almost all of the first mortgage bondholders, represented by the trustees, asking for the sale, the road and its franchises were ordered to be sold by the receiver, pending proceedings for foreclosure by trustees for the first mortgage bondholders, which disputes about the extent and validity of the mortgage lien threatened greatly to delay. The property was directed to be sold free from all incumbrances, except a mortgage held by the public school fund of the state on lands under water. Middleton v. New Jersey West Line R. R. Co., 26 N. J. Eq., 269. 1875.

204. — A railroad and other property of a railroad company, which had for several years been in the hands of a receiver, was sold by a decree of the court, which directed a sale of the road, the franchises of the company, right of way, depots, rolling stock, tools, and all other property of the company, real, personal and mixed. Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to the money, the surplus earnings of the railroad in the hands of the receiver; and that the purchaser was entitled to all cars, engines and other property placed on the railroad by the receiver in the discharge of his duty, to carry on the business of the railroad and keep it in repair. Strang v. Montgomery and Eufaula R. R. Co., 3 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 618. 1879.

205. — It is a proper exercise of the chancery power of the court to surrender the trust property to the purchaser, retaining jurisdiction of the original case, and retaining the authority to enforce the payment of the debts and liabilities incurred by the court's receiver in the operation of the railway. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of Iowa, 17 Federal Reporter, 753, 1893; Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Central R. R. of Iowa, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. C. C.), 461, 1893. See, also, Brown v. Wabash R'y Co., 93 Ill., 297, 1880.

296. — Where a railway receiver was discharged, and the sale of the property confirmed to a newly organized corporation, with the provision in the order of confirmation that the new company should pay all the debts of the receiver and all claims or liabilities in the foreclosure case, held, that the new company could not be permitted, after accepting the property, to question the validity of the order. Ib.

297. Second suit. As a general rule, a receiver appointed in one suit should not be displaced by the appointment of a receiver in a subsequent action. The receivership in the first suit should be extended to the second. But, however, if a different receiver is appointed, and the court has jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties, and is the same court that made the first appointment, the receiver in the first suit must deliver the property to the second receiver. State v. Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile R. R. Co., 15 Fla., 201. 1875.

298. Secured creditors. Secured creditors cannot dictate who shall be appointed a receiver. The court will consider the interests of creditors of every grade. Richards v. Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co., 1 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 28. 1875.

299. Specific performance; contract with express company. A contract between A., a railroad company, and B., an express company, stipulated that B. should lend A. $20,000, to be expended in repairing and equipping its road, and that A. should grant to B. the necessary privileges and facilities for the transaction of all the express business over the road, the sum found to be due A. therefor, upon monthly settlement of accounts, to be applied to the payment of the loan and the interest thereon. The contract was to continue for one year, when, if the money with interest thereon was not paid, it was to continue in force until payment should be made. After B. had advanced the money, and entered upon the performance of the contract, A. conveyed all its property, including its franchises, to C. in trust to secure the payment of certain bonds issued by it. Default having been made in their payment, C. brought a foreclosure suit, and obtained a decree placing the road in the hands of a receiver and ordering its sale. The receiver having declined to carry out the contract with B., the latter, with the consent of the court, brought its bill in equity for specific performance against him, A. and C. Held, that the receiver is the only necessary party defendant. That the transaction between the companies is not a license, but simply a contract for transportation, creating no lien, the specific performance whereof would be a form of satisfaction or payment which the receiver cannot be required to make. Express Co. v. Railroad Co., 99 U. S., 191. 1878.

210. State as party to proceedings. Where a receiver of a railway company was appointed at the instance of the state and other creditors, and the guaranty of the bonds by the state was declared illegal by the legislature, it was held proper to dismiss said cause so far as the state was concerned therein. Brunswick and Albany R. R. Co. v. State, 48 Ga., 415. 1873.

211. — Under action pending in the name of the state for the foreclosure of a mortgage upon the property of a railway company, and the appointment of a receiver, and on the motion of the attorney-general for such appointment, an order was made by the court in the words following: "As the state cannot be required to give security as other plaintiffs, it is ordered that the president and directors of the Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., under the order of and subject to this court, continue in the possession and management of the property of all kinds of the said company, and in like manner continue to conduct and carry on the business of the said company; that they make report to this court, at such times as this court may require, of the condition of the property of all kinds of the said company, of its earnings and profits and expenditures, to the end that such orders may, from time to time, be moved for, as may be necessary and proper for the protection of the property of the said company, and the interests of all parties concerned, pending litigation." Held, that this order constituted the president and directors of the corporation receivers, and that they continued in the management of the road and its business as officers of the court, and not of the company. Gibbes v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 15 So. Car., 304; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 739, 1880; 15 South Carolina 518, 1880; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 723.

212. — In a foreclosure suit pending in the circuit court, the mortgaged property being in possession of its receivers, the state of Georgia presented a petition in which, declining to become a party to the suit, it asked that the receivers be required to withdraw from the possession of a part of the property in their hands, upon some of which executions for state taxes had been levied prior to their appointment. The petition was denied and dismissed. Held, that the action of the court could not be reviewed upon the appeal of the state, for the reason, if there were no others, that the order did not conclude any right it had in virtue of the executions, or of the levies made thereunder. State v. Jesup, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 419. 1883.

213. Statutory receiver. A statutory receiver of a delinquent railroad has no power to lease the road. State v. McMinnville and Manchester R. R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.), 369, 1880; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 95.

214. — A payment of rents by the lessees, under a void lease, to an officer of the state, and the reception of such rents by such officer, would be no ratification of the void lease. The legislature alone could ratify such void lease. Ib.

215. — There can be no recovery for improvements made upon the road by the lessees under such void lease. Ib.

216. — Statutory receivers are to some extent public agents. They have no power to contract debts, even though the indebtedness is to enhance the value of the property. Though a court of chancery may enlarge the powers of its receiver no such power exists as to a receiver by contract. So held in case of a receiver appointed by the governor. State v. Edgefield and Ky. R. R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.), 353; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 86. 1880.

217. Stock and stockholders. Where the relief sought is founded upon a disputed equity, a court of equity will with great reluctance and hesitation take the possession from a defendant holding a clear legal title. So, where none of the actual holders of the stock or bonds of a railway company who would be affected similarly with the plaintiff were before the court, the court ought to hesitate before appointing a receiver, on the ground of a possible injury to one holding nothing more than a disputed equitable claim for deferred stock. Overton v. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co., 10 Federal Reporter, 866; 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 436. 1883.

218. — September 2, 1873, the Erie R'y Co. declared a dividend of one per cent. upon its stock, and deposited the money to pay the same with Duncan, Sherman & Co. On December 10, 1874, the money then remaining with that firm was withdrawn by the company, and subsequently passed, with its other property, to a receiver of the road. An application was made by the petitioner, who, at the time the dividend was declared, was a stockholder of the company, to compel the receiver to pay to him the amount of his dividend. Held, that the fund deposited with Duncan, Sherman & Co. should be regarded as specifically appropriated for the payment of the dividend, and that the stockholders acquired in equity a lien upon such fund to the extent of the amount to which they were respectively entitled, and that such lien followed the fund in the hands of the receiver. Le Blanc, In re, 14 Hun (N. Y.), 8. 1878.

219. — The court will not, upon the petition of the company filed in the suit in which receivers were appointed, take jurisdiction of and decide a question as to the propriety of postponing a meeting called for the election of officers, which question has no relation to the objects for which the receivers were appointed. Taylor v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 7 Federal Reporter, 331. 1881.

220. — A receiver may, under ch. 408 of 1860, commence separate actions against each of the stockholders of a corporation to recover any sum remaining due upon his shares of stock, and he is not bound to bring one action and make all the creditors and stockholders parties thereto. Van Wagenen v. Clark, 22 Hun (N. Y.), 497. 1880.

221. Taxation. Proceedings for collection of taxes on railway in hands of a receiver considered. Perry County v. Selma, Marion and Memphis R. R. Co., 65 Ala., 891, 1880; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 298.

222. Title of receiver. The title of a receiver to the property which is the subject of the receivership attaches from the date of the order of court appointing him; it is not deferred until he gives bond in compliance with the order. Maynard v. Bond, 67 Mo., 815. 1878.

223. Torts of employees. The receiver of a delinquent railroad, appointed by the governor of the state under the act of 1853, 151, 5, is a public agent, and, as such, not liable for the wrongs or negligence of his employees, but only for his own wrongful acts or delinquencies. Hopkins v. Connel, 2 Tenn. Ch., 823. 1875.

224. Trustees who are state officials. The appointment of a receiver to take and preserve a trust fund is the exercise of a discretion in which all the circumstances are to be taken into consideration. Where the funds are in the hands of trustees, appointed by the legislature, who hold their trust ex officio as high public officers of the state, and especially where one part of the trust involves duties of a public character, the court will be very reluctant to take the fund out of their hands, and will not do so except for the most cogent reasons, such as gross fraud and imminent danger of the trust fund. It will resort to every coercive means of compelling the trustees to perform their duty before resorting to this extreme measure. Vose v. Reed, 1 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 647. 1871.

225. Two railways controlled by receivers; contracts. Two railroads were in the hands of receivers, appointed by this court under insolvency proceedings. Held, that the court had power, on the application of either receiver, to modify a contract made before their insolvency, so as to equitably readjust the rates agreed upon by them for terminal facilities, and, also, for the use of part of one road by the other company. Receivers New Jersey and New York Ry Co., In re, 29 N. J. Eq., 67. 1878.

226. Vacation of order. A receiver has no right to object to an order restoring the property to its owners. An order appointing a receiver should be vacated when all the parties in interest consent thereto. L'Engle v. Florida Central R. R. Co., 14 Fla., 263. 1878.

227. Watercourses; floods. A railway company is liable for injury arising from insufficient culverts and occurring during the time that its property is in the hands of a receiver. Union Trust Company v. Cuppy, 26 Kans., 754, 1882; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 582. See, also, Kansas Pacific Ry Co. v. Wood, 24 Kans., 619. 1880.

228. Who may apply for receiver. Those who have guarantied the payment of a debt, for failure to pay which relief is sought under § 57 of the act respecting railroads and canals, authorizing the appointment of a receiver, are, on payment of the debt, entitled to the benefit of that section, as creditors in respect of the debt so paid, notwithstanding the fact that they have guarantied the payment thereof. Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Pemberton and New York R. R. Co., 28 N. J. Eq., 838. 1877.

RECORD.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; MORTGAGE.

1. Memorandum of judge. The memorandum of a judge of the superior court, setting forth the grounds of his overruling a motion to set aside an award, is no part of the record; and the remedy of the party aggrieved is by bill of exceptions, and not by appeal. Standish v. Old Colony R. R. Co., 129 Mass., 158. 1880.

2. Process. Practice on substitution of lost process considered. Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co. v. Smith, 51 Ala., 329. 1874.

REFERENCE.

1. Expert as referee. A point, involving questions of practical science, being in dispute, and the affidavits being conflicting, the evidence was, at the suggestion of the court, and with the consent of both parties, referred to an engineer for his report on the question in dispute, and the conclusion of the engineer, with respect to the facts, was adopted by and made the ground of the order of the court. Webb v. Manchester and Leeds R'y Co., 1 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 576. 1839.

REFUSAL TO CARRY GOODS.

1. Damages. In an action at law against a common carrier for a wrongful refusal to carry property, the party aggrieved is entitled to recover, as damages, the difference between the value of the property at the place where it was tendered to the company and its value at the place to which it was to be taken, less the expenses of transportation. People ex rel. v. New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R. Co., 23 Hun (N. Y.), 533. 1880.

REGULATION OF RAILWAYS.

*See DISCRIMINATION; RATES.

1. By city authorities. A proviso in a city ordinance granting certain privileges to a railroad company, that such company should be subject to all laws and ordinances that might thereafter be passed to regulate railroads in the city, only means that it shall be subject to all reasonable and legal ordinances for the regulation of the road. It has no such scope that the railroad company should remove its track at the bidding of the city council. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. City of Joliet, 79 Ill., 25. 1875.

2. Charter. The operation of a law for regulating "all existing railroad corporations" extends to and controls railroads incorporated after as well as before its passage, unless exception is provided in their charters. *Indianapolis and St. Louis R. Co. v. The People, 95 Ill., 313, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 188.

3. — The state has no power to enact laws fixing rates of transportation upon lines of railway previously chartered. Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore R. R. Co. v. Bowlers, 4 Houston (Del.), 506, 1878; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 103.

4. Commissioners; powers. The railway commissioners, under 36 and 37 Vict., c. 43, made an order requiring the C. and the S. E. Railway Companies to make arrangements and to afford facilities for the transfer of traffic from the line of one company to the other; to arrange the arrivals of their trains at a junction in a particular manner, and directing the C. Company to run trains over a disused branch line; and, upon non-compliance with the order, made a further order imposing penalties upon both companies for their disobedience. Held, that the first order was invalid, and that a prohibition must be granted to restrain the commissioners from enforcing it; for, assuming that they had jurisdiction to require each company separately to give facilities according to its powers, they were not entitled to order two companies to act jointly in doing what neither could do separately. Toomer v. London, Chatham and Dover R'y Co., Law Reports, 2 Exchequer Division, 450. 1877.

5. — The railway commissioners, to whom has been transferred the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (17 and 18 Vict., c. 31), have under that act jurisdiction to hear and determine a complaint against a railway company of not, according to its powers, affording all reasonable facilities for receiving, forwarding and delivering passengers and other traffic at and from any of its stations which are used by the company for such passengers or other traffic; and although the commissioners have no jurisdiction to order the company to make a new railway station, or to order any particular works, or otherwise to interfere with the discretion of the company in the mode of performing its obligation to afford such facilities, according to its powers, for the receiving, forwarding and delivering of the traffic, yet they have jurisdiction to order such facilities, even if their doing so would necessitate the making by the company of some structural alteration of such station. South Eastern R'y Co. v. Railway Commissioners, Law Reports, 6 Queen's Bench Division, 586. 1891. But see Same v. Same, Law Reports, 5 Queen's Bench Division, 217. 1879.

6. — The mere fact that railway companies make charges for the conveyance of passengers in excess of those authorized by their special acts, but without any undue preference, is not a breach of their obligation under 17 and 18 Vict., c. 31, s. 2, to "afford according to their respective powers all reasonable facilities for the receiving and forwarding and delivering of traffic upon and from the several railways and canals belonging to or worked by such companies respectively, and for the return of carriages, trucks, boats and other vehicles." And the railway commissioners have no jurisdiction to grant an injunction to restrain the making of such excessive charges. Great Western R'y Co. v. Railway Commissioners, Law Reports, 7 Queen's Bench Division, 182, 1881; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 617.

7. Constitutional law. The creation of a board of railway commissioners, with authority to regulate the rates for carriage of passengers and freight, held to be constitutional. Georgia R. R. and Banking Co. v. Smith, 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ga.), 395, 1883; Tilley v. Savannah. Florida and Western R. R. Co., 5 Federal Reporter, 641, 1881.

8. — The act of the general assembly of the state of Iowa, entitled "An act to establish reasonable maximum rates of charges for the transportation of freight and passengers on the different roads of this state," approved March 28, 1874, is not in conflict with § 4, art. 1, of the constitution of Iowa, which provides that "all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation," and that "the general assembly shall not grant to any citizen, or class of citizens, privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, shall not equally belong to all citizens;" nor is it a regulation of interstate commerce. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S., 155, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 169.

9. — The Winona and St. Peter R. R. Co.

having been incorporated as a common carrier, with all the rights and subject to all the obligations which that term implies, was bound to carry, when called upon for that purpose, and charge only a reasonable compensation therefor. The state has the right to regulate its rates. Winona and St. Peter R. R. Co. v. Blake, 94 U. S., 180, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 177.

10. — The Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. was, by its charter, and the charters of other companies consolidated with it, authorized "to demand and receive such sum or sums of money for the transportation of persons and property, and for storage of property, as it shall deem reasonable." The constitution of Wisconsin, in force when the charters were granted, provides that all acts for the creation of corporations within the state "may be altered or repealed by the legislature at any time after their passage." Held, that the legislature had power to prescribe a maximum of charges to be made by said company for transporting persons or property within the state, or taken up outside the state and brought within it, or taken up inside and carried without. Peik v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 94 U. S., 164, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 413.

11. — Where property has been clothed with a public interest, the legislature may fix a limit to that which shall in law be reasonable for its use. Id.; Peik v. Chicago and Northwestern R. R. Co., 6 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 177. 1874.

12. — A state law to prevent the unjust discrimination in rates for the transportation of passengers or freight from a point within to a point without the state, though it may incidentally affect commerce between states, cannot be said to be a law regulating commerce among the states, within the meaning of the federal constitution, especially when it does not purport to exercise control over any railroad corporation except those that run or operate in the state, and which have domestic relations with the people of the state. People v. Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific R'y Co., 104 Ill., 476, 1882; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 628.

13. — Section 87 of the railroad act, to prevent unjust discriminations in the rates charged for transporting passengers or

freight, etc., is not limited to railroads organized under the laws of Illinois, but includes all companies operating railroads in Illinois, regardless of the states in which they may have been organized. Ib.

14. — The supreme court of Illinois adheres to the conclusion holding § 87 of the railroad act, to prevent unjust discriminations in the rates charged for carrying passengers or freights, to be free from any constitutional objection, and holding a railway company liable to the penalty imposed for discriminating in the rate of charges as to different contracts for through transportation of freight from points in Illinois to a point in another state, for different distances, charging a greater sum for the less distance of the entire carriage than for the greater distance. Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific R'y Co. v. The People, 105 Ill., 236. 1883. Contra, see Kaiser v. Illinois Central R. R. Co., 18 Federal Reporter, 151, 1883. Carton v. Illinois Central R. R. Co., 59 La., 148, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 305.

15. — The state board of railway commissioners has no power to regulate or interfere with the transportation of persons or merchandise by a steamship company between ports within the state, if they be in transit to or from other states, or when in navigating the ocean the vessel goes beyond a marine league from the shore. This power has been conferred upon congress, and is exclusive. Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. R. R. Commissioners, 18 Federal Reporter, 10. 1883

16. — So much of the act approved April 19, 1873, entitled "An act regulating the charges for transportation of freight upon railroads" (Sess. Acts 1872-3, p. 62), as relates to the transportation of passengers, is unconstitutional, since the title limits the act to the transportation of freight. Evans v. Memphis and Charleston R. R. Co., 56 Ala., 246, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 350.

17. — A state statute requiring railroads to draw the cars of other corporations as well as their own, at reasonable times and for reasonable compensation, to be agreed upon by the parties or fixed by the railroad commissioner, does not conflict with the constitutional provision that congress shall have power to regulate commerce between the states. Rae v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., 14

Federal Reporter, 401, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 470.

18. — The states have the power to regulate the operations of elevators receiving grain from railways and other common carriers. Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S., 113. 1876.

19. Crossing of railways. Where, by a clause in an act of parliament, it was enacted "That nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent any owner or occupier of any ground through which the said railway may pass from carrying, at his or their own expense, any railway or other road, or any cut or canal which such owner or occupier is authorized to make in his or her lands or grounds, across the said main railway, within the respective lands or grounds of such owner or occupier,"—held, that the right given by this clause was not confined to the state of the land at the time the act passed, but was intended for the convenience of the occupiers, from time to time, of the land, partly on one side and partly on the other, of the principal railway, and that without reference to the title under which it was held. Monkland R'y Co. v. Dixon, 3 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 273. 1842.

20. — Sec. 1118 of the Code provides that "all the railroads of the state have power to construct their roads so as to cross each other, if necessary, by the main tracks or branches, or to unite with each other as with branches." Held, that the plain meaning of this section, read by the light of §§ 1118 and 1120, was that various roads might form a homogeneous system, and that these roads, or any future roads, might unite by building tracks from one to the other for the purpose of transporting loaded cars. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. State, 9 Baxter (Tenn.), 522. 1876.

21. Crossing of streets. An ordinance of a city, which required a railroad company to keep a flagman by day and a red lantern by night at a certain street crossing where the company had only a single track, and over which only its usual trains passed, and where it did not appear that such crossing was unusually dangerous, or more so than ordinary crossings, held, not to be a reasonable requirement, and, therefore, within the constitutional limitation on the exercise of the police power. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. City of Jacksonville, 67 Ill., 37. 1878.

22. Gauge. The Launceston and South Devon Railway Act, 1862, § 34, enacts that "if at any time it shall be made to appear to the board of trade to be requisite for the public service, the company shall, on the requisition of that board, lay down or permit to be laid down, on all or any part of the railway hereby authorized, an additional rail or rails for the passage of engines and carriages adapted to the narrow gauge over the same." Held, that "public service" did not mean government service merely, but included any service which would supply wants felt by the public, or which the public might reasonably be desirous of having on its own behalf. The commissioners being of opinion that it was requisite for the public service that the line should be narrow gauged between Launceston and Lidfield Junction, advised the board of trade to require the South Devon Railway Company, the owners of the line, to elect either to lay down an additional rail itself between those places, or permit it to be laid down. Inhabitants of Launceston, In re, 3 Neville & McNamara, 187. 1877.

23. Injunction. Ch. 273, Laws of 1874, after fixing the maximum tolls chargeable by railway companies in Wisconsin, gives certain civil remedies against the companies to persons injured by violations of the rates so fixed, and also provides penalties against the agents of the companies who may be guilty of such violations; but it does not provide penalties against the companies themselves. Held, that the legal remedies so provided furnish no sufficient ground for denying the relief here sought by injunction against the corporations to restrain them from charging illegal tolls. Attorney-General v. R. R. Companies, 35 Wis., 425. 1874.

24. — The maximum rates of toll having been materially changed by chaps. 113 and 334 of 1875, the court holds that the cause is not ripe for judgment, and (being about to close the term) orders its continuance until the next term. Attorney-General v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 38 Wis., 69. 1875.

25. Name of corporation; misnomer. Ch. 273, Laws of 1874, in its classification of the railways of Wisconsin, names, among those in "Class A.," the "Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co." One of the defendant companies was formerly known by that name, and was so designated in previous acts of the legislature, granting powers here claimed by said company by virtue of such acts, including an act approved March 10, 1874. In February, 1874, however, under a general statute providing for such changes of corporate names, said company had changed its name to the "Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y Co.," by which name it is here made defendant. No other company has ever been known in this state by the name first above stated. Held, that the provisions of said act relating to the "Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co." must be regarded as applying to said defendant. Attorney-General v. R. R. Companies, 35 Wis., 425. 1874.

26. Penalties. In an action to recover the statutory penalty for making unjust discriminations in its rates of charges of toll and for freights, the declaration must show that the respective freights mentioned were of like quantity, of the same class, and that, in respect to such freight, there was a higher charge for a less than for a greater distance. The description of the respective freights merely as one car-load of ponies, and one car-load of horses, does not sufficiently show them to be "like quantities of freight of the same class." Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. The People, 77 Ill., 443, 1875; 8 Amer. R'y Rep., 92.

27. — To hold a railway company liable to the penalties provided in the act to prevent extortion, etc., approved May 2, 1873, on the ground of extortion, it must be shown that it charged more than the maximum rates fixed by the railroad and warehouse commissioners, and, until these rates are fixed, no liability can be incurred, under the statute, for unreasonable and extortionate charges, and when made, the taking of the rates named, or less rates, will not incur the penalty, even though the proof shows them to be more than fair and reasonable rates. Ib.

28. — A complaint contained allegations against the defendant for having, contrary to the "Act to prevent extortion by railroad companies," passed March 27, 1857, charged the plaintiff thirteen cents extra fare from L. to B. on five hundred and sixty-seven occasions, and asked for judgment for the excess, and $50 penalty for each violation of the statute. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover one penalty of $50, and the excessive fare paid, but was not entitled to recover five hundred and sixty-six penalties, in addition. Bissell v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 67 Barbour (N. Y.), 385. 1872.

29. — A suit was brought to recover of a railroad company for charging a passenger fare exceeding three cents a mile, under the act of April 18, 1871. At the time the railroad commissioners had not assigned the defendant's road to any class, as required by the act, and there was no proof that the charge made was unreasonable, or to what class the road did belong. Held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Moore v. Illinois Central R. R. Co., 68 Ill., 885. 1878.

30. Quo warranto. The attorney-general has the election to proceed against the defendant companies for their alleged violations of legal duty, either by information in the nature of quo warranto, or by injunction; but the court will require him to make his election, and not to proceed by both remedies. Attorney-General v. R. R. Companies, 35 Wis., 425. 1874.

31. Rates. A power of government which actually exists is not lost by non-user. The fact, therefore, that the power of regulating the maximum rates of fare and freight was not exercised for more than twenty years after the incorporation of that company is unimportant. Nor does it affect the case that, before the power was exercised, the company had pledged its income as security for the payment of debts incurred, and had leased its road to a tenant that relied upon the earnings for the means of paying the stipulated rent. It could neither grant nor pledge more than it had, and its pledgee or tenant took the property subject to the exercise by the state of the same powers of regulation which might have been exercised over the company itself. Chicago, Burlington

32. — A railroad company in Wisconsin cannot recover for the transportation of property more than the maximum fixed by the act of that state of March 11, 1874, by showing that the amount charged was no more than a reasonable compensation for the services rendered. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. Co. v. Ackley, 94 U. S., 179, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 176.

33. — Railroad companies incorporated prior to the adoption of the constitution of 1851, and which avail themselves of § 24 of the general corporation act of 1852 (S. & C. Stat., 281), either by taking leases of the roads of other companies, or by leasing their own roads to other companies, are to be regarded as thereby accepting a "provision" of said act, within the meaning of § 71, and relinquishing all rights under their charters inconsistent with the provisions of said act. The right to demand and take specified rates of fare, free from legislative control or alteration, is one of the rights thus relinquished by such companies, and they, therefore, become subject to legislative control, in that regard, equally as companies formed under said act of 1852. Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton R. R. Co. v. Cole, 29 Ohio St., 126. 1876.

34. — The charter of a railroad company authorized it "to charge for the transportation of passengers at a rate not exceeding seven and one-half cents per mile, and for the transportation of goods by weight, not exceeding fifty cents per one hundred pounds per one hundred miles;" held, that for heavy articles the company could only charge for the actual distance of transportation at a rate not exceeding fifty cents per one hundred pounds per one hundred miles. Knox v. Railroad Co., 5 So. Car., 22. 1873. Rehearing denied. Knox and Gill v. R. R. Co., 5 So. Car., 73. 1873.

35. — The consolidation, pursuant to the statute of Ohio of April 10, 1856 (4 Curwen, 2791), of two or more railway companies works their dissolution. All the powers and franchises of the new company which is thereby formed are derived from that statute, and are subject to "be altered, revoked or repealed by the general assembly," under ing the authority to enforce the payment of the debts and liabilities incurred by the court's receiver in the operation of the railway. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Central R. R. Co. of Iowa, 17 Federal Reporter, 758, 1883; Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Central R. R. of Iowa, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. C. C.), 461, 1888. See, also, Brown v. Wabash R'y Co., 93 Ill., 297. 1880.

206. — Where a railway receiver was discharged, and the sale of the property confirmed to a newly organized corporation, with the provision in the order of confirmation that the new company should pay all the debts of the receiver and all claims or liabilities in the foreclosure case, held, that the new company could not be permitted, after accepting the property, to question the validity of the order. Ib.

207. Second suit. As a general rule, a receiver appointed in one suit should not be displaced by the appointment of a receiver in a subsequent action. The receivership in the first suit should be extended to the second. But, however, if a different receiver is appointed, and the court has jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties, and is the same court that made the first appointment, the receiver in the first suit must deliver the property to the second receiver. State v. Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile R. R. Co., 15 Fla., 201. 1875.

208. Secured creditors. Secured creditors cannot dictate who shall be appointed a receiver. The court will consider the interests of creditors of every grade. Richards v. Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co., 1 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 28. 1875.

209. Specific performance; contract with express company. A contract between A., a railroad company, and B., an express company, stipulated that B. should lend A. $20,000, to be expended in repairing and equipping its road, and that A. should grant to B. the necessary privileges and facilities for the transaction of all the express business over the road, the sum found to be due A. therefor, upon monthly settlement of accounts, to be applied to the payment of the loan and the interest thereon. The contract was to continue for one year, when, if the money with interest thereon was not paid, it was to continue in force until payment should be made. After B. had advanced the money, and entered upon the performance of the contract, A. conveyed all its property, including its franchises, to C. in trust to secure the payment of certain bonds issued by it. Default having been made in their payment, C. brought a foreclosure suit, and obtained a decree placing the road in the hands of a receiver and ordering its sale. The receiver having declined to carry out the contract with B., the latter, with the consent of the court, brought its bill in equity for specific performance against him, A. and C. Held, that the receiver is the only necessary party defendant. That the transaction between the companies is not a license, but simply a contract for transportation, creating no lien, the specific performance whereof would be a form of satisfaction or payment which the receiver cannot be required to make. Express Co. v. Railroad Co., 99 U. S., 191. 1878.

210. State as party to proceedings. Where a receiver of a railway company was appointed at the instance of the state and other creditors, and the guaranty of the bonds by the state was declared illegal by the legislature, it was held proper to dismiss said cause so far as the state was concerned therein. Brunswick and Albany R. R. Co. v. State, 48 Ga., 415. 1873.

211. — Under action pending in the name of the state for the foreclosure of a mortgage upon the property of a railway company, and the appointment of a receiver, and on the motion of the attorney-general for such appointment, an order was made by the court in the words following: "As the state cannot be required to give security as other plaintiffs, it is ordered that the president and directors of the Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., under the order of and subject to this court, continue in the possession and management of the property of all kinds of the said company, and in like manner continue to conduct and carry on the business of the said company; that they make report to this court, at such times as this court may require, of the condition of the property of all kinds of the said company, of its earnings and profits and expenditures, to the end that such orders may,

from time to time, be moved for, as may be necessary and proper for the protection of the property of the said company, and the interests of all parties concerned, pending litigation." Held, that this order constituted the president and directors of the corporation receivers, and that they continued in the management of the road and its business as officers of the court, and not of the company. Gibbes v. Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co., 15 So. Car., 304; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 739, 1880; 15 South Carolina 518, 1880; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 723.

212. — In a foreclosure suit pending in the circuit court, the mortgaged property being in possession of its receivers, the state of Georgia presented a petition in which, declining to become a party to the suit, it asked that the receivers be required to withdraw from the possession of a part of the property in their hands, upon some of which executions for state taxes had been levied prior to their appointment. The petition was denied and dismissed. Held, that the action of the court could not be reviewed upon the appeal of the state, for the reason, if there were no others, that the order did not conclude any right it had in virtue of the executions, or of the levies made thereunder. State v. Jesup, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 419. 1882.

213. Statutory receiver. A statutory receiver of a delinquent railroad has no power to lease the road. State v. McMinnville and Manchester R. R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.), 369, 1880; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 95.

214. — A payment of rents by the lessees, under a void lease, to an officer of the state, and the reception of such rents by such officer, would be no ratification of the void lease. The legislature alone could ratify such void lease. Ib.

215. — There can be no recovery for improvements made upon the road by the lessees under such void lease. Ib.

216. — Statutory receivers are to some extent public agents. They have no power to contract debts, even though the indebtedness is to enhance the value of the property. Though a court of chancery may enlarge the powers of its receiver no such power exists as to a receiver by contract. So held in case of a receiver appointed by the governor. State v. Edgefield and Ky. R. R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.), 353; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 86. 1880.

217. Stock and stockholders. Where the relief sought is founded upon a disputed equity, a court of equity will with great reluctance and hesitation take the possession from a defendant holding a clear legal title. So, where none of the actual holders of the stock or bonds of a railway company who would be affected similarly with the plaintiff were before the court, the court ought to hesitate before appointing a receiver, on the ground of a possible injury to one holding nothing more than a disputed equitable claim for deferred stock. Overton v. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co., 10 Federal Reporter, 866; 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 436. 1883.

218. — September 2, 1873, the Erie R'y Co. declared a dividend of one per cent. upon its stock, and deposited the money to pay the same with Duncan, Sherman & Co. On December 10, 1874, the money then remaining with that firm was withdrawn by the company, and subsequently passed, with its other property, to a receiver of the road. An application was made by the petitioner, who, at the time the dividend was declared, was a stockholder of the company, to compel the receiver to pay to him the amount of his dividend. Held, that the fund deposited with Duncan, Sherman & Co. should be regarded as specifically appropriated for the payment of the dividend, and that the stockholders acquired in equity a lien upon such fund to the extent of the amount to which they were respectively entitled, and that such lien followed the fund in the hands of the receiver. Le Blanc, In re, 14 Hun (N. Y.), 8. 1878.

219. — The court will not, upon the petition of the company filed in the suit in which receivers were appointed, take jurisdiction of and decide a question as to the propriety of postponing a meeting called for the election of officers, which question has no relation to the objects for which the receivers were appointed. Taylor v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 7 Federal Reporter, 381. 1881.

220. — A receiver may, under ch. 408 of 1860, commence separate actions against each of the stockholders of a corporation to recover any sum remaining due upon his shares of stock, and he is not bound to bring one action and make all the creditors and stockholders parties thereto. Van Wagenen v. Clark, 22 Hun (N. Y.), 497. 1880.

221. Taxation. Proceedings for collection of taxes on railway in hands of a receiver considered. Perry County v. Selma, Marion and Memphis R. R. Co., 65 Ala., 891, 1880; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 298.

222. Title of receiver. The title of a receiver to the property which is the subject of the receivership attaches from the date of the order of court appointing him; it is not deferred until he gives bond in compliance with the order. Maynard v. Bond, 67 Mo., 815. 1878.

223. Torts of employees. The receiver of a delinquent railroad, appointed by the governor of the state under the act of 1852, 151, 5, is a public agent, and, as such, not liable for the wrongs or negligence of his employees, but only for his own wrongful acts or delinquencies. Hopkins v. Connel, 2 Tenn. Ch., 823. 1875.

224. Trustees who are state officials. The appointment of a receiver to take and preserve a trust fund is the exercise of a discretion in which all the circumstances are to be taken into consideration. Where the funds are in the hands of trustees, appointed by the legislature, who hold their trust ex officio as high public officers of the state, and especially where one part of the trust involves duties of a public character, the court will be very reluctant to take the fund out of their hands, and will not do so except for the most cogent reasons, such as gross fraud and imminent danger of the trust fund. It will resort to every coercive means of compelling the trustees to perform their duty before resorting to this extreme measure. Vose v. Reed, 1 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 647. 1871.

225. Two railways controlled by receivers; contracts. Two railroads were in the hands of receivers, appointed by this court under insolvency proceedings. Held, that the court had power, on the application of either receiver, to modify a contract made before their insolvency, so as to equitably readjust the rates agreed upon by them for terminal facilities, and, also, for the use of part of one road by the other company. Receivers New Jersey and New York Ry Co., Inc., 29 N. J. Eq., 67. 1878.

226. Vacation of order. A receiver has no right to object to an order restoring the property to its owners. An order appointing a receiver should be vacated when all the parties in interest consent thereto. L'Engle v. Florida Central R. R. Co., 14 Fla., 263. 1878.

227. Watercourses; floods. A railway company is liable for injury arising from insufficient culverts and occurring during the time that its property is in the hands of a receiver. Union Trust Company v. Cuppy, 26 Kans., 754, 1892; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 562. See, also, Kansas Pacific Ry Co. v. Wood, 24 Kans., 619. 1880.

228. Who may apply for receiver. Those who have guarantied the payment of a debt, for failure to pay which relief is sought under § 57 of the act respecting railroads and canals, authorizing the appointment of a receiver, are, on payment of the debt, entitled to the benefit of that section, as creditors in respect of the debt so paid, notwithstanding the fact that they have guarantied the payment thereof. Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Pemberton and New York R. R. Co., 28 N. J. Eq., 338. 1877.

RECORD.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; MORTGAGE.

1. Memorandum of judge. The memorandum of a judge of the superior court, setting forth the grounds of his overruling a motion to set aside an award, is no part of the record; and the remedy of the party aggrieved is by bill of exceptions, and not by appeal. Standish v. Old Colony R. R. Co., 129 Mass., 158. 1880.

2. Process. Practice on substitution of lost process considered. Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co. v. Smith, 51 Ala., 329. 1874.

3. Transcript. Manner of authentication determined. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Simpson, 11 Kans., 457. 1873.

Expert as Referee—By City Authorities—Commissioners.

REFERENCE.

1. Expert as referee. A point, involving questions of practical science, being in dispute, and the affidavits being conflicting, the evidence was, at the suggestion of the court, and with the consent of both parties, referred to an engineer for his report on the question in dispute, and the conclusion of the engineer, with respect to the facts, was adopted by and made the ground of the order of the court. Webb v. Manchester and Leeds R'y Co., 1 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 576. 1839.

REFUSAL TO CARRY GOODS.

1. Damages. In an action at law against a common carrier for a wrongful refusal to carry property, the party aggrieved is entitled to recover, as damages, the difference between the value of the property at the place where it was tendered to the company and its value at the place to which it was to be taken, less the expenses of transportation. People ex rel. v. New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R. Co., 23 Hun (N. Y.), 533. 1890.

REGULATION OF RAILWAYS.

¹See DISCRIMINATION; RATES.

1. By city authorities. A proviso in a city ordinance granting certain privileges to a railroad company, that such company should be subject to all laws and ordinances that might thereafter be passed to regulate railroads in the city, only means that it shall be subject to all reasonable and legal ordinances for the regulation of the road. It has no such scope that the railroad company should remove its track at the bidding of the city council. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. City of Joliet, 79 Ill., 25. 1875.

2. Charter. The operation of a law for regulating "all existing railroad corporations" extends to and controls railroads incorporated after as well as before its passage, unless exception is provided in their charters. Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Blackman, 63 Ill., 117, 1872; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 56. See, also, Illinois Central R. R.

Co. v. The People, 95 Ill., 313, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 188.

3. — The state has no power to enact laws fixing rates of transportation upon lines of railway previously chartered. Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore R. R. Co. v. Bowlers, 4 Houston (Del.), 506, 1873; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 105.

4. Commissioners; powers. The railway commissioners, under 36 and 37 Vict., c. 43, made an order requiring the C. and the S. E. Railway Companies to make arrangements and to afford facilities for the transfer of traffic from the line of one company to the other; to arrange the arrivals of their trains at a junction in a particular manner, and directing the C. Company to run trains over a disused branch line; and, upon non-compliance with the order, made a further order imposing penalties upon both companies for their disobedience. Held, that the first order was invalid, and that a prohibition must be granted to restrain the commissioners from enforcing it; for, assuming that they had jurisdiction to require each company separately to give facilities according to its powers, they were not entitled to order two companies to act jointly in doing what neither could do separately. Toomer v. London, Chatham and Dover R'y Co., Law Reports, 2 Exchequer Division, 450. 1877.

5. — The railway commissioners, to whom has been transferred the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (17 and 18 Vict., c. 81), have under that act jurisdiction to hear and determine a complaint against a railway company of not, according to its powers, affording all reasonable facilities for receiving, forwarding and delivering passengers and other traffic at and from any of its stations which are used by the company for such passengers or other traffic; and although the commissioners have no jurisdiction to order the company to make a new railway station, or to order any particular works, or otherwise to interfere with the discretion of the company in the mode of performing its obligation to afford such facilities, according to its powers, for the receiving, forwarding and delivering of the traffic, yet they have jurisdiction to order such facilities, even if their doing so would necessitate the making by the company of some structural alteration of such station. South Eastern R'y Co. v. Railway Commissioners, Law Reports, 6 Queen's Bench Division, 586. 1891. But see Same v. Same, Law Reports, 5 Queen's Bench Division, 217. 1879.

6. — The mere fact that railway companies make charges for the conveyance of passengers in excess of those authorized by their special acts, but without any undue preference, is not a breach of their obligation under 17 and 18 Vict., c. 31, s. 2, to "afford according to their respective powers all reasonable facilities for the receiving and forwarding and delivering of traffic upon and from the several railways and canals belonging to or worked by such companies respectively, and for the return of carriages, trucks, boats and other vehicles." And the railway commissioners have no jurisdiction to grant an injunction to restrain the making of such excessive charges. Great Western R'y Co. v. Railway Commissioners, Law Reports, 7 Queen's Bench Division, 182, 1881; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 617.

7. Constitutional law. The creation of a board of railway commissioners, with authority to regulate the rates for carriage of passengers and freight, held to be constitutional. Georgia R. R. and Banking Co. v. Smith, 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ga.), 895, 1883; Tilley v. Savannah. Florida and Western R. R. Co., 5 Federal Reporter, 641, 1881.

8. — The act of the general assembly of the state of Iowa, entitled "An act to establish reasonable maximum rates of charges for the transportation of freight and passengers on the different roads of this state," approved March 23, 1874, is not in conflict with § 4, art. 1, of the constitution of Iowa, which provides that "all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation," and that "the general assembly shall not grant to any citizen, or class of citizens, privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, shall not equally belong to all citizens;" nor is it a regulation of interstate commerce. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S., 155, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 169.

9. — The Winona and St. Peter R. R. Co.

having been incorporated as a common carrier, with all the rights and subject to all the obligations which that term implies, was bound to carry, when called upon for that purpose, and charge only a reasonable compensation therefor. The state has the right to regulate its rates. Winona and St. Peter R. R. Co. v. Blake, 94 U. S., 180, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 177.

10. — The Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. was, by its charter, and the charters of other companies consolidated with it, authorized "to demand and receive such sum or sums of money for the transportation of persons and property, and for storage of property, as it shall deem reasonable." The constitution of Wisconsin, in force when the charters were granted, provides that all acts for the creation of corporations within the state "may be altered or repealed by the legislature at any time after their passage." Held, that the legislature had power to prescribe a maximum of charges to be made by said company for transporting persons or property within the state, or taken up outside the state and brought within it, or taken up inside and carried without. Peik v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 94 U. S., 164, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 411.

11. — Where property has been clothed with a public interest, the legislature may fix a limit to that which shall in law be reasonable for its use. Ib.; Peik v. Chicago and Northwestern R. R. Co., 6 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 177. 1874.

12. — A state law to prevent the unjust discrimination in rates for the transportation of passengers or freight from a point within to a point without the state, though it may incidentally affect commerce between states, cannot be said to be a law regulating commerce among the states, within the meaning of the federal constitution, especially when it does not purport to exercise control over any railroad corporation except those that run or operate in the state, and which have domestic relations with the people of the state. People v. Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific R'y Co., 104 Ill., 476, 1882; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 628.

13. — Section 87 of the railroad act, to prevent unjust discriminations in the rates charged for transporting passengers or

freight, etc., is not limited to railroads organized under the laws of Illinois, but includes all companies operating railroads in Illinois, regardless of the states in which they may have been organized. Ib.

14. — The supreme court of Illinois adheres to the conclusion holding § 87 of the railroad act, to prevent unjust discriminations in the rates charged for carrying passengers or freights, to be free from any constitutional objection, and holding a railway company liable to the penalty imposed for discriminating in the rate of charges as to different contracts for through transportation of freight from points in Illinois to a point in another state, for different distances, charging a greater sum for the less distance of the entire carriage than for the greater distance. Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific R'y Co. v. The People, 105 Ill., 236. 1883. Contra, see Kaiser v. Illinois Central R. R. Co., 18 Federal Reporter, 151, 1883. Carton v. Illinois Central R. R. Co., 59 Ia., 148, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 305.

15. — The state board of railway commissioners has no power to regulate or interfere with the transportation of persons or merchandise by a steamship company between ports within the state, if they be in transit to or from other states, or when in navigating the ocean the vessel goes beyond a marine league from the shore. This power has been conferred upon congress, and is exclusive. Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. R. R. Commissioners, 18 Federal Reporter, 10. 1883.

16. — So much of the act approved April 19, 1873, entitled "An act regulating the charges for transportation of freight upon railroads" (Sess. Acts 1872-3, p. 62), as relates to the transportation of passengers, is unconstitutional, since the title limits the act to the transportation of freight. Evans v. Memphis and Charleston R. R. Co., 56 Ala., 246, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 350.

17. — A state statute requiring railroads to draw the cars of other corporations as well as their own, at reasonable times and for reasonable compensation, to be agreed upon by the parties or fixed by the railroad commissioner, does not conflict with the constitutional provision that congress shall have power to regulate commerce between the states. Rae v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., 14

Federal Reporter, 401, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 470.

18. — The states have the power to regulate the operations of elevators receiving grain from railways and other common carriers. Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S., 118. 1876.

19. Crossing of railways. Where, by a clause in an act of parliament, it was enacted "That nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent any owner or occupier of any ground through which the said railway may pass from carrying, at his or their own expense, any railway or other road, or any cut or canal which such owner or occupier is authorized to make in his or her lands or grounds, across the said main railway, within the respective lands or grounds of such owner or occupier,"— held, that the right given by this clause was not confined to the state of the land at the time the act passed, but was intended for the convenience of the occupiers, from time to time, of the land, partly on one side and partly on the other, of the principal railway, and that without reference to the title under which it was held. Monkland R'y Co. v. Dixon, 3 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 273. 1842.

20. — Sec. 1118 of the Code provides that "all the railroads of the state have power to construct their roads so as to cross each other, if necessary, by the main tracks or branches, or to unite with each other as with branches." Held, that the plain meaning of this section, read by the light of §§ 1118 and 1120, was that various roads might form a homogeneous system, and that these roads, or any future roads, might unite by building tracks from one to the other for the purpose of transporting loaded cars. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. State, 9 Baxter (Tenn.), 522. 1876.

21. Crossing of streets. An ordinance of a city, which required a railroad company to keep a flagman by day and a red lantern by night at a certain street crossing where the company had only a single track, and over which only its usual trains passed, and where it did not appear that such crossing was unusually dangerous, or more so than ordinary crossings, held, not to be a reasonable requirement, and, therefore, within the constitutional limitation on the

of the Revised Statutes of the United States, a suit commenced against it in a state court, its application for removal must show that such corporation is not a banking corporation, and that it has a defense arising under the constitution, or some treaty or law of the United States. Texas and Pacific R'y Co. v. McAlister, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Tex.), 289. 1883.

37. — In order for a railway company to remove a suit brought against it for extortion, from a state to the federal court, on the ground that a statute of the state impairs the validity of its charter in violation of the United States constitution, it is not necessary to decide that the immunity claimed by the defendant can be sustained. If it appears that there is in the suit a question arising under the national constitution, that is sufficient. People of Illinois v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 584; 16 Federal Reporter, 706. 1888.

38. — Where the defense sets up matters involving the construction of the constitution of the United States the cause is removable to the federal courts. So held where the provisions of the constitution of California in relation to taxation were assailed by the defendant. San Mateo County v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 7 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 517. 1892.

39. — That the courts of one state are called upon to construe the laws of another state is no ground for removal of the cause to the federal courts. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 509. 1883.

40. — The truth of averments made by a defendant corporation in its petition for removal, to the effect that it has a defense arising under or by virtue of the constitution or laws of the United States, cannot be inquired into or controverted on a motion to remand the cause to the state court. State v. Texas and Pacific R. R. Co., 3 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 308. 1879.

41. Injunction. The court of last resort of a sovereign state cannot by a federal court, by injunction or other process against the litigants, be deprived of its power to control by mandamus the inferior courts of the state in the discharge of their duties.

White v. Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co., 20 W. Va., 792. 1883.

42. — A township in Illinois and a taxpayer thereof, on behalf of himself and other tax-payers, filed their bill in a court of that state against certain state, county and township officers and the "unknown owners and holders" of certain township bonds, each payable in the sum of $1,000. The bill prayed for an injunction to restrain the levy and collection of a tax to pay the principal of the bonds or any interest thereon. A., a citizen of another state, was the owner of all of them. Held, that he was entitled, under the act of March 3, 1875, to remove the suit to the circuit court of the United States. Harter v. Kernochan, 103 U. S., 562, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 82.

43. Intervention. Intervenor who have without leave filed their petition of intervention may apply for removal of the cause to the federal courts. Snow v. Texas Trunk R. Co., 16 Federal Reporter, 1. 1882.

44. — Before a suit is pending in a state court, for the purpose of the removal act, it must be a suit within the meaning of the state law; and the mere filing of a petition of intervention, without the issuing or service of notice or process of any kind, does not constitute a suit within the meaning of the law of Iowa. Code of Iowa, 1873, § 2599. Iowa and Minnesota Construction Co. Receivership, 6 Federal Reporter, 799; 2 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 178. 1881.

45. Judgment. Where a party to a cause, properly removable to the federal courts, presents a proper petition and bond for such removal, and complies with the statute in relation to the removal of causes, all subsequent proceedings in the state court are void, and a judgment afterwards rendered in the state court may be attacked for want of jurisdiction in a subsequent action upon such judgment. Risley v. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R'y Co., 1 Indianapolis Superior Court Rep., 572. 1874.

46. Jurisdiction. A suit in the state court which falls within the description of removable suits may be removed, although it could not have originally been brought in the federal court. Warner v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 13 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 231. 1876.

47. Leased lines. A., a corporation of Maryland, having assumed the right to take, and B., a corporation of Virginia, the right to grant, a lease of the railroad and franchises of the latter in Virginia, A., with the implied assent of both states, took possession, and is in the actual use of the road and franchises. Held, that A. did not thereby forfeit or surrender its right to remove into the circuit court a suit instituted against it in a court of Virginia by a citizen of that state. Railroad Co. v. Koontz, 104 U. S., 5, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 105.

48. — In a suit against an Iowa corporation and an Illinois lessee, holding under a perpetual lease the railway of the former company, held, that there was no separable controversy entitling the Illinois corporation to a removal of the cause to the federal courts. Le Mars v. Iowa Falls, etc., R. R. Co., 4 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 218. 1882.

49. — A foreign railroad corporation, by merely leasing, possessing and operating the property of a domestic railroad corporation in Ohio, does not thereby become an Ohio corporation, nor such citizen of the state. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Cary, 28 Ohio St., 208, 1876; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 97; Railway Co. v. Stringer, 32 Ohio St., 468, 1877.

50. — Where a railroad company, which was incorporated in another state, leases a railroad lying in this state, and operates the same as owner thereof, and an injury occurs thereon, the person having the right of action for such injury may sue the railroad company in the courts of this state, and such company has no right to remove the suit to the federal court. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Wightman, 29 Grattan (Va.), 481, 1877; Same v. Noell, 32 ib., 394, 1879.

51. Local prejudice. Removal, on the ground of local prejudice, may be made at any time before trial. Cox v. East Tenn., Va. and Ga. R. R. Co., 62 Ga., 168. 1878.

52. — Sufficiency of the affidavit determined. Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Chicago R'y Co. v. New Albany and Salem R. R. Co., 53 Ind., 597. 1876.

53. — Under the third subdivision of § 639 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, commonly known as "the local prejudice act," it is not necessary, in order to the removal of a cause, that it should appear from the record that the parties were citizens of different states at the time the suit was commenced. Miller v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 8 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 460. 1881.

54. Mandamus. Where a state court had properly refused an application to remove a case to the United States court, the case not being removable, and after such refusal the petitioner obtained a record of the case, and filed it in the federal court, which docketed the case, and the said petitioner then took a copy of said order of the federal court and filed it in the state court, and objected to that court proceeding further in the case for the reason that under such circumstances the case had been docketed in the federal court, and the judge of the state court refused to proceed, on application the supreme court of appeals of the state will issue a mandamus to compel him to proceed with the case. White v. Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co., 20 W. Va., 792. 1883.

55. Motion for execution against stockholder of corporation. A motion, under the Missouri statute as to corporations, for execution against a stockholder cannot be removed to the federal court. It is not a "suit at law or in equity" within the meaning of these words as used in the statutes giving the right of removal of causes from state to federal courts. Webber v. Humphreys, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 233. 1879.

56. Mortgage. A suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage, commenced in a state court, was removed to the circuit court, where a motion to remand it was made and overruled. A final decree in favor of the complainant was passed, whereunder the mortgaged property was sold. From the order confirming the sale an appeal was taken. Held, that the final decree, not disclosing a want of jurisdiction of the court below as to subject matter or parties, will be examined here only to ascertain whether the sale conformed to its provisions. Turner v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 106 U. S., 552, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 580.

57. Nominal parties. The right of removal is not defeated by the presence of a party who is merely a formal party to the suit. Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans R. R. Co. v. McComb, 17 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 871. 1879.

58. Non-negotiable contracts. A non-negotiable railway subscription cannot by assignment become subject to suit in the federal courts, where the original contract was between citizens of the same state. Ferry v. Town of Merrimack, 18 Federal Reporter, 657. 1888.

59. Non-suit. Where proper application is made by defendant for the removal of a cause, the state court proceeds no further with the cause, and a non-suit cannot be taken therein by plaintiff. Beery v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 64 Mo., 538, 1877; Powell v. Same, ib., 544, 1877.

60. Petition. If the petition is sufficient, it is the duty of the state court to proceed no further in the cause, but at once to transfer the jurisdiction to the United States court. But if the petition is insufficient, the state court may properly disregard it, and refuse to remove the cause. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R'y Co. v. Risley, 50 Ind., 60. 1875.

61. Power to determine the facts. The state courts have the power to inquire into the truth of the facts alleged in a petition for the removal of a cause from the state to the federal court. Burch v. Davenport and St. Paul R. R. Co., 46 Ia., 449. 1877. But the ultimate question rests with the federal courts. Jackson v. Alabama Great Southern R. R. Co., 53 Miss., 643. 1881.

62. Procedure. Causes at common law, removed to the federal courts, will there proceed under the practice prevailing in the state courts. Bills v. New Orleans, St. Louis and Chicago R. R. Co., 13 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 227. 1876.

63. Proceedings after removal. The federal courts will respect an order in relation to an attachment, made before the removal of the cause. Phelps v. Canada Central R. R. Co., 20 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 450. 1882.

64. — The time of filing a plea in abatement is not extended by the removal of the cause to the federal courts. Wertheim v. Continental R'y and Trust Co., 20 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 503. 1832.

65. Receiver. Where the receiver of a construction company, appointed by a state court, has gone on under the terms of the order of appointment with the work of construction, and has made contracts for that purpose, if a controversy arises between a contractor and the receiver, or between a contractor and other claimants of a common fund, the state court under whose authority the contracts were entered into is the proper tribunal to decide the questions, and the contractor is not entitled to have the cause removed to the federal court on the ground of citizenship. Buell v. Cincinnati, Eflingham and Quincy Construction Co., 10 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 535. 1881.

66. Reorganized corporation. Where two persons in one state, trustees for bondholders of a mortgage of a railroad owned by a company in another, foreclosed the mortgage, bought in the road in trust for the bondholders, and then leased it to a citizen of the state to which they themselves belonged, and then a majority of the bondholders in the state where the original company was, in pursuance of a statute there, formed themselves into a new corporation, to which the statute gave ownership and control of the road, and suit was brought in a state court against the lessee of the road by the trustees who had made the lease, held, that the defendant could not remove the suit from the state court to the federal court on the ground that it was wholly between the new corporation and the lessee, and that the trustees were now merely nominal parties. Knapp v. Railroad Co., 20 Wallace, 117, 1873; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 95.

67. Severable causes. Where an action is brought against a resident and non-resident defendant sounding in tort, and each is liable as a wrong-doer, and the controversy is severable, the party bringing the suit cannot, by joining the non-resident defendant, debar him from asserting a right given by the act of 1875. Clark v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 355; 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 591. 1832.

68. Stock and stockholders. In a controversy between a railroad and its stockholders, as to the validity of certain shares of the railroad stock, the cause cannot be removed to the federal court upon the application of the holder of such stock, where there is no controversy as to its ownership. Shumway v. Chicago and Iowa R. R. Co., 4 Federal Reporter, 385. 1890.

69. Taxation. In a suit to recover state and county taxes, defendant answered and also filed a bond and petition for a removal of the cause to the federal court on the ground that the suit was one arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, and, the petition being denied, applied to the state supreme court for a writ of prohibition. Writ denied. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Superior Court of Tulare County, 62 Cal., 618. 1882.

70. Territorial court. The act of March 3, 1875, is not applicable to a suit brought in a territorial court, although, on the admission of the territory as a state, such suit passed into the jurisdiction of a state court. Ames v. Colorado Central R. R. Co., 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 260. 1877.

71. Time of removal. An application for the removal of a cause to the federal court on the ground of the citizenship of the parties should be made before or at the term at which the cause is first triable under the law, whether the parties are ready to try it or not. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Welch, 44 Ia., 665, 1876; Barber v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 43 Ia., 228, 1876; White v. Chesapeake and Ohio R'y Co., 20 W. Va., 792, 1883; Warner v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 6 Hun (N. Y.), 107, 1875. See, also, Shirley v. Waco Tap R. R. Co., 13 Federal Reporter, 705. 1892.

72. Time of trial. In the case of a removal the jurisdiction of the federal court is not complete, so as to hear and determine the cause, before the day prescribed by the statute, although a transcript has been filed. Barnesville and Moorhead R'y Co., In re, 4 Federal Reporter, 10; 2 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 216, 1880; New Orleans City R. R. Co. v. Crescent City R. R. Co., 5 Federal Reporter, 160. 1891.

73. — Where a case is removed into the United States circuit court after it has been put on the calendar and noticed for trial in the state court, it stands ready for trial in the circuit court immediately upon the record being filed therein. Waldman v. Penn- sylvania R. R. Co., 13 Federal Reporter, 801; 64 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 199. 1882.

74. Two defendants. Where one defendant removes the cause as to him, and the other defendant contests the suit in the state courts, the question of the ouster of the jurisdiction of the state court as to the remaining defendant cannot be raised for the first time on appeal to the supreme court. St. Louis, Wichita and Western R. R. Co. v. Ransom, 29 Kans., 293. 1883.

75. Whole suit removed. If there is a controversy between citizens of different states, and the statute providing for the removal of causes from a state to the federal court has been complied with so as to authorize a removal, then the removal takes the whole suit, notwithstanding there may be other controversies in it. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Chicago, Pekin and Southwestern R. R. Co., 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 133. 1879.

REPLEVIN.

See PLEADING; TAXATION.

1. Dwelling-house. A house held subject to replevin under the facts in the case. Central Branch Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Fritz, 20 Kans., 490. 1878.

2. Rails. Upon motion after non-suit in replevin for the return of a large quantity of imported rails, and for damages for their detention, it appeared by the officer's return that he had replevied the rails and delivered them to the plaintiff, and, by an indorsement upon the writ, that the plaintiff had received them; but it also appeared that from the time of their importation by the defendant, they had been in bond under the laws of the United States; that the plaintiff had never obtained actual possession, — the warehouse receipt and the custom-house delivery order, the possession of which the parties regarded as a necessary means for obtaining possession, and without which the warehouseman refused to deliver, being in the possession of the defendant, who refused to transfer them to the plaintiff. Held, that the defendant, having prevented the plaintiff's obtaining actual possession of the rails, was not entitled to damages for their detention; and that, as there had never been an actual change of possession, an order for a return was unnecessary. Ware River R. R. Co. v. Vibbard, 114 Mass., 458. 1874.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

1. Do not create a liability to a third party. Neither the reports of officers of a corporation made to its stockholders, nor reports made to its directory, in which certain claims for which the corporation is not bound are estimated as liabilities of the corporation, will bind the corporation to pay either principal or interest of the debt, or prevent it from changing its purpose with regard thereto. Hall v. Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co., 58 Ala., 10. 1877.

RES ADJUDICATA.

1. Baggage; merchandise. An action for loss of baggage is not a bar to a second suit for loss of merchandise contained in the trunk of a passenger. Millard v. Missouri, Kansas and Texas R. R. Co., 20 Hun (N. Y.), 191. 1880. See Same v. Same, 86 N. Y., 441; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 311. 1881.

2. Carrier; warehouseman. A cause of action for goods burned while in defendant's hands as a carrier, and a cause of action existing at the same time in favor of the same person against the same defendant, for goods destroyed by fire while in such defendant's hands as a warehouseman, need not be joined; and a judgment upon one is no bar to a subsequent action on the other. Kronshage v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 45 Wis., 500. 1878.

3. Connecting lines; suit against one carrier. If one carrier is sued for the loss of goods, and notifies a second carrier, to whom he delivered the same for transportation, of the pendency of the suit, and requires him to defend, the judgment against the first is not conclusive as to the question of the liability of the second. Chicago and Northwestern R. R. Co. v. Northern Line Packet Co., 70 Ill., 217. 1873.

4. Contract of lease. Where, in a judicial proceeding, the matter passed upon is the right, under the language of a certain contract, to take certain gross receipts on a railroad for the lease of the same, the judgment concludes the question of the meaning of the contract on a suit for subsequent tolls received under the same contract. Tioga R. R. Co. v. Blossburg and Corning R. R. Co., 20 Wallace, 137, 1873; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 81.

5. Contract of carriage of goods. In an action brought against one of two railroad companies for breach of their joint agreement to carry goods from A. to B., the defendant denied that it had agreed to carry or be responsible for the goods, except for part of the distance. The issue thus joined was found for the defendant, and judgment entered thereon. Held, that this judgment was a bar to any subsequent action against both companies upon the same contract. Reynolds v. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R'y Co., 29 Ohio St., 602. 1876.

6. Demurrer. A judgment on demurrer is a bar on the facts stated. Gould v. Evansville and Crawfordsville R. R. Co., 91 U. S., 526. 1875.

7. Negotiable paper. The judgment in an action brought by the holder of negotiable paper against the indorsers is not a bar to his subsequent action against the maker, who was not notified of the pendency of the first action. Railroad Co. v. National Bank, 102 U. S., 14. 1880.

8. Non-suit. Where a judgment of non-suit is pleaded in bar the rulings of the court must be shown in evidence. Spurlock v. Mo. Pacific R'y Co., 76 Mo., 67. 1892.

9. State and federal courts. Where the same matters involved in a suit in equity were involved in a prior suit, though in the United States circuit court, and the two suits were between the same parties, the decision in the prior suit will be conclusive on the trial of the second suit brought in the state court. Ruegger v. Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Co., 103 Ill., 449. 1882.

10. — Where a suit commenced in the state court has been carried to the supreme court, and a new trial ordered, the plaintiff has the right to dismiss his suit and commence in the federal court; the opinion of the supreme court does not constitute a bar unless it finally determines the suit. Hazard v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 4 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 453. 1865.

11. Trespass; streets. A judgment for damages, for constructing a railway over a street without payment of compensation to an abutting owner, is no bar to another action for the continuance of the use for railway purposes. Scott v. Indianapolis and Vincennes R. R. Co., 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 189. 1883.

RESCISSION.

1. Failure of title. Mere failure of title in the grantor will not authorize a rescission. Hart v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 65 Mo., 509. 1877.

2. Right of way contract. Even if a party who has given his obligation to a railway company to convey a right of way had a right to rescind the same for delay in the construction of the road, good faith would require him to give notice of such intention before the company takes possession of the land and constructs its road, so that it may adopt another location, or take proceedings to condemn, before rendering itself otherwise liable. Ross v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 77 Ill., 127. 1875.

REWARDS FOR ARREST OF CRIMINALS.

1. When reward is earned. Where a railway company offered certain rewards for the apprehension and conviction of criminals, and the criminals were arrested, but not convicted, owing to the dismissal of the proceedings against them, which dismissals were entered at the request of the corporation, held, that the company was liable for the rewards. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Goodnight, 10 Bush (Ky.), 552. 1874.

RIGHT OF WAY.

See CONTRACT; CONVEYANCE; CORPORATE POWERS; EMINENT DOMAIN; FIRES; FRANCHISES; INJUNCTION.

1. Construction of railway; contract; breach. In an action for breach of defendant's contract in constructing its track nearer than seven rods from plaintiff's gristmill, and so that it injured plaintiff's mill-dam, the jury found that the defendant had constructed its track in the manner alleged, and that plaintiff's mill property was thereby depreciated in value to a certain amount, but did not find expressly that plaintiff owned the property. The question submitted to the jury related only to plaintiff's property. Held, that the omission could not prejudice the defendant, and is not ground for reversing a judgment against it. Hutchinson v. Chicago and Northwestern Ry Co., 41 Wis., 541. 1877.

2. Contract; breach; mutual breaches. If plaintiff covenanted to give defendant a right of way over a larger amount of land than he owned, he may be liable to defendant in damages for a breach of the contract, but that will not defeat his right of action for defendant's breach of the contract on its part. Id.

3. — deed in fee. An owner of land entered into articles of agreement with a railway company, whereby, "in consideration of $450, payable as hereinafter stated, with interest in full, for right of way and all claims for damages," he agreed to convey to the said company, "by a good and sufficient deed in fee simple, with covenant of general warranty," a certain strip of land. "Upon the delivery of said deed . . . at any time after the expiration of five years, the said . . . company agreed to pay . . . the said sum of $450." The portions of the above contract cited in italics were written and the rest printed. Held, that there was no conflict or repugnance between the different parts of the contract, and that the plain intent of the parties was to contract for a conveyance of the strip of land in fee. Wheeling, Pittsburgh and Baltimore R. R. Co. v. Gourley, 90 Pa. St., 171. 1891.

4. — Where the owner of said land, after entering into the above articles of agreement, conveyed the land to a third party, reserving to himself only the right to convey to said company a right of way over said strip of land, held, that he had put it out of his power to carry into execution his contract with the company, and that, therefore, he could not bring an action of equitable ejectment against said company to enforce payment of the purchase money for said strip of land. Ib.

5. Conveyance. A conveyance of right of way construed. Warner v. Sandusky, etc., R. R. Co., 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ohio), 417, 1883; Hutchinson v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 87 Wis., 582, 1875.

6. Drainage. A deed conveyed a strip of land to a railroad company, its successors and assigns forever, "provided always, and this deed is upon the express condition," that a certain system of drainage was to be kept up by the company. Held, that this created a condition subsequent in the deed, and voidable by the grantor upon condition broken. Hammond v. Port Royal and Augusta R. R. Co., 15 So. Car., 10, 1880; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. Cases, 352. See, also, Same v. Same, 16 So. Car., 567, 1881; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 352.

7. Donation of right of way; right of donee to permit another company to use it. Where the donee of a right of way had consented to the use of the same by another railroad company, held, that this constituted a good defense to an application by the donor for an injunction to restrain defendant from the use and occupation of the right of way. Holbert v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 88 Ia., 815. 1874.

8. Easement; spring. A grant of a right of way to a railway company, reserving a spring and the privilege of laying pipes thereto, held to entitle the company to lay its tracks over the spring upon protecting the same properly. Matthews v. Delaware and Hudson Canal Co., 27 Hun (N. Y.), 427. 1880.

9. Grant. A right of way cannot be granted by deed, estoppel, or otherwise, by any one but the land owner; a mere equitable owner of an undivided interest in a possible reversion cannot give it, and it cannot well exist over an undivided interest alone. Tapert v. Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee R'y Co., 50 Mich., 267; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 413. 1883.

10. License. Where a licensee has a right to the possession of land for a particular purpose, and commits no act which his license does not cover, the owner of the land cannot destroy such right. Buchanan v. Logansport, etc., R'y Co., 71 Ind., 265. 1880.

11. — H., being the owner of certain land and the mines thereunder, by indenture conveyed the surface to C.; but he excepted and reserved a "wagon or cart road" of the width of eighteen feet, to be at all times thereafter kept in repair at his own costs and charges. Held, that these words would not enable H. to lay down a railroad or tramway for the carriage of coals raised from neighboring collieries belonging to him. Bidder v. North Staffordshire R'y Co., Law Reports, 4 Queen's Bench Division, 412. 1878.

12. — An answer, in an action to recover real property, averred that the defendant was granted a license by the plaintiff to build and operate a railway upon such land under a contract that the damages thereto would thereafter be settled, and that, acting upon such license, the defendant built a railway thereon, and expended large sums of money, of which the defendant had knowledge. Held, that said answer was sufficient on demurrer. Held, also, that it was not necessary to aver to what officer or agent of the company the license was given. Buchanan v. Logansport, etc., R'y Co., 71 Ind., 263. 1880.

13. — Under a trust deed which vested the legal title to lands in a trustee for the benefit of a married woman and her children, but which gave to the husband the absolute control and management of the land, the husband might give to a railway company license to construct its line over such lands, binding so long as he lived, or, at least, until revoked, unless such right of way injuriously affected the duties and limitations imposed upon the husband by the deed. Tutt v. Port Royal and Augusta R. R. Co., 16 So. Car., 365. 1881.

14. — Where a railway company seeking to appropriate lands does not obtain authority from the owner of the fee, it can obtain no rights of control over the land by any license or grant from the holder of a contingent dower interest or a tenant at will. Toledo, Ann Arbor and Grand Trunk R'y Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich., 456, 1882; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 378.

15. Notice; railway grade. A vendee who purchases land with an open, graded railway track across it, with its embankments and excavations plainly visible, purchases with notice of whatever rights in said track there may be outstanding, and the warranty deed of his vendor cannot affect such outstanding rights in third parties, nor can he divest such rights upon a breach by the third parties of a condition subsequent contained in the grant to them by the vendor. Paul v. Connersville and Newcastle Junction R. R. Co., 51 Ind., 537, 1875; Fl. Wayne, Muncie and Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. Gough, ib., 600, 1875.

16. Street; abutting owner of private way. A land owner agreed to convey to a railway company a strip of land, part of which was to be occupied by its track, and part to be used for a public street, but the whole to revert absolutely on breach of condition. He afterwards made a plat on which this strip was marked as a street, and, in acknowledging it, provided that it should remain a street if the company performed its obligations, but if not, it should instantly revert. After his death his estate was partitioned, except the railway strip, and one of the partitioners received certain premises abutting thereon, which he sold. This partitioner afterwards obtained grants from the rest of the heirs, and conveyed the strip to the railway company unconditionally. A subsequent grantee of the premises which he had previously sold claimed a right to use the street, where the track lay, as a private way appurtenant to his lots, and sought to enjoin the company from occupying it with another track. Held, that the bill for injunction would not lie; the plat had been made with reference to a way that had never been unconditionally dedicated, and the premises occupied by the way had afterwards been unconditionally conveyed to the company, and became its private property, before complainant's title had passed out of a representative of the estate. Tapert v. Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee R'y Co., 50 Mich., 267; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 413. 1883.

17. Width. Where a statute authorizes a railway company to receive, from owners of land over which it is about to construct its line, conveyances of right of way, not exceeding a specified width, an instrument granting such right, without specifying the width, should be construed as granting a right of way as wide as the company may choose to occupy, not exceeding the statutory width. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co. v. Rayl, 69 Ind. 424, 1880; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 182.

ROLLING STOCK.

See MORTGAGE.

1. Execution. Rolling stock is part of the realty and cannot be seized on execution. Grand Trunk R'y Co. v. Eastern Counties Bank, 10 Lower Canada Jurist, 11. 1865.

ROUTE.

See CHARTER; CORPORATE POWERS; RIGHT OF WAY; STREET RAILWAYS; SUBSCRIPTIONS BY INDIVIDUALS.

1. Selection; filing map. A railroad company having filed a map showing its proposed route, brought this action to restrain defendant, another company, from locating or constructing its road upon such route or any part thereof. Held, denying a motion for a preliminary injunction, that, even granting that plaintiff had acquired the right to purchase or condemn the lands in question, it had a sufficient remedy without such action in its power to acquire the lands and eject the defendant; but that it had not, by such location, acquired the right to prevent the owner from using it as he chose, even for the building thereon of another road, until it had actually acquired title. N. Y. and Albany R. R. Co. v. N. Y., West Shore, etc., R. R. Co., 11 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 836. 1882.

2. — The purchase of the lands in question by another railroad company will not, in such case, sustain the right to an injunction. If plaintiff's rights are thereby taken away, it has no standing in court; if not, it is not injured, in the absence of any act which unfits the lands for its use. Ib.

SALES.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; EVIDENCE; FRAUD.

1. Delivery to carrier is delivery to purchaser. Goods bought and paid for were delivered to a railway company, whose bill of lading was executed to the vendor, acknowledging the receipt of the goods to be delivered to the vendee. Held, that the contract for transportation was in legal effect with the vendee, and the company was liable to him for non-delivery of the goods. In such case the title vests in the purchaser, and a delivery of the goods to the carrier is a delivery to the purchaser himself. Gwyn v. Richmond and Danville R. R. Co., 85 N. C., 429, 1881; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 452.

2. Sale of railway. The sale of the Macon and Brunswick Railroad held to be binding upon the state. Wood v. Macon and Brunswick R. R. Co., 68 Ga., 539. 1882.

3. — A railway company has no implied power to sell any portion of the land actually used for the railway or works. Mulliner v. Midland R'y Co., Jessell's Decisions, 252; 48 Law Journal Rep. (Ch.), 258; Law Reports, 11 Chancery Div., 611. 1879. See, also, Campbell v. Marietta and Cincinnati R. R. Co., 23 Ohio St., 168, 1872; Clarke v. Omaha and Southwestern R. R. Co., 5 Neb., 814, 1877.

4. — Contract for sale of a railway franchise construed. Clarke v. Omaha and Southwestern R. R. Co., 4 Neb., 458, 1876; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 423.

5. — Under the laws of Nebraska a corporation organized for the purpose of building a railroad has no power to sell or dispose of its property or franchises until its road has been constructed. Ib.

6. — purchaser's liability. A purchaser of the road-bed, property and franchises of a railroad company is not liable for its obligations which are not liens upon the property. Sappington v. Little Rock, Mississippi River and Texas R. R. Co., 37 Ark., 23, 1881; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 830.

7. — stockholders. Where a stockholder in a railroad corporation has signed a contract disposing of its assets, knowing its contents, and voting at meetings of the company to carry it into effect, he cannot afterward repudiate it, or question the bona fides of the transaction, no fraud being shown. Clarke v. Omaha and Southwestern R. R. Co., 4 Neb., 458, 1876; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 423.

8. — The sale of the Shelby Railroad by the trustees of the company to the Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington R. R. Co., made upon the condition that it was not to be effectual until ratified by the stockholders of both companies, is declared a nullity and set aside on equitable principles, because no notice was given, as required by the charter, of the meeting of the Shelby R. R. Co. at which the sale was ratified. Stockholders of Shelby R. R. Co. v. Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington R. R. Co., 12 Bush (Ky.), 62, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 213.

SCRIP CERTIFICATES.

1. Judgment in gold coin. Where the scrip certificates sued on are for the payment of gold coin, the judgment should be for the amount found due, payable in gold coin; not for the market value of it, payable in paper currency. Foster v. Atlantic and Pacific R. R. Co., 1 Mo. App., 390. 1876.

SECRET SERVICE.

1. Directors' powers. A suggestion that money has been used for "secret service" will not exonerate the directors from accounting for such money. York and North Midland R'y Co. v. Hudson, 19 Eng. Law & Equity, 361; 23 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S.), Chanc., 529. 1853.

SECURITY FOR COSTS.

See Costs.

1. Executor. It is discretionary with the trial court whether or not to require security for costs in an action by an executor or administrator. Tolman v. Syracuse, Binghamton and N. Y. R. R. Co., 92 N. Y., 353. 1883.

SET-OFF.

See BONDS OF RAILWAY COMPANIES; CARRIAGE OF MERCHANDISE; GARNISHMENT; PLEADING.

1. Dismissal. The railway company sued G., its agent, for a balance due on account. G. had purchased claims against the company, which he pleaded as a set-off. The account was referred and the report showed a balance due G. Held, that the company could not thereafter dismiss the action without the consent of G. Galbraith v. East Tenn. Va. and Ga. R. R. Co., 11 Heiskell (Tenn.), 169. 1872.

2. Wages. In an action by an employe against his employer for wages due, the latter cannot recoup unliquidated damages arising from an act of the employe outside of the line of his duty. Nashville and Chattanooga R. R. Co. v. Chumley, 6 Heiskell (Tenn.), 325. 1871.

SETTLEMENT.

1. Administrator. A receipt by an administrator to a railway company in full settlement of an indebtedness to his intestate, held a valid settlement under the facts of the case. Ruby v. Railroad Co., 8 W. Va. 269. 1875.

2. Fraud. Where one who has been injured, and settled her claim for damages, and given a receipt in full, has repudiated and rescinded the settlement for fraud, and brought suit for the original injury, evidence of the representations and promises under which the receipt was obtained ought not to be excluded on the objection that it tended to vary a written contract by parol evidence. Michigan Central R. R. Co. v. Dunham, 80 Mich., 128. 1874.

3. — In such an action a modification of a request to charge that an acquiescence in the settlement by using the money, or any portion of it, after the discovery of the alleged fraud would defeat the plaintiff's right of action, by adding the proviso: "Unless you find that she made a tender, or returned the money, or offered to make a tender, and was prevented from completing it by the acts of defendant or its agents," is not error; this addition was necessary to prevent the inference to which the request was open, that a use of the money, although defendant had refused to receive it back, would operate as a waiver of the fraud and an affirmation of the settlement. Id.

4. — In tendering back money it is immaterial whether the bills transferred back are the identical ones received or not; nor was the previous use of $15 out of the $100 received, a matter of any consequence. Id.

5. — If a railway company obtains the signature of the plaintiff to a paper, purporting to be a settlement and discharge of the cause of action, by the fraudulent representations that it is merely a receipt for a gratuity, the plaintiff may maintain his action without returning the money paid him. Mullen v. Old Colony R. R. Co., 127 Mass., 86. 1879.

6. — Evidence held sufficient to show that a release was not fraudulently obtained. Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Shay, 82 Pa. St., 198, 1876; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 462.

7. Mistake. When parties make out what they believe to be a correct itemized account of their mutual dealings, and the balance is thereupon paid, the items can no longer be considered unsettled within the meaning of R. S., ch. 81, § 84, although one item was omitted by mistake. Lancey v. Maine Central R. R. Co., 72 Me., 84. 1881.

SEWERS.

See WATERCOURSES.

1. Assessments. The expense of constructing a sewer in one of the streets of a city may be assessed upon the track, sleepers and rails of a railroad company, which are laid in such street. Troy and Lansingburgh R. R. Co. v. Kane, 9 Hun (N. Y.), 506, 1877; affirmed, Same v. Same, 72 N. Y., 614, 1878. See, also, Baltimore and Potomac R. R. Co. v. Dennison, 3 MacArthur (Dist. of Columbia), 245. 1879.

2. Street railways. The easement acquired by the appellee under its charter and the ordinances of the city held subject to the paramount right of the city; and in constructing its railway the appellee knew, or was bound to know, that its use of the bed of the street for railway purposes was liable at any time to be interfered with, whenever the city authorities might deem it necessary for the public welfare. Kirby v. Citizens' R'y Co., 48 Md., 168. 1877.

SHIPPING RECEIPTS.

1. Mistake in; estoppel. A railway company is not estopped by its shipping receipt from showing that it has in fact delivered all the goods that it has received. Horsman v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., 30 Upper Canada (Queen's Bench), 180, 1870; Same v. Same, 81 ib., 535, 1871.

SIDE-TRACK.

See CONTRACTS; EMINENT DOMAIN; STREETS.

1. License; private use. Where parties living adjacent to a railroad track made the grade and furnished the cross-ties for a switch for neighborhood convenience, under a contract with the railroad company that the switch should remain permanently, etc., held, that after the road and franchises of the contracting company had been sold under a decree of foreclosure, the corporation purchasing the same might remove the switch, unless it assumed the original contract, under sec. 3 of the Railroad Act of March 3, 1865. Smitth v. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co., 1 Indianapolis Superior Court Rep., 88. 1871.

SLEEPING CARS.

1. Contract. Courts ought not to favor a monopoly in the accommodations which are necessities to the traveling public, or foster it by the invention or application of extraordinary or unusual orders or remedies. This principle applied to a sleeping car contract. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Texas and Pacific R. R. Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 625. 1882.

2. — A contract between a railway company and a sleeping car company construed. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Missouri Pacific R'y Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 634; 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 645. 1882.

3. Common carriers. Sleeping car companies are common carriers and must treat all persons alike. Nevin v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 106 Ill., 222; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 92. 1883. A passenger, conducting himself with decorum, and tendering the usual fare at a proper time and in an orderly manner, is entitled to a berth if there is one vacant. Ib.

4. Injury to passengers; liability of railway company. A passenger, traveling in the coach of a sleeping car company, may properly assume, in the absence of notice to the contrary, that the whole train is under one management, and in such case, where he sustains injury by the negligence of one in the employ of the sleeping car company, he may maintain an action against the railway company. What the effect of such notice would be is not determined. Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Indianapolis R. R. Co. v. Walrath, 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ohio), 371. 1882.

5. Loss of clothing, etc. A sleeping car company is not held to the strict accountability of an innkeeper. Its liability is the same as that of the railway company. Welch v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 16 Abbott's Practice (N. S.), 352. 1874. See, also, Woodruff Sleeping and Parlor Coach Co. v. Diehl, 84 Ind., 474, 1883; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 294; Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Smith, 78 Ill., 360, 1874; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 328.

6. — Neither as a common carrier nor as an inn-keeper is a sleeping car company responsible. It must not only furnish a berth to its guests, but keep a watch during the night, exclude unauthorized persons from the car, and take reasonable care towards preventing thefts. If loss should occur by reason of negligence in this regard, the company is liable for such articles as are usually carried by a passenger about his person, and such a sum as may be deemed reasonably necessary for traveling expenses. Blum v. Southern Pullman Palace Car Co., 1 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 500, 1876; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 321.

7. Right to have cars forwarded. The C. Company was bound to afford to Scottish east coast traffic of the N. B. Company using its railway all usual facilities, including, so far as might reasonably be required, through carriages, and also any greater facilities which it might grant to any other company in respect of such traffic, or of any traffic competitive with it. A Pullman car weighing twenty-one tons is so different from a saloon sleeping carriage weighing three tons that the forwarding of the lighter carriage for one line does not entitle another line to insist on the forwarding of the Pullman car as a similar facility. Caledonian

Penalty for not Consuming — Agreement to Maintain Siding.

Ry Co. v. North British Ry Co., 3 Neville & McNamara, 56. 1877.

8. Tickets; contract; change of cars. A passenger purchased of a company engaged in furnishing sleeping cars for the use of passengers over a certain continuous line of railways, a ticket purporting to entitle him to accommodations between certain stations, in a certain sleeping car, and in a berth to be designated on the ticket, by the conductor of such car, in the manner directed by the ticket. Upon entering that car at the starting point, a certain berth was assigned to him, and designated on the ticket in the manner provided by it, by the conductor, but, before arriving at his destination, the car was removed from the train by the defendant, and a different berth in a different sleeping car was offered to him, which he refused, and sued the company for a breach of its contract. Held, that by the contract evidenced by the ticket, the passenger was entitled to a continuous passage in that berth, on that particular car, or in an equally desirable berth on an equally safe, convenient and comfortable sleeping car. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Taylor, 65 Ind., 158. 1879.

9. — An answer in such action, alleging that the defendant had simply furnished the car to the railway companies, for the use of passengers, for a certain rent, pursuant to a contract between it and such companies, but admitting that the change of cars was made as alleged in the complaint, is insufficient. Id.

10. — loss; expulsion of passenger. Where a passenger who had purchased a ticket for a particular berth in a sleeping car and had lost the same, but gave satisfactory assurance that he had purchased the same, was expelled from the car, there being no abusive language or personal violence used by the conductor in charge, in an honest purpose to execute a reasonable rule of the company, but through a mistaken judgment, it was held that a verdict, in a suit by the passenger against the company, for $3,000 damages was grossly excessive, and that in such a case, where men might honestly differ in opinion, and where the passenger might have kept his berth by paying the fare of $1.50, but would not, he was only entitled to recover the price he paid for his ticket and a reasonable compensation for the trouble and inconvenience he suffered by being deprived of his berth in the sleeping car. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Reed, 75 Ill., 125. 1874.

SMOKE.

1. Penalty for not consuming. The Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 and 9 Vict., c. 20, s. 114), enacts that "every locomotive steam-engine to be used on the railway shall, if it use coal or other similar fuel emitting smoke, be constructed on the principle of consuming and so as to consume its own smoke; and if any engine be not so constructed the company or party using such engine shall forfeit 5*l.* for every day during which such engine shall be used on the railway." Held, that a penalty is not incurred under this section, unless the engine using smoke-emitting fuel is so defectively constructed as to be incapable of consuming its own smoke, though used with proper care; that, consequently, no penalty attaches where the engine, though properly constructed on the principle of consuming its own smoke, is so carelessly used on a railway as to emit instead of consume its smoke. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry Co. v. Wood, 2 Ellis & Ellis, 344; 105 E. C. L., 343. 1839.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

See CONVEYANCE; RIGHT OF WAY.

1. Agreement to maintain siding. An agreement was entered into between a railway company and a land-owner, part of whose land had been, under another agreement, taken by the company, whereby, in consideration of the previous withdrawal by the land owner of a petition to parliament against the company's bill, the company agreed to construct and forever maintain at its expense a siding of specified length alongside the line upon land belonging to the land owner, and to be provided by him for that purpose, for the use and to the reasonable satisfaction of the land owner. Held, that this agreement was not incapable of being enforced by a court of equity. Greene

Sinking Fund.

v. West Cheshire R'y Co., Law Reports, 13 Equity Cases, 44, 1871; 1 Eng. (Moak), 546.

2. Contract by agent. An agent of a railway company, without any direct authority, agreed to sell to the plaintiff a piece of land of the company at a certain price per acre. Some of the terms were that the company should lay down a branch railway to the land; that the plaintiff, who was going to erect iron-works on the land, should use the company's railway in preference to others—use it whenever reasonably practicable, and for the longest distance it was reasonably capable of use; and that the traffic to and from the works should be conveyed on the terms of a certain prior agreement between the parties relating to another piece of land bought by the plaintiff from the company, and the other stipulations of that agreement carried out. The company's surveyor measured the land, the company's engineer laid down the branch railway to it, the plaintiff was let into possession, and his machinery was brought in the company's wagons to the land, and there deposited. After this the company refused to complete the sale. On an appeal from a decree of the master of the rolls, directing a specific performance, held, by the Lord Justice Turner, dissentiente Lord Justice Knight Bruce, that the stipulations as to the use of the defendant's railway by the plaintiff did not render a decree for specific performance improper; for that the insertion of a covenant to that effect would effectuate what the parties must be held to have contemplated. Wilson v. West Hartlepool R'y Co., 2 De Gex, Jones & Smith, 475; 67 Eng. Ch., 475. 1964.

3. Contract to make a branch line. A railway company applied to parliament for an act to form its line, and its application was opposed by a land owner through whose land the line would pass. He afterwards withdrew his opposition on the faith of an agreement which provided for the formation of a branch line to his iron works. The company obtained an act for this purpose, but afterwards determined to abandon its intention of making the branch railway, and was about to apply to parliament for an act to enable it to do so, when the plaintiff filed his bill for an injunction. The vice-chancellor of England granted the injunction, but the lord chancellor, on appeal, reversed his decision and dissolved the injunction. Held, that a contract to make a railway is not one of which a court of equity will compel the specific performance, but will leave the parties to their legal remedies. Heathcote v. North Staffordshire R'y Co., 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 358. 1850.

4. Foreign corporation; ditches. A court of chancery, in Georgia, has no jurisdiction to compel a domestic corporation to go into a foreign state and specifically execute a contract, by opening ditches on complainant's land, keeping the same open to a certain depth, constructing and keeping in repair cattle-guards thereon, and on its failure thus to perform, to enforce that decree by attachment and sequestration of its property in Georgia. Port Royal R. R. Co. v. Hammond, 58 Ga., 523, 1877; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 108.

5. Parties. Where a railway company desired to purchase land, and the land owner would not sell the land unless the company would buy the whole of his farm, which the company could not lawfully do, and the company procured one L. to make the purchase, in a suit for specific performance, held, that L. was a necessary party. Pennsylvania and New England R. R. Co. v. Ryerson, 36 N. J. Eq., 112. 1882.

6. Railway stock. A court of equity will decree a specific performance of an agreement for the sale of a certain number of shares in a railway company. Duncuft v. Albrecht, 12 Simons (Eng. Ch.), 162. 1841.

C. bonds, known as "old sixes," for those known as "new sixes," must, in effecting such exchange, all act together, and any attempted exchange made by one or two of such committee without consultation with, and con-

STATE RAILWAYS.

See INJURIES TO PASSENGERS; INJURIES TO PERSONS GENERALLY; INJURIES TO PERSONS ON THE TRACK.

1. Bills and notes; powers of superintendent. The superintendent of a certain railroad, the property of the state of Georgia, was authorized by statute to make contracts necessary for the general working and business of the road, not exceeding a prescribed sum, "and over that amount subject to the approval of the governor in writing." Held, that notes executed by the superintendent, each calling for an amount over that prescribed, without the approval of the governor in writing, were void, even in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value in due course of trade, and although similar notes had been executed and paid by the superintendent. Elliott National Bank v. Western and Atlantic R. R. Co., 2 Lea (Tenn.), 676. 1879.

2. Liability for negligence; Hoosac Tunnel. Under the Stats. of 1875, ch. 77; 1876, ch. 150; 1878, ch. 191; 1879, ch. 141, and 1880, ch. 261, an action may be maintained against the manager of the Troy and Greenfield Railroad and the Hoosac Tunnel, for an injury to property caused by the defective construction of the railway, under such circumstances that an action could have been maintained had the road been owned by a corporation and not by the commonwealth, although the defective construction was the act of a former manager. Amstein v. Gardner, 184 Mass., 4. 1883.

STATION.

See CONTRACT; DEPOTS AND DEPOT GROUNDS.

1. Abandonment. Where the place claimed to be a station was a mere platform at which certain daily trains had stopped to take or leave passengers, but the railway company had never sold tickets to or from the place and kept no office or agent there, and had never placed it in its list of stations or on its time cards, it was held not to be "a station" within the meaning of the statute which forbids a railway company to abandon a station without the consent of the railway commissioners. State v. New Haven and Northampton Co., 41 Conn., 131, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 84. See, also, Same v. Same, 42 Conn., 56. 1875.

2. — power of commissioners. The commissioners, upon the application of a railway company for the discontinuance of one of two stations within the town of C., ordered that the station should be discontinued upon a certain private road which had been made to the other station being conveyed by the owner of the land unconditionally to the town of C., and upon the company paying $250 to the town to be expended in certain highway improvements. Held, that the order was one that the commissioners had no power to make. Town of Chester v. Connecticut Valley R. R. Co., 41 Conn., 348. 1874.

3. — The company having performed one of the conditions and procured the performance of the other, applied to the commissioners for an absolute order for the discontinuance of the station, and the commissioners, after notice and a hearing, made a supplemental order, finding that its conditions had been complied with and directing, unconditionally, the discontinuance of the station. Held, that this order, being supplemental to and founded upon the original void order, was also void. Ib.

4. Amendment to charter. A railway company abandoned a station on its road, upon application to and approval by the railway commissioners, who were authorized, upon a hearing, to grant such permission. The legislature afterwards passed an act requiring the company to stop its trains at the station. A general statute provided that when any amendment of the charter of a corporation should be made, if not otherwise specially provided in the resolution making the amendment, it should not become operative unless accepted by the corporation within six months at a meeting called for the purpose. The charter in question contained a provision that the general assembly might alter or repeal it at its pleasure. Upon a mandamus to compel the company to stop its trains at the station in question, it was held that the act was operative without acceptance by the company. State v. New Haven and Northampton Co., 43 Conn., 351. 1876.

5. Contract; breach; damages. If a contract to erect a depot is established the measure of damage for its breach would be the additional value that would have accrued to plaintiff's land had the depot been erected. Watterson v. Allegheny Valley R. R. Co., 74 Pa. St., 203, 1873; 8 Amer. R'y Rep., 30.

6. — evidence. A land owner for $1 released to a railway company the right of way, etc., through his land, and sold it a lot on which to erect a depot. In an action against the company for not erecting the depot, parol evidence that its erection was the consideration for the release was admissible. Ib.

7. Establishment by law. The provision of the act of the general assembly of Connecticut, 1866, relative to the abandonment of railroad stations, whilst it authorizes the railroad commissioners to consent, or to refuse to consent, to the abandonment of an existing station, confers upon them no authority to bind the state by contract not to exercise its legislative power touching the establishment of such stations. The act entitled "An act establishing a depot at Plantsville," approved July 15, 1873, does not impair the obligation of any contract between that state and the New Haven and Northampton Company. Railroad Co. v. Hamersley, 104 U. S., 1, 1881; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. E. Cases, 418.

8. Signal stations; right to flag trains. Where a Branch Railway Act gave a land owner the right to stop by signal all ordinary trains, held, that accelerated trains forming part of fast through trains from London were not "ordinary trains," though the fares charged were at ordinary rate. Turner v. London and South Western R'y Co., Law Reports, 17 Equity Cases, 561. 1874.

9. Statute of frauds. Where a bill was filed for the specific performance of a contract, not in writing, alleging that the officers of a certain railroad company, in consideration that the plaintiff would consent that the road should run through his land, without charge against the company for the right of way or for damages, if the company would erect a depot on plaintiff's land and make it one of its stations, and setting forth that the road had been built, and that plaintiff had not claimed or recovered anything for the right of way or for his damages, held, that there was no such part performance of the contract by either party as authorized a specific performance of this agreement, not in writing, in relation to lands or an interest therein. Haisten v. Savannah, Griffin, etc., R. R. Co., 51 Ga., 193, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 424.

10. Stopping trains. The railway commissioners granted permission to discontinue a station when the company should have complied with certain conditions, one of which was the establishment of a new station and the erection of a proper building at a place designated in the order. Held, that the action of the commissioners, and the establishment of the new station by the company under the order, did not constitute a contract between the state and the company; and that an act of the legislature requiring trains to stop at the station was not void as impairing the obligation of a contract. State v. New Haven and Northampton Co., 43 Conn., 351. 1876.

STATUTES.

[The various statutes in relation to railways will be found construed under different titles throughout this book.]

1. Contract against public policy; special act. An agreement by a peer to withdraw his opposition to a special act of incorporation on condition that the line of the company should be changed was held in the queen's bench to be void as a fraud upon the legislature. But the judgment was reversed in the exchequer chamber because it did not appear that the agreement was meant to be concealed. Lord Howden v. Simpson, 10 Adolphus & Ellis, 793; 37 E. C. L., 416. 1839.

2. Void statute; amendments. A void enactment cannot be validated by subsequent amendments. State v. Little Rock, Miss. River and Texas R'y Co., 31 Ark., 701. 1877.

STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF.

1. Bill of sale; creditors. Mere production of a bill of sale, which would be valid and binding as against the vendor, is not sufficient as against a creditor or subsequent purchaser, without proof of good faith or payment of value. Kansas Pacific R'y Co. v. Couse, 17 Kans., 571. 1877.

2. Contract to support widow and children. The jury found a verbal contract between the company and the widow of a person killed by one of its trains, whereby she agreed not to sue for damages, and the company thereupon agreed to support her and her three children (all then minors) during her life, and, in the event of her death before the majority of the youngest child, to support the children until then. Held, that this contract was within the statute of frauds (Code, § 1738), as an agreement "not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof." Deaton v. Tenn. Coal and R. R. Co., 13 Heiskell (Tenn.), 650. 1874.

3. Injury to employes. An agreement by parol, with an injured employe, to give him employment at a specified price per day so long as he should remain disabled, is not within the statute of frauds. The contract may be performed within one year, as the employe may die within that time. East Tenn., Va. and Ga. R. R. Co. v. Staub, 7 Lea (Tenn.), 397. 1881.

4. Order; acceptance. A verbal acceptance of an order is valid and enforceable only when the drawee has funds of the drawer in his hands, so that, by payment of the order, he satisfies his own debt. Such acceptance by a contractor on a railway, for the debt of his subcontractor, where the contractor does not owe the subcontractor, is not valid. Walton v. Mandeville, Dowling & Co., 56 Ia., 597. 1881.

5. Promise to pay railway fares. Where a wife pledges her trunk to pay the railroad fare of a child traveling under her charge, and the husband agrees to pay the fare if the trunk is forwarded, and, when forwarded, replevies it, the carrier is entitled to a finding that its special interest in the trunk is the amount of the fare thus promised to be paid. In such a case, the husband's contract is not to pay the debt of another, and is not within the statute of frauds. Coquard v. Union Depot Co., 10 Mo. App., 261. 1881.

6. Real estate contract. Under an oral agreement that defendant would convey to plaintiff its interest in certain real estate if the plaintiff would procure and pay in consideration therefor a certain specified amount in the warrants of the county of Jasper, the warrants were tendered to defendant's agent, according to the terms of the agreement, whereupon the defendant refused to convey. Held, that the contract was within the statute of frauds, and specific performance should not be decreed. Wilson v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 41 Ia., 448. 1875.

7. Specific performance; part performance. An oral contract by a railway company to release to a person one of two tracts of land included in its location and owned by him at the time the location was filed, upon the consideration that he should not demand damages for taking the land so released, is a contract for the transfer of an interest in lands within the statute of frauds; and neither the building of fences by the company after the making of the contract, dividing the land released from the land used by the company for its railway, and the digging of a new channel for a brook along the dividing line between the land, nor the refraining by the owner from collecting compensation for the taking of the land covered by the agreement, and the continued occupation by him of the land, constitute such part performance as to warrant a decree in equity for the specific performance of the agreement. Barnes v. Boston and Maine R. R. Co., 180 Mass., 388. 1881.

ing vessel, because she has superior powers of locomotion to the sailing vessel, does not apply to a row-boat, which has adequate means of locomotion to enable it to avoid a collision. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co. v. Adams, 89 Pa. St., 81. 1879.

I. GENERAL MATTERS.

1. Advances of stock; interest. An agreement to account for dividends on stock advanced is not an agreement to pay interest on the stock. Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Papot, 67 Ga., 675. 1881.

2. Borrowed stock. Stock of a corporation borrowed from the owner, returnable upon demand, may be repaid in kind, notwithstanding the subsequent insolvency of the corporation. Fosdick v. Greene, 27 Ohio St., 484. 1875.

3. Brokers. Where a broker sells without due notice stock purchased by him for a customer, on a margin, and held in pledge to secure the advance made by him to make the purchase, he does not thereby, as matter of law, extinguish all claim against the customer for the advance. Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y., 25. 1880.

4. — A broker may recover for losses paid by him for his principal. Pollock v. Stables, 5 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 352. 1848.

5. Consolidation of railways. The mere consolidation of one railroad company with another company since the taking effect of the act of March 1, 1870, authorizing the consolidation of such companies, will not discharge or release a non-assenting subscriber of stock, Atchison, Colo. and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Phillips County, 25 Kans., 261, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 826.

6. — A railway and canal company was formed by the union of several ancient canal and three railway companies, and power was given to the united companies to issue new shares for the purpose of raising capital. A large debt was due before the act of union from one of the canal companies, and in pursuance of a resolution passed at a general meeting, a call was made on the shareholders of the united companies for the purpose of paying it off. Some of the shareholders in the new company objecting to this application of the moneys to be raised under the new act, and alleging that it would prevent the construction of the railway at all, filed a bill for an injunction to restrain the directors from enforcing a call or applying any of the funds in their hands for the purpose of paying the debt. A demurrer for want of equity was allowed. Cooper v. Shropshire Union R'y Co., 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 186. 1849.

7. Contractors. Where, under its charter, the directors of a railway company issued shares of stock to a contractor for building its road as full-paid shares (which contract was never questioned by the shareholders or by creditors as being either fraudulent or ultra vires), and such shares were sold by the contractor, in the public market, as full-paid shares, to purchasers for value, without actual notice of the equities between the contractor and the company, the holders of such shares are not subject to such equities or liable to have the shares thus issued and thus purchased treated as unpaid shares. Steacy v. Little Rock and Fort Smith R. R. Co., 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 848. 1879.

General Matters.

8. Donatio causa mortis. Railway stock cannot be the subject of donatio causa mortis. Moore v. Moore, Law Reports, 18 Equity Cases, 474. 1874.

9. Election of directors. Where the charter of a corporation provides that annual meetings for the election of directors shall be held by the stockholders, the directors cannot, by a by-law, so change the time of holding the annual election that they will continue themselves in office more than a year against the wishes of the holders of a majority of the stock. Elkins v. Camden and Atlantic R. R. Co., 36 N. J. Eq., 467. 1883.

10. — At a meeting of the stockholders, called for the election of directors, under § 3246, Revised Statutes, the right to choose the inspectors or judges of election is vested in the stockholders, and the directors, against the will of the stockholders present, cannot appoint such inspectors. State ex rel. v. Merchant, 37 Ohio St., 251, 1881; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 516.

11. Executor. Since the act of April 8, 1871, a foreign executor can transfer stock, and the company is not obliged to see that the will gives the executor the power to assign or dispose of the stocks; it is to be presumed that it does. Williams v. Pa. R. R. Co., 9 Philadelphia, 299. 1874.

12. Fictitious name. Where an intestate had executed transfers of railway shares and stock to a fictitious person, the court, on a bill filed by his administrator, declared that the intestate used the fictitious name as another designation of himself, and that the plaintiff, as his administrator, was entitled to transfer the shares and stock, and to receive the dividends thereof. Arthur v. Midland R'y Co., 8 Kay & Johnson (Eng. Ch.), 204. 1837.

13. Gift. The facts held insufficient to show a valid gift of stock in a corporation. All dominion over the property must cease to make the gift valid. Jackson v. Twenty-Third St. R'y Co., 88 N. Y., 520, 1882; reversing 47 N. Y. Superior Ct., 85; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 648, 1882.

14. Insolvent corporation. Where stockholders are indebted to the corporation on stock subscriptions, the sum due may be reached by a creditor's bill. Walser v. Seligman, 13 Federal Reporter, 415. 1882.

15. — A. executed a transfer of his shares and sent it to B. to be left with the secretary for registration, together with £320, being the amount then due for calls, payment of which was required by the articles before any transfer could be recognized. B. appropriated the £320, but tendered to the secretary, in payment of the amount due from A. for calls, certain overdue coupons, payable in respect of debentures of the company which had been issued to B., and on some of which equities were attaching as between himself and the company. Held, that the tender of these coupons was not a payment, and consequently that the company was not bound to register the transfer, and that A. remained liable for the shares. European Central R'y Co., In re, Law Reports, 8 Equity Cases, 444. 1889.

16. Misapplication of funds. Pleadings held sufficient in an action to restrain misapplication of money raised by sale of stock. Bagshaw v. Eastern Union R. R. Co., 7 Hare (Eng. Ch.), 114. 1849.

17. Officers. Where coupon bonds, issued under the provisions of an act of assembly by a municipal corporation, for stock in a railway company, to enable it to build its road, are in the possession of the president, and the fact that he is the president of the company is shown by the bonds themselves, his possession is prima facie evidence that they belong to the company, and constructive notice of their title to one about to take them as collateral security for a private debt owed by the president. Pittsburgh and Connellsville R. R. Co. v. Garrard, 1 Pittsburgh, 878. 1857.

18. — The issue of full-paid stock to corporate officials held valid under the facts. Van Cott v. Van Brunt, 82 N. Y., 585, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 407.

19. Powers of majority. The business of a corporation is always controlled by a majority in interest, unless the charter provides otherwise. Covington v. Covington and Cincinnati Bridge Co., 10 Bush (Ky.), 69. 1878.

20. Register. A register book, though irregularly kept in not containing the amount of the subscription paid on the shares, was held prima facie evidence that the defendant was a proprietor. Birmingham R'y Co. v.

Brownrigg*, 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 47, 1849.

21. — Although a party may not actually have had his name inserted on the register of the company as a shareholder, yet, if he has so acted, and his acts have been so far adopted that it may be inferred that both parties have waived the observance of the necessary forms, he will be held to be a contributory within the meaning of the act. His liability will, however, be limited to the time when his legal right to be registered accrued. Hollingsworth, Ex parte, 5 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 623. 1849.

22. — The books of the company, including the stock ledger, are admissible in a suit between the company and a stockholder. Macon and Augusta R. R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga., 314. 1876.

23. — When a person has a good equitable right to be registered as a stockholder, and has actually been registered as such, the company cannot strike his name from the registry on the ground that there is a flaw in his legal title. Ward v. South Eastern Ry Co., 2 Ellis & Ellis, 812; 103 E. C. L., 311. 1860.

24. — Merely placing a subscriber's name on the registry of stockholders is not sufficient to make him a shareholder. The agreement must be signed by him. New Brunswick and Canada Ry Co., In re, 4 Hurlstone & Norman (Exchequer), 160, 1859; Waterford Ry Co. v. Pidock, 8 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 279, 1853.

25. — Under "The Joint Stock Companies Act, 1856," a printed copy of the memorandum of association or articles of association may be signed by a subscriber before the original is signed or registered, in pursuance of s. 3 of that act; and such signature of the subscriber is an authority for placing his name on the register of shareholders. New Brunswick Railway Co. v. Boone,

3 Hurlstone & Norman (Exchequer), 249, 1858.

26. Right of corporation to take stock. A corporation cannot, in its own name, subscribe for stock or be a corporator, under the general railroad law, nor can it do so by a simulated compliance with the provisions of the law through its agents as pretended corporators and subscribers of stock. Central R. R. Co. of New Jersey v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 31 N. J. Eq., 475. 1879.

27. Selling individual stock to corporation. The plaintiff having issued all the stock it was authorized to, still had subscribers for seventy-two shares who had agreed to pay therefor at par; the defendant and the president of the company purchased a large portion of the stock, so issued, at fifty-five cents on the dollar, transferred seventy-two shares thereof to the subscribers, charging the company on the corporate books with the par value of such seventy-two shares. In an action against the treasurer by the corporation, he claimed such credit in his account with the company. Held, that defendant could not, by charging over the stock at its par value, make the corporation his debtor, and thus extinguish his liability for moneys received by him as its treasurer. East New York and Jamaica R. R. Co. v. Elmore, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 214, 1875.

28. Stock defined. The terms "stock" and "capital stock" considered, and held that stock, when used in reference to corporations and in connection with the privilege of subscribing thereto, means capital stock. State ex rel. v. Cheraw and Chester R. R. Co., 16 So. Car., 524, 1881; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 631.

29. — The stocks and bonds of a railroad company are personal property, and accompany the person of the owner. Hutxinger v. Philadelphia Coal Co., 11 Philadelphia, 606, 1876.

30. Trust. A bank is liable to a cestui que trust of its stock, standing on its books in the name of a trustee "in trust for" such cestui que trust, if it transfers the stock to a purchaser from the trustee without the knowledge or consent of the cestui que trust—the trust being without power of sale, and the cestui que trust being an unmarried female of full age. Magwood v. Railroad Bank, 5 So. Car., 879. 1874.

31. — The registered holder of shares in a railway company, though a mere trustee, is, in the absence of any special contract to the contrary, alone liable to the company for calls on such shares; and the company have no remedy in equity for calls against the real or beneficial owner of such shares. Newry R'y Co. v. Moss, 4 Eng. Law & Equity, 34; 15 Jurist, 437. 1850.

32. — The chairman of a company, with the assent of the company, held in his name shares in another company, which had been purchased with the money of the first-named company. The chairman became bankrupt. Held, that though the purchase by one company of shares in another company was illegal, the shares were not within the order and disposition of the bankrupt so as to pass to his assignees, and that he must transfer them as the company should direct. Great Eastern R'y Co. v. Turner, Law Reports, 8 Chancery Appeal Cases, 149; 4 Eng. (Moak), 826. 1872.

33. — If a corporation issues a stock certificate to a person as trustee, and, on his death, at the request of a person claiming to be entitled to the stock, refuses to examine the evidence offered and to permit a transfer, without a decree of court, it may, in a suit in equity against it to compel a transfer, if it appears that it could easily have satisfied itself of the truth of the facts, be ordered to pay costs as well as to make the transfer. Iasigi v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. Co., 129 Mass., 46. 1890.

34. Will; bequest. A bequest of railway shares will carry railway stock. Morrice v. Aylmer, Law Reports, 10 Chancery Appeal Cases, 148. 1874.

II. RIGHTS OF STOCKHOLDERS.

35. Action by creditor of corporation. In an action by a judgment creditor of a railway corporation, against a stockholder for unpaid stock, the record of plaintiff's judgment against the corporation is competent evidence. Stephens v. Fox, 83 N. Y., 318. 1881.

36. — Equity will compel the payment of a sufficient per cent. of unpaid stock subscribed to pay the debts of a corporation; and a bill brought against the stockholders to that end is the proper remedy. Mandamus against the directors to compel a collection of the stock is not the proper remedy. Dalton and Morgantown R. R. Co. v. McDaniel, 56 Ga., 191. 1876.

37. Certificates. A subscriber may become the owner of shares, but not in such sense that he may take away those shares out of the corporate fund; and the corporation has no power and cannot be compelled, while continuing in legal existence and carrying on the business for which it was created, to issue and deliver such shares. All that it can do is to deliver written evidence of the ownership of such shares. Burrall v. Bushwick R. R. Co., 75 N. Y., 211. 1878.

38. — Certificates of stock are not necessarily invalid because issued at a place outside of the state in which the corporation was organized and has its principal place of business. Courtright v. Deeds, 37 Ia., 503. 1878.

39. — Stock certificates are paper assets in the hands of their owner. Walker v. Detroit Transit R'y Co., 47 Mich., 338. 1882.

40. — Possession of stock certificates properly indorsed is prima facie evidence of their ownership; and a holder for value, without notice of prior equities, obtains a perfect title thereto as against such equities. Id.

41. — One who is entitled to stock wrongfully transferred to another can maintain a suit in equity to have the wrongful certificates canceled and certificates issued to himself, if the loss of the stock cannot be adequately compensated in a law action. Id.

42. — A loan of stock may be returned in other stock of the same kind. Barclay v. Culver, 30 Hun (N. Y.), 1. 1883.

43. Change of undertaking. An undertaking authorized the directors to apply to parliament for the necessary powers to build a railway, giving them general powers to act in the premises as they might deem proper. They applied to parliament and obtained an act which, among other things, required them to purchase and maintain a canal. Held, that they were authorized to apply for and to accept such an act. Midland Great Western Ry Co. v. Gordon, 5 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 76, 1847; 16 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer), 804, 1847.

44. Collateral security. By a Missouri statute stockholders of a corporation at its dissolution are liable for its debts; but it is provided that no person holding stock as executor, administrator, guardian or trustee, and no person holding stock as collateral security, shall be personally subject to such liability, but the persons pledging such stock shall be considered as holding the same, and liable; and the estates and funds in the hands of executors, etc., shall be liable. Held, that persons to whom a corporation pledges its stock as collateral security are within the exemption of the statute; that certificates of the stock, absolute on their face, issued as collateral security to a creditor, may be shown to be so held by evidence in pais; that the person holding such stock in trust, or as collateral security, is not, by his voting thereon, estopped from showing that it belongs to the company, and that he holds it as collateral security. Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S., 20, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 635.

45. — The supreme court of Missouri, after the circuit court had decided this case, made a contrary decision against the same stockholders, at the suit of another plaintiff. Held, that this court is not bound to follow the decision. Ib.

46. — The plaintiff delivered to the defendant a bill of sale of certain railroad stock, which recited that the stock had been that day transferred to the defendant, but that the plaintiff was to hold the same for the payment of a note given by the defendant for its purchase price, and which bill of sale also contained an agreement on the part of the plaintiff to deliver the stock on the payment of the said note. In an action brought upon the note after its maturity, held, that the agreement implied a present and executed sale of the stock, with the agreement that the plaintiff should hold the same as collateral to the note, and that it was unnecessary for him to make any tender of the stock, or any formal transfer thereof on the books of the company, until the defendant should have paid the note, or, at least, tendered the amount due thereon. James v. Hamilton, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 630, 1874.

47. — The evidence considered justifying the surrender of collateral stock upon the consolidation of the corporation. Fitchburg Savings Bank v. Torrey, 184 Mass., 239, 1883.

48. Conversion of bonds into stock. Bonds of a corporation were indorsed as follows: "The within bond convertible into the capital stock of the company at the pleasure of the holder, at par, upon the surrender thereof, with the unpaid interest coupons, to the secretary of the company. By order of the directors." Held, that the right to convert the bonds into stock could not be assigned except by the assignment of the bonds themselves. The actual holder of the bonds could alone insist upon damages for a refusal to convert them into stock. Denny v. Cleveland and Pittsburgh R. R. Co., 28 Ohio St., 108, 1875; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 73. See also, Sutliff v. Cleveland and Mahoning R. R. Co., 24 Ohio St., 147, 1878; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 856.

49. Detinue for railway shares. In detinue for scrip shares, where it appeared that after action brought, and before verdict, the scrip had been delivered up to the plaintiff, held, that the jury might, as a measure of damages, take into consideration the difference in value of the scrip shares between the time of the demand and refusal, and the time of the delivery of them to the plaintiff, and that in such case the jury might find the facts specially and confine themselves to an assessment of damages for the detention. Williams v. Archer, 5 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 289, 1847.

50. Forfeiture. Where the charter provided that shares should not be forfeited for non-payment except by a special or general meeting of the company, it was held that a plea of forfeiture was not good unless it appeared that the forfeiture was declared at a general or special meeting. Edinburgh Ry Co. v. Hebblewhite, 6 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer), 707, 1840.

51. — Facts stated under which a stockholder was held not entitled to recover for stock in a corporation, the charter of which had been forfeited. The forfeiture was waived by the state on condition that certain stockholders' rights should be restored; but the plaintiff had failed to comply with the requirements of the statute. Van Alstyne v. Houston and Texas Central R'y Co., 56 Tex., 873, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 447.

52. — A forfeiture of stock is a satisfaction of the debt, and when the right to forfeit has been exercised, no action to recover the subscription for the stock so forfeited can be maintained; but a mere threat, made in the call, to forfeit if not paid — that is, that the stock will be forfeited at a future day if payment be not then made, — will not bar the action to recover the subscription, if it appear that there was no actual forfeiture. Macon and Augusta R. R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga., 314. 1876.

53. — Shares in a railway company were declared forfeited for non-payment of calls; and on petition filed to redeem them, the redemption was decreed, on payment of all arrears of calls and of interest upon such arrears. The owner of the shares was entitled to set off all dividends accruing which would have been paid but for the default in payment of calls. Turner v. Dublin and Belfast Junction R'y Co., 4 Irish Ch., 194. 1854.

54. — Where a railway company has exercised its option to declare shares forfeited for non-payment of calls, such fact may be pleaded in defense to an action for such calls. South Eastern R'y Co. v. Hebblewhite, 12 Adolphus & Ellis, 497; 40 E. C. L., 249. 1840. Contra, Great Northern R'y Co. v. Kennedy, 4 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 417, 1849; Great Northern R'y Co. v. Kennedy, 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 5, 1849.

55. — Pleadings examined and held sufficient in an action for damages for an illegal declaration of forfeiture. Catchpole v. Ambergate R'y Co., 1 Ellis & Blackburn, 111; 72 E. C. L., 109; 23 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S., Q. B.), 35; 17 Jurist, 845; 16 Eng. Law & Equity, 168. 1852.

56. Infancy. Infancy is a good defense to an action upon a subscription for railway shares. Newry and Enniskillen R'y Co. v. Coombe, 3 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 565, 1849; Birkenhead R'y Co. v.

Pilcher, 5 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 24, 122, 1848; 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 564, 622.. See, also, 1 Eng. Law & Equity, 522.

57. — An infant must repudiate the subscription in order to be released. North Western R'y Co. v. M'Michael, 5 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 114, 1850; Dublin and Wicklow R'y Co. v. Black, 8 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 181, 1852; 16 Eng. Law & Equity, 556; 23 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S., Exch.), 94.

58. — To an action for calls on railway shares, the defendant pleaded (by attorney) that, at the time of the making of the calls, he was an infant; and also that, at the time he became the holder of the shares, he was an infant. Held, that the pleas were bad, it not appearing that he became a shareholder by contract, and avoided it; also, that the court could not infer, from his appearance by attorney, that he was of full age. Leeds and Thirsk R'y Co. v. Fearney, 4 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 26; 5 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 641. 1849.

59. Meetings; notice. Notice of the time and place of holding stockholders' meetings for the transaction of business, to be effectual, must be given in the mode prescribed by the charter. Stockholders of Shelby R. R. Co. v. Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington R. R. Co., 12 Bush (Ky.), 62, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 213.

60. — At common law all notices of corporate meetings were required to be personal, unless otherwise fixed by the by-laws. Notice by publication or by mail was invalid; and notices of meetings for any special and exceptional purpose were required to state the object of the call. Tuttle v. Michigan Air Line R. R. Co., 35 Mich., 247, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 406.

61. — The notice of a meeting of stockholders prescribed by the charter or by-laws of a corporation may be waived by the stockholders; and if each stockholder attends and participates in the action of the meeting, they are estopped from denying its legality for want of notice. Kenton Furnace R. R. Co. v. McAlpin, 5 Federal Reporter, 787. 1880.

62. New stock. When new stock is issued that is to share in profits with existing stock, all holders of the latter have an equal right to subscribe for their proportionate share of the new stock; but this rule does not apply to original stock bought in by the corporation and held as assets, and sold for the payment of liabilities, or for the general benefit. State ex rel. v. Smith, 48 Vt., 266; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 894. 1876.

63. Partnership. One partner of a firm which owns stock in a corporation as a part of its assets, acquired in its regular business, has the power to represent that stock in all matters which relate to it in the usual management of such firm's business, and his action binds the firm; thus, he may receive and waive notice of stockholders' meetings, vote at such meetings, etc. Kenton Furnace R. R. Co. v. McAlpin, 5 Federal Reporter, 787. 1890.

64. Prospectus. A prospectus of a railway company stated that "the engineer's report, maps, plans, etc., may be inspected, and further information obtained at the offices of the company." An applicant for shares signed the printed form of application, in which, as usual, it was stated that he agreed to be bound by the conditions and regulations contained in the memorandum and articles of association. An examination of all these papers would have afforded him the information, the want of which he alleged as a ground for rescinding his contract. Trusting to the representations, he did not examine all. Held, that his neglect to do so was no answer to his demand to be relieved from the contract. Central R'y Co. of Venezuela v. Kisch, Law Reports, 2 English & Irish Appeal Cases, 99. 1867.

65. — In an action to recover the amount of deposit money paid on certain railway shares, the prospectus of the railway company setting forth that one hundred and twenty thousand shares would be issued, held, first, that the allotment of fifty-eight thousand shares was a breach of contract, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on that ground; secondly, that, if it was agreed that the company should go on with smaller number of shares, that was virtually a new contract, from which any individual shareholder might withdraw. Wontner v. Shairp, 2 Carrington & Kirwan, 278; 61 E. C. L., 272. 1846.

66. Reduction of stock. The directors may change the shares from 25l. to 20l. each, where such change is not forbidden by the charter. Ambergate R'y Co. v. Mitchell, 4 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 540. 1849.

67. — The facts considered in relation to the reduction of capital stock, and held not to impair the rights of stockholders. Strong v. Brooklyn Cross-Town R. R. Co., 93 N. Y., 426. 1868.

68. Rights of holder of majority; estoppel. The real owner of the majority of stock in a railroad company who permits its affairs to be managed by others holding the legal title to the stock, and the officers elected by them, cannot claim, as against innocent parties, that the company is exempted from any obligation which it has assumed through such officers and managers, or to which it may, through them, have become equitably liable. North Carolina R. R. Co. v. Drew, 3 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 674. 1877.

69. Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations is a good plea in bar of an action upon stock which has been forfeited over six years for non-payment of assessments. Whelham v. Pa. and N. Y. Canal and R. R. Co., 9 Philadelphia, 284. 1878.

70. — An action of debt by a railway company against one of its members, for calls, under the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act (8 and 9 Vict., c. 16), and the special act (8 and 9 Vict., c. cxxii), is an action founded upon a statutory liability; and therefore a plea "that the action is founded upon contracts without speciality, and that the alleged causes of action did not, nor did any or either of them, accrue within six years before the suit," is a bad plea,—the proper limitation to such an action being twenty years, by the 3 and 4 W. 4, c. 42, s. 3. Cork and Bandon R'y Co. v. Goode, 13 Common Bench, 826; 76 E. C. L., 824. 1853.

III. CONTRACTS.

71. Action. A contract for the sale of railway shares may be the subject of an action at law. Tempest v. Kilner, 2 Manning, Granger & Scott, 800; 53 E. C. L., 298; 3 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 790. 1845.

Contracts.

72. Broker. A. gave an order to B., a stockbroker, to purchase shares in a foreign railway. There were no shares in the market, and B. bought a letter of allotment, it being the practice of the stock exchange at that time to buy and sell letters of allotment, as shares, in that railway. In an action to recover the value of the shares and the broker's commission, held, that the question for the jury to determine was, whether the order to buy had reference to that which alone could be bought in the market at that time, or was an order to buy at a future time, when, by the passing of the foreign act, actual shares would be transferable and purchasable. Mitchell v. Newhall, 4 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 300. 1846.

73. Contract. An agreement for the issue of preferred stock construed. St. John v. Erie R'y Co., 23 Wallace, 186, 1874; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 446.

74. — Shareholders may maintain an action to set aside an illegal contract of the corporation. Beman v. Rufford, 1 Simons, N. S. (Eng. Ch.), 550. 1851.

75. Damages. Where there is no trust relation between the parties and no obligation to deliver specific stock, the measure of damages for a failure to deliver stock is its market value on the day it should have been delivered with interest thereon to the time of trial. Huntingdon, etc., R. R. Co. v. English, 86 Pa. St., 247. 1879. See, also, Shaw v. Holland, 4 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 150. 1846.

76. — Where shares are not accepted, and are resold within a reasonable time by the vendor, the measure of damages is the difference between their price at the time of the contract and at the time of the resale. Stewart v. Canty, 2 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 616. 1841. See, also, Pott v. Flather, 5 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 85, 1847; Bayliffe v. Butterworth, ib., 283, 1847.

77. Fraud. Where a subscriber made separate contracts with a corporation, by one agreement to take certain stock, and by another to receive certain compensation for services, the agreements being thus separately made to enable him to obtain the stock at less than par, held, that specific performance of that part of the agreement would be enforced in which he bound himself to take the stock. Odessa Tramways Co. v. Mendel, Law Reports, 8 Chancery Division, 235; 25 Eng. (Moak), 240. 1878.

78. — The president of a railway company in purchasing stock of a county is not bound to disclose his knowledge of facts showing the value of the stock. The relation of trustee and cestui que trust does not exist in such case. Board of Commissioners of Tippecanoe County v. Reynolds, 44 Ind., 509. 1878.

79. — The statements made by the president of a railway company to induce a person to purchase stock in the corporation, that the corporation was able to lay its track and provide rolling stock, and pay all bills contracted, and that its stock was not for sale, and could not be bought anywhere but of him, are statements which a jury would be warranted in finding were representations of fact, and not expressions of opinion. Teague v. Irwin, 127 Mass., 217. 1879.

80. — A shareholder in a company filed a bill to have his contract to take shares declared void on the ground of deception and misrepresentation of the company by reason of its having commenced its railway when only one-fifth of the share capital was subscribed, and having entered into a contract for the construction of a part only of the proposed line with insufficient capital. Held, on appeal (without giving any opinion as to the plaintiff's original title to relief), that his bill must be dismissed on the ground of his having continued to act as a shareholder for some months after he became aware of the circumstances on which he founded his case. Sharpley v. South and East Coast R'y Co., Law Reports, 2 Chancery Division, 663. 1876.

81. — What facts will amount to fraud in a prospectus determined. Pulsford v. Richards, 19 Eng. Law & Equity, 387; 23 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S., Chanc.), 559; 17 Jurist, 865. 1858.

82. Specific performance. The plaintiff employed a broker to sell railway shares and the broker employed an auctioneer, who sold the shares by auction to the defendant. A few days after the defendant employed the same auctioneer to resell the shares, which were accordingly sold by him to a third party, whose name was handed in to the plaintiff's broker for the purpose of preparing the deed of transfer, which was thereupon executed by the plaintiff, conveying the shares to such third party, who refused to complete the contract by registering the shares in his name. One year after this sale, during all which time the plaintiff was ignorant that the defendant had been the original purchaser (the shares remaining in the plaintiff's name and calls having been made), he filed his bill for specific performance against the defendant. Held, that, having executed the deed of transfer to the third party, the privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant no longer existed, and the bill was accordingly dismissed. Shaw v. Fisher, 5 De Gex, Macnaghten & Gordon, 596; 54 Eng. Ch., 1855.

83. Statute of frauds. A parol agreement for the sale of railway shares is binding, for they are neither an interest in or concerning lands within § 4 of the Statute of Frauds, nor goods, wares or merchandises within the seventeenth section. Duncuft v. Albrecht, 12 Simons (Eng. Ch.), 162, 1841; Humble v. Mitchell, 2 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 70, 1830; Bradley v. Holsworth, 3 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer), 422, 1838.

84. Vendor and purchaser of shares. The purchaser of railway shares on the London stock exchange is bound to do all acts necessary to relieve the vendor from subsequent liabilities in respect of such shares, although no stipulation be made to that effect at the time of the contract. Wynne v. Price, 5 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 465, 1849; Shaw v. Fisher, ib., 461, 1848.

IV. TRANSFERS AND ASSIGNMENTS.

85. Agent. Ch. 165 of 1842, entitled "An act to compel transfer agents of foreign corporations to exhibit a list of the stockholders thereof," is only applicable to the transfer agents, and not to the officers of the corporation, and a mandamus to compel the exhibition of the transfer books should be directed to such agents only. People ex rel. v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.), 1. 1877.

86. — The supreme court has power to compel, by mandamus, the exhibition of the transfer books of a domestic corporation containing the names of the stockholders, at any time when the exercise of such power is shown to be necessary to preserve and protect the interests of the stockholders therein. Id.

87. Blank indorsements. Blank indorsements of certificates of stock are legal. Walker v. Detroit Transit Ry Co., 47 Mich., 338. 1882. But see Hibblewhite v. McMorine, 6 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer, 200, 1840; Taylor v. Great Indian Peninsular Ry Co., 4 De Gex & Jones, 559; 61 Eng. Ch., 558, 1859.

88. Calls. By a navigation act, the shares were declared to be vested in the subscribers, with power to the subscribers to assign their shares; and a committee to be appointed under the act were authorized to make calls on the proprietors of shares at such time as they should think fit. Held, that an original subscriber is not liable for any call made by the committee after assigning his share. Huddersfield Canal Co. v. Buckley, 1 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 556 (Appendix). 1796.

89. Contract. It is no defense to an action for breach of contract for purchase of railway shares that there were unpaid calls, although the statute provides that stock shall not be transferred without payment of calls. It is sufficient if the seller of the shares is in condition to make good his contract by paying the calls and transferring the stock. Shaw v. Rowley, 16 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer), 810. 1847.

90. Estoppel. Where the rightful owner of stock invests another person with the usual evidence of title thereto, or an apparent authority to dispose of the stock, he is estopped from making any claim thereto against an innocent purchaser dealing on the faith of such apparent ownership or right of disposal. Walker v. Detroit Transit Ry Co., 47 Mich., 338. 1882.

91. Expense of transfer. A railway act provided for the transfer of shares by a deed under seal. It was conceded that in case of purchase of lands it was necessary for the purchaser to have the conveyances prepared at his own expense. Held, that the same rule would apply to purchases of stock. Stephens v. De Medina, 4 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 422; 45 E. C. L., 420. 1843.

92. Foreign executor. This was a bill filed by foreign executors to compel a corpuration here to permit them to transfer stock of their decedent; and upon general demurrer to the bill, held, that the act of June 16, 1836, s. 3, does not confer power upon foreign executors to transfer corporate stock here, unless their authority be derived from one of the provinces in this country at the time the act of 1703 (1 Smith, 33) was passed. Alfonso v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 8 Philadelphia, 86. 1871.

93. Forgery. If a corporation issues a stock certificate upon the surrender of a former certificate for the same, accompanied by a transfer under a forged power of attorney, neither the person acting under such power, nor the person to whom the certificate is issued, is a necessary party to a bill in equity by the true owner against the company to compel it to procure a like number of shares of its capital stock, to record and issue to him a certificate thereof, and to pay him the dividends thereon. Pratt v. Boston and Albany R. R. Co., 126 Mass., 443. 1879.

94. — T. and B. were partners. Stock was standing in the books of a railway company in their joint names. B. sold out the stock by a deed which he executed and to which he forged the name of T., but he continued to account to T. for the dividends, and T. died in ignorance of the forgery. T.'s personal representative afterwards filed a bill against the company for a retransfer of the stock. Held, that though by the death of T. the right to an action at law was gone, the right to a suit in equity still remained, and a decree directing the company to retransfer the stock was sustained. Midland R'y Co. v. Taylor, 8 House of Lords Cases, 751. 1860.

95. — H. & Co., in good faith, advanced money upon C. O. R. R. Co. stock, pledged to them under forged powers of transfer. The railroad company upon the receipt of the original certificates of stock in like good faith canceled them and issued new ones in the name of H. & Co. Held, that as between H. & Co. and the railroad company (the rights of third parties not being involved), the loss must fall upon the former. Hambleton v. Central Ohio R. R. Co., 44 Md., 551. 1876.

96. — Where a company has registered what is alleged to be a forged transfer of shares, and an action is brought against it by the original shareholder, for dividends, and another is threatened by the alleged transferee, the court will not grant an interpleader. Dalton v. Midland R'y Co., 23 Eng. Law & Equity, 452; 12 Common Bench, 458; 19 Law Times, 204; 74 E. C. L., 458. 1852.

97. Fraud. Where a stockholder intrusts his certificates with blank powers of attorney to an agent for safe keeping, who fraudulently transfers them to a third party, who in turn, without knowledge of the fraud, has them transferred to himself, the owner cannot recover from the corporation for the loss. Pennsylvania R. R. Co.'s Appeal, 86 Pa. St., 80. 1878.

98. — An assignee of shares who leaves them, with the assignments unrecorded, in the possession of the assignor, is not thereby guilty of negligence so as to be estopped to set up his title against a person who claims title to the certificates through an alteration of the assignments by the fraud and forgery of the assignor. Eaton v. New England Telegraph Co., 68 Me., 63. 1878.

99. Lost certificates. Where certificates of stock have been assigned by indorsement only, and mislaid by the transferee, and the corporation at the request of the transferrer causes the shares to be transferred upon the books and new shares issued to another person, under a by-law in relation to lost certificates, such transfer will not defeat the rights of the true owner. Cleveland and Mahoning R. R. Co. v. Robbins, 35 Ohio St., 488. 1880. But for dividends paid before notice of the transfer the company would not be liable. Id.

100. Mandamus; transfer books. A corporation may by mandamus be compelled to exhibit its stock transfer books to its stockholders. Sage, In re, 70 N. Y., 220, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 555. See People ex rel. v. Lake Shore and Mich. Southern R. R. Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.), 1. 1877.

101. Manner of transfer. It is a matter of discretion with the directors whether to allow the transfer of shares without the production of the certificates. Shropshire Union Railways and Canal Co. v. The Queen, Law Reports, 7 English & Irish Appeal Dividends.

Cases, 496. 1875. See, also, State ex rel. v. New Orleans and Carrollton R. R. Co., 80 La. An., 806. 1878.

102. — A corporation is the trustee of its stockholders, and is bound to use due care that they may not be injured by unauthorized transfers of stock. Pennsylvania R. R. Co.'s Appeal, 86 Pa. St., 80. 1878.

103. — Where the signatures to powers of transfer were genuine, yet it appearing that at the time the transfer was made they were thirteen years old, this fact was enough to put the corporation upon inquiry, and it was not justified in making the transfer unless it had first ascertained if the powers had been revoked. Ib.

104. — Where a transfer of a certificate of stock was made by an unrecorded assignment, it was held valid as between the parties. And the corporation, by issuing the stock to a third person, who did not present the original certificate, became liable to the rightful assignee for damages. Strange v. Houston and Texas Central R. R. Co., 58 Tex., 162, 1890; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 888.

105. — The title to stock in a railway company is completely vested in the purchaser as against every one but the corporation, when the seller has given on the scrip the proper authority to make the transfer upon the books and the purchaser has paid the price. Ross v. Southwestern R. R. Co., 53 Ga., 514. 1874.

106. — After a sale of stock by the owner to whom the certificate had issued, the sale being evidenced by assignment and delivery of the certificate, and after the purchaser had surrendered the certificate to the company and received in lieu thereof a certificate in his own name, the transaction being properly evidenced on the books of the corporation, the original certificate and the rights of the original owner were extinguished, so that a subsequent assignment of said stock by the original owner to another party would pass no right or title thereto. Houston and Texas Central R'y Co. v. Van Alstyne, 56 Tex., 439, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 686.

107. Married women. A married woman who has transferred shares without compliance with the statute is not estopped from setting up her title against a subsequent purchaser without notice. Merriam v. Boston, Clinton and Fitchburg R. R. Co., 117 Mass., 241. 1875.

108. Second transfer; mistake. Where stock is surrendered and transferred, and afterwards, by mistake, a second transfer is made and a new certificate issued to a second assignee, he not being an innocent purchaser, the second issue will not confer the rights of a stockholder upon such second assignee. Houston and Texas Central R'y Co. v. Van Alstyne, 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Tex.), 686. 1882.

109. Warranty. The transferrer of stock, without representation or specification as to the particular property held by the corporation, warrants only his title to the stock, and not the title of corporation to the property held by it. State v. North Louisiana and Texas R. R. Co., 34 La. An., 947. 1882.

V. DIVIDENDS.

110. Convertible bonds. Where plaintiff, holding bonds of defendant, by their terms convertible into stock, surrendered them and received stock issued prior to the declaration of a dividend by the board of directors, that said board had no right to limit the payment of the dividend to the stockholders holding stock at a day prior to the issue of such stock, which was the close of the fiscal year of the company, but that plaintiff was entitled to the dividend; and that the fact that the directors had adopted a particular day as the close of the corporate fiscal year, or special days for declaring dividends, or that they directed the close of the transfer books for any purpose, did not in any way impair the legal rights of stockholders to share in dividends subsequently declared. Jones v. Terre Haute and Richmond R. R. Co., 57 N. Y., 196. 1874.

111. Declaration and payment. A shareholder in a corporation is not entitled to any of the property or profits until a division has been made or a dividend declared. Boardman v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co., 84 N. Y., 157, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 265.

Dividends.

112. — The term "capital stock," in the provision of the Revised Statutes (1 R. S., 601, § 2) prohibiting the directors of a corporation from making dividends except from the surplus profits, or from dividing, withdrawing or in any way paying to the stockholders "any part of the capital stock of such company," means the property of the corporation, contributed by the stockholders or otherwise obtained, to the extent required by its charter. The object of the provision was to prevent a withdrawal of the property which would reduce the value of its assets below the sum limited for its capital in its charter or articles of association. Williams v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 93 N. Y., 162. 1883.

113. — Where a dividend is declared by a corporation it belongs to the holders of the stock at the time of the declaration, without regard to the source from which, or the time during which, the funds divided were acquired by the corporation. Jermain v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co., 91 N. Y., 483. 1883.

114. — A corporation may lawfully pay dividends to the stockholder whose name appears upon the stock book as owner of the shares. Brisbane v. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co., 25 Hun (N. Y.), 493. 1881.

115. — Where a dividend is declared it belongs to the owners of the stock, but until such declaration, the profits form part of the assets; and an assignment by a stockholder of his shares carries with it his proportionate share of the assets, including all undeclared dividends. Boardman v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co., 84 N. Y., 157, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 265.

116. — As a general rule, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, dividends due on stock follow the ownership thereof. Central R. R. and Banking Co. v. Papot, 59 Ga., 342, 1877; Ryan v. Leavenworth, Atchison and Northwestern R'y Co., 21 Kans., 365, 1879.

117. — Accumulated earnings on which no dividend has been declared furnish no consideration for the issuing of stock to be divided among the stockholders. Such dividends are ultra vires. Hatch v. Western Union Tel. Co., 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 430. 1881.

118. — The claims of stockholders to dividends are subordinate to the claims of creditors. Ryan v. Leavenworth, Atchison and Northwestern R'y Co., 21 Kans., 365. 1879.

119. — The same principles which apply to partnerships in relation to the division of profits apply to corporations, and the majority can overrule the minority upon the questions of the division of profits while the corporate debts are still unprovided for. Stevens v. South Devon R. R. Co., 9 Hare (Eng. Ch.), 813. 1851.

120. — Where a stockholder receives dividends from a corporation declared and admitted by it to be due to him on stock, an action is not maintainable against him in the first instance by one claiming to be entitled to share in the dividends, but whose rights had been ignored by the corporation, to recover as for moneys had and received, the proportion of the dividends so received which plaintiff would have been entitled to had his shares participated. Peckham v. Van Wagenen, 83 N. Y., 40. 1880.

121. Guaranty of dividends. An agreement between two corporations, whereby one guaranties the other a certain specified annual dividend on its capital stock, is not a guaranty to its stockholders severally, but to the corporation, and the power to modify the terms of such guaranty is in the directors of such corporations, not in the stockholders. Where such power is fairly exercised by the directors, in view of all the circumstances, and in good faith, a court will not interfere, even though, on the same facts, it might have arrived at a different conclusion. Flagg v. Manhattan R'y Co., 10 Federal Reporter, 413, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 140.

122. Injunction to restrain. By its acts of parliament, the Monmouthshire Railway and Canal Company was empowered to make a new railway, with branches, and to improve its existing railways, and to adapt them to the use of locomotive engines, which the company was required to provide, and a time was limited for the completion of the works. The works were not completed in pursuance of the requisitions of the act of parliament, in consequence, as was alleged, of want of funds. Held, under the circumstances, that the court had no jurisdiction, at the suit of a shareholder, to restrain the company from declaring a dividend until the works were all completed, there being no provision in the acts to that effect. Brown v. Monmouthshire Ry Co., 4 Eng. Law & Equity, 118; 15 Jurist, 475. 1851.

123. — A court of equity will not restrain the payment of dividends to stockholders at the suit of another company claiming the right to distress for non-payment of toll charges. The remedy is at law. South Yorkshire Ry Co. v. Great Northern Ry Co., 19 Eng. Law & Equity, 518; 22 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S., Chanc.), 761; 9 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 55. 1858.

124. — The payment of dividends out of the capital stock will be required. Bloxham v. Metropolitan Ry Co., Law Reports, 3 Chancery Appeal Cases, 387. 1868. Nor will the corporation be permitted to pay dividends out of money necessary to maintain repairs. Dent v. London Tramways Co., Law Reports, 16 Chancery Division, 344, 1890; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 592.

125. Preference. If the memorandum and articles of association of a company are silent on the subject, it is an implied condition that the shareholders are entitled to rank equally as regards dividend, without preference or priority between themselves; but such implication will be rebutted if the articles of association, contemporaneous with the memorandum, contain clear provisions as to the preference or priority of classes of shares. Harrison v. Mexican Ry Co., Law Reports, 19 Equity Cases, 358, 1875; 12 Eng. (Moak), 793.

126. Unclaimed. The provisions of ch. 366, Laws 1874-5, which enacts "that all dividends heretofore declared or which shall hereafter be declared by any corporation, company or association, whether chartered or not, which shall not be recovered or claimed by suit by the parties entitled thereto for five years after the same were or shall be declared, shall be paid by the corporations, etc., to the trustees of the university," are in conflict with art. IX. § 6, of the constitution. Trustees of University v. North Carolina R. R. Co., 76 N. C., 103, 1877; 14 Amer. Ry Rep., 298.

VI. PERSONAL LIABILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS, AND ASSESSMENTS.

See SUBSCRIPTIONS BY INDIVIDUALS.

127. Assessment. An assessment can only be made by the directors of a corporation. Pike v. Bangor and Calais Shore Line R. R. Co., 68 Me., 445, 1878; 20 Amer. Ry Rep., 407.

128. — A corporation has no authority to levy an assessment on capital stock fully paid up. Santa Cruz R. R. Co. v. Spreckles, 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Cal.), 679, 1892. Nor can the creditors enforce such liability. Spense v. Iowa Valley Construction Co., 38 Ia., 407. 1878.

129. — Where it was enacted that "so soon as the sum of 1,500,000*l.* shall have been subscribed, etc., it shall be lawful for the company to put in force all the powers of the act authorizing the construction of the railway, and of the acts therein recited," namely, the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act and the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, as regards a portion of the railway, held, that the raising of the capital was not a condition precedent to the power of the company to make calls, but only to its right of exercising the compulsory powers for taking land. Waterford Ry Co. v. Dalbiae, 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 753, 1851; 6 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 443, 1851.

130. — A call payable by instalments is valid. London and North Western Ry Co. v. M'Michael, 4 Eng. Law & Equity, 459; 20 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S., Exch.), 238. 1851. But an action of debt will not lie for a call payable in instalments, until all of the instalments are due. Ambergate Ry Co. v. Coulthard, 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 318, 1850; London and North Western Ry Co. v. M'Michael, 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 495, 1851.

131. — Where the charter expressly requires notice to be given in certain newspapers, and for a certain number of days, before the calls for instalments shall be valid, the company must show a compliance with such condition precedent before a recovery can be had on such calls. Macon and Augusta R. R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga., 314. 1876.

Personal Liability of Stockholders, and Assessments.

132. — Where the statute does not provide that calls shall be made at a general meeting of the company, they may be made at a special meeting. Ambergate R'y Co. v. Mitchell, 4 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 540. 1849.

133. — By a railway act (7 Wm. 4, c. 21, s. 115), the directors were authorized to make calls, and the time in which calls might be made was prescribed. A call was made, but the place of payment was not designated, nor the person to whom payment might be made. Held, that the place and person might be designated by a subsequent resolution, and that the call was valid. Sheffield, Ashton-under-Lyne and Manchester R'y Co. v. Woodcock, 2 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 522. 1841.

134. — The letter list of notices of calls sent by mail is competent evidence against a shareholder. Eastern Union R'y Co. v. Symonds, 5 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 287. 1850.

135. — The notice of a call inserted in the local newspapers, according to the directions of the special act, specified the time and place of payment, and the persons to whom the payment was to be made. Held, that the publication of the notice must be assumed to be the act of the directors, and that the call was properly made. Great North of England R'y Co. v. Biddulph, 7 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer), 243. 1840. See, also, Sheffield R'y Co. v. Woodcock, 7 ib., 574. 1841.

136. — A transfer of railway shares from an original subscriber to the undertaking, made before the formation of a register of proprietors pursuant to the act, but after the passing of the act of parliament, is good, although the transferrer be never registered as a proprietor. Where the act required the transfer to be by deed, and the transfer of shares was executed by the seller with a blank for the purchaser's name and stating the consideration untruly, but the purchaser afterwards signed and transmitted to the company, in pursuance of the act, a proxy paper describing him as the proprietor of the shares, held, in an action by the company against him for calls on such shares, that he was precluded from disputing the validity of the transfer. Sheffield R'y

Co. v. Woodcock, 7 Meeson & Welsby (Exchequer), 574. 1841.

137. — Plaintiff employed defendants, brokers, to buy for him thirty shares, scrip, in a railway company, for which an act of parliament had lately been obtained. Defendants purchased in their own names, the practice of brokers being such; and plaintiff paid them the price. The scrip was purchased "for account, 29th of August," but could not be then delivered, the scrip having, in the meantime, been called in by the directors to be registered, in order that shares might be issued. Before the shares came out a call was made. These facts were known to the plaintiff; but he, from time to time, desired to have the scrip forwarded without delay. The share certificates came out in December; and then the selling brokers tendered the shares to the defendants, with a demand of 150*l.* for the call. Plaintiff, on being applied to, refused to furnish the 150*l.*, denying his liability, and claiming the shares without such payment; and, on their being withheld, he repudiated the contract, and brought an action for money had and received. Held, that the non-delivery of the scrip on the 29th August did not entitle him to recover his purchase money. McEwen v. Woods, 11 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 18; 63 E. C. L., 12. 1847.

138. — In an action for calls on railway shares, the court refused to allow the defendant to plead, first, that due notice of the calls was not given pursuant to the act of parliament; second, that no time, place or person was appointed for the payment of the calls; third, that the calls were made for other purposes than those mentioned in the act; fourth, that the company had made deviations not warranted by the act, and that the calls were made for the purpose of these deviations; fifth, that at the time of making the calls there were not thirty-six thousand shares in the company, as provided in the act. London and Brighton R'y Co. v. Wilson, 1 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 530. 1839.

139. Execution against shareholders whose stock is not paid up. Under s. 86 of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 and 9 Vict., c. 16), a party who has recovered judgment against a company is not precluded from issuing execution against the shareholders who have not paid up for their shares, though lands of the company have been delivered on elegit, if the proceeds of the lands be insufficient to satisfy the debt. Therefore, in such a case, a mandamus issued commanding the company to give the creditor inspection of the register of shareholders. Queen v. Derbyshire Ry Co., 3 Ellis & Blackburn, 734; 77 E. C. L., 788. 1854.

140. Labor debts. Extension of time in corporation orders, issued for debts due laborers, defeats an action against the stockholders. Comp. L., § 2852. Powell v. Eldred, 39 Mich., 552. 1878.

141. — A finding that a defendant is not a stockholder, within the meaning of the statute, defeats an action against him for labor debts of the corporation. Ib.

142. — The constitutional liability of stockholders for labor debts can only be enforced in equity, if it can be enforced at all without legislation. Peck v. Müller, 39 Mich., 594. 1878.

143. — Stockholders are only collaterally, not primarily, liable for labor debts of the company. Ib.

144. — The conditions of the act that makes stockholders liable for labor debts of the company must be fully complied with, and they restrict recovery to the amount of stock owned; courts cannot enlarge a surety's liability beyond the plain terms of his sureship. Ib.

145. — A railroad contractor is not a "laborer" within the meaning of the provisions which make stockholders liable for labor debts. Ib.

146. Personal liability. The provisions in the constitution and statutes of Oregon creating the liability of stockholders in private corporations, for the indebtedness of such corporations, apply to such only as are or have been holders of the legal title in unpaid stock. Branson v. Oregonian Ry Co., 10 Oreg., 278. 1881.

147. — A failure to comply with the requirements of §§ 1076 and 1077 of the Code does not render the private property of stockholders liable for the debts of the corporation. Langan v. I. and M. Construction Co., 49 Ia., 817. 1878.

148. — Under § 6 of the constitution of 1865, as amended, a stockholder in a corporation cannot be made liable to a creditor when his stock is fully paid up. Gausen v. Buck, 68 Mo., 545, 1878; Schricker v. Ridings, 65 Mo., 308, 1877.

149. — The individual or personal liability of stockholders, under § 79 of the corporation act of May 1, 1852 (1 S. & C., 310); also, under § 8 of April 10, 1861, regulating street railway companies (S. & S., 136), attaches in favor of creditors at the time the debt was contracted or the liability incurred by the corporation. Brown v. Hitchcock, 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ohio), 352. 1881.

150. — The members of a joint-stock company under the laws of New York are liable as partners. Boston and Albany R. R. Co. v. Pearson, 128 Mass., 445. 1880.

151. — Where a partnership owns stock and is personally liable for the debts of the corporation, any individual partner is likewise liable. Bray v. Seligman, 75 Mo., 81; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 633. 1881.

152. — Section 9, p. 301, Wagn. Stat., in relation to railroad companies, provides that "no person holding stock in such company . . . as collateral security shall be personally subject to any liability as a stockholder of such company; but the person pledging such stock shall be considered as holding the same, and shall be liable as a stockholder accordingly." Held, that this section has no application to stock which has not been issued in the usual course of business, and, therefore, does not exempt from liability a person holding as collateral security unsubscribed stock issued to him by the company. Griswold v. Seligman, 73 Mo., 110, 1880; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 871. See, also, Fisher v. Seligman, 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 670, 1881; 75 Mo., 13.

153. — A corporation is a necessary party defendant to a bill to enforce a judgment against it by compelling contribution from its stockholders. All the stockholders are also necessary parties in such a suit, if they apply to be heard. Walsh v. Memphis, Carthage, etc., R. R. Co., 6 Federal Reporter, 797; 2 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 156. 1881.

154. — From July 4, 1865, to November 1, 1870, no corporation could be created in Missouri, the stockholders of which were not liable for the debts of the corporation so far as those debts did not exceed the full par value of the stock by them respectively held. The constitutional amendment adopted in November, 1870, did not have the effect of impairing an obligation incurred by a stockholder prior to that date. St. Louis R'y Supplies Co. v. Harbine, 2 Mo. App., 184. 1876. See, also, Ochiltree v. Railroad Co., 21 Wallace, 249, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 525.

155. — Where bonds are issued by a corporation while double liability attached to its stock, the holder of such bonds, though he became such after the repeal of the double-liability clause, may enforce the liability against a stockholder. The double liability of a stockholder is not a penalty, but a right arising out of contract, and the assignee of the obligation of the corporation takes all the right of the assignor. Blakeman v. Benton, 9 Mo. App., 107. 1880.

156. Scire facias. The manner of proceeding by scire facias against a shareholder determined. Hitchins v. Kilkenny R'y Co., 10 Common Bench, 159; 70 E. C. L., 158, 1850; 29 Eng. Law & Equity, 341, 1854; Same v. Same, 15 Common Bench, 459; 80 E. C. L., 458, 1854; Wyatt v. Darvuth Valley R'y Co., 2 Common Bench (N. S.), 110; 89 E. C. L., 110, 1857; 40 Eng. Law & Equity, 337; Edwards v. Kilkenny R'y Co., 14 Common Bench (N. S.), 526; 108 E. C. L., 524, 1863; Devereux v. Kilkenny R'y Co., 5 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 834, 1850; Nixon v. Brownlow, 40 Eng. Law & Equity, 521, 1857.

VII. PREFERRED STOCK.

157. Dividends. Defendant, a railroad corporation in 1857, issued certain preferred stock. By the terms of the certificate issued, it was stated that the stock was "entitled to dividends at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, in New York, on the first days of June and December, in each year, out of the net earnings of said company, and the payment of dividends as aforesaid is hereby guaranteed." Held, that the net earnings of any year might be applied to the payment of these dividends. Prouty v. Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana R. R. Co., 4 Thompson &

Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 230; 1 Hun (N. Y.), 655. 1874.

158. — The net earnings of the defendant before the action was brought had been, in part, appropriated to dividends upon common stock. Held, that the owners of preferred stock were entitled to interest on the dividends they were entitled to receive from the time of such appropriation. Ib. See, also, Sturge v. Eastern Union R'y Co., 7 De Gex, Macnaghten & Gordon, 153; 56 Eng. Ch., 157, 1835; Boardman v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co., 84 N. Y., 157, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 265; Henry v. Great Northern R'y Co., 4 Kay & Johnson (Eng. Ch.), 1, 1857; 1 De Gex & Jones, 606; 58 Eng. Ch., 605, 1857.

159. — Preference shareholders of a railway company, upon whose shares an arrear of dividends had accrued, permitted, for several years, the profits of the company to be appropriated to the payment of dividends upon other preference shares inferior to theirs. Held, under the special circumstances of the case, that they had not lost their right to the arrear, either by acquiescence or laches. Smith v. Cork and Bandon R'y Co., 5 Irish Reports (Equity), 65. 1870.

160. — The rights of preferred stockholders are not those of creditors; but still they may, under the plan of organization of a corporation, be made so far superior to those of common stockholders as to enable them to compel a division of profits which the board of directors had determined to accumulate. Nickals v. New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R. Co., 15 Federal Reporter, 575. 1883.

161. — That a board of directors has determined to apply all profits made by a road to its improvement does not take away their present character. In this respect net earnings and profits are alike; and largely, at least, the improvement would be chargeable to capital. Ib.

162. — Dividends payable upon preferred stock are not debts of a corporation, and such dividends cannot be paid except from net earnings, and subject to the rights of the creditors of the corporation. Chaffee v. Rutland R. R. Co., 55 Vt., 110. 1882.

163. — But certificates having been issued for such dividends without objection by the creditors or stockholders, the corporation is estopped from denying their validity. Ib.

164. — After the issue of common stock by a railroad company, a supplement to its charter was passed, which authorized the issue of preferred stock, on the following conditions: "That when so issued, . . . the holders thereof, respectively, shall be entitled to receive dividends on the same, not to exceed seven per centum per annum, before any dividend shall be set apart or paid on the other and ordinary stock of said company." In some years dividends of seven per cent. or less were declared on the preferred stock alone, and in other years such dividends were declared on both the preferred and common stock. Held, that a holder of the preferred stock was not entitled to annual dividends thereon at a fixed rate, but only to dividends out of the annual profits; but when such profits had been earned, he was entitled to a dividend of seven per cent. therefrom, before any dividend could be paid on the common stock. Elkins v. Camden and Atlantic R. R. Co., 36 N. J. Eq., 233, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 689.

165. — A railway company issued stock; becoming embarrassed, a statute was enacted in 1855, authorizing it to complete its road, etc., to issue preferred stock, the holders to receive a dividend of eight per cent. from the time of payment therefor before the other stock; the dividend to be paid only out of the net earnings of the line. Other laws authorized the issue of a "consolidated preferred stock," to retire the stock theretofore issued; the holders to receive eight per cent. from July, 1872, before any other stock should receive a dividend. "Consolidated" stock was issued, which was used in retiring all other stock except forty-two shares of the "preferred" stock. In July, 1878, a dividend was declared on the "consolidated" and "preferred" stock as it should then stand on the books, payable out of the earnings of the road for the two preceding years. Held, that the owners of the forty-two shares of "preferred" stock were entitled to a dividend of eight per cent. per annum from the time of payment for it in 1855, the whole amount of dividend declared being sufficient for that purpose. West Chester and Philadelphia R. R. Co. v. Jackson, 77 Pa. St., 321. 1875.

166. Moneys advanced by officers. The directors of a railway company, whose borrowing power had been fully exercised, procured advances from a bank on their own personal security. The moneys so advanced were within the limit of the capital of the company, and were applied in the payment of contractors or otherwise in completion of the undertaking. The directors subsequently paid off the amount due to the bank. The railway company, at a general meeting, sanctioned these proceedings. Held, that the directors were entitled to be repaid the amount so paid by them, with interest, out of the profits of the company, in priority to preference shareholders. Ulster R'y Co. v. Banbridge, etc., R'y Co., 2 Irish Eq., 190. 1869.

167. Ultra vires. A scheme for the issue of preferred stock as a dividend held to be ultra vires. Hoole v. Great Western R'y Co., Law Reports, 3 Chancery Appeal Cases, 262. 1837.

VIII. ILLEGAL AND SPURIOUS STOCK; OVERISSUES.

168. Bona fide holder. The president of a railway company fraudulently issued certificates of stock, properly signed and sealed, in excess of the amount authorized by law. Held, that persons who bought this stock or took it as collateral security were entitled to relief as bona fide purchasers on the faith of certificates issued by the company, and which it cannot gainsay. Willis v. Philadelphia and Darby R. R. Co., 13 Philadelphia, 33. 1879.

169. Damages; evidence. In a suit for damages for the alleged fraudulent issuing by defendant of a certificate for fifty shares of plaintiff's stock, he filling up a blank certificate which had been intrusted to him as treasurer, defendant testified that the stock was given to him by bondholders of the company who were entitled thereto. Defendant was also a director of the company. Held, that the jury were not bound by defendant's testimony, although undisputed, he being an interested witness, and it not appearing that he disclosed the gift to plaintiff's directors, or claimed that he was equitably entitled to the stock, when disputes arose concerning the transaction. Brooklyn Cross-town R. R. Co. v. Strong, 73 N. Y., 591. 1878.

170. Overissue. A railway company is liable, in case of a fraudulent overissue of stock by its officers, for the amount of money advanced by the purchaser or holder of such stock, with interest thereon. Tome v. Parkersburg Branch R. R. Co., 39 Md., 86, 1873; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 285.

171. Wrongful issue by directors. The directors of a railway company are not justified in acting on an old resolution authorizing the issue of shares, after the particular purpose for which the authority was given has ceased to be available. Nor in issuing shares, supposing them to have the power, for the express purpose of creating votes to influence a coming general meeting. Fraser v. Whalley, 2 Hemming & Miller (Eng. Ch.), 10. 1864.

IX. INCREASE OF STOCK.

172. Powers of officers. Where the charter of a corporation says that the capital stock of the corporation shall be a sum named, as ex. gr. $100,000, "and may be increased from time to time at the pleasure of the said corporation," the directors alone, and without the matter being submitted to and approved by the stockholders, have no power to increase it unless expressly authorized thereto; and the fact that the charter declares that "all the corporate powers of the said corporation shall be vested in and exercised by a board of directors and such officers and agents as said board shall appoint," does not alter the case. The powers thus granted to the directors, etc., refer to the ordinary business transactions of the corporation. Railway Co. v. Allerton, 18 Wallace, 233, 1873; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 420.

173. Right of former shareholders to increase. In order for a stockholder to avail himself of his right, under the charter, to take the additional stock about to be issued, he must apply for the shares and tender payment within the time specified in the charter. Hart v. St. Charles St. R. R. Co., 30 La. An., 758. 1878.

X. ACTIONS BY STOCKHOLDERS.

174. Action against officers. The directors of a corporation represent all its stockholders. They cannot, therefore, be charged by a plaintiff in an action with the duty of caring for and protecting the interests of one class of stockholders as against another, and this although they may belong to the former class; if for any reason that class of stockholders should be represented in the action, others not having an official relation to the corporation should be selected as the representatives. Under the Code, officers cannot be made parties to such action. Chase v. Vanderbilt, 63 N. Y., 807, 1875; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 141.

175. Action by stockholder against corporation. An action by a stockholder against a corporation, to restrain it from a contemplated transaction which is ultra vires, may be maintained, and must be sanctioned by the court, although all the other stockholders of the corporation are willing to assent to and affirm the proposed course of action; but in a case of evident expediency, and where there is no attempt to go beyond the power conferred, a court of equity will not be swift to grant the stringent relief of a preliminary injunction to a stockholder assailing transactions in the corporate affairs of which the other stockholders do not complain, and to which they have given their consent. Dupont v. Northern Pacific R. R. Co., 18 Federal Reporter, 467. 1883.

176. — Although it is the undoubted right of every shareholder in a company to prevent the directors from exceeding their powers, still, where it appears that the plaintiff is merely a puppet in the hands of others not shareholders in the company, who indemnify him against the costs of the suit, the court will not interfere by interlocutory injunction. Filder v. London, Brighton and South Coast R'y Co., 1 Hemming & Miller (Eng. Ch.), 489. 1863.

177. — A county, as stockholder in a railroad company, brought suit against the company. Held, on demurrer, that where the bill shows a condition of things touching the control of the corporate affairs of those intrusted with their active management, as would have rendered a formal application to the board of directors to bring the suit an idle ceremony, a case is presented requiring the defendant to answer. Tazewell County v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 12 Federal Reporter, 752. 1882.

173. Injunction. Though a shareholder in a railway company has an equity to have an injunction to restrain the directors from applying the funds of the company in the completion of a part only of the line, with a view to the abandonment of the remainder, yet where the shareholder, with the knowledge of the intention to abandon the greater part of the line, remained passive for eighteen months, while the directors were expending large sums in the completion of the remainder, the court refused to interfere by injunction. Graham v. Birkenhead Ry Co., 6 Eng. Law & Equity, 182; 20 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S.), Chanc., 445. 1851.

179. — Upon an ex parte application an injunction was granted restraining the directors of the R. and S. L. R. Co. from passing a resolution declaring the office of treasurer vacant; removing the treasurer; electing any other person to perform the duties of his office, or to take the books or papers of the company from him. The action was commenced by a stockholder, on the ground that two former treasurers had, by means of false entries in the books, defrauded the company, and that certain of the defendants intended to pass the resolution for the purpose of preventing any further investigation and the company from recovering the amount due, and plaintiff asked that the said defaulting treasurers, defendants herein, should be adjudged to pay to the company the amount due to it from them. Held, that a stockholder could not maintain the action until request had been made to the corporation, and its officers had refused to bring suit. Wilkie v. Rochester and State Line Ry Co., 12 Hun (N. Y.), 242. 1877.

180. Misapplication of funds. Where one company enters into an illegal transaction with another company, and makes an illegal payment out of its funds in respect of such transaction, a shareholder impeaching the dealings of the companies, and seeking to have the money restored to the funds of his own company, is entitled, in his own name, to maintain a suit against both companies for that purpose. Salomons v. Laing, 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 808. 1850.

181. Right of stockholders to defend for corporation. Stockholders, except when expressly authorized by statute, are not allowed to plead and defend for the corporation, when the suit is against it, and they are not parties on the record. Blackman v. Central R. R. and Banking Co., 58 Ga., 189. 1877.

182. Right of stockholder to sue for corporation. A stockholder in a business corporation cannot sue in equity for relief against an injury done or threatened to the corporation in which he is a stockholder, without an averment that the corporation or its officers are derelict in their duty. Morgan v. Railroad Co., 1 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 15. 1870.

183. — The corporation must be made a defendant in such suit. Davenport v. Dows, 18 Wallace, 626. 1873.

STOCK YARDS.

1. Fraudulent organization. Where a stock yard company was organized by the officers of a railway company and others, and the only means put into the same was by the railway company, through its officers, who also controlled the stock yard company, and the latter company issued stock to the extent of its charter, a portion of which was used as a corruption fund, and the balance divided between certain members of the company, they paying nothing therefor, it was held that the issue of the stock was in violation of law and in fraud of the rights of the stockholders of the railway company, and vested in the recipients of the same no rights which a court of equity would enforce or protect. The stock, if of any validity, belonged to the railway company. Tobey v. Robinson, 99 Ill., 222. 1881.

2. Monopoly. A preliminary injunction granted to restrain the withdrawal of railway connection with an old established stock yard, the withdrawal being attempted to aid in the erection of a monopoly at another point. Coe v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 775. 1880.

STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU.

See LIEN OF CARRIER.

1. Agent and principal. Where one through his agent sells goods to another, and they are shipped to the purchaser, the agent has no right to stop the goods in transitu because his principal owes him on account of money advanced in the purchase of the goods. Gwyn v. Richmond and Danville R. R. Co., 85 N. C., 429, 1881; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 452.

2. Assignment of bill of lading. The assignment of a bill of lading to an innocent holder will defeat the right of stoppage in transitu. Newhall et al. v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 51 Cal., 845, 1876; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 229.

3. — An assignment to an attorney held fraudulent and void under the evidence. Poole v. Houston and Texas Central R'y Co., 58 Tex., 134, 1883; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 197.

4. — As a general rule a bill of lading is evidence of the title to personal property; but if it be obtained without the authority of the owner and vendor of the goods, or by fraud, it will not authorize a transfer so as to defeat the title of the original owner or affect his right to stop the goods in transitu. Evansville and Terre Haute R. R. Co. v. Erwin, 84 Ind., 457, 1883; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 252.

5. Between what parties the right exists. F., a merchant at Dardanelle, ordered goods of W. B. & Co., merchants at St. Louis. They sent the order to L. A. & Co., merchants at New Orleans, with directions to ship the goods to F. at Dardanelle, and send them the bill and bill of lading. L. A. & Co. filled the order, shipped the goods to F., and sent the bill and bill of lading to W. B. & Co., and charged the goods to them, and they charged them to F. During the transit W. B. & Co. failed, and L. A. & Co., claiming the right of stoppage in transitu, demanded the goods of the M. and L. R. R. Co., which was transporting them to F., and the company delivered them up to them. F. then sued the company for the value of the goods. Held, that L. A. & Co. were not the vendors of F.; there was no privity between him and them, and they had no right to stop the goods, and the defendant was liable to F. for their value. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co. v. Freed, 33 Ark., 614, 1833; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 212.

6. Delivery. On November 12th a railroad received certain boxes of tobacco to be carried from Atlanta to Macon; they reached the latter place on November 15th, and, under an agreement between the consignee and the carrier, they were set aside by the latter in its depot to be sold and the proceeds used to pay past due freights, it being agreed that the balance, if any, should go to the consignee. He did not receive the boxes and then turn them over, nor did he assign the bill of lading, nor was the freight paid. On December 12th the consignors sought to stop the goods in transitu, and, failing to obtain them on demand, sought to recover against the carrier. Held, that no actual delivery had taken place so as to prevent a stoppage in transitu. Macon and Western R. R. Co. v. Meador, 65 Ga., 705, 1880; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 450.

7. Equity. A bill in equity will lie to enforce a right of stoppage in transitu. Schotsman v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R'y Co., Law Reports, 2 Chancery Appeal Cases, 332. 1887.

8. Liability of carrier. For the erroneous delivery of goods to the consignee by the carrier, after receiving notice to stop the goods, the carrier is responsible. Campbell v. Jones, 9 Decisions des Tribunaux (Lower Canada), 10. 1858.

9. Notice. The notice to the carrier is sufficient if he is clearly informed of the desire of the seller to exercise the right of stoppage in transitu. The objection that the purchaser is not insolvent can only be raised by the purchaser; such objection is not available to the carrier, except that he may show, as a matter of defense, that the debt might have been collected by due diligence. Bloomington v. Memphis and Charleston R. R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.), 616, 1881; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 371.

10. — The statute of Texas recognizes no such officer as "general freight agent," and service of citation on the station agent having control of freights of the railway company at the point of destination of the goods is service on the company. Notice to such an agent of stoppage in transitu is notice to the company. Poole v. Houston and Texas Central Ry Co., 58 Tex., 184, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 197.

11. — The notice of stoppage in transitu should be sufficiently specific to enable the carrier to identify the goods; otherwise it will not be liable for delivery of the goods after notice. Clementson v. Grand Trunk Ry Co., 42 Upper Canada (Queen's Bench), 268. 1877.

12. Right of vendor. Where goods are left with a common carrier to be delivered to the consignee without any qualification or restriction, the consignor parts with the goods and all control over them, and cannot, by a subsequent order to the carrier, prevent their delivery to the consignee, unless such facts are shown as will justify the stoppage of the goods in transitu. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co. v. Wireman, 88 Pa. St., 264. 1879.

I. CHARTER AND GRANTS.

1. Authority to use street. A railway cannot occupy a street with its track, even temporarily, unless such right is clearly conferred by its charter. The councils of a city cannot confer such right; but only the people of the whole state by their legislature. Attorney-General v. Lombard and South St. R. R. Co., 10 Philadelphia, 853. 1875. See, also, Metropolitan City Ry Co. v. City of Chicago, 96 Ill., 620, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 231.

2. — If one street railroad company is occupying or using a street without proper license to do so, it is no concern of another railroad company having a railway on the same street, but must be inquired into by proceedings on behalf of the public. Market Street Ry Co. v. Central Ry Co., 51 Cal., 588, 1877; 12 Amer. Ry Rep., 219.

3. Conflicting rights; proceedings by attorney-general. A proceeding having been commenced, in the name of the state, to determine what were in fact the conflicting rights of two street railway companies, the attorney-general may at his discretion dismiss the proceeding. People v. Central Cross Town R. R. Co., 21 Hun (N. Y.), 473. 1889.

4. Charter. A party, signing an instrument plainly intended to be final articles of association of a street railway company (though defective), one of the articles giving power to any two subscribers to call a meeting "for the purpose of effecting an organization and incorporating under the laws of Indiana" and electing directors, and authorizing any three subscribers at such meeting "to have the company duly organized and incorporated as herein provided," does not thereby empower such meeting to make new and perfect articles of association, and bind him thereby. Richmond Street R. R. Co. v. Reed, 83 Ind., 9, 1832; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 627.

5. — Ch. 160, Laws of 1873, confers upon the corporation thereby created the right to extend its tracks to the North river at the foot of Christopher street. Christopher and Tenth Street R. R. Co. v. Central Cross-Town R. R. Co. of New York, 4 Hun (N. Y.), 630. 1875.

6. — The statute approved December 13, 1855, to organize a street railway in St. Louis, construed. St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Northwestern St. Louis Ry Co., 69 Mo., 65, 1878; reversing St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Northwestern St. Louis Ry Co., 2 Mo. App., 69, 1876.

7. — Where the charter of a horse railway company authorized it to build a single or double track railway over any streets in the city of Chicago, as had been or should be authorized by the common council, and full permission was given by ordinance to lay a track, in which a time was fixed for its completion, and a forfeiture was provided for in case of non-completion, and before the expiration of the time the ordinance was amended and the time extended for the period of ten years, held, that the operation of this latter ordinance was to extend the time for ten years after the expiration of the time fixed by the previous ordinance. McNeil v. Chicago City R'y Co., 61 Ill., 150, 1871; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 457.

8. Constitutional law. The act of incorporation of a street railway company authorized it to lay its tracks in a number of streets designated. Another act was passed, entitled "A supplement (to the first act) authorizing the company to declare dividends quarterly, and to lay additional tracks of railway." Held, that under the clause in the constitution prohibiting laws "containing more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in the title," a provision authorizing the laying of tracks in streets, not authorized by the original act, was unconstitutional. Union Passenger R'y Co.'s Appeal, 81½ Pa. St., 91. 1872.

9. — The section of the act of 1860 providing for the construction of a railroad in Seventh avenue, New York (ch. 513, Laws of 1860), which authorizes the persons named to "run upon, intersect and use" any portion of other railroad tracks, should they deem it necessary, makes full provision for compensation, and is constitutional. Sixth Avenue R. R. Co. v. Kerr, 72 N. Y., 830. 1878.

10. — A statute exempting a corporation from the operation of the general statutes is unconstitutional. Omnibus R. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 57 Cal., 160, 1881; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 316.

11. Control of streets by city. A city has general power over its streets and alleys to keep them in good order and to regulate their use for the benefit of the public. The legislature has the power to authorize the construction of a railroad over the streets of a city even against its will. In the absence of any statutory provision, a railway company is bound to keep in repair that part of the streets of a city occupied by it, but the city cannot pass an ordinance compelling it to keep it in order. If the track of a railroad company is out of order, so that it cannot be crossed with safety, the company may be indicted. Harrisburg v. Harrisburg Passenger R'y Co., 1 Pearson (Pa.), 298. 1867.

12. — A city may to a certain extent control and regulate the action of other corporations within its limits by ordinance; but it cannot prohibit a city passenger railway company, chartered by the legislature, from running its cars upon its streets for the non-compliance with the provisions of an ordinance. Id.

13. — A city ordinance prescribing the place and mode of construction and operation is valid, and will, after its acceptance by the railway company, be regarded as determining the control to be exercised by the city. Clinton v. Clinton and Lyons R'y Co., 87 Ia., 61. 1873.

14. — An act of assembly incorporating a passenger railway company authorized it to lay tracks along certain streets of the city of Allegheny, "provided that before said company shall use and occupy any of said streets, the consent of the councils of the city or borough within which the said street lies shall first be obtained by ordinance duly passed." By a supplementary act, which contained no direction requiring the consent of councils, the company was authorized to lay tracks between certain points, the route between which was partly within the city limits. Held, that before tracks could be laid under the later act, the consent of councils must be obtained. Pittsburgh, Allegheny, etc., R'y Co., Appeal of, 1 Pennypacker (Pa.), 449. 1881.

15. — A passenger railway company having accepted its charter with the knowledge that the city possessed the most ample power to legislate by ordinance as to its streets and highways, to make all needed regulations for the most convenient enjoyment of the same by the citizens of the commonwealth, is bound, by an implied agreement, to hold its special privileges subject to a proper exercise of this power by the councils of the city. West Philadelphia R'y Co. v. Philadelphia, 10 Philadelphia, 70. 1873.

 Charter and Grants.

16. — A passenger railway company having laid its road in the streets of the city of Philadelphia under authority of a charter from the state is liable to the regulations adopted by councils for the preservation of the public rights in the highway. Ib.

17. Crossings. The maintenance of a horse railroad on the streets of a city is a mere special mode of using the street, and does not exclude the public from the use of the street nor prevent the crossing of its track by another railroad, provided the crossing is effected with as little damage as may be. Market Street R'y Co. v. Central R'y Co., 51 Cal., 593, 1877; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 219.

18. — A grant of right to cross any "railways and railroads now or hereafter to be laid on Market street" does not give a right to cross a railroad now constructed. Maris v. Union Passenger R'y Co., 10 Philadelphia, 41. 1878.

19. Exclusive rights. Where a street railway company has refused to build an additional line lawfully required by the city council, it is discretionary with the council to make such changes in the proposed route as to adapt it to form a junction with the line of some company that will build it, even though, in so doing, a street in which the former company had had exclusive rights is used as a connecting link. If such a use infringes the rights of the former company, it is damnum absque injuria. Grand Rapids Street R'y Co. v. West Side Street R'y Co., 48 Mich., 433; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 95. 1892. See, also, Kinsman Street R. R. Co. v. Broadway and Newburgh Street R. R. Co., 86 Ohio St., 239, 1890; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 327.

20. — The evidence as to performance of the conditions of an exclusive charter being conflicting, an injunction was refused till the final hearing. Savannah, Skidaway, etc., R. R. Co. v. Coast Line R. R. Co., 49 Ga., 202. 1878.

21. — A municipal ordinance gave a street railway company the exclusive right to lay its track in such streets as should be designated by the city council, if accepted by the company within a certain time. Held, that the company, after forfeiting such right as to specified streets, could not maintain a bill to enjoin another company, upon which the right had been subsequently conferred, from laying its track in streets not so designated to complainant, unless it could show actual injury thereby to its own interests. Grand Rapids Street R'y Co. v. West Side Street R'y Co., 48 Mich., 433; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 95. 1892.

22. — Section 3 of the act of January 16, 1860, whereby it was enacted that no street railway should be constructed in the city of St. Louis nearer to a parallel railway than the third parallel street, was not repealed by the act of February 15, 1864, nor by the act of March 18, 1867, nor by the act of March 4, 1870, nor by art. 10, § 1, of the present charter of the city of St. Louis. Neither has the municipal assembly of said city the power to repeal said § 3. St. Louis R. R. Co. v. South St. Louis R. R. Co., 72 Mo., 67. 1890. See, also, St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Northwestern St. Louis R'y Co., 69 Mo., 65. 1878.

23. — The right acquired by a horse railroad company, under a legislative grant authorizing it to lay rails in a public highway, and to run cars thereon, charging fare, is such as entitles it to exclude from the habitual and continuous use of its tracks all companies and persons engaged in carrying passengers for hire, in competition with it. Citizens' Coach Co. v. Camden Horse R. R. Co., 33 N. J. Eq., 287, 1890; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 190.

24. — The exclusive right of a horse railroad company is not inconsistent with the view that such a railroad, laid on a public highway, is only a modification of the public use to which the highway was originally devoted, and not an additional burden on the land for which compensation may be required. Ib.

25. Extension. A street railway corporation, which owns or has a right to construct a street railroad within a city or village, may, with the permission of the council of such city or village, duly granted, extend its track beyond the termini named in the certificate of incorporation, subject to the provisions of § 2505 of the Revised Statutes (77 Ohio L., 42). Sims v. Street R. R. Co., 37 Ohio St., 556, 1892; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 182.

 Charter and Grants.

26. Grant of franchise by city. Under §§ 411 and 412 of the Municipal Code (66 Ohio L., 217; 67 Ohio L., 77), a grant by the council of a municipal corporation to build a street railroad must be made by ordinance directly to a party to be therein named; and the authority to make the grant cannot be delegated by the council to any officer or board. State ex rel. v. Bell, 84 Ohio St., 194, 1877; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 84.

27. — A city council cannot properly so multiply street railway tracks in a particular street as to interfere with the rights of the general public in the street. Grand Rapids Street R'y Co. v. West Side Street R'y Co., 48 Mich., 483; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 95, 1882.

28. — Where the rights granted by a city to a corporation have lapsed, the city can impose whatever conditions it pleases upon a renewal of them. City of Detroit v. Detroit City Railway Co., 37 Mich., 538, 1877.

29. — A city has no power to authorize the construction of street railways without some legislative enactment vesting the municipal authorities with such authority. Covington Street R'y Co. v. City of Covington, 9 Bush (Ky.), 127, 1872; Eichels v. Evansville Street R'y Co., 78 Ind., 261, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 274.

30. — The doctrine is now settled that the legislature has the power to authorize the building of a railroad on a street of a city, and may directly exercise this power or devolve it upon the local or municipal authorities. Harrison v. New Orleans Pacific R'y Co., 34 La. An., 462, 1882.

31. Legislative authority. The legislature, in the exercise of its sovereign powers, may authorize the use of the streets of a city or town for the purposes of a horse railway, and such a use is not an additional servitude for which adjoining lot owners are entitled to compensation. Hodges v. Baltimore Union R'y Co., 58 Md., 603, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 270; Hiss v. Baltimore and Hampden R'y Co., 52 Md., 242, 1879; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 201; Maris v. Union Passenger R'y Co., 10 Philadelphia, 41, 1873. See, also, Eichels v. Evansville Street R'y Co., 78 Ind., 261, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 274.

32. Location of line in the street. A passenger railway company was incorporated with a right to lay a track on Seventh street from Filbert street to Sansom street in the city of Philadelphia, provided the assent of the city should be obtained thereto. The company was also authorized to connect at grade with any railroad upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon, or as the district court of Philadelphia, in case of disagreement, might direct. By a city ordinance, July 7, 1837, all railway companies were required to submit a plan to the board of surveyors of said city; and the company did submit such plan, which was duly approved, and by that plan its road was to be laid in the middle of Seventh street, then occupied by the Union R'y Co. On June 19, 1875, the city council authorized the Continental Company to construct its road over the points designated in its charter. It proceeded to lay a track on the west side of Seventh street, between the Union Railway track and the curb, to which action the city objected and applied for an injunction. Held, that the Continental R'y Co. having, by its plan submitted to, and approved by, the board of surveyors, located its road in the middle of the street, had no right to lay a track on the west side thereof, and the injunction was continued. Philadelphia v. Continental Passenger R'y Co., 11 Philadelphia, 315, 1875.

33. Location; publication of notice. Under the "Act in regard to horse and dummy railroads," approved March 9, 1874, the city, town or village authorities are prohibited from giving consent to construct and operate a horse railroad in the streets, unless at least ten days' public notice of the time and place of presenting the petition shall first have been given by publication in some newspaper published in the city or county where such road is to be constructed. The publication of the report of a committee recommending the granting of such leave, ten days before the adoption of an ordinance authorizing the construction of such a road, and the publication of the ordinance, is not a compliance with the statute. Metropolitan City R'y Co. v. City of Chicago, 90 Ill., 620, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 291.

 Charter and Grants.

34. New lines; connection. A new street railway company, authorized by its charter to connect with the tracks of another line, must have the terms and compensation settled by due course of law. Union Passenger Ry Co. v. Continental Ry Co., 11 Philadelphia, 321. 1876.

35. Ordinance. The repeal of an ordinance will not operate to disturb private rights vested under it. Cape May and Schellenger's Landing R. R. Co. v. City of Cape May, 33 N. J. Eq., 419. 1882.

36. — Under the provisions of the Municipal Code, the city council of Cincinnati is not authorized to pass any ordinance giving to street railway companies the exclusive right to maintain and operate such railroads upon a street, or to grant the right to construct such railroads on streets to be designated, to such company as will bid "the lowest price of commutation tickets in packages," the law requiring such grants to be let to the one that "will agree to carry passengers at the lowest rate of fare." Where an ordinance contains such illegal provisions, and they are so connected with authorized provisions that their separation is impracticable, the whole ordinance is invalid. Cincinnati Street R. R. Co. v. Smith, 29 Ohio St., 291. 1876.

37. — Revision of city ordinances examined and certain ordinances held unrepealed. Providence v. Union R. R. Co., 13 R. I., 478. 1879.

38. Single or double track; control by city. Where a city granted to a street railway company the right to lay a double track in its streets, and thereupon the company expended a large amount of money in the enjoyment of the franchise thus conferred, it was held that the city could not afterward, by amendment to the ordinance conferring the franchise, limit the company to a single track in a street through which it proposed to extend its line. Burlington v. Burlington Street Ry Co., 49 Ia., 144. 1878.

39. — Before the city could, in the exercise of its police power, limit the company to a single track, it must have been made to appear that the exercise of the right granted by the original ordinance wrought injury. Id.

40. — Under the St. of 1874, ch. 29, § 11, which provides that the board of aldermen of a city and the selectmen of a town may authorize any street railway company "whose charter has been duly accepted, and whose tracks have been located and constructed, to extend the location of its tracks within the territorial limits of such city or town, whenever it can be done without entering upon or using the tracks of any other street railway corporation," a street railway company may be authorized to locate additional tracks, not connected with its existing tracks except by the tracks of another corporation. South Boston R. R. Co. v. Middlesex R. R. Co., 121 Mass., 485. 1877.

41. — A railway company laid down tracks on a street and used the same for seven years; then the double track was removed and a single one laid, which was sufficient for the business of the line for the next ten years. The business again requiring the double track, the company proceeded to tear up the single track to again relay the double one, when a bill was filed to restrain it on the ground that it had forfeited its right to relay this track by non-user. Held, that there was no ground for forfeiture. Hestonville, etc., R. R. Co. v. City of Philadelphia, 89 Pa. St., 210. 1879.

42. Steam power. A town may prohibit the use of steam upon a street railway. North Chicago City Ry Co. v. Lake View, 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ill.), 43. 1833.

43. — The legislature may grant the right to a railway company whose line is already constructed to use steam upon its road. Such grant is not unconstitutional. People v. Long Island R. R. Co., 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 181. 1880. See, also, North Chicago City Ry Co. v. Lake View, 103 Ill., 207. 1883.

44. Successor of corporation. When a regularly incorporated street railway company becomes entitled to the exclusive right to lay its track in certain streets upon the relinquishment or forfeiture of such right by another company, it is thereafter entitled to the same protection against injurious interference, to the extent of this right, as the other company would have been. Grand Rapids Street Ry Co. v. West Side Street Ry Co., 48 Mich., 433; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 95. 1883.

Eminent Domain — Streets — Repairs and Improvements.

45. Vested rights of company. The state having granted a right to lay rails on a street to one corporation cannot grant any right to another which will interfere with that right first granted. Maris v. Union Passenger R'y Co., 10 Philadelphia, 41, 1878; Market St. R'y Co. v. Union Passenger R'y Co., ib., 43.

46. Use of tracks by other companies; powers of commissioners. It is within the discretion of the railway commissioners, authorized by the St. of 1871, ch. 381, §§ 38, 39, to determine the rate of compensation to be paid by one street railway company for the use of the tracks of another such corporation, to establish rules regulating the modes of apportioning expenses and estimating compensation between the companies; and to the exercise of that discretion, if no question of law is involved, no exception lies. Metropolitan R. R. Co. v. Highland Street R'y Co., 118 Mass., 290, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 285.

II. EMINENT DOMAIN.

47. Abutting property. A horse street railway may be placed and operated upon the streets of a city without increasing the burden of the servitude, and the owner of the fee is not entitled to compensation because of such use of the streets upon which his property abuts. Eichels v. Evansville Street R'y Co., 78 Ind., 261, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 274; West Jersey R. R. Co. v. Cape May and Schellenger's Landing R. R. Co., 34 N. J. Eq., 164, 1881; Attorney-General v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 125 Mass., 515, 1878. See, also, Mahady v. Bushwick R. R. Co., 91 N. Y., 148, 1898. Contra, Carli v. Stillwater Street R'y Co., 28 Minn., 373, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 226.

48. Dummy railroad. The right of a corporation to condemn property and appropriate the same for the construction, operation and maintenance of a horse or dummy railway in the streets of a city, is derived solely from the state law, and the consent of the city authorities to the construction and operation of such railway is not a condition precedent to proceedings to condemn. Such consent can be obtained after condemnation as well as before, and, if given, is a mere license, revocable at any time before acted on. Metropolitan City R'y Co. v. Chicago West Division R'y Co., 87 Ill., 317, 1877; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 64.

49. — The interest a city railway company may have in certain streets, derived by contract with the city prohibiting their use by any other company, is no part of the company's franchise, but is in the nature of property, and is an incorporeal right. Id.

50. Statute. The provisions of the statutes respecting the appropriation of the right of way for railroad companies apply as well to railways operated by animal power as to those operated by steam. Clinton v. Clinton and Lyons R'y Co., 37 La., 61, 1878; Ingram v. C. D. and M. R. R. Co., 88 ib., 669, 1874.

51. Taking of one company's property for use of another. Where the legislature has reserved the power to alter, amend and repeal the charter of a street railway company, it may lawfully authorize another company to use its tracks, or to lay similar tracks through the same streets, making compensation for the use of the tracks of the first company, without making any compensation for the diminution of its profits or the value of its franchise. Metropolitan R. R. Co. v. Highland Street R'y Co., 118 Mass., 290, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 285.

III. STREETS — REPAIRS AND IMPROVEMENTS.

52. Change of grade of street. An injunction will not be granted to restrain the city from changing the grade of a street, upon the complaint of a passenger railway company which had purchased the right of way over the street, formerly a turnpike, where ample remedy is given the company for the recovery of whatever damages may result to it by statutory proceedings. Bidge Avenue R'y Co. v. Philadelphia, 10 Philadelphia, 87, 1878.

53. Crossings. After a bill in equity had been filed by a street railway company against a steam railway corporation to restrain it from building its road across a highway upon which the street railway was laid, at a level with the highway, the county commissioners authorized the railway corpuration to cross the highway at a level. Held, that the bill must be dismissed. Lynn and Boston R. R. Co. v. Boston and Lowell R. R. Co., 114 Mass., 88. 1873.

54. Defect; liability of city. A city is liable for not keeping its streets safe for travel. It cannot divest itself of this duty by an ordinance. Watson v. Tripp, 11 R. I., 98. 1874.

55. — The plaintiff was driving in that portion of Second avenue occupied by the defendant's tracks; one wheel slipped into an excavation between the tracks, whereby he was thrown and injured. The excavation was made in order to connect with the sewer, by an adjoining property owner, who had notified defendant of his intention to make the same, whereupon the defendant bridged it over, so that horses could pass. The defendant had agreed with the city "to pave the streets, in and about the rails, in a permanent manner, and keep the same in repair." Held, that the contract made by the city inured to the benefit of the plaintiff, and that he was entitled to enforce it. McMahon v. Second Avenue R. R. Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.), 347. 1877.

56. — Injury to traveler. Defendant was licensed by the B. C. R. R. Co., a street railroad company, in the city of Brooklyn, to connect its road with that of the latter company, at a point on the street where there was a cross-walk. By the contract between the two companies, defendant was to make and pay for all switches necessary to avail itself of the license. After connection was made, the B. C. R. R. Co. stipulated to keep the tracks in repair, and no right was reserved or duty imposed on defendant, as to said tracks, after the switch was once laid, or as to the pavement or cross-walk. The B. C. R. R. Co. had contracted with the city to keep the pavement "within the tracks and three feet each side thereof" in repair. The portion of the switch at the cross-walk was a part of the track of the latter company. It was properly laid originally, with its flange below the surface of the cross-walk, but, by the sinking and wearing away of the cross-walk adjoining, its surface was brought below the switch, and an obstruction was created, by means of which the plaintiff was thrown down and injured. In a suit for damages, held, that as to the portion of the switch in question, defendant had no duty to perform in maintaining it, and was not liable for failure to keep the cross-walk in repair. Therefore, a charge of the court that it was defendant's duty, in the proper maintenance of its switch, "to keep the cross-walk on a safe level with the grade of the switch," was erroneous. Lowery v. Brooklyn City and Newtown R. R. Co., 76 N. Y., 28. 1879.

57. Gas pipes. Where a gas company, with the permission of the municipal authorities, had laid down, and was maintaining, its pipe in the street of a city, and a street railway company was wrongly informed by the employes of the gas company respecting the location of the latter's pipes, so that the railway track was laid over them, held, that the gas company could be estopped from disturbing the railway track, even for the purpose of repairing its own property. Davenport Central R'y Co. v. Davenport Gas Co., 43 Ia., 301, 1876; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 437.

58. Improvements. The right of way, right of occupancy, franchise and interest of a street railway company having a track in a street, under a charter of the legislature and under a contract with the city council, is a property, and as such is liable to be assessed for benefits in the widening of the street upon which it runs its cars, the same as any other property benefited by the proposed improvement. Chicago City R'y Co. v. City of Chicago, 90 Ill., 573. 1878.

59. Obstruction. There is no presumption of law that a street railroad obstructs the usual travel on a highway, or makes it dangerous. Hawks v. Northampton, 121 Mass., 10. 1876.

60. Repair of streets. Under an ordinance requiring a street railway company to "keep the surface of the street inside the rails, and for two feet four inches outside thereof, in good order and repair, provided, however, that, upon the paved portion of said streets, the material for repaving shall be supplied at the expense of the city," where the city directs the company to "raise and repair" that portion of the pavement within the rails, at a time when it had become so much out of repair that a reconstruction with new materials was necessary, the city was bound to bear the expense of the materials; such repairs amount to repaving within the meaning of the proviso. Fort Wayne and Elmwood R'y Co. v. City of Detroit, 34 Mich., 78. 1876.

61. — A city ordinance required a street railway company to keep the space between its rails in good repair, and provided that on the paved portion of the street the materials should be supplied at the city's expense. Held, that in a suit by the company to recover the expense of material which it had furnished, it was not bound to show that the necessity for repairs did not arise from its own previous neglect of duty; such a fact would be matter of defense to be shown by the city. Fort Wayne and Elmwood Street R'y Co. v. City of Detroit, 39 Mich., 548. 1878.

62. — The company being directed to make repairs, asked the city authorities for leave to repave with cobble-stone, and the city refused to furnish any kind of material, but made no objection to cobble-stone and offered no suggestions. Held, that the company might use any suitable material and maintain an action against the city for its value. Ib.

63. — A railroad company is bound to keep its track in good order and repair, and if it carelessly fails or omits to do so and an injury occurs in consequence thereof, it will be liable in damages. Conroy v. Twenty-third Street R. R. Co.; 52 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 49. 1875.

64. — A city ordinance permitted a street railway company to double its track throughout a certain street, but stipulated that it should thereafter bear all the expense of repaving so much of the street as was occupied by its tracks, and should relay its tracks in the middle of the street. Held, that the ordinance applied to the entire street, and that if the company availed itself of the grant in part, it accepted the conditions in full, and lost the benefit of former exemptions or privileges that were inconsistent with it. City of Detroit v. Detroit City R'y Co., 37 Mich., 558. 1877.

65. — An obligation to keep a street in repair requires that it shall be kept in such condition as that the ordinary and expected travel of the locality may pass with reasonable ease and safety. McMahon v. Second Avenue R. R. Co., 75 N. Y., 231, 1878; affirming Same v. Same, 11 Hun (N. Y.), 347, 1877.

66. — A corporation was empowered to construct a street railway, but not to use the street until the consent of the councils should be had, and to keep so much of the streets, "from curb to curb, as may be used by them, in perpetual good repair at the expense" of the corporation. The councils gave consent, on condition the corporation should keep the street in a good and sufficient state of repair, and "in a reasonable sanitary condition." On one side of the street was a ravine, rising to the top of a hill; by an extraordinary rain, rocks, stone, etc., were washed down the ravine on the street, eight or ten feet in depth, for one hundred feet in length. Held, that the railway corporation was bound to remove the deposit from the street. Pittsburgh and Birmingham Passenger R'y Co. v. City of Pittsburgh, 80 Pa. St., 72. 1875.

67. — A street railway company, having neglected to repair the street, cannot complain if the city authorities obstruct the street and proceed to make the necessary repairs themselves. Philadelphia and Grey's Ferry R. R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 11 Philadelphia, 358. 1876.

68. — The requirement in the charter of a street railway company that it should "keep the surface of the street, inside the rails, and for two feet four inches outside thereof, in good order and repair," was held to mean the full width of two feet four inches on each side of the track. People ex rel. v. Fort Street and Elmwood R'y Co., 41 Mich., 413. 1879.

69. — The fact that a street railway company has agreed to keep a portion of a street in repair, as one of the conditions upon which it was permitted to lay its tracks, does not deprive the city authorities of the power or absolve them from the duty to keep such streets in a safe and proper condition; and even if the city fails to require the company to perform its contract, this is not an objection to an assessment upon owners of lots upon the streets for necessary repairs. People ex rel. v. City of Brooklyn, 65 N. Y., 349. 1875.

Collisions.

70. — By the charter of certain street railway companies of Washington and Georgetown, the companies were required to keep their tracks and the adjacent part of the streets, at all times, well paved and in good order, without expense to the United States and to the District, the District being also bound by statute to take all proper care of its streets and avenues. On the failure of the companies to perform this duty the work was done and paid for by the District, and to obtain reimbursement for the outlay, suit was afterwards brought by it against the companies. Held, that after the acceptance of their charters, the companies could not be heard to object that the provision was illegal or incapable of enforcement against them. District of Columbia v. Washington and Georgetown R. R. Co., 1 Mackey (Dist. of Columbia), 361, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 161.

71. — Where a tramway company enters into a contract with the road authority, under 33 and 34 Vict., ch. 78, § 29, whereby the road authority undertakes the repair of the portion of the road upon which the tramway is laid, the liability for damage occasioned by the non-repair of that part of the road which would but for such contract be cast by § 28 upon the tramway company, is transferred to the road authority. Howitt v. Nottingham and District Tramways Co., Law Reports, 12 Queen's Bench Division, 16. 1883.

72. — grading. The obligation "to keep the road-bed of the railroad in good repair, and to keep the road-bed up to the level of the streets, and in no case to allow the road-bed to be above or below the city grade after the streets shall be graded by the city," does not require the railway company to fill up the streets beneath its track so as to keep its road-bed on a level with the street on each side of the track. Galveston v. Galveston City R. R. Co., 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 274; 46 Tex., 435, 1877; Galveston City R'y Co. v. Nolan, 53 Tex., 139. 1880.

73. — mandamus. A city railway company may, by mandamus, be compelled to repair its track. So held where the act of incorporation required it to keep the track in repair. The remedy by indictment, though proper, is not adequate in such cases. Hal- ifax v. City R'y Co., 1 Russell & Cheesley (Nova Scotia Eq.), 319. 1878.

74. — repaving. A city ordinance, providing for repaving a street, is not invalid by reason of a failure therein to provide that a street railway company should repave its proper portion of such street. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Scharf, 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 241. 1882.

75. Snow and ice. A street railway company is liable for removing snow from its track and placing the same in the gutter of the street, so as to cause an overflow upon the adjoining premises. Short v. Baltimore City R'y Co., 50 Md., 73. 1878.

76. — A. was injured by a horse driven by B. The horse was frightened by the overturn of a sleigh to which it was harnessed, and the overturn was caused by a heap of snow and ice wrongfully made and left in a highway by C. A. sued C. to recover damages. C. demurred. Held, that the demurrer could not be sustained. Lee v. Union R. R. Co., 12 R. L., 383. 1879.

77. — An injunction lies at the suit of an abutting house owner, to enjoin a street railroad company from leaving the snow which it removes from its tracks, heaped up between them and plaintiff's premises for a longer period than reasonably requisite for taking it away. Prime v. Twenty-third Street R. R. Co., 1 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 63. 1878.

78. Switches. A city railroad company taking up a crosswalk to construct a switch used by it to connect its track with that of another company is bound not only to make but to maintain the surface of the pavement at a level suitable to prevent the switch from becoming a dangerous obstruction to foot passengers. Lowery v. Brooklyn City, etc., R. R. Co., 4 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 32. 1878.

IV. COLLISIONS.

79. Comparative negligence. Where the plaintiff is driving with his buggy upon a horse railway track when a car is approaching from the opposite direction toward him at a short distance and in plain sight, it is his duty to turn off the track to avoid a collision, and if he does not do so, through negligence or wilfulness, and a collision ensues, he cannot recover against the railway company, even if the latter was also in fault, unless the company or its servants wilfully causes the injury, or are guilty of such negligence or reckless conduct as that the plaintiff's is slight when compared with it. Chicago West Division R'y Co. v. Bert, 69 Ill., 388. 1873.

80. Evidence. The facts and evidence in relation to a collision examined and held to be a question for the jury. Watkins v. Atlantic Avenue R. R. Co., 20 Hun (N. Y.), 237. 1880. See, also, Cohen v. Dry Dock, etc., R. R. Co., 40 N. Y. Superior Ct., 368, 1876; 69 N. Y., 170, 1877; Cook v. Union R'y Co., 125 Mass., 57. 1878.

81. — In an action for damage caused by a collision, evidence that the plaintiff, while driving slowly in the highway upon the defendant's street railroad track, attempted to avoid a rapidly approaching car by turning off from the track, but that, being hindered by the sliding of his wheel in the groove of the rail, he was struck by the car driven with unchecked speed, is evidence sufficient to be considered by the jury both upon the question of his care and upon that of the defendant's negligence. Lynam v. Union R'y Co., 114 Mass., 83. 1873.

82. Liability of owner of team. A street railway company was in the lawful use of its cars upon the street, and while so doing one of its cars was run into by the coal wagon of defendant, resulting in an injury to one of the passengers on such car, by reason whereof the railway company was obliged to pay damages for the injury sustained by such passenger. Held, that the railway company had a remedy over against defendant for the trespass committed in running into its car, irrespective of the special damages for injury to the passenger set out in the declaration. Chicago West Division R'y Co. v. Rend, 6 Bradwell (Ill.), 243. 1880.

83. Repair of streets. It is the duty of a street railway company, as to third persons, to keep in repair that portion of a switch which, being a part of its own track, yet forms a connection with the track of another company, although, as between the two corporations, the duty of repairing may rest upon the latter; and such former company is liable for damages suffered through a collision with a team caused by such neglect. McKenna v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 112 Mass., 55. 1873.

84. Rights of parties. A person driving upon a street has the right to drive upon or cross a street railway. The only limitation upon this right is that he must give the cars the preference upon the track and not unnecessarily obstruct their passage. Adolph v. Central Park, North and East River R. R. Co., 65 N. Y., 554, 1875; Same v. Same, 76 N. Y., 580, 1879; 43 N. Y. Superior Ct., 199, 1878.

V. INJURIES TO PERSONS ON THE TRACK.

85. Accidental fall. In an action against a city railroad company to recover damages for running over the plaintiff, who stumbled and fell upon the track in crossing the street, it is not material that the plaintiff did not look to see whether a car was approaching before he attempted to cross, if there was when he started abundance of time, under ordinary circumstances, to cross the track before the car would reach him. The rule requiring care and diligence on the part of the plaintiff does not require him to anticipate the possibility of an accidental fall at an ordinary crossing. Mentz v. Second Avenue R. R. Co., 3 Abbott's Court of Appeals Decisions (N. Y.), 274. 1869.

86. Children. The facts considered under which street railway companies were held not to be responsible for an injury to a child. Hestonville, etc., R. R. Co. v. Kelly, 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 123 (Pa.), 1883; Smith v. Passenger R'y Co., 13 Philadelphia, 6, 1879; Hearn v. St. Charles Street R. R. Co., 34 La. An., 160, 1882; Fallon v. Central Park, etc., R. R. Co., 6 Daly (N. Y.), 8, 1875; Same v. Same, 64 N. Y., 13, 1876; Citizens' Street R'y Co. v. Carey, 56 Ind., 396, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 126; Hestonville Passenger R'y Co. v. Connell, 88 Pa. St., 520, 1879; Smith v. Hestonville, etc., Passenger R'y Co., 92 Pa. St., 450, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 12; Maschek v. St. Louis R. R. Co., 71 Mo., 276, 1879; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 88.

87. — A street car company is bound to exercise only ordinary care towards children on the track. Falotio v. Broadway and Seventh Avenue R. R. Co., 9 Daly (N. Y.), 243. 1880.

88. — A child of tender years was injured by a street car. The court permitted plaintiffs to ask a witness how many hours the drivers and conductors on the line were employed each day, for the purpose of showing that the driver of the car which injured the child was physically unable to discharge his duty at the time of the accident. Held, that this was error. Philadelphia City Passenger R'y Co. v. Henrice, 92 Pa. St., 431, 1880; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 544.

89. — What would be contributory negligence in an adult may not be such in the case of a child of tender years; the caution required is according to the maturity and capacity of the child, and this is to be determined by the circumstances of the case. Moore v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 2 Mackey (Dist. Col.), 437. 1893.

90. — In a child's action for negligent injuries to him in the street, evidence that he and his sister were accustomed to play in the street unattended is incompetent on the part of defendant. Smith v. Grand St., etc., R. R. Co., 11 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 62. 1882.

91. — The plaintiff will not be prevented from recovering in consequence of the negligence of his parents, if the jury shall find that the consequences of such negligence could have been avoided by the exercise of ordinary care and prudence on the part of the defendant or its agents. Baltimore R. R. Co. v. McDonnell, 43 Md., 534. 1875.

92. — Where the driver of a street car sees a child ten years old playing on the street within six feet of the car track, and continues to approach at a speed of over six miles an hour until he reaches the child, who runs toward the car and is knocked down and killed by the horses, this is such negligence as warrants a recovery. Farris v. Cass Avenue R'y Co., 8 Mo. App., 588. 1880.

93. — As plaintiff, a boy fourteen years of age, was walking in the street with a can of water, a driver of defendant's cars called to him to give him a drink. The horses being then on a walk the plaintiff stepped on the front platform, gave the can to the driver, who drank therefrom, and returned it to the plaintiff, telling him to hurry off quick. Plaintiff asked him to stop the car, but he paid no attention to him, and as plaintiff was stepping off, whipped the horses into a trot. Plaintiff fell, was run over and injured. In an action against defendant to recover for the damages sustained thereby, held, that the acts of the driver were within the scope of his authority, and that the defendant was liable for the injuries occasioned thereby. Day v. Brooklyn City R. R. Co., 12 Hun (N. Y.), 435, 1877; affirmed, Same v. Same, 76 N. Y., 593, 1877.

94. Contributory negligence. The question of contributory negligence is necessarily, almost in every case, a question of fact for the jury; and where the jury have, under proper instruction, found upon that question, an appellate court is not justified in setting aside their verdict upon its own views of the evidence. O'Donnell v. New York and Harlem R. R. Co., 8 Daly (N. Y.), 409. 1878.

95. Evidence. The defendant, a horse railroad company, offered evidence to show that no repairs had been put upon its track since the accident. Held, that the testimony of a witness, offered by the plaintiff, as to his knowledge of the condition of the track at a certain time shortly before the accident, was not admissible as rebutting this evidence. Jacques v. Bridgeport Horse R. R. Co., 41 Conn., 61. 1874.

96. — Verdict sustained on the evidence. Reese v. Third Avenue R. R. Co., 16 Federal Reporter, 368. 1883.

97. Pleading. In an action against a street railway company, a declaration alleging that the plaintiff was injured by a car of the defendant being carelessly driven upon and over him, is not supported by proof that the plaintiff was injured by another car, not carelessly driven, in attempting to escape from a car which was carelessly driven. Hanlon v. South Boston Horse R. R. Co., 129 Mass., 310, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 18.

98. Rate of speed; ordinances. Where the plaintiff was injured by the defendant's street car, which at the time was running at a greater speed than was allowable under a city ordinance, it was held that the defendant was guilty of negligence, if the accident could have been avoided had the car not been running at a prohibited rate of speed. Baltimore R. R. Co. v. McDonnell, 43 Md., 584. 1875. Such speed is not conclusive evidence of negligence. Hanlon v. South Boston Horse R. R. Co., 129 Mass., 310, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 18.

99. Switches. Plaintiff, injured by a switch laid in a street, but rising a couple of inches above the crosswalk, sued the company for damages; and it appeared that he had often crossed at the point, and knew there was a switch there, but his attention had not been called to it specially, nor had he inspected it, or known that others had fallen there; and, at the time of the accident his attention was not diverted by carriages, or otherwise, but it was a place much frequented, and, at the time, he was looking up and down for cars and carriages. Held, that the question of contributory negligence, upon these facts, was a question for the jury. Lowrey v. Brooklyn City, etc., R. R. Co., 4 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 32. 1878.

100. Wilful act of driver. Where plaintiff, for the purpose of crossing the street, stepped upon the platform of defendant's street car, to pass over the same, and the driver of the car wilfully seized and threw her from the car, whereby she was injured, held, the defendant was liable. Shea v. Sixth Avenue R. R. Co., 5 Daly (N. Y.), 221. 1874.

VI. INJURIES TO PASSENGERS.

101. Assault upon passenger by employe. Plaintiff, while a passenger on one of the defendant's cars, was unjustifiably assaulted by the driver, who also acted as conductor. In an action to recover damages, held, that the defendant was liable. Stewart v. Brooklyn and Crostown R. R. Co., 90 N. Y., 588, 1882; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 127.

102. Cable road. Facts considered sustaining a judgment for injury and death of a passenger upon a street railway operated by cable. Cook v. Clay Street Hill R. R. Co., 60 Cal., 604, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 175.

103. Children. If the conductor or driver of a street car refuses to stop the car when requested by a child six years and a half old, such refusal will not of itself justify the child in leaving the car by getting off the front platform while the car is in full motion. Cram v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 112 Mass., 38. 1873. See, also, Crissey v. Hestonville, etc., R'y Co., 75 Pa. St., 38, 1874; Philadelphia City Passenger R'y Co. v. Hasard, 75 Pa. St., 367, 1874; Pittsburgh, etc., R'y Co. v. Caldwell, 74 Pa. St., 421, 1873.

104. — Where a child four years old, in company with his brother, twelve and a half years of age, took a street car, and both sat down on the front platform with their feet on the step, and there was no other interference with their riding there except that the conductor claimed (which, however, was denied) that when he took their fare he told them to go into the car, and the youngest boy, in some way unexplained, got off the car while in motion and was run over, negligence cannot be imputed either to the parents of the children in permitting them to take the cars alone, or to the younger boy, or to the older boy without showing that he had more than the ordinary discretion and judgment of boys of his years, but the company was guilty of negligence in permitting the boys thus to ride, and liable in damages for the injury. East Saginaw City R'y Co. v. Bohn, 27 Mich., 503, 1873; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 309.

105. — A passenger who is injured cannot recover damages of the company if his own neglect contributed to the injury; but duty can only be predicated on one who has capacity to understand and ability to perform it; and therefore a child not of an age or discretion to understand the danger in riding upon the front platform of a street car cannot be charged with negligence in so doing. Ib.

106. — If a child, while riding with due care on the platform of the car of a street railway, not as a passenger for hire, but by invitation of the driver, and without collusion with him to defraud the company, is injured through his negligence in driving the car, the parent of such child may maintain an action against the company for the loss of services of the child occasioned by such injury. Wilton v. Middlesex R. R. Co., 125 Mass., 130. 1878. See, also,

Injuries to Passengers.

Brennen v. Fair Haven and Westville R. R. Co., 45 Conn., 284. 1877.

107. — Parents have a right to assume that street railway companies will furnish reasonably safe conveyances, and have regulations which preclude persons from riding in unsafe places upon them; and they cannot, therefore, be charged with negligence in permitting their children to ride on the street cars without escort, if the company consent so to receive them. East Saginaw City R'y Co. v. Bohn, 27 Mich., 508, 1878; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 303.

108. Collision. A passenger on a street car was struck and injured by a passing load of hay; held, that, to make the company liable, the passenger must prove not only that he was without fault, but that the company was negligent. Federal Street and Pleasant Valley R. R. Co. v. Gibson, 96 Pa. St., 83, 1880; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 142.

109. — Evidence held sufficient to justify the submission of the case to the jury. Watkins v. Atlantic Avenue R. R. Co., 20 Hun (N. Y.), 237. 1880.

110. — Where the tracks of a street railway cross those of a steam railway at grade, the driver of a car on the road of the former company is not justified in attempting to cross the track of the latter company without stopping, looking and listening, no matter what the action of the flagman of the latter company, stationed at the crossing, may be, if such driver have from other sources information which would lead a prudent man to infer that there was danger to be apprehended from an approaching train. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co. v. Boyer, 97 Pa. St., 91, 1881; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 172.

111. — Plaintiff was a passenger in defendant's horse car; the driver recklessly and carelessly drove the car upon the tracks of the N. Y. C. and H. R. R. Co., directly in front of an approaching express train. All of the passengers in the car, with one exception, on perceiving the danger, rushed to the doors of the car and jumped off; plaintiff in so doing fell and was injured. The driver succeeded in getting the car across the track just in time to escape the train, the engineer thereon having reversed his engine and put on the brakes. Held, that a verdict in plaintiff's favor was justified. Twomey v. Central Park, North and East River R. R. Co., 69 N. Y., 158; 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 113.

112. — In an action against a railway company to recover damages for the death of a person caused by a collision between a train of the defendant and a street car in which the deceased was traveling, the plaintiff, in order to recover, must show that the death resulted directly from the negligence of the defendant's employees; that the servants of the street car company were guilty of no negligence. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co. v. Boyer, 97 Pa. St., 91, 1881; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 172.

113. — The fact that a collision took place raises no presumption of negligence by the non-carrying company. Ib.

114. — In an action by a street railroad passenger (who was, in fact, without fault himself) for a personal injury, against a defendant whose negligence directly and proximately concurred with the negligence of the railroad company in producing the injury, the concurrent negligence of the company cannot be imputed to the plaintiff so as to charge him with contributing to his own injury. Transfer Co. v. Kelly, 36 Ohio St., 86, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 335.

115. Concurrent negligence of two parties; neglect of driver. Where the life of a passenger in a street railway car is lost by the concurrent negligence of the driver of the car and other persons, such negligence of the driver is no defense in an action against the other persons, such driver not being the agent or servant of the decedent, nor subject to his government or control. Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington R. R. Co. v. Case, 9 Bush (Ky.), 728. 1873.

116. Degree of care required. Common carriers of passengers are held to the exercise of the highest degree of care and skill to preserve the safety of passengers and prevent accidents and injuries, and such rule applies to the proprietors of hacks and stage coaches equally with other carriers. Bonce v. Dubuque Street R'y Co., 53 Ia., 278, 1880; East Saginaw City R'y Co. v. Bohn, 27 Mich., 508, 1878; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 309; Chicago City R'y Co. v. Young, 62 Ill., 233, 1871; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 230.

Injuries to Passengers.

117. Elbow out of car window. A railway company was held liable for an injury resulting from the striking of the plaintiff's arm by another car, his elbow being a few inches out of the window. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence. Summers v. Crescent City R. R. Co., 34 La. An., 139. 1832.

118. — It will not be held to be negligence per se to expose the elbow to some extent from the window of a street car drawn by horses. What is ordinary prudence, as to the position to be assumed by a passenger in such a car, cannot be determined by any arbitrary rule. Miller v. St. Louis R. R. Co., 5 Mo. App., 471. 1878.

119. Evidence. In a suit for an injury caused by alleged unskilful driving, evidence of similar negligent acts on his part at other times is not admissible. Maguire v. Middlesex R. R. Co., 115 Mass., 239. 1874.

120. — Upon the trial of an action against a street railway company for an injury sustained by careless driving over a sharp curve and sudden elevation, it was competent to show that the defendant had altered the curve since the accident. Augusta and Summerville R. R. Co. v. Renz, 55 Ga., 126. 1875.

121. — Where the injured passenger fell out without any apparent cause, and the reason for the fall was left wholly to conjecture, held, that the action should be dismissed. Muller v. Second Avenue R. R. Co., 48 N. Y. Superior Ct., 546. 1892.

122. — Certain testimony stated in the opinion, although contradicted by other testimony, held, to be sufficient proof of negligence to sustain a verdict. The neglect consisted in starting a dummy engine with a violent jerk. Spearman v. California Street R. R. Co., 57 Cal., 432, 1881; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 192.

123. — In a suit to recover damages for injuries sustained while riding on the platform of a street car, the court will presume, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the car was a good one. Andrews v. Capitol, North O Street and South Washington R. R. Co., 2 Mackey (Dist. Col.), 187. 1882.

124. — Witnesses who saw a lady thrown down by a street car after she had alighted can state in evidence their opinion as to whether she had time to get clear of the car before it moved off. Ward v. Charleston City R'y Co., 19 So. Car., 521. 1893.

125. — Declarations of a discharged employe held competent as impeaching evidence. Schultz v. Third Avenue R. R. Co., 89 N. Y., 242, 1883; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 412; reversing Same v. Same, 46 N. Y. Superior Ct., 211, 1890.

126. Fighting on the car; failure to preserve order. When passengers are injured by riotous fighting among other passengers, it is for the jury to say, under all the facts, whether the company was negligent in not providing a suitable conductor to preserve order. Holly v. Atlanta Street R. R. Co., 61 Ga., 215. 1878.

127. Getting off the car. It appeared that the car was negligently started while plaintiff was alighting, thereby throwing her toward the ground, and that her fall was accelerated by the motion of the conductor's arm in endeavoring to save her. Held, that defendant was liable for all the injury suffered by plaintiff, though part thereof might have been caused by the intervention of the conductor. It seems that this would be so, even had it not been within the scope of the conductor's duty to so intervene. Macer v. Third Avenue R. R. Co., 47 N. Y. Superior Ct., 461. 1891.

128. — Plaintiff, a passenger on defendant's street railway car, after the same had stopped, left it by the front platform, and, when six or eight feet from the car in the street, was thrown down and injured by the car horses, which had been detached from the car, after plaintiff had left, and were turning round. Held, that when plaintiff was injured she was no longer a passenger on defendant's car, and the fact that she had left such car by the front platform in violation of a regulation of defendant's road, known to her, did not make her guilty of contributory negligence. Platt v. Forty-second Street and Grand Street Ferry R. R. Co., 4 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 406, 1874; 2 Hun (N. Y.), 124, 1874.

129. — In a suit for damages sustained in stepping off a car, the plaintiff then suffering from a prior injury, an instruction to find for the plaintiff if the jury find that the conductor refused to stop the car where asked, and that the plaintiff carefully, and without negligence, stepped off, is erroneous, because the plaintiff's condition at the time is ignored. Wyatt v. Citizens' R'y Co., 62 Mo., 408. 1876.

180. — If a street car is stopped for any cause at a place where passengers are in the habit of alighting, a passenger will have the right to leave the car without making any request or obtaining any permission; and if the driver of the car knew, or by the exercise of due care could have known it, it will be negligence to start the car before a passenger in the act of leaving the car has had a reasonable time in which to alight. Chicago West Division R'y Co. v. Mills, 105 Ill., 68, 1882; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 128.

181. — Where there is a conflict of testimony as to whether the car upon a street railroad was stopped at the request of the deceased, and again negligently started while he was in the act of alighting, the case should go to the jury, notwithstanding that it appears the passenger was unnecessarily upon the front platform, and attempted to alight therefrom. Lax v. Forty-second Street R. Co., 46 N. Y. Superior Ct., 443. 1880.

182. — It is the duty of a conductor of a street car to give passengers a reasonably safe opportunity to alight. He must stop the car for a reasonable time, and if he starts it before the passenger has stepped down, or has had reasonable time for that purpose, it is negligence. Poulin v. Broadway and Seventh Avenue R. R. Co., 61 N. Y., 621, 1874; Chicago West Division R'y Co. v. Mills, 105 Ill., 68, 1882; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 128; Chicago City R'y Co. v. Mumford, 97 Ill., 560, 1881; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 312.

183. — It is the duty of a street railway company to cause its cars to come to a full stop for passengers to get off. Crissey v. Hestonville, etc., R'y Co., 75 Pa. St., 88. 1874.

184. — The court cannot rule that when a street car had stopped or was about to stop at the signal of an alighting passenger, another passenger who wished to alight at the same time was guilty of negligence, as a matter of law, in not giving notice of his wish. Rathbone v. Union R. Co., 13 R. I., 709. 1882.

185. — Evidence held insufficient to establish defendant's liability. Brown v. Congress and Baker St. R'y Co., 49 Mich., 153, 1882; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 383.

186. — Whether the act of stepping from a street car when slowly moving is contributory negligence is a question for the jury under all the circumstances of the case. Fortune v. Mo. R. R. Co., 10 Mo. App., 252, 1881; Fleck v. Union R'y Co., 134 Mass., 480, 1883; Wyatt v. Citizens' R'y Co., 55 Mo., 483, 1874.

187. — When a city railway car stops at a place where the conductor makes his report and waits for the return of the car, and a passenger attempts to get off without notice of such intention, and it does not appear that such place is one where passengers usually get on and off, or that those in charge knew that persons are actually getting off, and they start the car, whereby a passenger is thrown and injured, the railway company will not be chargeable with negligence in starting the car forward. The passenger, before attempting to get off, should know that the stoppage is for the purpose of letting persons get off, or make his intention to get off known. Chicago West Division R'y Co. v. Mills, 91 Ill., 39. 1878.

188. Getting on the cars. Defendant's street car stopped on a signal from plaintiff, who was approaching across the other tracks of the company, and while plaintiff was getting on the car it started, pulling him along, with his hand on the handle, for eight or ten feet, when he was struck and injured by another car running in an opposite direction. There was evidence tending to show an invitation from the conductor of the car to plaintiff to get on on that side. In an action for injuries, held, that under the circumstances it was not negligence per se for the plaintiff to attempt to enter the car between the tracks, but that it was a question for the jury whether plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence. Dale v. Brooklyn City, Hunter's Point and Prospect Park R. Co., 3 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 686; 1 Hun (N. Y.), 146, 1874; affirmed, 60 N. Y., 638, 1875.

189. — If the car is at rest or on the point of rest, although some motion remains, the getting on by the front instead of the rear platform is not, as a matter of law, contributory negligence. Maher v. Central Park, etc., R. R. Co., 39 Superior Ct., 155, 1875; 87 N. Y., 52, 1876.

140. — The evidence held sufficient to justify a verdict against a street railway company for an injury to a child in getting on the cars. Mowrey v. Central City R'y Co., 66 Barbour (N. Y.), 43. 1867.

141. — Where the plaintiff, in attempting to get on an open car while it was slowly moving, the driver holding on to the brake for that purpose, but before he got his foot placed safely on the car step the driver let go the brake and the horses started with a sudden jerk of the car, throwing the plaintiff's foot from the step down upon the track, where it was mutilated by the car wheel, held, that the railroad company was liable. Eppendorf v. Brooklyn City and Newtown R. R. Co., 51 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 475, 1876; affirmed, 69 N. Y., 195, 1877.

142. — Plaintiff hailed a car going up when it was about seventy-five feet below the upper street crossing; at this time a car, then about one hundred feet off (which he saw), was rapidly approaching on the down-track; he crossed the down-track, and when he reached the space intervening between the two tracks (which was barely, if at all, sufficient to allow of standing there in any safety), he stood there waiting for the up-car to stop, which it did about seventy-five feet above the upper crossing; its platform was crowded, which he knew; while in the act of getting on its platform the horses of the down-car, having been pulled by the driver into this space, knocked him down. Held, as a matter of law, contributory negligence. Halpin v. Third Avenue R. R. Co., 40 N. Y. Superior Ct., 175. 1875.

143. Homicide by drunken passenger. P. complained to the conductor of annoyance to ladies by a drunken passenger. The conductor directed the man to keep quiet. As P. left the car the drunken man attacked him with a car-hook and killed him. Held, that although high vigilance in maintaining order is required of a carrier, there was no evidence of want of care in this case. Putnam v. Broadway and Seventh Avenue R. R. Co., 55 N. Y., 108, 1873; reversing 36 N. Y. Superior Ct., 195, 1878.

144. Injury to person waiting for a car. Where the negligence with which the evidence tended to charge plaintiff was to be found mainly in his conduct before he saw the danger, i. e., in his standing in the street waiting for a car, without looking or listening or taking any precaution to ascertain whether danger was approaching or not, until it was too near for him to escape, an instruction upon the question of plaintiff's negligence which limited the jury to the consideration of plaintiff's conduct after he saw his danger was erroneous. The attention of the jury should have been directed to his entire conduct on the occasion, as well before as after he discovered the car approaching. Chicago West Division R'y Co. v. Haviland, 12 Bradwell (Ill.), 561. 1883.

145. Intoxication of passenger. The fact that a passenger injured by the negligence of the driver of a street car was intoxicated at the time of the accident will not prevent his maintaining an action for damages unless his intoxication contributed to the injury. Maguire v. Middlesex R. R. Co., 115 Mass., 239. 1874.

146. Leased lines. The charter of a horse railway company provided that the company should be liable for any injury any person might sustain by reason of the carelessness or misconduct of its agents or employees. A subsequent statute authorized it to lease its line and franchise, and to contract with any "responsible" person for the management of its road, but provided that such lease or contract should not release or exempt the company from any duty or liability to which it would otherwise be subject. The company leased its road, the lessee providing horses, cars and servants. By the negligence of an employe of the lessee a passenger was injured. Held, that an action for such injury could be maintained against the corporation. Quested v. Newburyport Horse R. R. Co., 127 Mass., 204. 1879.

147. Newsboy. A newsboy who enters a car to sell papers, paying no fare, is not a passenger, and the street railway company does not owe him the duties to which a passenger is entitled. Held, that, where a newsboy was injured by reason of the absence of a step in the front platform, the company was not liable. Blackmore v.

Injuries to Passengers.

Toronto Street R'y Co., 38 Upper Canada (Queen's Bench), 172. 1876.

148. Ordinance of city. In the absence of contributory negligence, a carrier of passengers is liable for personal injuries resulting directly from its violation of a city ordinance passed for the safety of passengers. Fortune v. Mo. R. R. Co., 10 Mo. App., 252. 1881. See, also, Drain v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R'y Co., 10 ib., 531. 1881.

149. Platform of car. Riding on the front platform of a street car, when there is room inside, is not of itself conclusive evidence that a passenger injured by the negligence of the driver of the car was not in the exercise of due care. Maguire v. Middlesex R. R. Co., 115 Mass., 239, 1874; Augusta and Summerville R. R. Co. v. Renz, 55 Ga., 126, 1875. See, also, Nolan v. Brooklyn City and Newtown R. R. Co., 87 N. Y., 63, 1831; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 403; Germantown Passenger R'y Co. v. Walling, 97 Pa. St., 55, 1881; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 20.

150. — It is not negligence in a passenger on a railway car to occupy a dangerous place on the car, if it is the only one that he can find, and his so doing is assented to by the company's agent. Walling v. Railway Co., 12 Philadelphia, 309. 1873. See, also, Ginna v. Second Avenue R. R. Co., 8 Hun (N. Y.), 494, 1876; affirmed, Same v. Same, 67 N. Y., 596, 1876. But see Downey v. Hendrie, 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Mich.), 386. 1831.

151. — Where there is abundant standing room inside of a street car, in which there are pendent straps which a passenger may hold while standing, he is guilty of contributory negligence who rides upon the platform; and if an injury result to him, which would not have occurred had he been in the inside of the car, he cannot maintain an action for such injury. Andrews v. Capitol, North O Street and South Washington R. R. Co., 2 Mackey (Dist. Col.), 137, 1832; Wills v. Lynn and Boston R. R. Co., 129 Mass., 851, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 27.

152. — The fact that the front platform is not inclosed is a fact with others to be considered whether there is negligence in leaving the front door open when the car is filled with passengers. Philadelphia City Passenger R'y Co. v. Hassard, 75 Pa. St., 367. 1874.

153. — In an action against a street passenger railway company, the evidence showed that the plaintiff, while riding in a car of the defendant, got up and gave his seat to a lady. The car being crowded he was obliged to pass out on to the front platform. While standing there the car ran off the track, and at the request of the driver, the plaintiff, with others on the platform, got off and assisted in getting the car again on the track. When this was done, the passengers got on the front platform again by stepping over an inclosure three feet high surrounding the same; and while the plaintiff was in the act of getting on the platform in the same manner, the driver, without a signal or warning, started the horses. By the sudden jerk in starting, the plaintiff was thrown down on the side of the car and was dragged some distance and his foot crushed by the wheel. The accident occurred in the day-time, and there was proof tending to show that the driver might have seen the plaintiff in the act of boarding the car. Proof was also offered to show there was a notice on the inside of the car, requiring passengers to enter and leave the car by the rear platform. Held, that, conceding there was negligence on the part of the plaintiff in attempting to enter the car by the front platform, the question was whether the driver of the defendant's car, by the exercise of proper care and prudence, might have seen the position of the plaintiff, and thereby have avoided the injury. People's R'y Co. of Baltimore v. Green, 56 Md., 84, 1830; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 163.

154. — Whether the plaintiff was exercising ordinary care in standing upon the platform of the car, should be considered with reference to the question whether there was a vacant seat in the car which he might have occupied, and whether standing on the platform was more dangerous than occupying a seat in the car. The fact that the conductor knew he was occupying the more hazardous position, or that it was customary for others to do the same thing, will not relieve the plaintiff from the charge of contributory negligence. Chicago West Divis- ion R'y Co. v. Klauber; 9 Bradwell (Ill.), 613. 1881.

155. — It is not contributory negligence per se for a passenger to ride on the steps of the front platform of a crowded street car with the consent of the conductor or driver. In such case the measure of duty on the part of the passenger is ordinary and reasonable care, and what that is, in any given case, and whether the passenger complied with it, is a question for the jury. German-town Passenger R'y Co. v. Walling, 97 Pa. St., 55, 1881; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 20.

156. — Plaintiff, who was riding upon the rear platform of a crowded car, was struck by the pole of the car following and seriously hurt. Held, that in riding in this place he was not guilty of contributory negligence; that although the accident would not have happened had he not been in that position, yet the position was but a condition and not the cause of the injury, and that the court properly withheld from the jury the question of contributory negligence. Thirteenth and Fifteenth Street Passenger R'y Co. v. Boudrou, 93 Pa. St., 475, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 30.

157. — Where a passenger falls off a street car, when in full motion, in front of the wheels, and the servants in charge of the same know that he is off the car and holding on to the iron rail to save himself from being run over, it is culpable negligence if they do not stop the car and thereby save him from injury. Chicago West Division R'y Co. v. Hughes, 69 Ill., 170. 1873.

158. Sick passenger. The rule to be applied to steam cars in regard to accommodations to sick or decrepit persons is not a proper rule to be applied to horse railways. What might be permitted on the former, where the journeys are long and continuous, could not be practiced on the latter without great inconvenience to the company and the passengers. If the passenger is known by the conductor to be sick (and good faith requires that he be informed by the passenger of that fact in order that proper and reasonable allowance may be made for what may seem unusual or obnoxious in his conduct), and he is shown good treatment, the company will not be required to provide, without a special contract, any extra means for his accommodation. Lemont v. Washington and Georgetown R. R. Co., 1 Mackey (Dist. of Columbia), 180, 1881; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 263.

159. Starting the car. A carrier of passengers by street cars must either wait a reasonable time for the passenger to be seated, or must start the car with a gradual motion. Where the car is started with an unusual jerk, which throws the passenger against the car window and lacerates his hand before he has time to be seated, and it appears that, by a proper use of the reins and brake, the car could be started without any jerk, this makes a prima facie case of negligence against the carrier. Dougherty v. Mo. Pacific R. R. Co., 9 Mo. App., 478. 1881.

VII. EXPULSION OF PASSENGERS.

160. Car in motion. Whether it is proper care to attempt to remove a person from a street car, while the same is in motion, is a question of fact for the jury, and not of law for the court. Healey v. City Passenger R. R. Co., 28 Ohio St., 23, 1875; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 63. This rule also applies to the expulsion of an intoxicated passenger. Murphy v. Union R'y Co., 118 Mass., 228, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 282.

161. — Where the injury complained of results from neglect of the driver in running of the car, and not from the force and violence used in ejecting a person from the car, the company would be liable, whether the driver had or had not authority to collect the fare. Ib.

162. Evidence. Incompetent evidence having been admitted the court granted a new trial to plaintiff in case of expulsion of a passenger. Perlmutter v. Highland St. R'y Co., 121 Mass., 497. 1877.

163. Intoxicated persons. A conductor on a street railway car may eject a person who is intoxicated and has vomited in the car, provided no more force is used than is necessary. Converse v. Washington and Georgetown R. R. Co., 2 MacArthur (Dist. of Columbia), 504. 1876.

164. — sick person supposed to be drunk. An instruction which implies that vomiting in a street car from intoxication is the only form of that evil which will authorize the conductor to expel the offending passenger is erroneous, as it takes from the minds of the jury all other forms of the evil, which, in the proper management of the car, might justify the conductor in ejecting the passenger. Lemont v. Washington and Georgetown R. R. Co., 1 Mackey (Dist. of Columbia), 180, 1881; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 263.

165. — A sick passenger on a street car must conform to the reasonable regulations of the company; he has no prerogative to misbehave and to subject the other passengers to annoyance by his offensive conduct, and it will be no protection against his expulsion from the car, that his misconduct is not wilful or voluntary. The absence of an evil intention is a good defense to an indictment, but it cannot exonerate a person who is honestly supposed to be drunk, and who repeatedly disobeys the request of the conductor to behave himself. Id.

166. Tickets. A ticket provided for a "continuous ride from 65th street to Harlem." Under the rule of the company this ticket should have been used immediately, but the plaintiff did not use it for several hours, when he offered it and it was refused. He declined to pay fare, and was expelled from the car. Held, in the absence of any notice of the rule to the plaintiff, his expulsion was wrongful. That the ticket by its terms was good for a continuous ride from 65th street without reference to the particular car upon which the ride was to be taken. McMahon v. Third Avenue R. R. Co., 47 N. Y. Superior Ct., 282. 1881.

VIII. MISCELLANEOUS.

167. Assault upon person crossing the platform of the car. Where a street car is stopped so as to obstruct the passage of a traveler on foot desiring to cross the street, it is not a trespass on his part to step upon and pass over the platform of the car in order to avoid the obstruction; he has the right so to do. And an assault committed upon such person by an employe of the street car company at such time will be actionable as against the corporation. Shea v. Sixth Avenue R. R. Co., 62 N. Y., 180, 1875; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 154.

168. Constitutional law. The constitutional provision prohibiting the legislature from authorizing the construction of a street railway did not affect the provision of the Railroad Act of 1839 (§ 1, ch. 218, Laws of 1839) authorizing railroad corporations to contract with other like corporations "for the use of their respective roads;" and that a contract between a railroad company which had acquired the right and had constructed and was operating a road over Atlantic avenue in the city of Brooklyn, and the defendant, by which the latter was authorized to run its trains over the road of the former on said street, was not forbidden by said constitutional provision. People v. Brooklyn, Flatbush and Coney Island R'y Co., 89 N. Y., 75, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 454.

169. Contract for exclusive privileges. The city of New Orleans has no power, under its charter and the laws of Louisiana, to grant a street railroad company the sole and exclusive right in the use of the public streets of the city for a street railroad. When the city of New Orleans has made a contract, granting to a street railroad company certain franchises to run and maintain a railroad, and binds herself not to grant franchises over the same streets to any other company or person during the period of said contract, she is not thereby estopped from granting to others the privilege of running lines across any of the streets mentioned in the contract, nor for such short distances along such streets necessary to make connections and turn-outs for other lines running mainly along other streets and between entirely different termini. New Orleans City R. R. Co. v. Crescent City R. R. Co., 12 Federal Reporter, 308. 1881.

170. Contract with conductor; penalty; liquidated damages. A provision in a written contract of hiring between a railway company and a conductor on its cars provided that, if the latter received any fare from any passenger (a fare being five cents), he should be liable to a fine of $15, which might be deducted from his wages; held, that the $15 were intended to be liquidated damages and not a penalty, and that the agreement for payment of it could be enforced. Held, also, that the company did not waive the right to insist upon the payment of such amount as damages out of the wages by retaining in its employment such conductor after discovery of a breach by him, rendering the damages payable. Birdsall v. Twenty-third Street R'y Co., 8 Daly (N. Y.), 419. 1879.

171. Defect in highway; husband and wife. Under the St. of 1871, ch. 381, § 21, providing that street railway companies "shall be liable for any loss or injury that any person may sustain by reason of any carelessness, neglect or misconduct of its agents and servants in the construction, management and use of its tracks," a husband may maintain an action against such a company for loss of services and society of and expenses of curing his wife, who is injured by a defective construction of its tracks, even though the tracks are constructed to the satisfaction of the superintendent of streets. Osgood v. Lynn and Boston R. R. Co., 180 Mass., 492, 1881; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 395.

172. Individual managers. Individuals, like corporations, may manage street railways, ferries, turnpikes or bridges, the franchises of which may nevertheless be perpetuated. McKee v. Grand Rapids, etc., R'y Co., 41 Mich., 274. 1879.

173. Injunction. It is settled in Pennsylvania that a private citizen may prevent the construction of a street railway, provided he can show, first, special damage to himself, and secondly, that the railway company has no authority to construct the proposed road in question. Shipley v. Continental R. R. Co., 13 Philadelphia, 128. 1879.

174. — An injunction against a railway company to prevent it from using a public street cannot be sued out in the name of the state by a county attorney. Such suit should be brought or sanctioned by the attorney-general. State ex rel. v. Paris R'y Co., 55 Tex., 76. 1891.

175. — Where the court has the opinion of the proper city officers that heavy weights (boilers) can be drawn over a street without danger, and the route is one which will not interfere with the public, an injunction asked by a street railway company will not be continued to restrain their use. Second and Third Street R. R. Co. v. Morris, 8 Philadelphia, 304. 1871.

176. Injury to employes; vicious horse. A., who was a hostler for a street car company, received an injury from the kick of a vicious mare, while engaged in grooming her, as was his duty. The fact of the mare's being vicious was known by A., by other employes of the company and by the officers thereof. A. had once before been kicked by the same mare, but had not asked to have her taken from under his care. At the time of the accident A. was not using a strap which he ordinarily used when grooming the mare to prevent her from kicking. In an action by A. against the company to recover damages for the injury done him, held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Green and Coates Street Passenger R'y Co. v. Bresmer, 97 Pa. St., 103, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 647.

177. Injury to persons driving sleighs. Plaintiff's sleigh was upset by striking a switch laid by defendant in a street to connect its track with that of another road over which it ran its cars. The evidence tended to show that the switch was higher above the pavement than was necessary; that defendant had put salt on its track, which had melted the snow and caused the slush to run down and cover the switch from sight. Accidents had frequently happened to other passing vehicles from the same cause. Held, that the evidence justified the submission of the question of defendant's negligence to a jury. Wooley v. Grand Street and Newtown R. R. Co., 83 N. Y., 121, 1880; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 398.

178. — The evidence showed that, as between the defendant and the other company with whose tracks the switch made a connection, the defendant was to keep the switch in good condition. The court was asked to charge that, if the switch was properly put down, defendant was not chargeable. The request was refused, but the court charged that if the switch was skilfully put down, and was in itself no obstruction which a person could not, with ordinary care and prudence, avoid, the proposition would be correct. Held, no error; that although the switch was a proper one and well laid down, if it subsequently, from any cause, was raised to an undue height above the pavement or the pavement had sunk unduly below it, it was defendant's duty to put it in good condition. Ib.

179. Jurisdiction. The provision of the St. of 1877, ch. 234, § 3, that any person injured by a defect in a highway may bring a suit in tort therefor in the superior court, does not apply to an action of tort under the St. of 1871, ch. 381, § 21, against a street railway company for an injury caused by a defective construction of its tracks; and the supreme court has jurisdiction of such an action brought before the St. of 1880, ch. 28. Brookhouse v. Union R'y Co., 132 Mass., 178. 1880.

180. Lease; ultra vires. The lessee of a street railway cannot recover of the lessor for the expenses of renewing the road, except in an action upon the contract of lease, and if this contract is ultra vires, no action can be maintained in any form. Middlesex R. R. Co. v. Boston and Chelsea R. R. Co., 115 Mass., 347, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 469.

181. License. If a person carrying on a business for which a license is required neglects or refuses to take out a license, he may be subject to criminal prosecution, or may be held to agree to pay a specific penalty instead of the amount of the license. But he certainly owes nothing for a license until he has taken one out. An action to recover an amount alleged to be due as a license cannot be maintained. Santa Cruz v. Santa Cruz R. R. Co., 56 Cal., 143. 1880.

182. — The city of Covington was authorized and had the right to exact a bonus from the Covington Street R'y Co. of $250 per annum for the privilege of using its streets for railway purposes, and the obligation of the company to pay such bonus may be enforced. Covington Street R'y Co. v. City of Covington, 9 Bush (Ky.), 127. 1872.

183. — The New York license law construed. Mayor v. Broadway and Seventh Avenue R. R. Co., 17 Hun (N. Y.), 242, 1879; Mayor of New York v. Forty-second and Grand Street R. R. Co., 52 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 106, 1876.

184. Location. Under the St. of 1861, ch. 229, § 15, the selectmen of a town may revoke the location in the town of a street railway which is chartered to extend beyond the limits of the town. Medford and Charlestown R. R. Co. v. Inhabitants of Somerville, 111 Mass., 232. 1872.

185. — The plaintiff and defendant, street railway corporations, made a contract whereby the plaintiff leased its railway to the defendant, and the defendant covenanted to assume all the liabilities imposed on the plaintiff by its charter. A town through which the line was located directed the track to be altered, but the defendant refused on the ground that the work ought to be done and paid for by the plaintiff, and thereupon the town revoked part of the location, and threatened to revoke the rest. Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain a bill in equity against the defendant to compel it to alter the track, inasmuch as the plaintiff might alter the track itself and sue at law. Ib.

186. Negligence. The act of March 10, 1854, for the redress of injuries arising from the neglect or misconduct of railway companies and others, is applicable to the proprietors of any kind of railway, whether impelled by horse or steam power, or whether constructed with iron or any other kind of rails. Johnson v. Louisville City R'y Co., 10 Bush (Ky.), 231. 1874.

187. — contributory negligence. The general rule as to contributory negligence held to apply to street railways. Omaha Horse R'y Co. v. Doolittle, 7 Neb., 491, 1878; Government St. R. R. Co. v. Hanlon, 53 Ala., 70, 1875. But see Tanner v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 60 Ala., 621. 1877.

188. Rates; omnibuses. A tramway company scheduled to their act of parliament distinct agreements with municipal authorities not to charge tramway passengers above a fixed fare; but they afterwards obtained legislative authority to substitute omnibuses on certain routes in lieu of the tramways, and to charge a higher fare on these routes. Held, that the company had no power to increase the fare of passengers using the tramways only. Edinburgh Tramway Co. v. Torbain, Law Reports, 3 Appeal Cases, 58; 24 Eng. (Moak), 24. 1877.

189. Sale on execution. A street railway company is a "corporation authorized to receive toll" within the meaning of Comp. L., § 3436, providing for the sale on execution of the property and franchises of such a corporation. McKee v. Grand Rapids, etc., R'y Co., 41 Mich., 274. 1879.

190. Snow-plow; frightened teams. Where a team was frightened by a railway snow-plow, and owing to the inattention of its driver ran away, held, that the contributory negligence of the driver was such that he could not complain of an allowance of only nominal damages in his favor. Gray v. Second Avenue R. R. Co., 65 N. Y., 561. 1875.

191. Stables. The allegation in a bill in chancery that land is held subject to certain restrictions against building, and that adjoining land is believed to be held under like restrictions, without showing such a relation between the owners of the two parcels as would enable the one to enforce such restriction against the other, discloses no ground for relief. So held in an action to enjoin the erection of stables for a street railway. Seabury v. Metropolitan R. R. Co., 115 Mass., 53. 1874.

192. Tickets; transfer checks. The provision of the St. of 1871, ch. 881, § 36, that a passenger upon a street car in Boston shall, upon paying a sum in addition to the regular fare, receive a check entitling him to a passage on the same day only, in any car run in the city between any two points therein, without paying more than a sum named "for both of the passages aforesaid," does not entitle a passenger, who has received such a check and who has once changed cars and surrendered the check in the second car at the request of the conductor, to a passage in a third car proceeding farther upon the same line, although he is told by the conductor of the second car that he may ride on the third car without payment of additional fare. Wakefield v. South Boston R. R. Co., 117 Mass., 544, 1875; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 238.

193. Time of completion. Where a railway company was authorized by its charter to construct and maintain a railway in a certain part of the city of Chicago, over and along such streets, etc., as the common council had or might authorize, in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as the common council had or might contract with the company, and, by ordinance of the city, license was given to lay a single track along a certain street to the city limits within fifteen months, and the same was constructed half the way within the time required, held, that the common council had the right and power to waive the condition as to the time for completing the same, it being a provision in favor of the city to secure the public interests. Chicago City R'y Co. v. The People, 73 Ill., 541. 1874.

194. — contract to build. If property holders along the line of a street contract with a street railroad company to pay it certain sums of money, if, within a certain time, it constructs a railroad along the street, the fact that the road is not built within the time is not an excuse for the non-payment of the money if the road is actually built; but the subscribers may recoup the damage they sustain by the failure to complete in time. Front Street, Mission and Ocean R. R. Co. v. Butler, 50 Cal., 574, 1875; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 183.

195. Use of track by teams, etc. A horse railway company, chartered by the legislature, may, while legally operating its road, enjoin a rival coach company, organized under the general corporation act, and licensed by the city where the tracks are laid, from regularly using its tracks with coaches adapted thereto, in competition with it in its business in transporting passengers and goods for hire, and from obstructing it in the use of such tracks by impeding the passage of its cars, by stopping thereon to take up and let down passengers. Camden Horse R. R. Co. v. Citizens' Coach Co., 31 N. J. Eq., 525. 1879.

196. — The public right to use a horse-railroad track in the streets of a city for vehicles, incidentally in traveling through the streets, does not authorize a transportation company to use it in competition with the railroad company. Camden Horse R. R. Co. v. Citizens' Coach Co., 28 N. J. Eq., 145. 1877. See, also, Cottam v. Guest, 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Eng., Q. B. D.), 574. 1880.

ages, can recover nothing more than the damages to the property resulting from the trespass between the building of the railway and the commencement of the action; such a recovery will be no bar to a future recovery by plaintiff or his grantee for subsequent damages to the property by the continued maintenance of the road. Evidence of the permanent depreciation in the value of the land is inadmissible. Carl v. Sheboygan and Fond du Lac R. R. Co., 46 Wis., 625; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 412. 1879.

2. — The measure of damages is not the mere value of the use of that part of the street occupied by the railway, but includes the difference between the value of the use of the whole lot without the railway and its value with such track in the street in front thereof, with any other special and temporary damage sustained by plaintiff in the use of the lot, occasioned by such road. Ib.

3. — The fact that only a part of the width of defendant's track was upon plaintiff's land will not affect the rule of damages. Blesch v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 48 Wis., 183. 1877.

4. — The damages recoverable could not exceed the difference between what would have been the rental value of the premises (during the continuance of the trespass, down to the commencement of the action), in case there had been no railway on the street, and its actual rental value with the track constructed and operated as it was. Blesch v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 48 Wis., 183, 1877; Grand Rapids and Indiana R. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich., 393, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 260.

8. — An abutting owner who sues for damages resulting from the operation of a railway in a street is entitled to show such damages as would have been properly open to consideration by a jury of inquest impaneled to assess compensation upon the condemnation of the street for that purpose. Ib.

9. — Where a railway track has been laid in a public street without authority to use the street for that purpose, any adjacent proprietor who has not consented to such use is entitled to damages for such injury as he may have suffered in consequence thereof. Ib.

10. — The fact that plaintiff had parted with the title to the property would not prevent his recovery for damages sustained by him while owner. Carl v. Sheboygan and Fond du Lac R. R. Co., 46 Wis., 625, 1879; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 412.

11. — The complaint alleged that plaintiff owned in 1869, and continued to own until 1873, a city lot with dwelling; that in 1869 defendant constructed its road, with embankment, ditches, etc., along and on each side of the center of the street in front of said lot, and maintained the same to the commencement of the action, and thereby obstructed access to the house and lot and diminished their value; that, by reason of the premises, plaintiff, before the commencement of this action, was compelled to sell, and did sell, the property for a sum less by $1,000 than could otherwise have been procured for it, and that defendant had refused, on demand, to make compensation for the injuries so sustained, and had taken no steps under its charter to have the damages ascertained. Judgment was asked for $1,000. Held, that the action must be treated as one for damages for a continuing trespass, and that the complaint states facts sufficient to sustain such action. Ib.

12. — In a suit by a lot owner against a railroad company to recover damages to his lot caused by the use of a street fronting the same for railroad tracks, and thereby preventing ingress and egress to and from the same, etc., the statements of the officers of the road as to the intended future use of the street are not admissible in behalf of the company, as being hearsay, and a matter of opinion. An actual direction as to its use might be proper evidence in such case. Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne and Chicago R. R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill., 157. 1881.

13. — A lot owner has a right of action to recover damages to his lot from the unauthorized laying of additional railroad tracks in the street fronting his lot, whereby the use of the street for all ordinary purposes of a railway is destroyed, and access to the lot is cut off, and for the creating of a nuisance by allowing stock cars to stand in the street adjoining the lot. Ib.

14. — alleys. An abutting owner may recover damages for the occupation of an alley by a railway company for its track. Central Branch Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Andrews, 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, (Kans.), 370. 1883.

15. Action for possession. An action for the recovery of the possession of real estate may be maintained against a railway company occupying such real estate, being a street in a city occupied by virtue of a grant from the city council. Sharpe v. St. Louis and Southeastern Ry Co., 49 Ind., 296. 1874.

16. Adverse enjoyment. J., in 1835, deposited in the office of the town clerk of New Haven a map of certain streets and lots, including a street called Myrtle street, and in 1840 made a quitclaim deed of all the streets to T., in trust for the city. In 1858 the city voted to accept a deed of the streets from T., who soon after gave the city a quitclaim of all his interest as trustee in the same. At the time of the deposit of the map, a railway had been laid out through the tract, one hundred feet wide, crossing Myrtle street, and the track was laid in 1836. In 1840, after J. had made the trust deed to T., he quitclaimed to the railway company the one hundred feet taken by it through the tract. In 1852 the company laid an additional track, and in 1859 another one, on each side of the old track, and the three tracks had been in constant use until 1876. Down to that time Myrtle street had never been used as a public street, but its existence as a highway had been repeatedly recognized by J. by reference to it in deeds of land in the vicinity. In that year the city attempted to open it as a public street, and the railway company applied for an injunction. Held, that the company having, by its deed from J. in 1840, acquired a title in fee, and the city, having so long acquiesced in its claim of title, the land could not be taken for a public highway except by proceedings under the statute for laying out highways. New York, New Haven and Hartford R. R. Co. v. New Haven, 46 Conn., 257. 1878.

17. — The constant and exclusive use by a railway company of part of a street, as and for a right of way, cannot in any time ripen into an absolute ownership of such part. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R. R. Co. v. Ross, 47 Ind., 25. 1874.

18. Charter of corporation using streets. A municipal corporation has the same right to question the corporate existence and the rights of a railway company seeking to use its streets as a private owner would have where the use of his property is sought. Brooklyn Steam Transit Co. v. City of Brooklyn, 78 N. Y., 524. 1879.

19. Contract. A contract made with a city for right of way through the streets held valid. Indianola v. Gulf, Western Texas and Pacific Ry Co., 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Tex.), 314. 1881.

20. Contract by city to close a street. Where a municipal corporation has exchanged lots with a railroad company, under a contract that a street running through the land conveyed to said company should be forever closed, and the company has expended large sums of money in improving said lot, building depots, tracks, etc., thereon, and the city now threatens to open the street, paying the usual damages therefor under the provisions of its charter, asserting that the municipal authorities had no power to make the contract above referred to, held, that a demurrer to a bill by the company, setting forth the above recited facts, praying the cancellation of the contract of exchange of lands, or, if that be impracticable, that it have such relief as a court of equity can alone give, was properly overruled. Mayor, etc., of Atlanta v. Macon and Western R. R. Co., 59 Ga., 251. 1877.

21. Control by city. A city has the power to allow the construction of a railroad upon or over its streets, and the public will be bound by whatever may be lawfully done in regard to the streets by the city. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. The People, 91 Ill., 251. 1878.

22. Crossing of railways. Proceedings to open a street across the land of a railway company were held invalid where the company was not named in the proceedings and did not appear, even though damages were awarded to it for the land taken. Detroit, Monroe and Toledo R. R. Co. v. Detroit, 49 Mich., 47. 1882.

23. Crossings. Without the statute of 1871, ch. 186, a railway company would be liable to a city for the amount of damages which such city had been compelled to pay by reason of a defect in one of its streets caused by the negligence or unlawful act of such company in the construction or maintenance of a railway crossing; and if the company had been properly notified of the original suit, and the suit was defended by the city in its behalf and at its request, it would be liable for the costs as well as the damages. There is sufficient consideration for a contract on the part of such company with the city for the defense of such a suit, and for a promise to repay the city such sum as it should be compelled to pay therein. City of Portland v. Atlantic and St. Lawrence R. R. Co., 66 Me., 485. 1877.

24. — A statute which simply authorizes a railway company to cross a street at grade abridges, but does not take away, the power of the county commissioners to prescribe what alterations may be made in the way, the time and manner of making them, etc. Brewer v. Boston, Clinton and Fitchburg R. R. Co., 118 Mass., 52. 1878.

25. — When county commissioners have acted upon such subject within their jurisdiction, their record cannot be attacked collaterally, but is conclusive upon all parties in an action at law. Ib.

26. — Where, long after the construction of a railroad, a street was extended so as to cross the same, and the city passed an ordinance requiring the railway to make a safe and proper crossing by grading the approaches of the street at the crossing, there being nothing in the charter of the company imposing such a duty, or any such duty imposed by any general law in force at the time the company was created, held, that the company was not liable to this new burden any further than might have been required of an individual, and that, as the whole burden was sought to be placed upon the company without regard to benefits, the ordinance was in violation of the constitution, and could not create any liability upon the company, and that the legislature itself could not impose such burden without making compensation. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. City of Bloomington, 76 Ill., 447. 1875.

27. — Where a special railway act provided that the line should be made according to the levels shown on the deposited plans, and that it should be lawful for the company to carry the line across a specified street on the level of the street, held, that the latter provision was not obligatory, and did not prevent the company from carrying its line across the street according to the provisions of the general act. Warden of Dover Harbour v. London, Chatham and Dover R'y Co., 3 De Gex, Fisher & Jones, 559; 64 Eng. Ch., 558. 1861.

28. — A bridge of forty feet and two inches in width held to be a sufficient crossing where the street was sixty-six feet in width. The fact that the bridge was narrower than the street would not necessarily constitute it a nuisance. Regina v. Great Western R'y Co., 12 Upper Canada (Queen's Bench), 250. 1855.

29. — Under the condemnation of a right to lay streets across a railroad track or to lay the track of one railroad across another, nothing is required but a right of way. The place of crossing will remain in common use of the parties for the exercise of their several franchises. A right affecting so slightly the exercise of the franchises of the corporation whose track is crossed may be deduced from a mere grant of the power of condemnation. New Jersey Southern R. R. Co. v. Long Branch Commissioners, 39 N. J. Law, 28, 1876; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 211.

30. — By the act of 1854 the plaintiff was authorized to build its bridge across the Allegheny river and connect its road with the Pennsylvania Central on Liberty street, in Pittsburgh. Held, that the right to cross Penn street was implied. Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago R. R. Co. v. Pittsburgh, 1 Pittsburgh, 392. 1858.

Dedication — Extension Across Railways.

31. Dedication. A deed in which it is agreed that a street shall be kept open forever between certain lots as a highway for the common use of the persons owning the lots was held not to be such a dedication as would empower the city to authorize a railway company to construct its railway over the land. Talbott v. Richmond and Danville R. R. Co., 31 Grattan (Va.) 683. 1879.

32. — No particular form of words is required to the validity of a dedication. The assent of the owner, and the use of the premises for the purposes intended by the appropriation, are sufficient, and estop him from revoking the dedication. Morgan v. Railroad Co., 96 U. S., 716. 1877.

33. — The making of deeds by land owners, recognizing the existence of a street, is conclusive evidence against them of the dedication of the street to the public use, either by the grantors themselves, or by those under whom they claim. State v. City of Elizabeth. 37 N. J. Law, 432. 1874.

34. Defective condition; action against lot owner. When a municipal charter authorizes the city council to regulate the care of the sidewalks for the public benefit, and provides that lot owners shall be liable to the city for all damages which the city may be compelled to pay for the default in neglecting to observe such regulations, no action against a lot owner can arise, if at all, until after the city has been held liable in a suit against it. Taylor v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. Co., 45 Mich., 74, 1881; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 127.

35. Depot grounds. Under a general power to lay out and open streets in a city, the city council has no authority to lay out and open a street through the depot grounds of a railroad company, in such manner as to destroy or essentially impair the value of the company's easement therein, theretofore acquired under and in pursuance of an express legislative grant for that purpose. Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co. v. City of Faribault, 23 Minn., 167. 1876.

36. Eminent domain. Service on the attorney of a railway company in proceedings to open a street across its premises is not authorized by statute. Detroit, Monroe and Toledo R. R. Co. v. Detroit, 49 Mich., 47. 1882.

37. — When the land appropriated by a corporation is lawfully acquired pursuant to its charter, and is actually used and needed for a public purpose, it is not material that it was acquired by purchase instead of by regular condemnation proceedings. St. Paul Union Depot Co. v. City of St. Paul, 30 Minn., 359. 1883.

38. — Where the charter of a municipal corporation provides for the assessment of the damages to the owners of lots taken for public use, with the right of appeal by the dissatisfied party to the superior court, it is constitutional. Mayor, etc., of Atlanta v. Central R. R. and Banking Co., 53 Ga., 120. 1874.

39. — The benefits accruing from opening a street may be set off against the damages. Long Island R. R. Co. v. Bennett, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 91. 1877.

40. Extension across railways. A municipal corporation, under an authority to condemn lands for public streets, has no power to lay streets longitudinally over grounds acquired by a railroad company under its charter, on which is laid a track in use for the deposit and unloading of freight cars. New Jersey Southern R. R. Co. v. Long Branch Commissioners, 39 N. J. Law, 28, 1876; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 211.

41. — Where the official authorities of a city of the third class attempt to take private property for public use, and the compensation therefor has been determined by the assessment of five disinterested householders of the city, and the land owner has appealed to the district court, he is entitled, in the absence of provisions of law to the contrary, to the possession of his land during the pendency of the appeal, and to an injunction, if necessary, to protect such possession. So held in proceedings to condemn a portion of a switch yard for a street. City of Kansas v. Kansas Pacific R'y Co., 18 Kans., 331, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 355.

42. — Where a city lays its streets across a railway it must so construct the crossing as to do as little injury as possible to the railway. Northern Central R'y Co. v. Baltimore, 46 Md., 425, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 461. In such case viaducts over the railway must be constructed and maintained by the city. Ib.

Excavation — Grant to Railway.

43. Excavation; injury to house. Damage done to the house of a party by reason of the excavation of a street by a railroad company, made under lawful authority, is not damnum absque injuria, and he may recover therefor without showing that the power delegated to the company has been illegally or negligently exercised. Baltimore and Potomac R. R. Co. v. Reaney, 42 Md., 117, 1874; 14 Amer. Ry Rep., 330.

44. Flagman. The act approved March 10, 1873 (Pamph. L., p. 327, § 4), authorizing the township of East Orange to pass ordinances to compel any railroad company to station and maintain flagmen wherever such railroad may cross any streets or highways in said township, is a valid exercise of legislative power, as a police regulation for the safety of the public and passengers on the trains. State v. East Orange, 41 N. J. Law, 127. 1879. See, also, Long Island City v. Long Island R. R. Co., 8 Hun (N. Y.), 58. 1876.

45. Grade. A railway company is liable for injury occasioned by reason of the construction of a grade along a street of a city, thereby causing the water to flow upon adjacent real estate, and also for injury caused by reason of the construction of an embankment on a street approaching a street crossing in front of a lot in a city occupied by a dwelling-house, thereby rendering the approach to the lot in the front on such street impossible for carriages, wagons and vehicles, and inconvenient for foot passengers. Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Ry Co. v. Smith, 52 Ind., 429. 1876.

46. — A change of grade by a city, rendering property less desirable, cannot be set up by a tenant against his landlord as ground for abatement of rents. Gallup v. Albany Ry Co., 65 N. Y., 1. 1875.

47. — Where an action on the case is brought to recover damages for an injury to real estate by the construction of railroad tracks in a street in close proximity to the plaintiff's lots, and by depressing the grade of the street fronting the same, and the declaration charges damages exceeding $1,000, and the evidence tends to prove them in excess of that sum, an appeal may be properly allowed by the appellate court to the supreme court from the final judgment of the former court affirming a judgment in favor of the defendant. Baber v. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R. R. Co., 93 Ill., 342. 1879.

48. — By a railway act (6 and 7 Will 4, c. 106, s. 9), a company was empowered to raise or lower any roads or ways in order the more conveniently to carry the same over or under or by the side of the railway. By s. 100, where any bridge should be erected by the company over any public carriage road, not being a turnpike road, the center of the arch must be of a height from the surface of the road of not less than sixteen feet. By s. 120, nothing in that act is to derogate from any of the rights or privileges of any parish over which the railway shall pass, acting under any local act. By a local paving act (12 Geo. 3, c. 38), it was enacted "That no person shall alter the form of any pavements which shall be now made by virtue of this act, without the consent of the commissioners, or in anywise encroach thereon, or put up any posts, boards," etc. Held, that the company was entitled, in carrying a railway by a bridge over a street under the control of the commissioners, to lower the street so as to give the height to the center of the arch required by the statute. Regina v. Eastern Counties Ry Co., 3 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases. 22. 1842.

49. — The assessment made under charter of village of Passaic, which provides that the whole cost of improvement shall be assessed upon lands fronting on the improvement in proportion to the benefit received by each lot, is illegal, as it requires such lots to bear the whole burthen of the cost without limitation to actual benefits, and the mode of its distribution, merely, being according to benefits. State v. Village of Passaic, 37 N. J. Law, 137. 1874. See Village of Passaic v. State, ib., 538. 1875.

50. Grant to railway; construction. A grant by a county court, under § 26 of the corporation act (Or. Laws, 530), of the use of a street to a railway corporation for the purpose of constructing and operating a railway thereon, is a grant of a franchise, and the order or agreement making the same must be construed most strongly against the corporation and in favor of the public, so that nothing shall pass thereby but what clearly appears to have been intended. Burns v. Multnomah R. R. Co., 15 Federal Reporter, 177, 1883; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 283.

51. — Where an agreement authorized a corporation proposing to construct a railway from Albina to Vancouver, to lay its track through the former place upon certain streets therein, "beginning at the ferry landing at the foot of Mitchel street," and it appearing that said ferry landing and Mitchel street were different and not contiguous places, held, that the ambiguity must be resolved against the corporation, and the agreement construed as if it read, simply, "at the foot of Mitchel street." Ib.

52. — The grant of the use of a street for railway purposes must be construed most strongly against the company and in favor of the public. Burns v. Multnomah R'y Co., 8 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 548, 1883; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 289; 15 Federal Reporter, 177. So any question of ambiguity must, in like manner, be resolved against the corporation. Ib.

53. — An ordinance granting a railway company license to lay its track across and along the streets and alleys of a city, upon the condition that it shall permit any other companies, not exceeding two in number, to use its main track upon such fair and equitable terms as may be agreed upon, will not be construed as prohibiting the company from leasing the use of its track in the city to more than two other companies. Such provision is a limitation, not upon the right of the company to admit other companies to a joint use of its track, but upon the exclusive enjoyment of the estate granted by the city. Chicago v. Chicago and Western Indiana R. R. Co., 105 Ill., 73, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 306.

54. — A city ordinance granting permission to a railroad company to construct and operate a railroad within the city limits is not void because it fails to designate the precise line upon which the road may be constructed, and omits to designate the precise points at which the road may be constructed across and upon the several streets to be intersected by it. Chicago and Western Indiana R. R. Co. v. Dunbar, 100 Ill., 110, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 258.

55. — A railroad company having submitted to construct its road through a city under an ordinance reserving the right to alter and amend, must submit to such alterations, etc., as are reasonable and necessary. But such an ordinance shall not be amended or repealed so as to affect essential and vested rights, or be allowed to act retrospectively to take away rights previously granted. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co. v. Minnesota Central R. R. Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 525, 1882; 4 McCrary, 606.

56. — Where a village council and a railway company agree, under the statute, as to the terms upon which the company may use the streets of the village for its road, whereby the company bound itself to grade and gravel the streets so used, in a manner "to the acceptance of the council," held, that a subsequent ordinance repealing the contract ordinance, passed with intent to rescind the entire contract, being inoperative, without the assent of the company, to rescind the grant of the right of way, is also inoperative to release the company from its obligation to grade and gravel streets. Cincinnati and Springfield R'y Co. v. Village of Carthage, 36 Ohio St., 631, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 306.

57. Improvement of streets. A city ordinance of December 30, 1873, authorized the department of highways to contract with a competent person, who should be selected by a majority of the owners of property fronting on Lehigh avenue, to pave said avenue between certain points, the cost to be collected by the contractor from the owners of the property fronting on said avenue. On October 2, 1873, previous to the passage of this ordinance, a majority of the owners on said avenue signed a paper selecting plaintiff as paver. Subsequently, on January 7, 1874, a number of those who had signed this paper formally withdrew their assent thereto, and gave notice to the highway department. That department, notwithstanding, awarded the contract to plaintiff, who proceeded with and finished the work, and who issued a scire facias to recover the portion of the cost due from defendant. Held, that it was competent for the property owners who had signed the paper selecting plaintiff to do the work, to revoke that selection, and that their revocation and notice to the highway department were a bar to plaintiff's recovery. Held, further, that the highway department had no authority to enter into a contract with any one who was not selected by a majority of owners. City of Philadelphia v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 88 Pa. St., 814. 1879.

58. — Where a railway company occupied and used one side of a street for a right of way, and owned real estate contiguous to said side, the real estate was liable to assessment for the improvement of said street. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R. R. Co. v. Ross, 47 Ind., 25, 1874; Peru and Indianapolis R. R. Co. v. Hanna, 68 Ind., 562, 1879. See, also, New York and New Haven R. R. Co. v. New Haven, 42 Conn., 279, 1875; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 162.

59. — In opening and improving a street, a city graded beyond the limits of the street as located by law, and built a stone wall to sustain the street, one-half of which was within the street line and the other half on railway property. Held, that the wall was built in violation of law and the taking of the ground was a trespass. Held, further, that the city could not recover from the property owner for any portion of the cost of the wall. Western Pennsylvania R'y Co. v. City of Allegheny, 92 Pa. St., 100. 1879.

60. — Assessors or commissioners determining the assessment to be laid on the land of adjoining owners for benefit by a local improvement cannot take into consideration the fact that structures on the land of owners assessed,—e. g., the embankment of a railroad company,—even if wrongfully erected, enhance the expense of the improvement. People ex rel. v. Assessors of Troy, 2 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 86. 1877.

61. — A road-bed of a railway cannot be assessed for a benefit in laying a street across it. N. Y. and Harlem R. R. Co. v. Morrisania, 7 Hun (N. Y.), 652. 1876.

62. — The effect of § 9 of the act of 1873 for the taxation of railroads is to subject the property of all railroad corporations of a character to be benefited by local improvements to special assessment for the costs of such improvements, when the public work benefits the property in the uses to which it is applied. State v. Jersey City, 42

N. J. Law, 98, 1880; State v. Mayor and Aldermen of Jersey City, 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 406, 1880.

63. — A lien for street improvements attaches only where there is a sufficient description of the property in the estimate which constitutes the assessment; and where the description, taken in connection with the ordinance providing for the improvement and the contract awarded under the ordinance, is such as would enable a person somewhat acquainted with surveying to find and identify the land, it is sufficient to create the statutory lien. Peru and Indianapolis R. R. Co. v. Hanna, 68 Ind., 562. 1879.

64. — paving. Where a railway runs much below the level of the highway the company is not, in respect to its line and slopes, the owner of land "abutting on the highway," within the meaning of ch. 102 of 25 and 26 Vict. Great Eastern R'y Co. v. Hackney Board of Works, Law Reports, 8 Appeal Cases, 687. 1883.

65. — A line of railway was situated in a deep cutting at a place where a road passed over the line. The road was carried on a bridge from one boundary of the line to the other, but supported on stone piers erected on the slope of the cutting. On an information under s. 77 of the Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, against the railway company for not contributing to the paving of the road, held, that the line and slopes of the cutting did not bound or abut upon the road within the meaning of the act. London, Brighton and South Coast R'y Co. v. St. Giles, Law Reports, 4 Exchequer Division, 239, 1879; 81 Eng. (Moak), 486.

66. — An assessment on a railroad company, for paving a street crossing its railroad, set aside on the ground that the company derived no benefit therefrom in the improvement of its lands for the uses to which they were appropriated. State v. City of Elizabeth, 87 N. J. Law, 330. 1875.

67. — Where a city ordinance authorizes the majority of the property owners to select the contractor for paving, and the highway department makes a contract in violation of the wishes of the property owners, the contractor cannot recover for the work, he having notice of the facts. City of Philadelphia

Injury Caused by Excavation — Location Over Railway.

v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 12 Philadelphia, 479. 1877.

68. — The board of public works had no authority to enter into a contract for paving a sidewalk on one of the streets around the capitol, which was provided for in the sundry civil appropriation act of March 8, 1873 (17 Stats. at Large). Washington and Georgetown R. R. Co. v. Dist. of Columbia, 3 MacArthur (Dist. of Columbia), 11. 1879.

69. — A municipality cannot support a claim for paving against the road-bed of a railway company, and it is immaterial whether the company has simply the right of way or owns the bed in fee. Junction R. R. Co. v. City of Philadelphia, 88 Pa. St., 424. 1879.

70. — The right of way of a railway company across a street cannot be classed as property abutting on the street, in the sense of the statute providing for the assessment of property abutting on a street for street improvement. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. South Park Commissioners, 11 Bradwell (Ill.), 562. 1882.

71. Injunction. A court of equity will not, at the suit of private citizens, enjoin the laying of a railway in a street. Such act, if a nuisance, should be restrained by the public, or on information of the solicitor-general for the circuit. Coast Line R. R. Co. v. Cohen, 50 Ga., 451. 1878. See, also, Cairo and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. The People, 92 Ill., 170, 1879; Truesdale v. Peoria Grape Sugar Co., 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ill.), 248, 1881.

72. — Where the construction of a railway in a street of a city will work material injury to the abutting property, such construction may be enjoined, at the suit of the owners, until the right to construct such road in the street shall first be acquired, under proceedings instituted against such owners, as required by law for the appropriation of private property. Scioto Valley R'y Co. v. Lawrence, 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ohio), 93. 1883.

73. Injury caused by excavation; action over against company. Nor will the fact that the action was brought by the injured party against the municipality, instead of directly against the person engaged in such work, enable the latter, in an action over against it, to set up absence of negligence as a defense on the ground that the municipality granted permission to do the work. The effect of such a grant is only to prevent the grantee from being a trespasser in the bare act of breaking up the street; but it gives no exemption from liability for injury resulting to others in the execution of the work. District of Columbia v. Baltimore and Potomac R. R. Co., 1 Mackey (Dist. of Columbia), 314, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 179.

74. — Where a municipality is mulcted in damages for injuries received by a party in falling into an excavation made by a railroad company in one of its streets, the latter is liable over for the amount paid. Ib.

75. Liability of city for construction of railway. If a city has such authority, it incurs no liability by reason of the fact that a company authorized by it to build and operate its road upon a street has so constructed an embankment in the street as to cause a pond of water to be formed upon adjacent land, provided the embankment conforms to the established grade of the street and is otherwise so constructed as to cause no damage or inconvenience beyond that necessarily occasioned by the appropriation of a portion of the street for the purpose. Swenson v. City of Lexington, 69 Mo., 157. 1878.

76. — The city incurs no liability for damages done to real estate by the occupation of the street upon which it fronts for a railroad, with its permission, unless they are such as would not have resulted if the road had been properly constructed and operated. Ib.

77. Location over railway. Cities and incorporated villages, in the exercise of the power to lay off and establish streets, and to take land for that purpose, conferred by the general act of May 3, 1853 (50 Ohio L., 228), are authorized to lay streets across railway land, provided the second use for which the land is so taken is, in the circumstances of the particular case, reasonably consistent with the former use. The land may, in such case, be subjected to the additional use, but the former use may not thereby be defeated. Little Miami, etc., R. R. Cos. v. City of Dayton, 23 Ohio St., 510. 1872.

Nuisance — Park Commission.

78. Nuisance; equity. Where certain persons sustain an injury from a public nuisance, where the injury is distinct from that sustained by the public in general, a bill in equity for relief will be entertained. Spencer v. London and Birmingham R. R. Co., 8 Simons (Eng. Ch.), 193. 1836.

79. — A railway constructed in a public street of a city, without authority of law, is a continuous obstruction, which amounts to a public nuisance. Denver and Swansea R'y Co. v. Denver City R'y Co., 2 Colo., 673, 1876; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 339.

80. Obstruction; damages. Where the wrong done by the railway company is temporary in its nature, as in leaving cars unnecessarily on its track, or while engaged in the work of laying down its track, something existing to-day and not to-morrow, fluctuating in extent and depending on the ever-repeated action of the company, only such damages as have fully accrued prior to the commencement of the suit are recoverable, and none based upon any presumed continuance or repetition of the wrong. Central Branch Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Twine, 23 Kans., 585. 1880.

81. — But where the wrong is of a permanent nature, and springs from the manner in which the track, as fully completed, affects approach to a lot, then the lot owner may treat the act of the company as a permanent appropriation of the right of access to his lot, and recover as damages the consequent depreciation in value of the lot. Ib.

82. — The same rules applied to the permanent obstruction of an alley. Central Branch Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Andrews, 26 Kans., 702. 1882.

83. — In an action for damages to real estate caused by a railroad company in using a public avenue for loading and unloading freight, witnesses who are acquainted with the value of property in the same locality may testify as to their opinion of the depreciation of said property, due to the use of said avenue for the purpose of a freight delivery. Trook v. Baltimore and Potomac R. R. Co., 3 MacArthur (Dist. of Columbia), 392. 1879.

84. — In such action the plaintiff is not confined to structural damage to the building, or physical injury and harm to the land.

He may also recover any other damage growing out of the unreasonable and unlawful use of the avenue. Ib.

85. — The measure of damages is not the diminution in value of the abutting property by the wrongful obstruction, the injury not being to the freehold nor permanent in its nature, but should be confined to compensation for the injury occasioned by the unlawful obstruction up to the time of the commencement of the suit. Brakken v. Minneapolis and St. Louis R'y Co., 29 Minn., 41, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 593.

86. — The building commissioners have no right to obstruct the Market Street Railroad in its route along Market street. The railroad company has no right to alter its course, nor can the commissioners confer such right upon it. West Philadelphia R'y Co. v. Perkins, 10 Philadelphia, 20. 1873.

87. — In an action against a city for injury to plaintiff caused by a dangerous obstruction upon a sidewalk, held, that the fact that the obstruction was created by a railroad company, which, under lawful authority, was constructing its track across the street at the place where the obstruction was located, did not exonerate the city. Wilson v. Watertown, 5 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 579. 1875.

88. — Where, under a license from the city, dirt on a railroad crossing is piled upon the street by the railroad company until the city shall remove it, and is left there at night without a light having been placed thereon, in violation of a city ordinance, the railroad company is liable for injuries suffered in consequence of the absence of a light. Lyon v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R. R. Co., 6 Mo. App., 516. 1879.

89. Opening of street. The Philadelphia, Baltimore and Wilmington R. R. Co. have no right to prevent the opening of Fifteenth street, through their property at Broad street and Washington avenue. Although it will be a great inconvenience, it will not destroy any franchise of the company. Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore R. R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 9 Philadelphia, 503. 1872.

90. Park commission. The park commission has power to use the name of the city of Philadelphia in any proceeding at law or in equity that may be necessary to carry into effect the objects referred to in the act creating the commission. Philadelphia v. Germantown R'y Co., 10 Philadelphia, 165. 1874.

91. Repair; occupancy of railway. By a city charter, the council have full power over the streets and sidewalks, and authority to keep them in repair. A railway company, after constructing its road through certain of the streets, neglected, though requested by the street commissioner, to restore such streets, and the sidewalks thereon, to their former condition of usefulness, as the statute requires; and the commissioner procured the necessary repairs to be made, for which payment was made by the city. Held, that the city may recover from the company all reasonable expenses so incurred. City of Oconto v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 44 Wis., 231. 1873.

92. — Provisions of the charter establishing the general policy of repairing streets and sidewalks, under the direction of the street commissioner, at the expense of adjoining lots, held inapplicable to the repairs in question. Ib.

93. — The railway company, whose neglect of its own legal duty compelled the city to make repairs, is not in a position to question, on technical grounds, the authority of the council to appropriate city funds to pay for the same. City of Oconto v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 44 Wis., 231. 1873.

94. Restoration to usefulness. It is the duty of a railway company in constructing its track across a street to restore the street to its former state, or to such a state as not unnecessarily to impair its usefulness, and to keep such crossing in repair. Peoria, Decatur and Evansville R. R. Co. v. Lyons, 9 Bradwell (Ill.), 350, 1881; Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne and Chicago R. R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill., 157, 1881.

95. Speed of trains. The statute requires that all railway companies shall "cause the bell on the engine to be rung before crossing any of the streets" of an incorporated city, and that their trains shall not go faster than six miles an hour until "they have passed all traveled streets of said city." Held, that these provisions apply to all actually traveled streets within the city limits, though such only by user, and not merely to streets dedicated by recorded plats or laid out and adopted by the municipal authorities. Ewen v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 88 Wis., 613. 1875.

96. — An ordinance of the city of St. Louis limiting the rate of speed of engines over its streets to six miles an hour is not void as being in conflict with the franchise of the Missouri Pacific R'y Co. Neier v. Missouri Pacific R'y Co., 12 Mo. App., 25. 1882.

97. Transfer of license to use. Where a city grants to a railroad company the right to use certain parts of its streets for railroad tracks, the grant containing no clause restricting the use of the streets to the grantee, the right to such use of the streets may be transferred to another railroad company. City of Quincy v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 94 Ill., 537. 1880.

98. Trespass; abutting property. It is res adjudicata in this case that plaintiff is entitled to recover all the damages sustained up to the commencement of the action from defendant's trespass in constructing and operating its railroad on his land in a public street (only six inches in width of the track being upon said land), and that the fact that a part of the road was at the same time constructed and operated upon adjoining lands not owned by the plaintiff cannot be considered for the purpose of lessening the damages. Blesch v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 48 Wis., 168. 1879.

99. — Where a railway company, without the consent of the owner, and without legal proceedings, takes possession of land for which it is liable to make compensation (in this case, land forming part of a public street, but the fee of which was in the plaintiff), it is liable in an action of trespass; and the neglect of the owner to proceed by injunction to restrain the company from constructing its road on the land is not a waiver of his right of action for the trespass. Blesch v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 43 Wis., 183. 1877.

100. — Under the constitution and laws of Wisconsin, where lands are taken for railway purposes, the "just compensation" which the company must pay includes "the value of the lands actually taken, and the damages sustained by the owner by reason of the taking thereof" for such purpose; and the fact that the value of the owner's other lands, adjoining those taken, and used in connection with them, would be diminished by the proximity of the road, if it were built close to but not upon his land, cannot be considered for the purpose of lessening the damages; and an equally liberal rule in favor of the land owner applies in case of a trespass by an illegal taking for the same purpose. Blesch v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 48 Wis., 168. 1879.

101. Use of streets. The plaintiff having no authority in its charter to use steam power in propelling its trains through Richmond, held, that the city had the right to prohibit the use of steam on its streets. Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac R. R. Co. v. Richmond, 26 Grattan (Va.), 83. 1875. See, also, Crosby v. Owensboro and Russellville R. R. Co., 10 Bush (Ky.), 288, 1874; Newport and Cincinnati Bridge Co. v. Foote, 9 Bush (Ky.), 264, 1872.

102. — The charter of Long Island City (ch. 481, Laws of 1871, tit. 3, ch. 1, § 14) gives power to regulate the use of streets by vehicles and railways, and to enforce obedience thereto by penalties, with the reservation that it shall have no power to prohibit or control the use of steam power on any railroad from any part of Long Island to the East river; and it is declared that such railroad companies shall have the unobstructed right to run to the East river, "but shall furnish suitable guards or signals at the street crossings." The common council passed an ordinance requiring railroad companies running cars drawn by steam power, within the city limits, to place flagmen at every crossing; and for every violation of the ordinance imposed a penalty of $50. Defendant's road was in operation before the enactment of the charter. Its road passed through the city to the East river, crossing one of the city streets. In an action to recover a penalty for not placing a flagman at the crossing, held, that plaintiff was not entitled to recover; that it had no control over the defendant's road, and had no power to regulate by ordinance the duty imposed upon defendant to furnish proper guards and signals. Long Island City v. Long Island R. R. Co., 79 N. Y., 561. 1880.

103. — Where the authorities of a city acquiesced for nineteen years in the use of a public street by a railroad company in maintaining an arch over the street, and then made an agreement in writing whereby the right to so use the street was continued until it should be necessary to rebuild the arch, it was held that the city, by these acts of recognition and acquiescence, was estopped from compelling the company to remove the arch and obstruction, until it should become necessary to rebuild the same. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. The People, 91 Ill., 251. 1878.

104. — A railway company may, notwithstanding a city ordinance, be prevented from making an oppressive use of a street. So held where the company tore down the awning in front of plaintiff's house. Laviosa v. Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans R. R. Co., 1 McGloin (La.), 299, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 129.

105. — The use of a street for railway purposes cannot be authorized unless the street has been lawfully established. Or. Laws, 580. Burns v. Multnomah R'y Co., 8 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 543, 1883; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 239; 15 Federal Reporter, 177.

106. — The city authorities have the power to establish such reasonable appliances in the public thoroughfares where railroads pass along as will, by a temporary arrest of travel, protect the public from the danger of meeting passing trains. Textor v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 59 Md., 63. 1832.

107. — The use of a post and gate at a crossing held proper. Ib.

108. — An ordinance having been passed by a city, authorizing the use of a street for railway purposes, a court of equity will not enjoin the repeal of such an ordinance before the completion of the road. Cape May and Schellenger's Landing R. R. Co. v. Cape May, 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 474; 35 N. J. Eq., 419. 1882.

109. — The consent of the municipal authorities is all that is required to authorize a railway company to use a public street. The consent of abutting property owners is not necessary unless so provided in the statutes. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis Union R'y Co., 107 Ill., 450. 1883.

110. — A city ordinance granting a railroad company a right of way over a street provided that the grant should become null and void if the company should ever remove its machine shops from the city. Held, that this was a condition subsequent, in which no one had any legal interest but the company and the city, and if the company violated the condition by removing the shops, this did not ipso facto terminate the right of way so as to entitle the owner of a lot abutting upon the street to maintain an action of damages against the railroad company as for an unlawful occupation of the street. Knight v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 70 Mo., 231. 1879.

111. — After a railroad has been in operation in a street for many years, any technical defect in the title to its road-bed, if not cured by lapse of time, must be taken advantage of by the people to enjoin the road as a nuisance. People v. Long Island R. R. Co., 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 181. 1850.

112. — The attorney-general may direct the discontinuance of a suit brought in the name of the people to restrain the use of a street by a railway company. People v. Central Cross Town R. R. Co., 21 Hun (N. Y.), 476. 1880.

113. — The legislature has the power to judge of the relative benefits resulting to a municipal corporation and a railroad company from an alteration in a public avenue over which the railroad track passes, and its judgment is not subject to review by the courts. People v. Mayor of City of New York, 3 Hun (N. Y.), 97. 1874.

114. — The city of St. Louis has no power to authorize the use of any street for a railroad. An ordinance for that purpose is, therefore, a nullity, and cannot create between the city and the company the relation of licensor and licensee, so as to make the company's action amount to an acceptance of a license. Atlantic and Pacific R. R. Co. v. City of St. Louis, 66 Mo., 228. 1877.

115. Vacation. While equity will interfere in some cases at the instance of private real estate owners to restrain the attempted vacation of a road or street, yet it will interfere only when such owners have a special interest therein, and their property would be directly injured by the vacation. Heller v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co., 28 Kans., 625, 1882; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 636.

116. Waste water. Where a railway company has been in the habit of running the waste water from a tank upon a street of a city for some time, a party cannot acquire a right of action against the company by going upon the street under permission from members of the city council and piling lumber there in such manner that the water from the tank in its usual course will flow upon it. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Hoag, 90 Ill., 839. 1878.

117. — A railway company can acquire no prescriptive right to let the waste water from its tank on to a public street of a city, as against the city or one in its legitimate use as a street. Ib.

STRIKES.

1. Delays. Delay in the carriage of property, occasioned by the violence of a mob during a strike, will not render the carrier liable. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co. v. Bennett, 89 Ind., 457, 1883; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 391, 1882; Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Hollowell, 65 Ind., 188, 1879.

2. — A reply alleging that such alleged insurrection was composed wholly of employes of the defendant, who, peaceably and without arms or violence, and on account of an unjust and oppressive reduction by the defendant of their wages, refused to continue in the defendant's employ until their former rate of wages was restored, and who had peaceably assembled in a small body to petition therefor, is insufficient. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Hollowell, 65 Ind., 188. 1879.

3. — The reply in such action, alleging that the cause of such pretended insurrection was an unjust and oppressive reduction by the defendant of the wages of its employes, which induced them to strike and refuse to work, and to assemble in a peaceable body to demand a restoration of their former rate of wages, but without offering any resistance to the civil authorities, is insufficient. Ib.

4. Destruction of goods. A railway company is not liable for destruction of goods by a mob during a strike of its employes. Sherman v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. C. C.), 274. 1831.

5. Mandamus. A railway company may by mandamus be compelled to operate its road, and it is no defense that its employes are demanding a small increase of wages. People v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (N. Y.), 1. 1882.

I. AUTHORITY TO SUBSCRIBE.

1. Certiorari. Upon a certiorari to review proceedings for the purpose of bonding a town in aid of a railroad, under Laws 1868, ch. 811; Laws 1869, ch. 241; 1871, ch. 127, held, that it was incumbent upon the officers issuing the bonds to show that the lawful authority existed for bonding the town in aid of the railroad at the time of the institution of the proceedings. People ex rel. v. Walter, 4 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 683, 1874; 2 Hun (N. Y.), 335, 1874; reversed on appeal on the ground that the writ had been directed to the commissioners instead of the county judge. Same v. Same, 83 N. Y., 403. 1877.

2. Change of law. It is not within the power of one legislature to bind future legislatures. Olson v. Green Bay and Lake Pepin R. R. Co., 36 Wis., 383. 1874.

3. — A change in the statute will not affect previous subscriptions. Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S., 596, 1882; Syracuse Savings Bank v. Town of Seneca Falls, 21 Hun (N. Y.), 804, 1890; Same v. Same, 83 N. Y., 317; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 216, 1881.

4. Charter. A clause in the charter of a railroad company which says, "It shall be lawful for all persons of lawful age, or for the agent of any corporate body, to subscribe to the capital stock of said company," manifestly refers to private corporations, and confers no power upon municipal corporations to subscribe for such stock. Campbell v. Paris and Decatur R. R. Co., 71 Ill., 611. 1874.

5. — A special charter authorizing subscriptions construed. Glenn v. County Commissioners, 6 So. Car., 412. 1873.

6. — The act amending the charter of the city of Keokuk, approved January 22, 1853, did not confer upon the city the power to become a subscriber to the capital stock of a railway company. Williamson v. City of Keokuk, 44 Ia., 88. 1876.

7. — The act of January 25, 1855, did not contain a grant of power to municipal corporations to issue bonds in aid of railway companies, but simply attached some limitations to the exercise of the power where it had already been conferred. Ib.

8. City council. An appropriation in aid of the construction of a railroad may be made by city councils without a popular vote, and may be limited to a part of the road. Perry v. Keene, 58 N. H., 40. 1876.

9. Constitutional law. The legislature has the constitutional right to authorize towns to aid in the construction of railways. Town of Bennington v. Park, 50 Vt., 178, 1877; First National Bank of St. Johnsbury v. Town of Concord, ib., 257, 1877; Brokaw v. Commissioners of Gibson County, 73 Ind., 543, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. councils of Philadelphia, on the 16th day of February, 1854, authorizing a subscription of fifteen thousand shares in the North Western R. R. Co., is not in violation of the provisions of the act of February 2, 1854, known as the Consolidation Act, nor in violation of the vested rights of the citizens of the then county of Philadelphia; nor is it contrary to their constitutional right to be exempt from taxation, except by their representatives. Riddle v. Philadelphia and North Western R. R. Co., 1 Pittsburgh, 158. 1854.

11. — The act authorizing the city of San Antonio to issue bonds in aid of the San Antonio and Mexican Gulf R. R. Co., held, unconstitutional, as it embraces more than one subject. Giddings v. City of San Antonio, 47 Tex., 548, 1877; Peck v. San Antonio, 51 ib., 490, 1879. A Texas statute held unconstitutional as embracing more than one subject. San Antonio v. Mehaffy, 96 U. S., 312. 1877.

12. — Under the constitution of Illinois of 1848, a bill passed by both houses of the legislature became a law when it was approved and signed by the governor of the state within ten days after its presentation to him; and this, notwithstanding the fact that, when the bill was so approved and signed, the legislature had adjourned sine die. Seven Hickory v. Ellery, 103 U. S., 423. 1880. See, also, Amoskeag National Bank v. Town of Ottawa, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 546; 105 U. S., 667. 1881.

13. — Under the constitution of 1848, the legislature could properly confer upon a city the power to contract indebtedness and issue its bonds for a corporate purpose without any vote of the people, but it could go no further. It could not compel a city or incorporated town to incur a debt, unless the legislative department of the city or town saw proper to do so. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. City of Aurora, 99 Ill., 205, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 191.

14. — The section of the constitution of Illinois entitled "Municipal subscriptions to railroads or private corporations," which took effect July 2, 1870, did not invalidate township bonds which, pursuant to a vote cast at an election of the voters of the township lawfully held on that day, before closing the polls of the general election, were issued to pay a previously voted donation that was to be raised by special tax. Louisville v. Savings Bank, 104 U. S., 469, 1881; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 589.

15. — The constitution of the state which came into operation July 2, 1870, annulled the power of any city, town or township to make donations or loan its credit to a railroad company, and, after that date, rendered the act of 1867 ineffective. As the town had no authority to make a contract to give, and the acceptance by the company was an undertaking to do nothing which it was not bound to do, before the authority of the town to make or to engage to make a donation came into existence, no valid contract arose from such offer and acceptance. The bonds so issued are void. Concord, Town of, v. Portsmouth Savings Bank, 92 U. S., 625. 1875. Overruled and contrary doctrine held in Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S., 47, 1879; following Chicago and Iowa R. R. Co. v. Pinckney, 74 Ill., 277, 1874.

16. — Where, pursuant to the authority conferred by a legislative enactment, such a donation was voted by a county in Illinois before the adoption of that constitution, the donation may be thereafter completed by the issue of the requisite bonds. Fairfield v. County of Gallatin, 100 U. S., 47, 1879; Town of Prairie v. Lloyd, 97 Ill., 179, 1881; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 58; Decker v. Hughes, 68 Ill., 88, 1873; Wright v. Bishop, 88 Ill., 802, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 301; Quincy, Missouri and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Morris, 84 Ill., 410, 1877; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 494; People v. Jackson County, 92 Ill., 441, 1879.

17. — The act authorizing the city of Wheeling to subscribe to the capital stock of the Wheeling and Lake Erie R. R. Co. construed. Held, that the act was repealed by the adoption of the new constitution. Held, that as the voters had, prior to the repeal, voted in favor of the subscription, but that the subscription had not in fact been made at that time, the proceedings were inoperative, and further proceedings were enjoined. List v. City of Wheeling, 7 West Va., 501, 1874. But see State ex rel. v. Town of Clark, 28 Minn., 422. 1877.

ment of the constitution (art. 8, § 11) went into effect prohibiting any town from loaning its money or credit in aid of any corporation, or from becoming the owner of any stock or bonds of a corporation, all action on the part of any town to issue its bonds in aid of a railroad not then completed at once become nugatory, unless where some previous vested right had accrued. Falconer v. Buffalo and Jamestown R. R. Co., 69 N. Y., 491, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 46.

19. — To an action on negotiable bonds issued by the defendant, it pleaded that the act incorporating it was unconstitutional: 1st, because the subject of the act was not expressed in its title; 2d, because under the constitution of Missouri the legislature could not amend the charter of the town corporation by making it a city corporation; 3d, because Plattsburg did not in fact have five thousand people when it was incorporated as a city, as required by the constitution of the state. Held, that neither of these objections was well taken. Such questions cannot be collaterally raised. Judson v. City of Plattsburg, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 181. 1874. See, also, Aller v. Town of Cameron, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 198. 1874.

20. — Section 11 of art. 8 of the state constitution has the effect of repealing all acts of the legislature relating to the bonding of towns for railroad purposes, except so far as they relate to existing contracts actually made and in force when the provision went into effect. Buffalo and Jamestown R. R. Co. v. Town of Collins, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 485. 1875.

21. — As long as a city exists, laws are void which withdraw or restrict its taxing power so as to impair the obligation of its contracts made upon a pledge expressly or impliedly given that it shall be exercised for their fulfillment. Although such laws be enacted, mandamus, to compel the city to exercise that power to the extent it possessed it before their passage, will lie at the suit of a party to such a contract who has no other adequate remedy to enforce it. Wolff v. New Orleans, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), §25; 103 U. S., 358. 1880.

22. Depots and side-tracks. The act of the legislature of Kansas, entitled "An act to authorize counties, incorporated cities and municipal townships to issue bonds for the purpose of building bridges, aiding in the construction of railroads, water-power or other works of internal improvement, and providing for the registration of such bonds, and the repealing of all laws in conflict therewith," approved March 2, 1872 (ch. 68, Laws of Kansas, 1872, p. 110), authorizes a township to issue its bonds to aid in constructing within its limits the depots and side-tracks of an existing railroad. Township of Rock Creek v. Strong, 96 U. S., 271. 1877.

23. Donation. The provisions of the act of May 4, 1869 (1 R. S. 1876, p. 299), "to enable cities to aid in the construction of railroads," etc., authorize a city incorporated under the general law of Indiana to extend such aid, in the construction of a railway, in either of two ways, viz.: first, by subscribing to the stock of such enterprise, or, second, by making a donation thereto. Indiana North and South R'y Co. v. City of Attica, 56 Ind., 476. 1877.

24. — The term "donation" as used in the act, means an absolute gift or grant of a thing, without any condition or consideration. Ib.

25. Estoppel. A town cannot at the same time deny the validity of its bonds and claim the proceeds of the same. Town of Lyons v. Chamberlain, 89 N. Y., 578, 1882; Town of Bennington v. Park, 50 Vt., 178, 1877.

26. — The fact that a city has received in exchange for void bonds issued under an enabling act the bonds of a railway company, in whose favor the city bonds were issued, does not make valid the unauthorized obligations of the city. A municipal corporation has no general authority to exchange promises with other corporations or persons; its contract, to be valid, must be within the scope of the authority conferred upon it by law, and for municipal purposes. Thomas v. City of Port Huron, 27 Mich., 320. 1873.

27. Guaranty of railway bonds. An act of the legislature authorizing the corporate authorities of a city to borrow money for works of internal improvements, held, to include a guaranty of the payment of bonds issued by a railway company for money to pay debts incurred for construction already made, and for future improvements. Mayor and Aldermen of Savannah v. Kelly, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 679. 1883.

28. Legalizing acts. Various legalizing acts construed and held to validate municipal subscriptions. Quincy v. Cooke, 107 U. S., 549, 1882; Thompson v. Perrine, 103 U. S., 806, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 140. See Same v. Same, 106 U. S., 589, 1882. Contra, Horton v. Thompson, 71 N. Y., 513, 1877; Town of Duaneburgh v. Jenkins, 57 N. Y., 177, 1874.

29. — The supreme court of Illinois having decided that the legislature cannot, by subsequent legislation, render valid a note by a town to subscribe to railroad stock, if there was no law in force at the time of the subscription authorizing it, the federal court will follow that authority although in conflict with a prior decision of the United States supreme court. Leslie v. Town of Urbana, 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 435. 1879. See Thompson v. Perrine, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 577; 106 U. S., 589. 1882.

30. — Ch. 20, Laws of 1877, to legalize the acts and proceedings of officers of the town of Rosendale in the assessment and collection of certain taxes authorized by act of 1871, is invalid, because, since the constitutional amendment of 1871, the legislature has no authority to pass any special law for the assessment and collection of taxes. Kimball v. Town of Rosendale, 42 Wis., 407. 1877.

31. Levy of tax. Where an act of the legislature authorized a city to issue its bonds in aid of a railroad company, and ratified a contract by which the city, having issued its said bonds, agreed to appropriate sufficient moneys from its treasury to pay the accruing interest thereon, the city was thereby authorized to levy a tax to pay said interest, and such authority carried with it the duty to make the levy. Sibley v. Mobile, 3 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 535. 1876.

32. — But when, at the time of the issue of the bonds, the constitution of the state limited the taxing power of the city to a certain per centum upon its taxable property, the city could not exceed that limit; but having first levied a tax sufficient to pay its current expenses, it was bound by its contract to exhaust, if necessary, the residue of its taxing power in order to pay the interest on said bonds. Ib.

33. Machine shops. The provisions of the Indiana statute do not authorize a city to make a contract to aid a railway company to construct its line by delivering to it a certain sum in money or bonds, in consideration of the agreement of such company to erect and maintain its machine shops in or near such city. Indiana, North and South R'y Co. v. City of Attica, 56 Ind., 476. 1877. See, also, New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga R. R. Co. v. Dunn, 51 Ala., 128. 1874. Contra as to the statutes of Missouri. Jarroll v. City of Moberly, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 253. 1878.

34. Maine; statute. The statutes of Maine authorizing municipal aid construed. Stevens v. Town of Anson, 73 Me., 489. 1882.

35. Power to subscribe. A municipal corporation cannot subscribe to the capital stock of a railroad company and issue its bonds in payment of such subscription unless the power so to do has been expressly conferred by law. Lewis v. City of Clarendon, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 329, 1878; Wells v. Supervisors, 102 U. S., 625, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 605; Barnes v. Town of Lacon, 84 Ill., 461, 1877; Pitzman v. Village of Freeburg, 92 Ill., 111, 1879; Tax-payers of Milan v. Tennessee Central R. R. Co., 11 Lea (Tenn.), 329, 1883.

36. Railway lying in another state. The subscription to the capital stock of a railroad lying wholly in another state is for a corporate purpose; as in the case of the city of Quincy, situated on the western border of the state, subscribing to the stock of a railroad to be constructed from a point on the Mississippi river, opposite that city, in the state of Missouri, to a point westward, in Nebraska. Quincy, Missouri and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Morris, 84 Ill., 410, 1877; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 494. See, contra, Allen v. Louisiana, 103 U. S., 80, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 599.

37. Ratification. Corporate ratification, without authority from the legislature, cannot make a municipal bond valid which was void when issued for want of legislative power to make it. Lewis v. City of Shreve- port, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 688. 1883.

38. Roads already built. To be of any effect to bind a town to issue bonds to aid in the construction of a railroad under Laws 1877, c. 106, the agreement to issue bonds, provided for in section 7 of said chapter, must be arrived at and perfected before the construction of the road or piece of road, the construction of which such agreement is designed to aid. State ex rel. v. Highland, 25 Minn., 355. 1879.

39. Second subscription by city. The right of railway companies to ask from local communities assistance, involving the necessity of taxation, will not be enlarged by construction. Privileges of this character are in derogation of individual rights. They will not be implied, but must be clearly granted. But, when this has been done, the judiciary cannot interfere to defeat the legislative will. Tyler's Executor v. Elizabeth-town and Paducah R. R. Co., 9 Bush (Ky.), 510. 1872.

40. — A second subscription of stock in said company by the city of Louisville for the purpose of building a branch road is held to be valid. Ib.

41. Statutory authority. Under a statute authorizing a municipality to issue bonds in aid of a railroad, payable not later than ten years from the date of issuance, bonds made payable twenty years from their date are void. Woodruff v. Okolona, 57 Miss., 806. 1880.

42. — The legislature cannot compel a municipal corporation to subscribe for railroad stock and to issue its bonds in payment therefor; but where, under a mandatory act, the municipality has voluntarily and without the compulsion of judicial process subscribed for stock and issued its bonds, the latter are not invalidated by the compulsory character of the act; it operates as an authority and permission to do the acts, and, having been done, they will be considered as having been done voluntarily. Williams v. Town of Duaneburgh, 66 N. Y., 129. 1876.

43. — Where authority is given "to any incorporated town or city" in a county to subscribe to the capital stock of a railroad company, such authority is not limited to towns and cities incorporated at the date of the passage of the act. Lewis v. City of Clarendon, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 329. 1878.

44. — Statutes construed and bonds held valid. Wilkinson v. City of Peru, 61 Ind., 1, 1878; Converse v. City of Fort Scott, 92 U. S., 503, 1875.

45. — Statutes construed and bonds held invalid. Sykes v. Mayor of Columbus, 35 Miss., 115, 1877; Jarrott v. Moberly, 103 U. S., 580, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 113.

46. Subsequent organization of municipal corporation. An enabling act, authorizing any city or village in any county through any portion of which any part of a certain railroad should run, to issue bonds in aid thereof, is prospective in its intent, and is sufficient authority for a village, incorporated subsequently, and not existing at the time the enabling act becomes a law, to issue such bonds. Long v. City of New London, 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 539. 1880.

47. Villages; Illinois statute. The act entitled "An act to provide for a general system of railroad incorporations," approved November 6, 1849, in so far as it provides for municipal subscription to the capital stock of railroad companies, has no reference whatever to villages, but applies only to counties and cities. Pitman v. Village of Freeburg, 92 Ill., 111. 1879.

48. Void bonds. Where a bond is made by a city for two considerations, as to one of which it has power to make a bond, but as to the other has none, such bond is wholly void. The holder cannot recover on the bond as such. His remedy is an action for money had and received. Gause v. City of Clarksville, 1 Federal Reporter, 353. 1880.

II. PROCEEDINGS.

49. Acceptance. Formal acceptance by the corporation is unnecessary. The building of the road is a sufficient acceptance. State ex rel. v. Town of Lime, 23 Minn., 521, 1877; State ex rel. v. Hastings, 24 ib., 78, 1877.

50. Appeal. A petition was presented to the county board asking an appropriation for a township of $75,000, to aid a railway, as provided by the statute. An election was held and the aid voted. In June, 1880, the board levied a tax of one per cent. accordingly. In June, 1891, another levy of one per cent. was ordered, and on trial of an appeal from this last order the appellant offered to show that a tax of one per cent. for the years 1880 and 1881 would not raise the $75,000. Held, that the evidence was immaterial. Held, also, that the appeal raised no question upon the proceedings occurring before the order appealed from. Gavin v. Comm'rs of Decatur County, 81 Ind., 480. 1892.

51. Certiorari. Where the action of the county judge, authorizing the issue of bonds, was reversed upon certiorari, bonds issued while the certiorari proceedings are pending will be held invalid. Stewart v. Town of Lansing, 15 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 281. 1878.

52. Collateral attack. The county judge being required to act upon the petition for the issue of bonds, his judgment thereon cannot be collaterally assailed. Munson v. Town of Lyons, 12 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 539. 1875.

53. Commissioners; powers and liabilities. The railroad commissioners appointed under the act authorizing certain towns of Livingston county to issue bonds and take stock in the E. and G. V. R. R. Co. (ch. 442, Laws of 1868) had no relation to the county, and in no sense were they subject to the supervision by or subordinate to its board of supervisors. Said board had no jurisdiction to appoint a committee of its members for the purpose of an investigation to ascertain who were the railroad commissioners, under said act, and had no authority to require the attendance of witnesses before the committee upon such investigation (§ 1, ch. 190, Laws of 1858); and that, therefore, a subpoena requiring such attendance conveyed no mandate which imposed compliance, and disobedience thereto was not, within the meaning of the law, contempt. Bradner, In re, 87 N. Y., 171. 1891.

54. Consideration. Where, in an action of mandamus, the petition for the donation shows that the railway is not yet completed, and the donation is asked because the construction of such railway will enhance the value of the property of the petitioners, an answer alleging a want of consideration for the donation is insufficient. City of Kokomo v. The State, 57 Ind., 152. 1877.

55. Consolidation of railways. The right to make a subscription to a railway company held to pass to its successor with which it was consolidated. Empire v. Darlington, 101 U. S., 87, 1879; Lewis v. City of Clarendon, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 329, 1878. See, also, Illinois Midland R'y Co. v. Town of Barnett, 85 Ill., 313, 1877; Town of East Lincoln v. Davenport, 94 U. S., 801, 1876.

56. Constitutional law. A popular vote authorizing a subscription does not constitute such a contract with a railway company as to come within the provisions of the federal constitution in relation to contracts. Where the power to subscribe is taken away after such a vote, but before actual subscription, the railway company cannot compel the subscription to be made. Concord, Town of, v. Portsmouth Savings Bank, 92 U. S., 625. 1875.

57. — The legislature, under the constitutional restriction that two-thirds of the qualified voters of a town in Mississippi, at a special election or regular election to be held in such town, shall assent thereto, may authorize a town to aid a railroad by issuing and delivering interest-bearing bonds, as a donation, to secure the permanent location in the town of a depot of the road. New Orleans, St. Louis and Chicago R. R. Co. v. McDonald, 53 Miss., 240. 1876.

58. — Proceedings considered under the provisions of the constitution of Texas. Austin v. Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe R. R. Co., 45 Tex., 284, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 172.

59. Contract. A petition for an election by a municipal corporation to take stock in a railway company, and to issue bonds in payment, upon certain conditions, the notice of the election, and an affirmative vote thereupon, upon the faith of which money is expended and the road substantially built and equipped, is a contract between the corporation and the railway company. People ex rel. v. Holden, 82 Ill., 93. 1876.

60. Elections. Elections held invalid under the facts. People v. Town of Laenna, 67 Ill., 65, 1873; People v. Town of Santa Anna, 67 ib., 57, 1873; People v. Cline, 68 ib., 394, 1872; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 873;

Proceedings.

Lippincott v. Town of Pana, 92 ib., 24, 1879.

61. — In the absence of an express authority, the condition upon which a municipal subscription is voted cannot be changed by a subsequent vote, either directly or indirectly. Such subsequent election is ultra vires, and the act void, being unsanctioned by law. People ex rel. v. Town of Waynesville, 88 Ill., 469, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 339.

62. — In a suit by a railroad company to enforce the issuing of bonds by a municipality for its use, the burden of proof is upon the railroad company to show affirmatively that the issue of the bonds was authorized by a vote of the people, had pursuant to a law providing therefor, prior to the adoption of the present constitution; and the law under which the election is held must be substantially complied with, or the election will confer no authority. Chicago and Iowa R. R. Co. v. Mallory, 101 Ill., 583, 1882; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 139.

63. — The provisions of the registry law (chap. 171, Laws of 1868) are mandatory and imperative. An election without registration of voters is void. Nefzger v. D. and St. P. R'y Co., 36 Ia., 642. 1873.

64. — An election can be ordered only by the functionaries designated by the law. An election called by any other person or body is absolutely void, and so are all acts growing out of or performed under it. Bonds issued in pursuance of such an election are void, and taxes levied for their payment, or for the payment of interest thereon, are illegal and their collection may be enjoined. Jacksonville, Northwestern and Southeastern R. R. Co. v. Virden, 104 Ill., 339. 1882.

65. — Where the law, under which an election is had on the question of corporate subscription to a railroad, required only that a majority of legal voters of the municipality voting at such an election should vote in favor of the proposed subscription, held, that it was not essential that a majority of all the legal voters should vote for the proposition, but that it was sufficient that a majority of legal votes actually cast should be in favor thereof. People v. Town of Harp, 67 Ill., 62, 1873; Reiger v. Comm'rs of Beaufort, 70 N. C., 319, 1874. But see Chester and Lenoir

R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Caldwell County, 73 N. C., 486. 1875.

66. — The "assent" of the qualified voters required by § 14, art. 11, of the constitution of 1865, before a municipal subscription could be made to the stock of a corporation, was an affirmative, positive act. Mere inaction of the voters, by failing to vote, did not express assent within the meaning of that section. State ex rel. v. Brassfield, 67 Mo., 331. 1878.

67. — Ch. 953 of 1867, as amended by ch. 317, 1868, authorizing the village of Fort Edward to issue bonds, requires that notice of the special election should be published for at least two weeks previous to such election. No bonds can be issued under the provisions of said acts unless a majority of all the taxable inhabitants shall vote therefor. The consent of a majority of all those who attend the meetings is not sufficient. Culver v. Village of Fort Edward, 8 Hun (N. Y.), 340. 1876.

68. — A popular vote in favor of a municipal subscription for stock of a railroad company, cast at an election held without authority of law, does not bind the municipality nor confer the power to make the subscription. Allen v. Louisiana, 103 U. S., 90, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 599.

69. — An irregularity in conducting the election will not defeat a recovery on the bonds or on the coupons thereto attached, nor overcome the presumption that the plaintiff, in the usual course of business, became at their date the holder of them for value. Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S., 529, 1882.

70. — Where the statute authorized a town to subscribe to the capital stock of a railroad, upon a vote taken for that purpose at a regular town meeting, a vote taken at a special meeting, called for that purpose, will not confer authority upon the town to make such subscription. Pana, Town of, v. Lippincott, 2 Bradwell (Ill.), 466. 1877.

71. — The proposition submitted to the vote of the citizens, at the election held under statute, fairly construed, was whether the city should issue its bonds in aid of the railroad "to an amount not exceeding $1,000,000," and the election having resulted in favor of the proposition, the city council had a discretionary power as to the amount of bonds to be issued, not exceeding $1,000,000, and might confine the issue to $500,000. Winter v. City Council of Montgomery, 63 Ala., 403, 1880; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 307.

72. — The statute of Maine requiring a vote of two-thirds majority construed. Portland and Ogdensburgh R. R. Co. v. Inhabitants of Standish, 65 Me., 63, 1875; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 111.

73. — Competency and sufficiency of the evidence determined. Hannibal v. Fauntleroy, 105 U. S., 408. 1881.

74. — Where an act provides that if a majority of the legal voters, voting at an election held for that purpose, shall be found to be in favor of such subscription, it shall be deemed and held that such town had taken stock in said company according to the proposals made, held, that the statute makes such a majority vote equivalent to, and a substitute for, a subscription by the town upon the books of the company. Town of East Lincoln v. Davenport, 94 U. S., 801. 1876.

75. — estoppel. A town and its taxpayers will be estopped by silence from questioning an election on the ground that it should have been by ballot, where no objection was made until after the work had been partly performed in consideration of the transfer of the bonds. New Haven, Middletown and Willimantic R. R. Co. v. Town of Chatham, 42 Conn., 465, 1875; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 168.

76. — It appeared that when the vote was taken the treasurer and managing director of the company was present, and saw how it was done, but that he was not acting officially, and that his knowledge was not conveyed to any of the other directors of the company. Held, that the company was not affected by his knowledge. Ib.

77. — Where an election to determine whether or not a township will subscribe to the stock of a railroad company was illegal and void, because not held and conducted by the proper officers, and the supervisor, after such election, made the subscription, it was urged that after such subscription, and the building of the road, the town was estopped from denying the validity of the same; held, that the town was not so estopped.

People v. Town of Santa Anna, 67 Ill., 57. 1873.

78. — Held contra where expenditures had been incurred on the faith of the subscription. B., C. R. and M. R. R. Co. v. Stewart, 39 Ia., 267, 1874; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 89; Lamb v. B., C. R. and M. R. R. Co., 39 Ia., 333, 1874.

79. — notice; ballots. Notice of the election which specifies the name of the company, and that the aid voted is to be expended by said company in "the construction of its road within Waterloo and Cedar Falls townships, on the west side of the Cedar river above Black Hawk creek in said county," is sufficiently specific as to the line of the road. West v. Whitaker, 37 Ia., 598. 1873.

80. — The notice also specified that "those in favor of aiding in the construction of said railroad will have written or printed on their ballots 'taxation,' and those opposed thereto 'no taxation.'" Held, that ballots having on them the word "taxation" were properly counted and returned as "for taxation." Ib.

81. Fraud. Assurances by the officers of a railway company, in writing, that if a vote by a town is in favor of subscription to its capital stock, the bonds will not be called for until satisfactory assurance is given of the completion of the road, cannot be regarded as a fraud operating to induce an affirmative vote. And when such a vote is had, if the supervisor enters into a further agreement to issue but half of the bonds voted, on satisfactory assurances, this will not release a new town, formed out of part of the original town, from the payment of its just proportion. Hensley Township v. The People, 84 Ill., 544. 1877.

82. — estoppel. The fact that the work on a railway had been performed and money expended without objection from the taxpayers would not estop them from subsequently denying the validity of a tax voted to aid in its construction, upon discovering that the vote had been procured by fraudulent representations. Sinnett v. Moles, 38 Ia., 25. 1873.

83. — Defective subscriptions may be validated by legalizing acts. Rogers v. Rochester, Hornellsville and Pine Creek R. R. Co., 21 Hun (N. Y.), 44, 1880; Rogers v. Roch- ester, etc., R. R. Co., 28 Hun (N. Y.), 44, 1880; Quincy v. Cooke, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 645; 107 U. S., 549, 1882.

84. — But the legislature is powerless, by subsequent enactment, to validate a void election of a town, under the township system, for such subscription. Williams v. Town of Roberts, 88 Ill., 11, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 268.

85. Mandamus. The assessors may by mandamus be compelled to examine the evidence and determine the facts which they are required to pass upon. Howland v. Eldredge, 43 N. Y., 457. 1871.

86. — Where a subscription is voted in favor of a railway company by a town, under a law which leaves no discretion in its officers but to make the subscription without unnecessary delay, a mandamus may be awarded to compel the issue and delivery of the bonds of the town, although no formal subscription has been made upon the books of the company. Illinois Midland R'y Co. v. Town of Barnett, 85 Ill., 813. 1877.

87. — There is no presumption that the law has been strictly complied with in proceedings of this character. Before the subscription can be enforced by mandamus it must appear that the law has been complied with in all respects. Springfield and Illinois Southeastern R'y Co. v. Cold Spring Tp, 72 Ill., 608. 1874.

88. — Where corporate authorities, when called upon to make a subscription and deliver bonds in pursuance to a vote, refuse to issue the same, no tender of certificate of stock is necessary before applying for a mandamus to compel their issue and delivery. A readiness to deliver such certificates is sufficient. Illinois Midland R'y Co. v. Town of Barnett, 85 Ill., 813. 1877.

89. Notice; time. Under Sp. Laws 1875, c. 183, notice of the time, place and object of a meeting to vote upon the question of issuing bonds to aid in the construction of a railway was required to be posted in three public places "at least ten days prior" to such meeting. Held, that notice posted on May 13th, of a meeting to be held on the 23d day of the same month, was sufficient. Coe v. Caledonia and Mississippi R'y Co., 27 Minn., 197, 1880; Hoyt v. Braden, ib., 490, 1881.

91. Petition and proceedings. The sufficiency of the petitions for municipal aid determined in various cases. Adams v. Mayor of City of Kokomo, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 585, 1883; City of Kokomo v. The State, 57 Ind., 152, 1877; Town of Wellsborough v. New York and Canadian R. R. Co., 78 N. Y., 182, 1879; Craig v. Town of Andes, 93 N. 93. — Commissioners' powers determined. Falconer v. Buffalo and Jamestown R. R. Co., 7 Hun (N. Y.), 499, 1876; Same v. Same, 69 N. Y., 491, 1877.

94. — The adjudication and judgment of the county judge, that a majority of the taxpayers of a town consented to the issue of such bonds, creates no absolute right in the railroad company thereto. Buffalo and Jamestown R. R. Co. v. Town of Collins, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 485. 1875.

were made out in seven different parts and circulated for signature, and, after the names had been attached, these different parts were fastened together and presented to the commissioners for their action, it was held that this was a substantial compliance with law. First National Bank of St. Johnsbury v. Town of Concord, 50 Vt., 257. 1877.

98. — Where certain tax payers withdrew their assent to the issuing of bonds before the bonds had been issued, but the commissioners disregarded the withdrawal, held, that the decision of the commissioners was final and the bonds were valid. First National Bank of North Bennington v. Town of Dorset, 16 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 62. 1879.

99. — Held, that the filing of the assent of tax-payers was not sufficient. Under the statute such assent must also be recorded. Essex County R. R. Co. v. Town of Lunenburg, 49 Vt., 143, 1876; Lamoille Valley R. R. Co. v. Town of Fairfield, 51 Vt., 257, 1878.

100. — A review of a judgment in a subscription to a railway company refused. Inhabitants of Brooks v. Belfast and Moosehead Lake R. R. Co., 72 Me., 365. 1881.

101. — Irregularities in proceedings held not to be fatal. Fielder v. Montgomery and Eufaula R. R. Co., 51 Ala., 178. 1874.

102. — The act to incorporate the Illinois Grand Trunk Railway, approved March 25, 1869, construed. Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 36. See, also, Wade v. Walnut, 105 U. S., 1. 1881.

103. — Bonds held not to be invalid because not issued until after the date when the assessment roll was by law required to be completed, the assent having been filed, and the subscription for the stock of the company made, the bonds executed and some of them sold, and the proceeds paid on account of the subscription before that date. Scipio v. Wright, 101 U. S., 665. 1879.

104. — Where a proceeding, instituted for the purpose of bonding a town, is adjudged to be illegal, after it has proceeded so far that certain bonds have been sold and their proceeds have been expended in the construction of a railway in good faith by the agent or trustee for the town, such agent or trustee should be allowed for the money expended. Town of Lyons v. Chamberlin, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 49. 1881.

105. — If a municipal corporation is authorized to subscribe a certain amount in aid of a railway company and but a part is subscribed, it seems the power is not exhausted, but other subscriptions may be made to the amount named; and if the attempt to exercise the power proves ineffectual, by the non-observance of some essential requirement, the power may still be exercised. People ex rel. v. Town of Waynesville, 88 Ill., 469, 1873; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 339.

106. — The fact that at the time a petition was presented, and thence until the commencement of the action for a mandate one of the members of the common council had been a stockholder, director and officer of the railway company, did not disqualify him to act upon the petition or the common council to pass an ordinance making the donation, and constitutes no defense to the action. City of Kokomo v. The State, 57 Ind., 152. 1877.

107. Signatures attached on Sunday. Where a town board of supervisors is authorized by law to issue bonds in aid of a railway only upon the presentation of a petition therefor signed by a certain number of tax-payers of the town, the procuring and affixing of such signatures on Sunday is "business," and is unlawful, and confers no authority upon the supervisors to issue such bonds. De Forth v. Wisconsin and Minnesota R. R. Co., 52 Wis., 820, 1831; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 28.

108. — The fact that plaintiff affixed his signature on Sunday will not prevent him from obtaining an injunction against the issue of the bonds. Ib.

109. Subscription to division of railway. Where the charter of a railroad company authorized certain municipalities to subscribe to the capital stock of the company, and a vote was taken to subscribe to a certain division of the road, held, that the vote was unauthorized, and the company could not compel the municipality thus voting to make the subscription to its capital stock. McWhorter v. The People ex rel., 65 Ill., 290. 1873.

Proceedings to Prevent the Issuance of Bonds.

110. — And where such company was authorized to receive such subscriptions on such terms and in such amounts as it might deem best in accordance with its by-laws, and the company, in its by-laws, divided the road into divisions, and a subscription was voted by a township to the first division of the road, held, that the charter of the company must govern, and as that only authorized the tax-payers to vote a subscription to the whole capital stock of the company, the vote was void, and conferred no right on the company to compel the subscription. Ib.

111. Subscription to two companies in the alternative. Where the only object of the electors of a town in granting aid to a railway company is to procure the construction of a railway from a certain point to such town, the question may be submitted to them in such a form as to provide that the aid shall be given to that one of two companies which shall first complete its road between such points. Lynch v. Eastern, Lafayette and Mississippi R'y Co., 57 Wis., 430. 1883.

III. PROCEEDINGS TO PREVENT THE ISSUANCE OF BONDS.

112. Injunction. A tax-payer of a town, on behalf of himself and other tax-payers therein, may maintain an action to enjoin the delivery of bonds of the town unlawfully issued by the town authorities in aid of a railway. Lynch v. Eastern, Lafayette and M. R'y Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Wis.), 652, 1883; Noesen v. Port Washington, 87 Wis., 168, 1875; Curtenius v. Grand Rapids and Indiana R. R. Co., 87 Mich., 588, 1877.

113. — Where a donation of bonds has been made pursuant to a petition, and a tax has been levied to pay the interest on the bonds, and also to create a sinking fund to pay the principal, the collection of such tax can only be enjoined by a tax-payer in a suit against such city and its treasurer, on grounds sufficient to constitute a valid legal defense to the payment of the bonds in the hands of the present holders. Wilkinson v. City of Peru, 61 Ind., 1. 1878.

114. — Where a statute provides two modes, one valid and the other invalid, for authorizing the officers of a municipal corporation to issue bonds of the corporation, inasmuch as the bonds when issued need recite only that they were issued under the statute, without specifying in which of the two modes the officers were authorized to issue them, and as there might be bona fide holders of bonds so issued, an action for injunction at the instance of a proper party will lie to restrain the issuance of the bonds by the municipal officers under the invalid mode provided by the statute. Harrington v. Town of Plainview, 27 Minn., 224. 1880.

115. — A county court has no jurisdiction of a contest of an election held within a city of the county on the question of voting aid to a work of internal improvement. Foxworthy v. Lincoln and Fremont R'y Co., 13 Neb., 398. 1882.

116. Right of one tax-payer to sue for all. To authorize a plaintiff to sue in behalf of others not named, they must have a common or general interest with him in the result sought to be accomplished by the proceeding. Persons severally charged with a tax have no such common or general interest in resisting its collection as will authorize one to sue for all. Fleming v. Mershon, 38 Ia., 418. 1873. Contra, Lynch v. Eastern, Lafayette and Mississippi R'y Co., 57 Wis., 430. 1883.

117. Void proceedings; cancellation of bonds. Where the bonds of a town have been issued to a railway company, in payment for stock, by commissioners appointed under a judgment, void for want of jurisdiction, rendered in proceedings under the act authorizing "municipal corporations to aid in the construction of railroads" (ch. 907. Laws of 1869), an equitable action is maintainable, under the act of 1872, for the protection of tax-payers, etc. (ch. 161, Laws of 1872), at the suit of a tax-payer of the town, to restrain the negotiation or payment of the bonds, and to compel their cancellation. Metzger v. Attica and Arcade R. R. Co., 79 N. Y., 171. 1879.

118. Value of stock immaterial. In the absence of fraud it is no defense to an action to recover upon a valid subscription to the stock of a corporation that the stock subscribed for is valueless. Lynch v. Eastern, Lafayette and Mississippi R'y Co., 57 Wis., 480. 1883.

IV. CONDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

119. Amount of stock not specified in charter. Where the charter of a company does not provide that it shall have no power to act as a corporation until a certain amount of stock is subscribed for, a subscription which is not made dependent upon any such condition may be enforced, although the whole amount of stock authorized to be issued has not been subscribed for. Lynch v. Eastern, Lafayette and Mississippi R'y Co., 57 Wis., 480. 1883.

120. Amount of work required. A proviso in a statute, that the corporate bonds shall not be delivered until an amount of work shall have been done on the railroad in the town equal in value to the amount of the bonds, will be construed, not as referring to earth-work alone, but the word "work" will embrace all that enters into the construction of the road-bed complete for the cars. Illinois Midland R'y Co. v. Town of Barnett, 85 Ill., 313. 1877.

121. — Where a city has power to subscribe to the stock of a railroad company, and to issue bonds in payment of the subscription, the proceeds of such bonds in all cases to be expended within the limits of the county in which such city is situate, held, that, as between the city and the railroad company, or its assignee with notice, such bonds cannot be enforced where no part of the proceeds of the subscription has been expended in the county, and no part of the railroad subscribed to has been constructed therein. Foote v. Mount Pleasant, 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 101. 1878.

122. Assignment. Conditional subscriptions may be assigned before compliance with the conditions. State ex rel. v. Hastings, 24 Minn., 78. 1877. And the conditions may be performed by the assignee. Lynch v. Eastern, Lafayette and Mississippi R'y Co., 57 Wis., 480. 1883.

123. Construction. The language in a condition upon which a subscription is voted by the legal voters of a township is to be construed according to its ordinary and popular meaning—in other words, as it would be understood by the voters. People ex rel. v. Town of Clayton, 88 Ill., 45, 1878; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 281.

124. — Where a township voted a subscription with a condition that it was not to be paid until the company should run its first engine "over the projected line of road, and from Pekin, Ill., or from Morris, Ill., through Clayton township," it was held that the condition contemplated a substantial completion of the line for the movement of trains from either Pekin or Morris to and through the township, and that it was not intended that any of the subscription should be used in constructing any part of the road through such township, or between it and Pekin or Morris. Ib.

125. — Where a town, at an election for that purpose, accepts a written proposition for aid, made to it by a railway company, pursuant to ch. 183 of 1872, the terms and construction of the proposition cannot be modified by representations of the company made to the voters between the proposition and the election. Town of Platteville v. Galena and Southern Wisconsin R. R. Co., 43 Wis., 493. 1878.

126. — An action cannot be maintained upon a subscription made upon two conditions, one of which is a condition subsequent that has been performed, and the other a condition precedent that has not been performed. Bucksport and Bangor R. R. Co. v. Inhabitants of Brewer, 67 Me., 295, 1877; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 344.

127. Contract to repurchase stock from city. Where a railway company executed a contract to a town which had subscribed and issued $10,000 of its bonds to aid in the construction of the road, which bonds the company had sold, and after reciting the above facts the agreement further recited that the company had entered into a contract for the construction of the road from a given point to another the following year, and then provided that if, from any cause, the company should fail to construct its road, it would pay to the town the money realized on its bonds and the accrued interest, upon tender, by the town, of the stock issued to it, held, that the company was bound to construct the road the following year, or refund the money with interest. Chicago, Pekin and Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Town of Marseilles, 84 Ill., 145; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 442, 1876; Same v. Same, 84 Ill., 643, 1877.

128. — A railway company may, for legitimate purposes, purchase shares of stock which it has issued to inhabitants of municipal corporations, and such sale is a sufficient consideration to support an agreement to pay money. Ib.

129. Damages. The city of Fort Scott subscribed $75,000 of stock in the Missouri, Kansas and Texas R'y Co., and issued $75,000 of its bonds in payment therefor. It also, by virtue of the said contract, issued to the said company $25,000 of its bonds for the purchase of the right of way through the city and grounds for machine-shops, engine-houses, etc. The subscription was made upon condition that the company should construct, within six months, a railroad from Sedalia, Missouri, through Fort Scott, to connect with the line running from Junction City in a southeasterly direction; that it should make the great through line to the Indian Territory and Texas, and construct no other line of road south of Fort Scott in the same direction, and that it should make Fort Scott the end of a division, and erect engine-houses and machine-shops at or near said place before doing so at any other point southwest of Sedalia on the through line of its road. The company complied with this contract, except that it did not make Fort Scott the end of a division, and did not erect the engine-house and machine-shop there, but did so erect them at Parsons. In an action by the city against the company for damages for failing to comply with this part of its contract, testimony was admitted for the purpose of proving the damage sustained, over the objection of the company, tending to show a decline in the population of Fort Scott, and a depreciation generally in the value of real estate through the city during a period commencing subsequently to the construction of the road, yet prior to the building of the shops and engine-houses at Parsons, and ending after the fact of such building had become known at Fort Scott. Held, that such testimony was improperly admitted, and that such matters did not enter into or form a part of the proper measure of damages. Missouri, Kansas and Texas R'y Co. v. City of Fort Scott, 15 Kans., 435, 1875.

130. Failure to complete railway. The failure to complete a railway as provided in the agreement will be sufficient ground to restrain the issuance of the bonds of a city to a railway company. Hodgman v. Chicago and St. Paul R'y Co., 20 Minn., 48, 1873.

131. — An agreement under which a tax was voted to aid in the construction of a railroad stipulated that it should be built and in operation on or before a certain day. Held, that if the road was in a condition to be operated at that time, although not completed, this was a sufficient compliance with the contract. Muscatine Western R. R. Co. v. Horton, 38 Ia., 33, 1873; Brokaw v. Commissioners of Gibson County, 73 Ind., 543, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 573. See, also, as to sufficiency of river crossing, Hodgman v. St. Paul and Chicago R'y Co., 23 Minn., 153, 1876.

132. — Time-essence condition construed, and held, that the railway company had failed to comply therewith. Memphis, Kansas and Colorado R'y Co. v. Thompson, 24 Kans., 170, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 331.

133. — The company claimed that its failure to have its road completed, according to the contract specifications, on or before the 1st of July, was owing to an unusual amount of wet weather in May and June, and an extraordinary rain-fall in the latter month, which raised the river Neosho so as to overflow its banks and carry away a large amount of ties, timber and other material. Held, that, as the parties to this contract have made time of its essence, and as the company has placed all of its materials and labor upon its own grounds, and none upon those of the city, and has parted with nothing which the city has received, the facts stated do not waive the condition precedent, or authorize the courts to set aside the contract which the parties made and substitute another, which, perhaps, they might never have been willing to make. Ib.

134. Location of depot. Where the inhabitants of a township vote for subscription to a railroad on condition that the road shall be constructed and its depot built within a mile of a certain town, it is no excuse for non-compliance by the company with that condition that the non-performance was "at the request and desire" of the inhabitants of the town. State ex rel. v. County Court of Daviess County, 64 Mo., 80. 1876.

135. — In a contract between a railroad company and a township, which stipulated "that said company will not, and shall not, be entitled to draw out of the hands of the treasurer any money collected out of said tax, until said company shall have erected a depot within one mile of the village of New Hampton, in New Hampton township" the words "in New Hampton township," were merely descriptive. It was a compliance with the contract if the depot were erected within one mile of New Hampton village. McGregor and Sioux City R'y Co. v. Foley, 83 Ia., 583. 1874.

136. — Sp. Laws 1875, c. 132, authorized certain villages and towns in certain counties "to issue bonds . . . to aid in the construction of any railway running into, or proposed to be built through, either of the counties aforesaid." Held, that inasmuch as this act does not prohibit it, it is competent for the legal voters of such villages to impose such conditions upon an issue of such bonds voted by them under the act as they may deem best, provided such conditions are not in violation of any express provision of statute, or not prohibited by any general rule of public policy. Held, that it is proper for such villages to impose, as one of such conditions, a condition as to the place where the depot of the railway proposed to be aided shall be located. Coe v. Caledonia and Mississippi R'y Co., 27 Minn., 197. 1880. See Hoyt v. Braden, ib., 490. 1881.

137. Purchase of railway. If a subsidy in bonds is granted by a city to a railroad company to aid in the construction of a railroad from the city in the direction of another city, the bonds to be delivered when a certain number of miles of railroad are constructed, the company does not forfeit its right to the subsidy by the fact that it purchases and adopts as a part of its line a section of a railroad already constructed on a portion of the route on which the proposed railroad was to be built. Stockton and Visalia R. R. Co. v. City of Stockton, 51 Cal., 328, 1876; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 85.

138. Route. Where the conditions upon which a town was authorized to subscribe for a railroad were that such road should be built through the township within one-half mile of the court-house, and should terminate at or near the city of V., the building of a road across one corner of such township and terminating at a small village nine miles from V. is not a substantial compliance with the conditions of the vote for subscription, and bonds issued in pursuance of such vote are invalid, and no tax can be collected to pay interest thereon, though they may be in the hands of innocent holders. Parker v. Smith, 3 Bradwell (Ill.), 356. 1879.

139. — A subscription to the capital stock of a railroad corporation by a municipal township, in accordance with the terms and conditions of ch. 90, Laws of 1870, is not void because it is conditional upon the completion of the railroad through such township, and through and adjoining a large and growing village in the township, and the erection of a depot at or near such village, where it apparently is manifest that the condition is in furtherance of the interests of the corporation, and for the benefit and accommodation of the public in the matter of transportation and travel. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Jefferson Co., 21 Kans., 309. 1878.

140. — Under a statute of Michigan of March 22, 1869, authorizing cities to pledge their aid, "by loan or donation, with or without conditions," in the construction of any railroad by a company organized under the laws of the state, the electors of a city voted to issue its bonds to aid such a company upon certain conditions, touching the eastern terminus of the road, and providing that if any citizen should subscribe and pay for stock in the company the latter should deliver him such bonds therefor, and that the citizens should, within thirty days, have the right to subscribe for the stock to the amount of aid voted. The bonds were delivered to the company. Held, that the conditions were not unauthorized by the statute, and constitute no defense to an action on the bonds. Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S., 60.

Bonds.

1881. See Township of Pine Grove v. Talcott, 19 Wallace, 666. 1878.

141. — The petition of tax-payers required must be absolute in form; no power is given to them to make their request conditional upon the location of the railway upon a particular route, and a request coupled with such a condition is absolutely void. Craig v. Town of Andes, 98 N. Y., 405, 1888. Contra, under Stat. of 1871. Falconer v. Buffalo and Jamestown R. R. Co., 69 N. Y., 491, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 46.

142. — Where the subscription is upon condition that the railroad "be located through the town of Brewer satisfactory to the selectmen of said town," such location is upon a condition precedent, and must be complied with before a recovery can be had against the town for the sum subscribed. Bucksport and Bangor R. R. Co. v. Inhabitants of Brewer, 67 Me., 295, 1877; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 844.

143. — In accordance with the petition of the tax-payers of a town in New York, dated March 25, 1872, the county judge appointed commissioners, who were empowered and directed to subscribe for stock in a railroad company when its road should be constructed through a certain village. The road was not so constructed until October 20, 1875. Held, that as by the terms of the petition and the proceeding of the judge thereon, the construction of the road was a condition precedent to the exercise by the commissioners of their power to make the subscription, they being merely agents of the town, had no authority to act in the premises until that condition was performed. Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 108 U. S., 821, 1890; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 593.

144. — The construction of a railway to a point about a mile from a city, where it intersected another road, and the making of running arrangements over the latter road, is a substantial compliance with a contract to build to such city. People ex rel. v. Holden, 82 Ill., 93. 1876.

145. Sale of railway. The sale of the road, before its completion, by the corporation in whose favor the tax was voted, with the reservation that the vendor shall complete the road-bed and collect the tax, will not defeat its right to the tax after the road is completed. Muscantine Western R. R. Co. v. Horton, 88 Ia., 33. 1873.

V. BONDS.

146. Bona fide holder. Where a municipal corporation has the power to issue its negotiable bonds in aid of a railway, a bona fide holder may recover upon them, although the conditions upon which they were issued were not complied with. Miller v. Town of Berlin, 18 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 245, 1876; Town of East Lincoln v. Davenport, 94 U. S., 801, 1876; First National Bank of St. Johnsbury v. Town of Concord, 50 Vt. 257, 1877; Town of Douglas v. Niantic Savings Bank, 97 Ill., 228, 1881; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 54; Brooklyn v. Insurance Co., 99 U. S., 362, 1878; American Life Insurance Co. v. Town of Bruce, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 610; 105 U. S., 328, 1881.

147. — Whoever deals in municipal bonds is chargeable with knowledge whether the precedent conditions to the existence of the power of making the subscription and issuing the bonds have been complied with. Williams v. Town of Roberts, 88 Ill., 11, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 268.

148. — Bonds, issued apparently without authority, are not validated by passing into the hands of a bona fide purchaser. Smith v. Town of Ontario, 15 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 267, 1868; Barnes v. Town of Lacon, 84 Ill., 461, 1877; Force v. Town of Batavia, 61 Ill., 99, 1871; Sykes v. Mayor of Columbus, 55 Miss., 115, 1877; Wilson v. Town of Canadea, 15 Hun (N. Y.), 218, 1878; Williamson v. City of Keokuk, 44 Ia., 88, 1876; Township of East Oakland v. Skinner, 94 U. S., 255, 1876; Town of South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S., 260, 1876; Welch v. Post, 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ill.), 158, 1881.

149. — A purchaser is not bound to look beyond the official action of those to whom the law has confided the authority to ascertain and determine whether the requirements of the law, necessary to the loan, have been satisfied in the vote taken. Vicksburg v. Lombard, 51 Miss., 111. 1875.

150. — Negotiable city bonds stand on the same footing as bills of exchange. City of Mt. Vernon v. Hovey, 52 Ind., 563, 1874.

Bonds.

Porter v. Janesville, 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 64, 1880; Vicksburg v. Lombard, 51 Miss., 111, 1875.

151. — By the statute of Illinois, municipal bonds payable to bearer are transferable by delivery, and the holder thereof can sue thereon in his own name. Roberts v. Bolles, 101 U. S., 119, 1879. See Williams v. Roberts, 88 Ill., 11, 1878.

152. — Independently of that act, the bonds are not, in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, rendered invalid by reason of the departure from the statutory provisions touching the application for and the notice of the election. Id.

153. — A person who succeeds to the title of a bona fide holder is entitled to stand upon such title, although not a bona fide holder himself. Foote v. Town of Hancock, 15 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 843, 1878. See, also, New Buffalo v. Iron Co., 105 U. S., 78, 1881.

154. — The delivery of bonds to a contractor, in payment for work on the railroad, constitutes him a holder for value, although he took them upon an antecedent debt, if he took them in good faith. Foote v. Town of Hancock, 15 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 843, 1878.

155. — Where bonds are fraudulently issued, the burden is upon the holder to show that he acquired them for value and in good faith. Bailey v. Town of Lansing, 13 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 424, 1876; Phelps v. Town of Lewiston, 15 ib., 131, 1878; Phelps v. Town of Yates, 16 ib., 192, 1879; Whiting v. Town of Potter, 18 ib., 165, 1880; Irwin v. Town of Ontario, 18 ib., 259, 1880.

156. — The holder of bonds is presumed to have acquired them in good faith and for value. But if, in a suit upon them, the defense be such as to require him to show that the value was paid, it is not, in every case, essential to prove that he paid it; for his title will be sustained if any previous holder gave value. Montclair v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S., 147, 1882.

157. — If municipal bonds are issued without authority of law, and are therefore void, the subsequent levy of taxes and payment of interest thereon will not render them valid, even in the hands of innocent purchasers; but it is otherwise if the bonds are voidable only for irregularity in the election of their issue. Lippincott v. Town of Pana, 92 Ill., 24, 1879.

158. Conditions. In voting town bonds under Sp. Laws 1875, c. 182, in aid of a railroad, it is competent for the town to stipulate, as a condition precedent to issuing the bonds, that the same shall be made payable at a place designated, and on or before the expiration of twenty years, at the option of the town. Such a condition is not repugnant to a clause in the statute providing that the bonds "shall be payable in no less than ten nor more than twenty years." Hoyt v. Braden, 27 Minn., 490, 1881. See Coe v. Caledonia and Mississippi R. R. Co., ib., 197, 1880.

159. — Where a bond contains two conditions, one authorized by law and good, and the other unauthorized and bad, and the conditions are in their nature severable, the latter may be rejected and the other held good and the bond sustained. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. City of Aurora, 99 Ill., 205, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 191.

160. Consolidation of railways. Bonds voted in aid of one company, which, under the law then in force, was subsequently consolidated with another company, may be delivered to the consolidated company. New Buffalo v. Iron Co., 105 U. S., 78, 1881; Menasha v. Hazard, 102 U. S., 81, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 571. See, also, City of Mt. Vernon v. Hovey, 52 Ind., 568, 1876.

161. Constitutional law. The supreme court of the United States has held that bonds issued while a decision of the supreme court of Iowa holding in favor of the power of the corporation to issue the same remained in force, it will be upheld as valid, notwithstanding a later decision the other way; but as to bonds issued after the promulgation of the latter decision, the supreme court of the United States will accept and follow the decision of the supreme court of the state. Foote v. Mount Pleasant, 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 101, 1878.

162. — Where, in pursuance of legislative enactment, municipal bonds have been issued and transferred to purchasers for value, prior to the decision in People v. Bachellor,

Bonds.

53 N. Y., 128, they are protected by the earlier decisions, and, as far as their validity depends upon the constitutional power of the legislature, will be sustained. Williams v. Town of Duaneburgh, 66 N. Y., 129. 1876.

163. — The legislature may change the remedy without impairing the contract itself. Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S., 203. 1880.

164. Coupons. Overdue coupons detached from a municipal bond which has not matured are negotiable by the law merchant. Thompson v. Ferrine, 106 U. S., 589. 1882.

165. — Coupons bear interest from their maturity, and when severed from the bonds are negotiable, and pass by delivery. Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S., 693, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 96.

166. — Coupon bonds of a town in New York were by commissioners executed to a railroad company pursuant to an order of a county judge, which was annulled and reversed by the judgment of the supreme court in a proceeding whereof, before they were issued, the commissioners and the company had due notice. Held, 1. That, as between the company and the town, the bonds are invalid. 2. That, in an action on coupons detached therefrom, the plaintiff must, to make out his right to recover against the town, establish his bona fide ownership of them. 3. That upon the question of such ownership a judgment in his favor upon other coupons detached from the same bonds does not estop the town. Stewart v. Lansing, 104 U. S., 503, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 225.

167. — Coupons, after their maturity, bear interest at the rate prescribed by the law of the place where they are payable. Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S., 529. 1882. See, also, Fountleroy v. City of Hannibal, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 219. 1879.

168. — Assumpsit held to be the proper form of action upon coupons not under seal, the bonds being under seal. First National Bank of North Bennington v. Town of Bennington, 16 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 53. 1879.

169. Decree against non-resident holder. A decree in personam, rendered by an Illinois court declaring bonds to be void, does not bind a non-resident holder of them who was not named as a party to the suit and did not appear therein, and who had no notice of the pendency thereof other than by a publication addressed to the "unknown holders and owners of bonds and coupons issued by the town of Pana." Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S., 529, 1882; Town of Virden v. Needles, 93 Ill., 866, 1881.

170. Delivery. Where a town has ample authority for issuing its bonds to a railroad company, and the bonds are executed in proper form and made payable to the proper company, but are delivered to the secretary of a new company, and there is nothing pertaining to them, or which could have been ascertained from the record, indicating their delivery to one not entitled to receive them, the bonds cannot be held invalid by reason of such alleged improper delivery after they have passed into the hands of innocent holders. Town of Prairie v. Lloyd, 97 Ill., 179, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 58.

171. Discretion of officers. Ch. 93 of 1867 did not confer upon the town officers any discretion as to the issuing the bonds after a submission by them of the relator's proposition to a vote of the electors and an acceptance thereof by such vote. State ex rel. v. Jennings, 48 Wis., 549. 1879.

172. Estoppel. The town, having retained the stock, is estopped from making the objection that its bonds and coupons are not made payable at the times directed by the statute. Munson v. Town of Lyons, 12 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 539, 1875; First National Bank of Oswego v. Town of Wolcott, 19 ib., 870, 1881.

173. — Where a municipality had issued its bonds, under the statute, and invested them in railroad stock, which it retained, and had for a long time paid interest on such bonds, held, that it was estopped, as against a bona fide holder for value of interest coupons thereon, from questioning the validity of such bonds or coupons, but its conduct was a direct ratification of the acts of those who had issued them. Whiting v. Town of Potter, 2 Federal Reporter, 517. 1880.

174. Evidence. Parol testimony held admissible to explain the vote of a town. Douglas v. Town of Chatham, 41 Conn., 211. 1874.

175. Exchange of stock for bonds. Under authority to issue corporate bonds and apply their proceeds as subscription to railroad stock, the railroad company may itself take the bonds at par in exchange for stock. Decker v. Hughes, 68 Ill., 83. 1873.

176. Guaranty by railway company. The Cleveland and Pittsburgh R. R. Co. had full power to execute a contract guarantying the punctual payment of the coupons attached to the bonds of Allegheny county, which were given by the county in payment of her subscription to the capital stock of the railroad company. Evans v. Cleveland and Pittsburgh R. R. Co., 2 Pittsburgh, 483. 1864.

177. Injunction. An action having been brought for a specific performance of a contract of a town to issue bonds in payment of its subscription to the stock of a railway company, the court held the subscription not binding. Defendants are therefore entitled to positive relief by injunction restraining all persons claiming under the company or the plaintiff from asserting any claim against the town by reason of such stock subscription. Perkins v. Port Washington, 37 Wis., 177. 1875.

178. Legalizing act. Bonds irregularly issued may be legalized by the legislature. Horton v. Town of Thompson, 7 Hun (N. Y.), 452, 1875; Rogers v. Smith, 5 ib., 475, 1876. See, also, Cooper v. Town of Thompson, 13 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 434. 1876.

179. — The above case followed, notwithstanding the subsequent decision of the state court of appeals in Horton v. Town of Thompson, 71 N. Y., 513, in which the legalizing act was held unconstitutional. Perrine v. Town of Thompson, 17 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 18. 1879.

180. — Bonds issued ultra vires are not legalized by ch. 258, Acts of 1857, which seeks simply to cure the effects of irregular submission of the question of their issuance to the vote of the people. Williamson v. City of Keokuk, 44 Ia., 88. 1876.

181. Mandamus. Where the statute has been pursued in all its requirements, the election properly called, a proper notice thereof given, and an election held resulting in favor of a subscription by a township by a majority of the voters, as required by the statute governing in such case, and the railroad company has complied with all the conditions imposed, the company will be entitled to the bonds so voted, and their issue will be enforced by mandamus. People v. Town of Harp, 67 Ill., 62. 1873. The remedy is by mandamus and not in chancery. Chicago, Danville and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Town of St. Anne, 101 Ill., 151. 1881.

182. — Where the mandamus to compel the issue of town bonds in exchange for its stock was not asked for until nearly six years after the relator's right accrued, held, that, in exercising the discretion of the court in reference to the writ, the delay would not be treated as laches, in the absence of any evidence that the town was injured thereby, especially as the contract was mutual, and it had been at all times, since the relator's railway was built, in the power of the town to enforce an exchange of its bonds for stock of the company. State ex rel. v. Jennings, 48 Wis., 549. 1879.

183. — The pleadings must be governed by the same rules which prevail in other civil actions. State ex rel. v. Jennings, 56 Wis., 113. 1882.

184. Mistake; reformation. A town bond was issued payable in twenty years, when, by the terms of the statute, it should have been thirty years. The reformation of the bond was refused, the evidence of mistake being insufficient, and the holder remanded to his remedy at law. Potter v. Town of Greenwich, 92 N. Y., 662. 1883.

185. Mortgage to city; renewal. The city of Portland issued its bonds for a large amount in aid of the defendant, payable at a future time; the company giving mortgages and bonds to the city, conditioned "that the company would pay the interest and principal of all said bonds as the same should become payable and mature, and would save and hold the city harmless from the issue of the same." The company being unable to meet its engagements, the city, at the instance of and with the co-operation of the company, obtained liberty from the legislature to issue new bonds for the balance due in renewal, payable at a specified time in the future, and the bonds and mortgages (securities) were extended; the priority of security and the lien of the city to be in no way impaired. Held, the securities given by the company apply to and are available for the protection of the city for the new bonds issued by it in renewal of unpaid balances. City of Portland v. St. Lawrence R. R. Co., 74 Me., 241. 1882.

186. National banks may purchase coupons. A national bank may purchase and hold coupons of bonds issued by towns in aid of railway companies. First National Bank of North Bennington v. Town of Bennington, 16 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 53, 1879; Town of Lyons v. Lyons National Bank, 19 ib., 279, 1881.

187. Negotiability. The bonds issued by the city of Troy in aid of the Mobile and Girard Railroad, under the authority of the special statute approved December 8, 1868, (Sess. Acts 1868, pp. 395-6), are not negotiable paper, because on their face they are made payable on a contingency which might never happen — that is, the completion of the railroad to Troy; and also because they are payable to bearer only. Not being negotiable, the title to such bonds cannot pass by delivery, nor, as against the real owner, otherwise than by his indorsement or assignment. Blackman v. Lehman, 68 Ala., 547. 1879.

188. — Where an act authorizing the issue of municipal bonds provides that they "shall be transferable only on the books of the city," a holder of the coupons for interest cannot recover thereon unless the bonds have been transferred to him as provided by the act. Oelrich v. Pittsburgh, 1 Pittsburgh (U. S. C. C.), 522. 1859.

189. Notice by pendency of suit. Where a suit was brought by the town in the county court against the company and others, and a decree rendered that the bonds and coupons were null and void and should be surrendered for cancellation, held, that the decree bound the parties who were personally served with process or who appeared, and did not affect the other holders of the securities who had only constructive notice of the suit. Brooklyn v. Insurance Co., 99 U. S., 362, 1878; Empire v. Darlington, 101 ib., 87, 1879; Roberts v. Bolles, 101 ib., 119, 1879.

190. Proceedings to compel issue of bonds. Under an authority to a town to vote a donation in aid of a railroad company, and to levy and collect taxes to pay the same, or to vote such aid and to borrow money to pay the same, and to issue interest-bearing bonds to pay such loans, the company cannot be compelled to take bonds of the town in payment, nor can it compel the town authorities to issue bonds to it. The company, in such case, has only a claim for money, and has no right to say how the money shall be raised. Chicago, Danville and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Town of St. Anne, 101 Ill., 151. 1881.

191. Ratification. An issue of bonds by a municipal corporation, without authority of law, cannot be ratified by its officers without the sanction of the legislature. Lewis v. Shreveport, 3 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 205. 1878.

192. Recital in bonds; bona fide holder. Recitals in municipal bonds issued to aid in the construction of a railroad, stating the compliance with all the conditions precedent prescribed by law, are conclusive evidence in favor of a purchaser of such bonds without other information than that which appears on their face that such conditions precedent have been complied with. Marshall v. Town of Elgin, 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 35, 1881; Coloma, Town of, v. Eaves, 92 U. S., 484, 1875; Venice, Town of, v. Murdock, ib., 494, 1875; Marcy v. Township of Oswego, ib., 637, 1875; San Antonio v. Mehaffy, 96 U. S., 312, 1877; Leavenworth County v. Barnes, 94 U. S., 70, 1876; Comm'rs of Douglas County v. Bolles, 94 U. S., 104, 1876; Comm'rs of Johnson County v. January, ib., 202, 1876; Menasha v. Hazard, 103 U. S., 81, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 571; Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S., 683, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 36; Lane v. Inhabitants of Town of Embden, 72 Me., 354, 1881; Williams v. Town of Roberts, 88 Ill., 11, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 268; Milner v. Pensacola, 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 632, 1875. Contra, Cagwin v. Town of Hancock, 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 150; 84 N. Y., 532, 1881; reversing Same v. Same, 22 Hun (N. Y.), 201, 1880.

193. — Where a municipal bond contains a recital that it is issued in payment of a subscription made in pursuance of a vote of the people at an election therein specified, and there was no law authorizing such election and subscription, the holder has notice, by such recital, of the illegality of such subscription. Barnes v. Town of Lacon, 84 Ill., 461, 1877; Woodruff v. Okolona, 57 Miss., 806, 1880; Lippencott v. Town of Pana, 93 Ill., 24, 1879; Craig v. Town of Andes, 93 N. Y., 405, 1883.

194. Recitals in ordinance. A city ordinance, authorizing a subscription to stock of a road company and issue of bonds to pay same, recited that the authority prescribed by the law as a prerequisite of such subscription had been given by an election held for the purpose. In a suit upon such bonds, held, that the city was estopped by such recital to show that the voters at such election were not duly sworn, and the election therefore void. Principle of estoppel by recitals in bonds applies to recitals in an ordinance authorizing the issue of bonds. Gause v. City of Clarksville, 1 Federal Reporter, 353. 1880.

195. Registry. Before railroad aid bonds can be properly registered under the act of April 16, 1869, it must appear that they were issued in pursuance of a vote of a majority of the legal voters in the municipality issuing them. But when once registered, it will be presumed they were rightfully registered, and the burden of establishing the contrary rests upon the party affirming it. Town of Prairie v. Lloyd, 97 Ill., 179, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 58.

196. Seal. A town in New York subscribed for stock in a railroad company, and the commissioners, authorized to execute bonds in payment therefor, issued unsealed obligations, whereon a bona fide holder for value brought suit. Held, that the absence of a seal on the paper did not affect his right to recover. Draper v. Springport, 104 U. S., 501, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 205.

197. Signature. It is not necessary that the coupons should be signed by all the officers who signed the bonds. The signature of some one of the officers, identifying them as a part of the bonds, is sufficient. First National Bank of St. Johnsbury v. Town of Concord, 50 Vt., 257. 1877. See, also, Town of Weyauwega v. Ayling, 99 U. S., 112, 1878. See Anthony v. County of Jasper, 101 ib., 693, 1879; Bank of Statesville v. Town of Statesville, 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (N. C.), 178, 1881; Luckawana Iron and Coal Co. v. Town of Little Wolf, 38 Wis., 152. 1875.

198. — A statute provided that certain town bonds were to be signed by the chairman of the board of supervisors, and countersigned by the town clerk. Held, where such bonds appeared to have been issued in strict conformity with the requirements of the statute, that the presumption would be that they were issued under the authority of the board of supervisors. Burleigh v. Town of Rochester, 5 Federal Reporter, 687. 1881.

199. Taxes collected; validity disputed. Railroad commissioners of a town, who have received from the collector of the town moneys raised by tax to pay interest coupons on bonds of the town, issued in payment of a railway subscription, cannot question the validity of the bonds, to justify them in refusing to pay over the moneys to the owners of the coupons. First National Bank v. Wheeler, 72 N. Y., 201. 1878.

200. Terms of bond. A bond authorized by statute must comply with the terms of the act. Town of Wheatland v. Taylor, 29 Hun (N. Y.), 70. 1883.

201. Time. A statute authorizing a subscription and issuance of bonds to run not exceeding ten years will not authorize the submission of a proposition whereby the bonds shall be payable in not less than twenty years. Cairo and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Sparta, 77 Ill., 505. 1875.

202. — Where the law authorizing corporate subscriptions in aid of a railroad is silent as to what the petition for and notice of the election shall contain as to the length of time the corporate bonds shall run before their maturity, and the election is called according to law, it will not be essential to the validity of the election that the petition, notice of election and vote of the people should fix the time when the bonds will mature. People v. Town of Harp, 67 Ill., 62. 1878.

VI. LOCATION OF RAILWAY.

203. Bonds. Bonds are not invalidated by reason of the fact that the railway has not been definitely located at the time of their issue. Smith v. Town of Yates, 15 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 89. 1878.

Taxation.

204. Change. A company authorized to construct a railway through Wisconsin from the Illinois line to intersect the M. and P. du C. R. R. west of Monroe, made a proposition to the plaintiff town, stating that it had surveyed and located a line through certain sections in that town to a point designated in the village of Platteville, and proposed to build the road "on the route indicated," from Galena to the Wisconsin river; and it asked aid of the town to build the road "on the route indicated." The town accepted the proposition and issued its bonds. Held, that while the proposition does not disclose a survey and location of the line northward beyond the point designated, yet it bound the company to build a continuous line of road from Galena, over the surveyed line described in the proposition, to the point designated, and from that point to the Wisconsin river. Town of Platteville v. Galena and Southern Wisconsin R. R. Co., 48 Wis., 498. 1878.

205. — A feeble company, of doubtful ability to construct any road between the terminal points of its charter, will be restrained, at the suit of a municipality which has subscribed for stock, and issued bonds, in aid of its proposed main line, from wasting its means in constructing branch roads so as to disable it to build its main line; and where a pretended branch is such that its completion will be a complete user of the company's original franchise, and will give it a continuous road between the termini originally named, but not passing through or near the plaintiff municipality as did the main line proposed, and there is no apparent design to continue the road on such main line, the construction of the pretended branch will be restrained as a "diversion" of the road from such municipality, within the meaning of § 23, ch. 119 of 1872. Ib.

206. — The M., M. and G. B. R. Co. was authorized by its charter to build a railway from Milwaukee northerly via the cities of Sheboygan and Manitowoc to Green Bay, with power to change and relocate its road "so as not materially to change the route," and to connect its line with any other road; and any company having a road built, or partly built, running in the direction of the line above described, was authorized to lease or sell any part of its road to said first mentioned company. After the defendant town had subscribed to the stock of said M., M. and G. B. Co., the latter, without the consent of the town, acquired the franchises of another company pertaining to a line of railway from Manitowoc to Appleton, about forty miles in length and running nearly at right angles with the line first above described; and this road the M., M. and G. B. Co. proposed to construct and operate. Held, that this was such a fundamental change in the character of the enterprise contemplated by that company as to release non-assenting subscribers from payment of their stock subscribed before the company had acquired, or was authorized by law to acquire, such additional line of road. Noesen v. Port Washington, 37 Wis., 168, 1875; Perkins v. Same, ib., 177, 1875.

207. Condition. Where the location of a railway is a condition precedent to the right to issue bonds in its aid, and the location is not made as required, the bonds are invalid even in the hands of a bona fide holder. Mellen v. Town of Lansing, 19 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 512. 1881.

208. Route. It is competent for a railway company, in submitting a proposition for aid, to define therein, as a part of the proposition, the line of the proposed road. Town of Platteville v. Galena and Southern Wisconsin R. R. Co., 48 Wis., 493. 1878.

VII. TAXATION.

209. Farming lands in city. Farming lands, situated within the limits of a city, are liable for a tax voted to aid in the construction of a railroad. Such a tax is not a municipal tax. Sears v. Iowa Midland R. R. Co., 39 Ia., 417. 1874.

210. Fraud. A railway tax that is procured to be voted upon representations that it will not be enforced, except as against non-resident property holders, will not be upheld. Truesdale v. Green, 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ia.), 369. 1881.

211. Leased line. The collection of taxes illegally assessed upon a railway belonging to one, and by it leased to another company, under an agreement that all taxes legally assessed on such property, and paid by the lessee, should be chargeable against the lessor, may be enjoined in an action by the lessor. Columbus, etc., R'y Co. v. Commissioners of Grant County, 65 Ind., 427. 1879.

212. Levy. The omission of certain taxable property from the assessment will not render the levy invalid as to the property that has been assessed. Goddard v. Stockman, 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 164. 1881. See, also, Winter v. City Council of Montgomery, 65 Ala., 408, 1880; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 307.

213. — Where the statute authorizing a county to subscribe for stock in a railroad company, and issue its bonds therefor, limits its power to provide for the payment of them to an annual special tax of one-twentieth of one per cent., and other laws then and still in force empowered it to levy a tax for general purposes not exceeding one-half of one per cent. upon the assessed value of the taxable property of the county, held, that in the absence of further legislation, a mandamus will not lie to compel the levy of taxes beyond the amount so authorized. A holder of such bonds who has recovered judgment for the amount thereof does not thereby obtain an increased right to a levy of taxes. United States v. County of Macon, 99 U. S., 582. 1878. See Ralls County Court v. United States, 105 ib., 783. 1881.

214. — The levy of a tax in aid of a railway company is not void because made in the shape of a percentage instead of a gross sum. Peed v. Millikan, 79 Ind., 86. 1881.

215. Limitation of rate. A provision in the charter of the village which forbids it to borrow money, and provides that it shall not incur any debt or liability in any year greater than the amount of the tax allowed by the charter to be raised in such year, was not intended to embrace the case of bonds that might thereafter be issued in exchange for stock and in aid of a railway under a prior enabling act. Long v. City of New London, 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 539. 1880.

216. — Where a proviso limits the authority of the town as to taxation, which limit is entirely inconsistent with a power previously given, the proviso controls. Tatum v. Town of Tamaroa, 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 475. 1880.

217. Organization of company; how determined. In a proceeding to enjoin the collection of a tax levied for the construction of a railway, it is not competent to inquire into questions pertaining to the organization of the company, they having been determined by the board of commissioners as jurisdictional matters. Brokaw v. Commissioners of Gibson County, 78 Ind., 548, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 578.

218. Power of collector to dispute assessment. A town collector, who has collected a tax imposed under the statute, cannot question the validity of the proceedings under which the bonds were issued, or dispute the right of the railroad commissioners to the amount so collected. He acts under and affirms the validity of the warrant by collecting the tax, and, having received the money, cannot refuse to pay it over. People ex rel. v. Brown, 55 N. Y., 180. 1873.

219. Subscription; bank stock. The Deposit Bank of Eminence, having its place of business in the town of Eminence, which had subscribed stock in the Cumberland and Ohio R. R. Co., and had issued bonds to pay for it under the charter of said company, authorizing the town to levy and collect a tax upon such taxable property in the town as is listed and taxed under the revenue laws of the state, is not liable, under such charter, to be taxed on the amount of its capital stock. The stock does not belong to the bank. Trustees of Eminence v. Deposit Bank of Eminence, 12 Bush (Ky.), 588. 1877.

220. — A municipal corporation being required by law to levy an annual tax to pay interest on certain designated bonds, and having levied and collected the tax for that purpose, has no right to divert the fund to other purposes, and, upon application by the holders of the bonds, will be enjoined from so doing. Ranger v. New Orleans, 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 128. 1875.

221. Interest. The raising by tax and payment to the commissioners appointed to pay interest on town bonds does not constitute a payment of such interest as between the town and the holders of the bonds. Federgreen v. Town of Fallsburgh, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 152. 1891.

Miscellaneous.

VIII. MISCELLANEOUS.

222. Action to compel accounting for stock. Under the act to extend the time for the completion of the Albany and Susquehanna R. R., etc. (§ 3, ch. 747, Laws of 1867), an action is properly brought by the supervisor of a town in his own name, as supervisor, against the railroad commissioners of a town, to require them to account for moneys received by them on sale of the stock of said railroad corporation belonging to the town; and it is not necessary for the continuance of the action that the successor of the original plaintiff be substituted. Griggs v. Griggs, 56 N. Y., 504. 1874.

223. Compromise. When the city of Troy had made a valid subscription of $50,000 to the Atchison and Nebraska Railroad Co., and had issued $25,000 of its bonds in payment of one-half the subscription, held, that it could make a valid contract whereby, in consideration of its stock in the company, and $6,000 in five annual payments, it was relieved of any liability for the remaining $25,000 of bonds. Troy v. Atchison and Nebraska R. R. Co., 11 Kans., 519. 1873.

224. — This is true whether it has issued its bonds for said $25,000 or not. Same v. Same, 13 Kans., 70. 1874.

225. Extinct corporation. The remedy of the creditors of an extinguished corporation is in equity against the corporation succeeding to its property and powers. Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S., 514. 1879.

226. Garnishment. A city having subscribed for stock in a railway company, and having designated where its subscription should be expended, such expenditure cannot be diverted by a general creditor by trustee process. Pike v. Bangor and Calais Shore Line R. R. Co., 68 Me., 445. 1878.

227. Limitations. Where a contract for the issuance of aid bonds did not limit the time within which the road should be completed, and no notice was given by the town that unless it was completed within a reasonable time the aid would not be furnished, the company does not lose its rights under the contract by lapse of time or by the statute of limitations. Lynch v. Eastern, Lafayette and Mississippi R'y Co., 57 Wis., 430. 1883.

228. — A town, on July 24, 1869, voted a subscription of $30,000 to a railroad, to be paid by the issue of its bonds, and the line of the road was permanently located through said town October 15, 1875, and the road constructed through the same on August 1, 1880, and on April 12, 1870, the town did subscribe to the stock of the company to the amount of $10,000, $6,000 of which was paid by the issue of the bonds of the town; and on November 1, 1871, the balance of the bonds voted were deposited with a trustee, but were afterward withdrawn by the consent of the company, in 1875, and destroyed, the supervisor and town clerk giving their obligation that the town should execute to the company bonds to the amount of $24,000 upon the completion of its road. Application was made for a mandamus, in 1881, to compel the issue of such bonds. Held, that the case came within the express provisions of the acts of 1874 and 1877, limiting the time for the enforcement of such liabilities. People v. Town of Granville, 104 Ill., 285. 1882.

229. School districts. Trustees of school districts are not known to the constitution as municipal corporations which may be vested with power to collect taxes. Though the legislature might confer upon them, the authorities of school districts, power to assess and collect taxes for the purposes of instruction, it had none to authorize such taxation for the construction of railroads. Trustees v. The People ex rel., 63 Ill., 299. 1872.

230. Transfer of railway. The object of a corporation, at the time of a subscription to its stock, was to build a railway between certain points. It caused a portion of such line to be built, and transferred to another company the right to operate such portion, retaining, however, all its rights and franchises to build the remaining portion of the road. Held, that there was no such fundamental change in the purpose of the corporation as would release those subscribers to the stock who did not assent thereto. Lynch v. Eastern, Lafayette and Mississippi R'y Co., 57 Wis., 430. 1883.

231. — If a subscriber for stock contemplated that a change would be made in the object and purpose of the corporation, he cannot, on the ground of such change, avoid his subscription. Id.

I. AUTHORITY TO SUBSCRIBE.

1. Amendment of law. There is no vested right in a railroad company to a subscription until it be actually made, and until that event occurs the legislature may alter the method whereby such subscription is to be made, without infringing any right. State ex rel. v. Garroutte, 67 Mo., 445, 1878; Cumberland and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Barren County Court, 10 Bush (Ky.), 604, 1874.

2. — The amendatory act of March 23, 1861, prohibited such subscription after its passage, without such vote, to any railroad company, whether it had a pre-existing charter authorizing a subscription by counties or not. State ex rel. v. Garroutte, 67 Mo., 445. 1878.

8. — Repeals in particular cases examined and passed upon. Wood County v. Lackawanna Iron and Coal Co., 93 U. S., 619, 1876; Cumberland and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Washington County Court, 10 Bush (Ky.), 564, 1874; Clay v. Justices of Hawkins County, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 187, 1880.

4. Amount. Under the general railroad law of 1849, municipal subscriptions to the capital stock of a railroad company could not exceed $100,000. Jackson County v. Brush, 77 Ill., 59. 1875.

5. — When a county votes aid to a railway company in excess of the amount authorized by law, it is simply a void act, conferring no authority on the county commissioners to issue the bonds of the county in any amount whatever. Reineman v. Covington, Columbus and Black Hills R. R. Co., 7 Neb., 310. 1878.

6. Authority. Counties have no authority at common law to issue bonds. The quasi corporations, mere governing agencies charged with certain objects of need for local administration. Hamlin v. Mead, 6 Neb., 227, 1877; Hawkins v. Supervisor Carroll County, 50 Miss., 735, 1874.

7. — The board of county commissioners have no power to make such subscription on behalf of the county without the approval of the legal voters expressed at an election called pursuant to law. Packard v. Com of Jefferson County, 2 Colo., 338. 1874.

8. — An act of the legislature of Wisconsin provided that the board of supervisors of the defendant county "shall have power by resolution, to cause to be issued by . . . to an amount not exceeding $50,000, 'if a majority of the ballots cast' by legal voters in said county 'be for railroad aid.'" Held, where a majority of the ballots cast were "for railroad aid," that it rested in the discretion of the board of supervisors whether such bonds should be issued. Wadsworth v. St. Croix County, 4 Fed Reporter, 378. 1880.

9. — A statute authorizing counties to take stock in railroads is applicable to a railroad duly organized under a subsequent statute. And a subscription can be made to a corporation not yet organized. Stebbins v. Commissioners of Pueblo County, 4 Fed Reporter, 282; 2 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 1880. See, also, County of Daviess v. Huinker, 98 U. S., 98, 1878; County of Cass Johnston, 95 U. S., 360, 1877.

United States will take judicial notice of the public acts of the states within which they sit. Smith v. Tallapoosa County, 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 574. 1874.

12. Change in boundary. Certain railroad bonds were authorized and issued by the county of Marion prior to the detachment of one township. By virtue of an act of the legislature of 1879, and after the detachment, the county of Marion took up these railroad bonds, and issued funding bonds in lieu thereof. Certain charges were made in the time, the amount, and the rate of interest of these bonds — changes all beneficial to the county. Held, that though these funding bonds were technically both authorized and issued after the detachment, yet, within the spirit of the law, and legally, the funding bonds are a charge against the detached territory, the same as the railroad bonds had been. Comm'rs of Marion County v. Comm'rs of Harvey County, 26 Kans., 181. 1881.

13. — The legislature detached from Sedgwick county a portion of its territory, and attached it to the new county of Harvey. It declared that this detached territory should continue liable for a certain proportion of the railroad bonded indebtedness of Sedgwick county, and that the county clerk of Harvey county should annually apportion on the property of this territory the amount of taxes necessary to pay such proportion of the indebtedness. Upon the failure of the clerk of Harvey county to make this apportionment, the board of county commissioners of Sedgwick county are proper parties plaintiff in a proceeding by mandamus against him to compel him to perform such duty. Comm'rs Sedgwick Co. v. Bailey, 11 Kans., 681. 1878.

14. — Where the division is only of railroad bonded indebtedness, and there is no proof of the amount of property of the other indebtedness of the county prior to the division, and no proof of the comparative population or wealth of the detached territory and the remaining portion of the county, it is impossible for this court to say that the division prescribed by the legislature is not just and equitable. Ib.

15. — Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel such apportionment. Ib.

16. Consolidation of railways. A county, having lawful authority, issued its bonds in payment of its subscription to a railroad company. Between the latter and another company a consolidation was about to take place, upon condition that the county court would, on an extension of time being granted, levy and collect a tax sufficient to pay the amount due on the bonds. The county court accepted the proposition, and gave the requisite assurance. The consolidation thereupon took place. Held, that the county was estopped from denying the validity of the bonds in the hands of a bona fide holder, to whom they were transferred for value by the consolidated company. County of Tipton v. Locomotive Works, 103 U. S., 528, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 517. See, also, County of Scotland v. Thomas, 94 U. S., 682, 1876; County of Henry v. Nicolay, 95 ib., 619, 1877; Menasha v. Hazard, 102 U. S., 81, 1880.

17. Constitutional law. Under the constitution of 1870 corporate subscriptions to the capital stock of railroad companies may be made, where the same has been authorized by a vote of the people of the municipality before the adoption of the constitution. People ex rel. v. Logan County, 63 Ill., 374. 1872.

18. — The legislation of the state of Illinois reviewed, whereunder the county of Clay issued two series of bonds, one dated November 1, 1869, in payment of its subscription to the stock of the Illinois Southeastern R'y Co., and another dated January 4, 1871, whereby its donation voted before the year 1870 to that company was paid. County of Clay v. Society for Savings, 104 U. S., 579, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 170.

19. — The bonds are valid, as they were issued in strict conformity to the conditions and requirements prescribed by statute, and pursuant to a popular vote cast at an election lawfully held before the year 1870. The constitution of Illinois, which took effect during that year, does not attempt to impair the obligation of any prior contract in regard to them, nor prohibit the issue of such as were necessary to give effect to a donation so voted. Ib.

on October 16, 1875, voted bonds to the A. and N. R. R. Co. to aid in an extension of its line. The bonds were to be placed in the hands of a trustee until the company had so far completed its road as to be entitled to them. The company immediately made a preliminary survey of its line, and the same was completed prior to November 1, 1875. Held, that the right of the company to the bonds in question had become vested, at the time the constitution of 1875 took effect, to such an extent that the company could require the bonds to be issued as provided in the proposition and placed in the hands of the trustee to await the final action of the company. State ex rel. v. Comm'rs of Lancaster County, 6 Neb., 214. 1877.

21. — The powers of a railroad company in Missouri, in existence prior to the adoption of the constitutional provision of 1865, prohibiting subscriptions to the stock of any corporation by counties, cities or towns, unless two-thirds of the qualified electors thereof shall assent, are not affected by such provision, but remain the same as if it had never been adopted. Calaway County v. Foster, 93 U. S., 567, 1876; County of Macon v. Shores, 97 U. S., 272, 1877; Huidekoper v. Dallas County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 171, 1875.

22. — The subscription to the stock of the railroad company having been actually made by that county, under the authority of a legislative act, in January, 1868, was legal, and the circumstance that the bonds were issued at a later date does not impair their validity. Ib. See, also, Louisiana v. Taylor, 105 U. S., 454, 1881; County of Schuyler v. Thomas, 98 ib., 169, 1878.

23. — Where the charter of a railroad company, granted by Missouri prior to the adoption of the constitution in 1865, made it lawful for the county court of any county in which any part of the route of said railroad or of its authorized branches might be, or for any county adjacent thereto, to subscribe to the stock of the company, and to issue bonds of the county in payment therefor, the power of the county court so to subscribe did not become subject to § 14 of art. 11 of that constitution, which requires the assent of two-thirds of the qualified voters of the county to such subscription. County of Henry v. Nicolay, 95 U. S., 619, 1877; County of Cass v. Gillett, 100 ib., 585, 1879. See, also, Nicolay v. St. Clair County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 168. 1874.

24. — The railroad aid act of 1868 (Acts of 1868, p. 92) is unconstitutional. Webb v. Lafayette County, 67 Mo., 353, 1878; Ranney v. Bader, ib., 476, 1878.

25. — The fourteenth section of the constitution of Mississippi, ratified December 1, 1869, which declares that "the legislature shall not authorize any county, city or town to become a stockholder in, or to lend its credit to, any company, association or corporation, unless two-thirds of the qualified voters of such county, city or town at a special election, or a regular election, to be held therein, shall assent thereto," is wholly prospective. It does not abrogate previous acts of the legislature conferring authority to subscribe for stock. Supervisors v. Galbraith, 99 U. S., 214. 1878.

26. — A resolution of a board of supervisors appropriating bonds as a subscription in aid of a railway constitutes a contract, which will not be impaired by a subsequent change in the constitution of the state. Moultrie County v. Rockingham Ten-Cent Savings Bank, 92 U. S., 631. 1875. See Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 103 ib., 821. 1880.

27. — A popular vote, authorizing a railway subscription, does not give a vested right in the subscription to the railway company. A change of the state constitution forbidding such subscriptions will render such vote unavailing, if the subscription is not actually made prior to the constitutional change. Wadsworth v. Supervisors, 102 U. S., 534, 1880; Railroad Co. v. Falconer, 103 U. S., 821, 1880.

28. — Section 6, art. 8, of the constitution declares that "the general assembly shall never authorize any county, city, town or township, by vote of its citizens or otherwise, to become a stockholder in any joint-stock company, corporation or association whatever; or to raise money for, or loan its credit to, or in aid of, any such company, corporation or association." What the general assembly is thus prohibited from doing directly it has no power to do indirectly. Taylor v. Commissioners of Ross County, 23 Ohio St., 22. 1872.

29. — The act of April 23, 1872, to authorize counties, townships, and the municipalities therein named, to build railroads, etc. (69 Ohio L., 84), authorizes the raising of money by taxation, which is equally applicable to the unlawful purpose of aiding railroad companies and others engaged in building and operating railroads, as it is to any lawful purpose, and gives to the officers intrusted with the control and application of the money thus raised no means or power of discrimination as to the lawfulness or unlawfulness of the work or purpose to which it is to be applied, and is unconstitutional. Ib.

30. — Under the constitution (sec. 2, art. 11), neither the state, nor any county, city, town, township or school district, can make any donation or grant to, or in aid of, or become a subscriber or shareholder in, any corporation or company. Colorado Central R. R. Co. v. Lea, 5 Colo., 192. 1879.

31. — A general statute of Tennessee required the county courts, when authorized by a popular vote, to subscribe for stock in a railroad company. A special statute was subsequently passed, which, without requiring the submission of the question of subscription to a popular vote, conferred power on the county courts of the counties on the line of a particular railroad to make, and on the company to receive, a subscription for its stock. Held, that the special statute is not in violation of the provisions of § 8, art. 1, or of § 7, art. 11, of the constitution of Tennessee of 1834. County of Tipton v. Locomotive Works, 103 U. S., 523, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 517.

32. — In the state constitution of South Carolina there is no restriction which deprives the legislature of the power to authorize counties to incur obligations and issue bonds for their payment. State ex rel. v. C. and L. R. R. Co., 13 So. Car., 290, 1879; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 220.

33. — In this case the power to levy a tax was conferred, the company performed all the conditions which, by the vote cast November 2, 1869, entitled it to receive the donation bonds, and they were delivered November 1, 1871, reciting the law authorizing their issue. Held, that, in a suit by a bona fide holder of the coupons cut therefrom, a recovery cannot be defeated upon the ground that, in order to pay the principal and interest and the county expenses, the assessment must exceed the constitutional limitation. County of Moultrie v. Fairfield, 105 U. S., 370, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 191.

34. — Whatever may be individual opinions, it is at the present the settled policy of this state to tolerate the issue by municipalities of bonds in aid of railroads, and the settled law that bonds so issued, if issued in pursuance of express authority and in accordance with the prescribed forms, are valid. Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Douglas Co., 18 Kans., 169, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 256.

35. — This court adopts the decision of the supreme court of Kansas, affirming the validity and binding effect of an act of the legislature of that state, approved February 10, 1865, entitled "An act to authorize counties and cities to issue bonds to railroad companies," although the yeas and nays were not called and entered on the journals of the respective houses on the final passage of the bill, and the enrolled bill was not signed by the presiding officer of the senate. Leavenworth County v. Barnes, 94 U. S., 70. 1876.

36. Construction of authority. While the power to issue railroad aid bonds is not one of the ordinary powers of a county, requires express authority, and must be exercised in conformity to prescribed forms, it is not penal in its nature, and the validity of its exercise does not demand all the strictness of the ancient rules of the criminal law. Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Douglas Co., 18 Kans., 169, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 256.

37. Estoppel. A county is not estopped to maintain a bill to enjoin the president of a railway company from disposing of the bonds and to cancel them, by the acts of the board of supervisors in assuming control of the railroad stock received therefor, and levying taxes and paying the interest on the bonds, where the subscription was illegal for want of compliance with the law. Supervisors of Madison County v. Paxton, 51 Miss., 701. 1880.

the completion of a railroad according to the terms of an attempted subscription, from denying the legality of the election. No notice that the want of power to make the subscription would be relied upon is required to be given when the bonds are called for in payment of the subscription; nor will the company be heard to urge, as against the right of the county to deny the existence of the power, that it had performed labor and incurred liabilities on the faith of the supposed subscription. People v. Jackson County, 93 Ill., 441. 1879.

39. — Where, at an election held according to law, the people of a county authorized their proper representatives to treat certain outstanding county obligations as properly authorized by law for the purpose of settling with the holders, and the settlement has been made, the validity of the obligations can no longer be contested. County of Jasper v. Ballou, 103 U. S., 745, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 47.

40. — A county having issued certain railway aid bonds after a decree of the court had determined that the county had the power to do so, all persons purchasing such bonds become privies to the decree, and may rely upon its estoppels. State ex rel. v. C. and L. R. R. Co., 18 So. Car., 290, 1879; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 220.

41. — A judgment upon the merits, dismissing an action brought by certain taxpayers of a county against the county commissioners to enjoin the issue by them of certain railway aid bonds, is an estoppel to a subsequent action after the bonds have been issued, brought in the name of the state upon the relation of certain other taxpayers of the same county, against the county commissioners, the railway company and purchasers of the bonds, to have the bonds adjudged illegal and void. Ib.

42. Legalizing act. Where an election is void, a subsequent act of the legislature legalizing the former vote is of no effect. It is the settled doctrine of Illinois, that, under the constitution of 1848, the legislature had no power to enact a law rendering a void election and subscription for corporate purposes valid. County of Richland v. The People, 3 Bradwell (Ill.), 210, 1878; Gaddis v. Richland County, 93 Ill., 119, 1879.

43. — Certain bonds held to be validated by a curative act. January v. Johnson County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 392. 1874.

44. — The curative act of February 25, 1868 (Gen. Stat., p. 892), was intended to cure irregularities in the proceedings had in any county on the question of county subscription to railroads, and to remove all technical hindrances to the carrying into effect of the will of the majority. It was not designed, and did not have the effect, to legalize illegal votes, or to authorize a county subscription of stock and issue of bonds without the vote of a majority of the qualified electors of the county voting upon the question. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R'y Co. v. Comm'rs of Jefferson Co., 17 Kans., 29. 1876.

45. Limitation as to amount. An act of the legislature of Arkansas, passed in 1868, authorizes any county to subscribe to the stock of any railroad company in that state, provided the subscription shall not exceed $100,000, and the consent of the inhabitants of the county thereto shall first be obtained at an election held for that purpose. At an election held under that act the voters of a county voted to subscribe $100,000 to the stock of company A. and $100,000 to the stock of company B. Held, that the act does not restrict the county to a single subscription; that the power to subscribe is general, limited only by the subscription of $100,000 to the stock of any one company. County of Chicot v. Lewis, 103 U. S., 164, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 137.

46. Ratification. Where a county has no lawful right to issue its bonds in aid of a railway, a ratification of the issue is equally invalid. Treadway v. Schnauber, 1 Dakota, 286. 1875.

47. — A territorial statute authorizing a donation may be validated by subsequent congressional approval. National Bank v. County of Yankton, 101 U. S., 129. 1879.

48. Ultra vires. Authority to subscribe to aid in a particular line of railway, conferred by statute, will not authorize a subscription in aid of a different line. New Brunswick Railway Co., Ex parte, 2 Pugsley (New Brunswick), 78. 1873.

Proceedings.

II. PROCEEDINGS.

49. Aid to two railways in one proceeding. Where an appropriation to aid in the construction of two railways has been voted by a county in one entire sum, to be apportioned in the amounts specified in the petition asking for such appropriation, held, that such vote is a nullity, and the collection of a tax levied to pay such appropriation may be enjoined. Finney v. Lamb, 54 Ind., 1. 1876.

50. Alternative subscriptions. The people cannot delegate to the county commissioners the authority to determine which of two companies shall be the recipient of aid voted. Spurck v. Lincoln and Northwestern R. R. Co., 14 Neb., 293. 1883.

51. Election. All qualified voters who absent themselves from an election held on public notice duly given are presumed to assent to the expressed will of the majority of those voting, unless the law providing for the election otherwise declares. County of Cass v. Johnston, 95 U. S., 360, 1877; overruling Harshman v. Bates County, 92 U. S., 569, 1875. See, also, Douglas v. County of Pike, 101 id., 677. 1879. But see Jackson County v. Brush, 77 Ill., 59. 1875.

52. — Where it is admitted by the pleadings that there was not a majority of the legal votes cast at the election in favor of subscription, the board of supervisors can neither make a valid subscription, nor make statements or pass resolutions to bind their county. People ex rel. v. Logan County, 63 Ill., 374. 1872.

53. — A proposition to vote bonds, modified one week before the election in such a manner as to become a new proposition, cannot be legally voted upon at that election, as there is not remaining sufficient time before the election in which to give the notice required by law. Packard v. Comm'rs of Jefferson County, 2 Colo., 838. 1874.

54. — In the absence of any prohibition in the statutes against more than one submission to the electors of the question of making a subscription, a second vote is not unlawful. Supervisors v. Galbraith, 99 U. S., 214. 1878.

55. — Where the record or written evidence of the notice of an election is lost, it is competent to prove such facts by parol. Macey v. Williamson County, 72 Ill., 207. 1874.

56. — Where the act authorizing a municipal corporation to make subscriptions in aid of a railroad provides that the election shall be called by the county court, an election called by a wrong authority, as by the board of supervisors, is void, and confers no authority to make such subscription. County of Richland v. The People, 3 Bradwell (Ill.), 210. 1878.

57. — The charter of the railway company provided that when it shall "request the county court of any county through or adjacent to which it is proposed to construct said railway to subscribe, either absolutely or upon special conditions, a specified amount to the stock of said company, the county court so requested may in their discretion order an election," etc. Held, that this provision gave the county judge no authority to submit the question to a vote of the people without having associated with him a majority of the justices of the county. Bowling Green and Madisonville R. R. Co. v. Warren County Court, 10 Bush (Ky.), 711. 1874.

58. — It is not necessary that all the details should be submitted to the voters. The substantial question is sufficient. Austria v. Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe R. R. Co., 45 Tex., 234, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 172.

59. — If the general or special statute controlling the election requires the publication or posting of a notice thereof for thirty days prior to the holding of the election, and this is not done, the election will be invalid, and will confer no authority upon the board of supervisors either to make the subscription or to issue the bonds of the county. Harding v. Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis R. R. Co., 65 Ill., 90. 1872.

60. — Where the question of issuing bonds to any railroad company was submitted to the people of a county, but without accompanying the same by a proposition to levy a tax to meet the liability incurred, held, that bonds issued in pursuance of such vote were void. Hamlin v. Meadville, 6 Neb., 227. 1877.

61. — Under the law of Nebraska, public donations to aid in the building of railways

SUBSCRIPTIONS BY COUNTIES.

Proceedings.

can be made only by the people themselves, by means of an election properly called and held. Spurck v. Lincoln and Northwestern R. R. Co., 14 Neb., 293. 1883.

62. Fraud. Where the company knew that there was not a majority of the legal votes cast in favor of subscription, and knew there was no legal power to make the subscription, or to issue the bonds, knowing of the fraud before incurring liability, it was as fully bound by it as if it had participated in its perpetration. People ex rel. v. Logan County, 63 Ill., 374. 1872.

63. — On mandamus to compel the authorities of a county to make a subscription to a railroad company, the return showed that the directors of the company, in contracting for the building of the road, gave to the contractors too large a sum. Held, that such fact was no defense; that the directors had the power to make contracts binding on stockholders, and that if they were fraudulently made, the stockholders might have them rescinded on bill in equity. Ib.

64. — Where the record shows that in September, 1871, a vote was had by which the county board was authorized to subscribe to the capital stock of a railway company, and that in September, 1873, two members of the board met without any request or call for a special session and without any notice to the third member, who was present in the county and could have been served with notice, and not at a regular or adjourned session, and where notice of such session was intentionally and fraudulently withheld by the company from said third member, and that at such session the two commissioners present passed a resolution directing a subscription to the capital stock of said company, and such subscription was accordingly made, held, that such subscription was not a legal and binding contract upon the county, and that it could maintain an action to have it set aside and canceled. Paola and Fall River R'y Co. v. Comm'rs of Anderson Co., 16 Kans., 302, 1876; Comm'rs of Anderson Co. v. Paola and Fall River R'y Co., 20 Kans., 534, 1878.

65. Change of conditions. The appellee, the Richmond, Irvine and Three Forks R. R. Co., was the judge of the character of proposition it would present, and the court had discretionary power, under § 15 appellee's charter, to submit or not submit the question of subscription of stock to the voters of Madison county, who had the power of adoption or rejection. Madison County Court v. Richmond, etc., R. 1 80 Ky., 16. 1882.

66. — Appellee having proposed the conditions of the contemplated subscription to the county court having submitted them to the people, and a vote having been taken in the adoption of the conditions, the county court cannot revoke its action by ordering a second vote. To do so would assume legislative functions. Ib.

67. Change in judicial decisions. When municipal bonds have been put upon the market as commercial paper, the rights of the parties thereto are to be determined according to the statutes of the state as they were then construed by her highest court, and in a case involving those rights the court will not be governed by any subsequent decision in conflict with that which they accrued. Douglas v. Cowdrey, 101 U. S., 677, 1879; Foot v. Son County, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.) 1878.

68. Construction of statute. Under a statute authorizing the board of county commissioners to subscribe to the stock of a railway company, and to authorize the payment thereof in the bonds of the county, the vote of the legal electors of the county, authorizing such subscription to be made, goes for nothing. People v. Comm'rs of Pueblo County, 2 Colo. 1874; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 237.

69. — The power to tax is a high governmental power, and where the legislature grants it to another tribunal it can only be exercised in strict conformity to the manner in which the power is granted. A material departure will be fatal to the attempt to exercise it. Bowling Green and Madison R. R. Co. v. Warren County Court, 10 (Ky.), 711, 1874; Daviess County Court v. Howard, 18 ib., 101, 1877.

70. — Various statutes in relation to the subscription to railways construed. Winston v. Atlantic and Pacific R. R. Co., 1 Baxter (Tenn.) 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 237, 1873; Comm'rs of Johnson County v. Thayer, 94 U. S.

Conditional Subscriptions.

1876; Supervisors v. Wisconsin Central R. Co., 121 Mass., 460, 1877.

71. Irregularities. The validity of county bonds, issued for railroad subscription by the county, depends upon the power of the county court at the time to issue the bonds; mere irregularities will not render the bonds void. Clay v. Justices of Hawkins County, 5 Lea (Tenn.), 187. 1880.

72. Location. There must be a substantial location of the line of the railway before an election to vote aid can be lawfully held. Winston v. Tenn. and Pacific R. R. Co., 1 Baxter (Tenn.), 60; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 287. 1873.

73. Proceedings to set aside subscription. The validity of the proceedings should be attacked by certiorari, bill of review or writ of error. Anderson County v. Houston and Great Northern R. R. Co., 52 Tex., 228. 1879.

74. — Bill alleging irregularities in the issue of bonds to a railroad company should point out specifically such irregularities to call attention of defendants to them and advise them of what they are to defend or explain. Mattheus v. Blount, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 120. 1879.

75. Ratification. Irregularities in the making of the subscriptions and issue of bonds may be cured by ratification. Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Douglas Co., 18 Kans., 169, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 256.

76. Survey. It was not essential to the validity of the popular election, ordered and held on the question of subscription to the stock, that there should have been a final and definite survey and location of the entire line of the company's road. All that was required was a substantial location, designating the termini and general direction of the road, and an estimate of the cost of constructing it. County of Wilson v. National Bank, 103 U. S., 770, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 151.

77. What constitutes a subscription. An order of the county court directing the county judge to subscribe for stock upon contingencies therein named does not of itself amount to a subscription. Cumberland and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Barren County Court, 10 Bush (Ky.), 604. 1874.

78. — Where the county court made an order to subscribe to the capital stock of the company for the use of one of its branches, and issued county bonds which were accepted by the construction committee in payment, held, that an actual manual subscription on the books of the company was not necessary to entitle the county to the stock, or to bind it as a subscriber thereto. County of Cass v. Gillett, 100 U. S., 535. 1879.

79. — To constitute a "subscription" by a county to stock in a railroad company, it is not necessary that there be an act of chirographical subscribing. A resolution of the county declaring a subscription made, an acceptance of such subscription by the railroad company, and notice to the county of such acceptance; the delivery to the railroad company by the proper county officers of the county bonds, and acceptance by the county of the corresponding stock, voting as a stockholder and levying a tax to pay the interest on the bonds, estop the county (assuming that it had a legal right to subscribe) from denying its subscription. Nugent v. The Supervisors, 19 Wallace, 241. 1873.

III. CONDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

80. Depot. A vote by a county to issue bonds to a given railroad company whose line runs to the county seat is not rendered invalid by a condition that a depot of the company shall be located within a specified distance of the county seat, nor by a condition that the railroad bridge over a large stream in the county shall be so constructed that it may be used as a free wagon bridge. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Merrick County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 359. 1874.

81. Determination as to performance. Under the act of the legislature of Kansas, to authorize counties and cities to issue bonds to railroad companies, approved April 10, 1865, and that of February 25, 1868, the board of commissioners of a county is authorized to determine whether the condition precedent to the lawful issue of such bonds has been complied with. Comm'rs of Douglas County v. Bolles, 94 U. S., 104. 1876.

SUBSCRIPTIONS BY COUNTIES.

Bonds.

82. — If the people of a county vote a subscription in aid of a railway company, to be paid in bonds of the county upon certain conditions precedent, the county authorities cannot delegate power to others to determine when the conditions are performed, but must determine that fact themselves, as the authorized agents of the people. This is an official trust, which cannot be delegated. Jackson County v. Brush, 77 Ill., 59. 1875.

83. Estoppel. A county in Illinois, a subscriber to the stock of a railway company, agreed to extend the time for completing the road from that originally fixed to a particular date. Before that date the county, by its proper officers, declared the road completed to its satisfaction, delivered its bonds and received the stock of the company in return therefor. Held, that its action constitutes a waiver and an estoppel which prevent it from raising the objection that the contract was not performed in time. County of Randolph v. Post, 93 U. S., 502. 1876.

84. Forfeiture. The statute of Indiana (§ 18, R. S. 1876, p. 740) in relation to forfeiture only applies to donations, and not where stock has been subscribed. Commissioners of Tipton County v. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co., 89 Ind., 101, 1888; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 636, 1888.

85. Injunction. If a railroad company fails to comply with the conditions on which a county subscription has been made to its stock, injunction will lie to prevent it receiving bonds agreed to be issued in payment and to compel the surrender and cancellation of any already issued; and this remedy may be invoked by any one who is a citizen and tax-payer of the county. Wagner v. Meety, 69 Mo., 150. 1878.

86. Rescission. Where a county court makes an order for the subscription of stock to a railroad company, upon condition that the road shall be built within a specified time, held, that it is in the power of the county court, by a subsequent order, to suspend the delivery of bonds of the county, issued in payment of the subscription and remaining in the hands of a trustee, when it appears that the road has not been built within the time specified; the recitals in the order, however, like any other declarations made by one party to a contract, do not conclude the other party. Cooper v. L County, 85 Mo., 542. 1877.

87. Route. Where a proposition for subscription to aid in building a road from Quincy, by way of Payson and direction of Pittsfield, in Pike county out any other conditions, was carried by vote of the people, and it appeared that the company, by its charter, was not bound to locate its road on that route, but had discretion as to the route to be selected, was held that the board of supervisors making the subscription, had the right to impose conditions as to the permanent location of the road upon the route completed, and to make the delivery of county bonds to depend upon the same. That the company, by accepting such conditions, was bound by them in respect to its rights under the vote and subscription. Alley v. Adams County, 76 Ill., 101.

IV. BONDS.

88. Action. Where a court of commissioners in Alabama, pursuant to an act of December 31, 1868, subscribed stock in a railroad company, and issued bonds of the county in payment thereof, the holder of them, or of the coupons thereon attached, is not required to present them when due to that court for allowance, but may commence suit to enforce their payment. County of Greene v. Daniel, 102 U. S. 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 103.

89. — In an action on bonds issued by a county to a railroad company every essential element of the power given to the county to make such subscription must be stated in the petition. Weil v. Greene County, 69 Mo., 281.

90. — The complaint alleged a failure of the board of supervisors to issue bonds to the plaintiff at the times they should have been issued, and that the plaintiff had suffered damage thereby. Held, that the facts alleged would not justify a writ of mandamus against the county. For a neglect or refusal to perform a duty imposed on a supervisor by law, a supervisor is by § 4086, Political Code, made personally liable. Santa Cruz

Bonds.

Co. v. County of Santa Clara, 62 Cal., 180. 1882.

91. Acceptance of subscription. The county court of Greene county, without a vote of the people, by order of June 20, 1870, subscribed $400,000 to the capital stock of Kansas City and Memphis R. R. Co. Order modified October 4, 1870, so as to make subscription to Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co. to aid in building the K. C. and M. R. R. April, 1871, order made rescinding former orders, and in July, 1871, order rescinding the rescinding order of April, 1871, and bonds issued, payable to H. and St. Jo. R. R. Co., or bearer. Held, that as there was no acceptance by the latter company of the subscription, there was neither a contract nor a consideration for one, and that it was incompetent for the K. C. and M. R. R. Co. to accept the subscription. State ex rel. v. Garrouette, 67 Mo., 445. 1878.

92. Bona fide holder. It is no defense that the company, which was a de facto corporation when the subscription was made, had not been organized within the time prescribed by its charter, and that when the bonds were issued a suit to restrain the issue of them was pending, however it may have ultimately resulted, if the holder had no actual notice thereof, and was a purchaser of them for value before they matured. County of Macon v. Shores, 97 U. S., 272. 1877. See, also, Darlington v. La Ciede County, 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 200. 1877.

93. — County bonds issued in Missouri by a de facto county court, which are sealed with the seal and signed by the de facto president thereof, cannot, when held by bona fide purchasers, be impeached by showing that he was not de jure a member of the court. It is no defense to a suit on such bonds so held, that the company, in payment of the county subscription to whose capital stock they were issued, was not organized within the period prescribed by law. County of Ralls v. Douglass, 105 U. S., 728, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 212.

94. — The president of a railroad company is not an innocent purchaser of bonds issued in aid of the railroad by the board of supervisors of a county in violation of the constitution and the statute, which authorize their issuance only upon condition that two-thirds of the legal voters of the county shall vote in favor thereof, if he receives them as bound to do under the charter, although he passes them to a creditor with notice, and takes them back as an individual purchaser. Supervisors of Madison County v. Paxton, 57 Miss., 701. 1890.

95. — An act of the legislature of the state of Illinois authorized all municipal corporations to take up and cancel outstanding bonds and other evidences of indebtedness, issued for the benefit of a certain railroad, under a prior act of the legislature, and fund the same. Held, that where a funded bond was regularly issued, and performance of all the essential conditions alleged in the bond, payment could not be refused a bona fide holder upon the ground that the original bond was issued by the county supervisors, instead of the county court, contrary to the terms of the original act. Ballou v. Jasper County, 3 Federal Reporter, 620. 1880.

96. — Negotiable county bonds are not within the rule of lis pendens. Board v. Texas and Pacific Ry Co., 46 Tex., 316, 1876; 13 Amer. Ry Rep., 259; County of Warren v. Marcy, 97 U. S., 96, 1877; Orleans v. Platt, 99 id., 676, 1878; County of Cass v. Gillett, 100 ib., 585, 1879; Thompson v. Perrine, 103 ib., 808, 1880.

97. — The mere fact that some of the interest coupons were overdue at the time of plaintiff's purchase is not sufficient to put him upon inquiry or charge him with notice of any defenses to the bonds, especially where, during the time these coupons were running, the negotiation of the bonds had been restrained by an injunction which was finally dissolved. Preble v. Board of Supervisors, 8 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 358. 1878.

98. — Where county bonds upon subscription to a railroad have been issued and got into circulation, all reasonable presumptions will be indulged in favor of their regularity until overcome and rebutted; and even if irregularities are shown they will not invalidate the bonds unless they go to the power of the county court to issue them. Maxcy v. Williamson County, 72 Ill., 297. 1874.

99. — Notice to one of the trustees appointed by the company in its deed mortgaging its property, including the county bonds, to secure the payment of its bonds, issued and negotiated for value to third parties, does not, in a suit by the trustees to enforce the payment of the county bonds, operate to destroy the bona fide holding of such parties. Comm'rs of Johnson County v. Thayer, 94 U. S., 681. 1876.

100. — Bonds issued pursuant to legislative authority by a municipal corporation, in aid of a railroad company, are negotiable instruments. Comm'rs of Marion County v. Clark, 94 U. S., 278. 1876.

101. — Municipal bonds issued under an unconstitutional statute are void into whose-soever hands they may come. Webb v. Lafayette County, 67 Mo., 353, 1878; Ogden v. Daviess County, 102 U. S., 684, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 145; Anthony v. Jasper County, 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 136, 1876. See, also, Sherrard v. Lafayette County, 3 ib. (U. S. C. C.), 236. 1875.

102. — The certificate of the state treasurer indorsed on the bonds, as between the bona fide holder for value and the county, is conclusive that the bonds, which by their terms purport to be issued under the statute, and which absolutely and unconditionally covenant to pay a certain sum of money at a time and place therein named, are negotiable as the valid obligations of the county. Lewis v. Commissioners, 105 U. S., 739; 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. C. C.), 615. 1881. Contra, Lewis v. County Commissioners of Barbour County, 3 Federal Reporter, 191. 1880.

103. Collateral proceedings. The recitals in the county records cannot be contradicted in a collateral proceeding. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. State, 8 Heiskell (Tenn.), 668, 1874; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 107.

104. Consolidation of railways. The consolidation of the Kansas City and Cameron R. R. Co., formerly Kansas City, Galveston and Lake Superior R. R. Co., under act of March 11, 1867, "upon such terms as may be deemed just and proper," with H. and St. Jo. R. R. Co., did not operate to transfer to the latter company the franchises and unexecuted rights of former companies, so as to authorize a subscription to be made to H. and St. Jo. R. R. Co. without a vote of the people, and such subscription is void. The effect of consolidation under the act was to work the extinction of the original company in whose favor the subscription was authorized to be made, and the power to subscribe to the original company perished with the company to which it was attached, and in such case there could be no innocent purchasers of the bonds. State ex rel. v. Garrouette, 67 Mo., 445. 1878.

105. Coupons. Where a coupon is payable at a particular place, presentation for payment at that place is not a condition precedent to a recovery of judgment thereon by suit. Smith v. Tallapoosa County, 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 574. 1874.

106. — A purchaser with notice cannot recover upon detached interest coupons fraudulently issued after maturity. Whitford v. Clark County, 18 Federal Reporter, 644. 1882.

107. — If the bonds to which coupons are annexed are properly signed and sealed by the officers of the county, it is no defense to an action on the coupons that they are signed by only one of the county officers. Thayer v. Montgomery County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 389. 1874.

108. Denomination of bonds. The court of county commissioners may cause the bonds to be executed in such denominations as may be agreed upon by it and the railroad company, provided the total amount for which they are issued does not exceed that set forth in the proposal accepted by the vote of the qualified electors of the county. County of Greene v. Daniel, 102 U. S., 187, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 105.

109. Discount. A municipal corporation cannot issue its bonds at a discount to pay a stock subscription. Daviess County Court v. Howard, 18 Bush (Ky.), 101. 1877.

110. Donations. Where a vote of the people of a county authorized the county commissioners to subscribe for stock in a railroad company, held, that such authority did not empower the commissioners to donate the bonds of the county to a railroad company. Hamlin v. Meadville, 6 Neb., 227. 1877.

111. Evidence. Bonds held valid under the evidence. Williams v. Duck River Valley R. R. Co., 9 Baxter (Tenn.), 488. 1876.

Bonds.

112. Fraud. Certain county bonds held, under the evidence, to have been fraudulently issued, and that defendant was not a bona fide holder, and the county had the right to their cancellation in equity. Cass County v. Green, 66 Mo., 498. 1877.

113. Injunction. Any tax-payer of the county may file a bill to enjoin the issue of illegal bonds of the county. Winston v. Tenn. and Pacific R. R. Co., 1 Baxter (Tenn.), 60, 1873; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 237.

114. — Where treasurers have in their possession moneys belonging to a county, which, unless restrained, they will pay to the holders of bonds of such county, issued without warrant of law, and void in the hands of holders, equity will interfere at the suit of the county to restrain such payment. Mo. River, Fort Scott and Gulf R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs Miami Co., 12 Kans., 230. 1873.

115. Interest. County commissioners may provide for paying the interest on county bonds issued to railroad companies, although such bonds have not been registered with the auditor of state, as provided in the act of March 6, 1871. Comm'rs of St. Louis County v. Nettleton, 22 Minn., 356. 1876.

116. — The rate of interest not being specified in the proposition for subscription, and the charter providing for ten per cent. interest, held, that the bonds should bear ten per cent. interest. People ex rel. v. Ford County, 68 Ill., 142. 1872. See, also, Beatlie v. Andrew County, 56 Mo., 42. 1874.

117. Judgment. The validity of negotiable bonds of a county issued in satisfaction of judgments, in the hands of innocent holders for value, cannot be questioned by showing that the judgments were rendered upon warrants issued in excess of the constitutional limitation of five per cent., and a tax levied to pay the principal and interest of such bonds may be enforced. Sioux City and St. Paul R. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 52 Ia., 26. 1879.

118. — Where a county had filed a bill against a railroad company and its trustee to restrain the negotiation of bonds issued by the county to the company in aid of its construction, and the case had been decided against the county, it is estopped from setting up, against subsequent purchasers of such bonds, any grounds of illegality which might have been set up in the bill. Preble v. Board of Supervisors, 8 Bissell (U. S. C.), 358. 1878.

119. Lien of county for bonds loaned. The act of the general assembly of Missouri, approved January 7, 1865, under which the county of St. Louis loaned its bonds to the extent of $700,000 to the Pacific R. R. Co., create on its acceptance by the company and the county, an equitable lien or charge, in favor of the county, upon the earnings of the road, to the extent necessary to meet the interest upon the bonds as it accrues. The lien continues until the bonds shall be paid. Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S., 306. 1879.

120. — All purchasers of the property of the company, or of its bonds issued under a mortgage subsequently executed, are bound to take notice of that act. Id.

121. Recitals. Recitals in bonds are conclusive in favor of a bona fide holder for value before maturity. Westerman v. Cape Girardeau County, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 112, 1878; Jordan v. Cass County, 2 ib. (U. S. C. C.), 245, 1875; Huidekoper v. Buchanan County, 3 ib. (U. S. C. C.), 175, 1874; Polard v. City of Pleasant Hill, 3 ib. (U. S. C. C.), 195, 1874; County of Warren v. Marcy, 97 U. S., 96, 1877; County of Clay v. Society for Savings, 104 U. S., 579, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 170; County of Henry v. Nicolay, 95 U. S., 619, 1877.

122. — Where the recitals of the bonds show their illegality, there can be no recovery upon such bonds. County of Bates v. Winters, 97 U. S., 88. 1877.

123. Registry. Municipal bonds are not duly "issued," under the laws of Missouri, unless the same have been registered in the office of the state auditor. Douglass v. Lincoln County, 5 Federal Reporter, 775, 1880; Anthony v. County of Jasper, 101 U. S., 693, 1879.

124. Rights of stockholders. A statute authorized a county to subscribe for stock in a railway company, and to pay for it in the county's bonds, bearing interest, to be issued for that purpose, the county to make provision for the payment of interest as in case of its other bonds, and the company to receive bonds at par as cash. Held, that the act contemplated an exchange of the stock as a full equivalent for the bonds, and that the county should occupy no better position than other stockholders. Pittsburgh and Steubenville R. R. Co. v. Allegheny County, 79 Pa. St., 210. 1875.

125. Substituted bonds. The agent of the county and the presiding justice of the county court substituted engraved bonds, the signatures upon the coupons of which were lithographed, for printed bonds, the new bonds being of the same date and amount as the old, and the old being at the same time destroyed; there was no order of the county court for the substitution, but the county afterwards paid interest for two years, retained the certificate of stock, which was the consideration of the bonds, and entered of record other reasons than the substitution for ceasing to pay interest on the new bonds. Held, that the plea of non est factum was not sustainable as a defense to an action to recover coupons on the new bonds. McKee v. Vernon County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 210. 1874.

126. Taxation. Where a statute (under which a county issued bonds, a series of which fell due annually for a period of ten years) provided that "as soon as" certain prescribed conditions were complied with, "and annually thereafter for a period of ten years," the court of county commissioners should levy and assess a tax sufficient to pay the series falling due each year, it was held that the failure to assess and collect the tax within the time prescribed did not thereafter limit or destroy the power to levy and collect the tax, but that the power existed as long as the legal obligation to pay the debt subsisted. Commissioners' Court of Limestone Co. v. Rather, 48 Ala., 483. 1872.

127. — The acts of June 10, 1868 (R. S., p. 134), and of March 9, 1877 (General Laws, p. 114), require that the taxes collected for the purpose of paying coupons and bonds issued under the acts be remitted to the treasurer of state, except taxes assessed, levied and collected to pay principal or interest on bonds issued prior to February 1, 1868. The county treasurer is not the disbursing officer of this fund, and holders of the coupons must apply to the state treasurer for their payment. Morgan v. Pueblo and Arkansas Valley R. R. Co., 6 Colo., 478. 1888.

128. Trustee; bonds. A trustee to whom, pursuant to the terms of a proposition to vote bonds, submitted to the vote of electors, is delivered the bonds of a county, becomes the agent of both the board of county commissioners and the railway company, and as such agent is charged with the duty of holding the bonds, subject to the conditions of the contract of subscription. Packard v. Comm'rs of Jefferson County, 2 Colo., 388. 1874.

V. CHARTER.

129. Charter privilege. The power conferred upon counties along the route of the Louisiana and Missouri River R. R. Co. by the charter of that company of March 10, 1859, to subscribe for its stock without a vote of the people, was not taken away, as respects Callaway county, by the amendatory act of March 24, 1863. Foster v. Callaway County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 200. 1874.

130. — The act of March 28, 1861, withdrew the power conferred on the county courts by the charter of the Leclde and Fort Scott R. R. Co. to subscribe to the stock of that company without first submitting the question to a vote of the people. State ex rel. v. Dallas County Court, 72 Mo., 329, 1890; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 122.

131. Coal companies. A company is none the less a railroad company, within the meaning of the act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, approved November 6, 1849, authorizing counties to subscribe to the capital stock of railroad companies, because its charter vests it with power to carry on, in addition to the business of such a company, that of a coal or a mining, or a furnace, or a manufacturing company. Randolph, County of, v. Post, 93 U. S., 502. 1876.

VI. SWAMP LANDS.

132. Rights of tax-payer. A party interested, who permits an adjudication to be made without moving to protect his rights until he finds it adverse to himself, in the absence of any excuse for his failure to intervene, is estopped to demand in another action that the judgment be set aside. This rule applied to a tax-payer who has not intervened in a suit between a railway company and the county in relation to a conveyance of swamp lands. Tredway v. Sioux City and Pacific R. R. Co., 39 Ia., 663. 1874.

133. Grant. A railway company held to have failed to comply with the condition under which certain swamp lands had been granted to it by a county to aid in its construction. Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Minnesota R'y Co. v. County of Benton, 53 Ia., 89. 1881.

VII. MANDAMUS.

134. Contract. The people of a county, in their primary capacity, have no authority under the law to make a contract of subscription binding upon the county; the board of county commissioners, pursuant to the authority delegated by such vote, must enter into the contract of subscription before either the county is compellable by mandamus to surrender its bonds, or the railway company to deliver its stock. People v. Comm'rs of Pueblo County, 2 Colo., 360, 1874; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 237.

135. County treasurer. The holder of county interest coupons is not obliged to obtain a warrant on the county treasury before demanding payment. It is the duty of the treasurer, if he has funds, to pay on presentation of the coupons at the treasury. If he refuses, he may be compelled by mandamus. The fact that the funds have been withdrawn by the county court since demand was made will be no defense to him; neither will the fact that the validity of the coupons is being contested by the county in another proceeding. State ex rel. v. Craig, 69 Mo., 565. 1879.

136. Election. Where the charter of a railroad company authorized a vote to be taken in a county on the question of subscribing to the capital stock of the company, and, in case of a majority of the legal votes being cast for subscription, imposed a duty upon the board of supervisors to make the subscription and issue the bonds of the county, the county can be compelled by mandamus to make the subscription. In such case the board of supervisors have no discretion after the election has resulted in favor of the subscription. People ex rel. v. Logan County, 63 Ill., 374. 1872. But see People v. Cass County, 77 Ill., 438. 1875.

137. — When the law requires the trustees of a township to certify the result of an election to the county clerk, a petition for a mandamus to compel the county clerk to extend a tax to pay a railway donation, which alleges that a majority of the votes cast were in favor of such donation, and that that fact was certified by the town clerk to the county clerk, and that the town clerk was the proper officer to so certify, is bad on demurrer. Springfield and Illinois South-eastern R'y Co. v. Wayne County, 74 Ill., 27. 1874.

138. Injunction. A railway company obtained a writ of mandamus against a judge of the county court to compel him to issue county bonds in compliance with a subscription for stock, and before he had complied certain tax-payers brought suit in a court of equity against him, and enjoined him from issuing the bonds, but did not enjoin the company from enforcing the writ. Held, that the court issuing the writ of mandamus had the right and could not refuse to compel obedience to it, and the injunction interposed no legal obstacle to its enforcement. Cumberland and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Washington County Court, 10 Bush (Ky.), 564. 1874.

139. Proceedings to compel levy of tax. The act of 1872, empowering the auditor to make the levy, having been repealed by act of 1874, pending this appeal, terminates all proceedings against the auditor. And the company having failed to show that the neglect or refusal of the board to assess the tax was wilful and without good cause, a sufficient case, in the absence of the repeal of the law, is not made out to justify the auditor in making the assessment. Musgrove v. Vicksburg and Nashville R. R. Co., 50 Miss., 677. 1874.

140. — The county commissioners of a county in Alabama who were required by statute to levy and assess a special tax to meet the semi-annual interest falling due upon certain bonds of the county, disregarded their duty when a valid and sufficient levy of a tax had been made, and everything done to enable the collector to proceed; and the governor of the state was notified of the failure, if such were the case, of the collector to give bond for the collection of any taxes other than those levied for general purposes. The commissioners, being adjudged to be in contempt of that command, and imprisoned therefor by order of the circuit court, the supreme court, upon a writ of habeas corpus, directed that they be discharged. Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S., 604. 1881.

141. — The extraordinary indebtedness incurred by a county in issuing bonds to pay a railroad subscription is not one of the "expenses of the county" within the meaning of Wagn. Stat., § 165, p. 1193, and cannot be paid out of the fund raised by taxation under that section. State ex rel. v. Macon County Court, 68 Mo., 29. 1878. But see United States v. Clark County, 96 U. S., 211. 1877.

142. Process. A county in Kansas is a body politic, whose powers are exercised by a board of county commissioners, and when it is sued, process must be served upon the clerk of the board. Where, therefore, a mandamus was awarded against it, service of a copy of the writ upon the clerk is service upon the corporation, and the members of the board who fail to perform the required act are subject to be punished for contempt. Commissioners v. Sellew, 99 U. S., 624. 1878.

143. Remedy. Mandamus to compel the issuance of county bonds and levy of taxes considered, and held proper. Santa Cruz R. R. Co. v. Supervisors of Santa Cruz County, 62 Cal., 239, 1882; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs Jefferson Co., 12 Kans., 127, 1873; Humphreys County v. McAdoo, 7 Heiskell (Tenn.), 585, 1872; Commissioners' Court of Limestone County v. Rather, 48 Ala., 433, 1872.

VIII. TAXATION.

144. County treasurer. Moneys collected by the county treasurer by way of taxes to pay the interest on railroad bonds issued by the county under the general law approved

December 31, 1868, by which counties, cities and towns were authorized to subscribe to the capital stock of railroad companies (Sess. Acts 1868, p. 514), are moneys belonging to the county, which it is his duty to receive, keep and disburse, according to law; and the sureties on his official bond are liable for any default in regard to such moneys. Lewis v. Lee County, 66 Ala., 480. 1880.

145. General funds. A county subscribed for stock and issued bonds in payment therefor, pursuant to a law which authorized a levy of a special tax to pay them, "not to exceed one-twentieth of one per cent. upon the assessed value of taxable property for each year," but contained no provision that only the fund so derived should be applied to their payment. Held, that the bonds are debts of the county as fully as any other of its liabilities, and that for any balance remaining due on account of principal or interest after the application thereto of the proceeds of such tax the holders of them are entitled to payment out of the general funds of the county. United States v. County of Clark, 96 U. S., 211, 1877; United States v. County of Macon, 99 ib., 582, 1878.

146. Repeal of statute. Laws in force when bonds are issued, and which provide for taxation to pay them, enter into the contract between the bondholder and the state, and as against the former such laws cannot be repealed. Otherwise as to acts enlarging the taxing power, passed after the issue of such bonds. United States ex rel. v. Howard County Court, 2 Federal Reporter, 1. 1880.

147. Tax receipts in payment of passenger fares; mandamus. A holder of three tax receipts of the tax collector of Madison county, countersigned by the county court clerk, not issued to holder nor indorsed to him, tendered these tax receipts to the Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co., in payment of a passenger ticket to Mobile from Jackson, Tenn., and the company refusing to receive them in payment of the ticket, the holder asked for mandamus to compel the company to take the tax receipts and issue to him the ticket therefor. Held, the company, having made a contract to take such receipts for freight and passenger charges, by having received and expended the subscription of Madison county for $250,000, which was made under the act of the legislature, containing a provision requiring railroads taking subscriptions under it to take the tax receipts from the tax-payers in payment for freight and passenger charges, the writ of mandamus is a proper remedy to enforce a compliance upon the part of the railroad by taking such tax receipts and issuing a passenger ticket therefor. Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Wisdom, 5 Heiskell (Tenn.), 125, 1871; 1 Amer. R'y Rep., 107.

148. — The legislature, in saying that tax receipts or certificates, issued to the tax-payer under the act authorizing county subscriptions, "may be traded, assigned or transferred, and shall be receivable in payment of either freight or passage on any road on which such subscription may have been expended," intended to make these receipts a kind of local currency, and this object was accomplished by making them transferable or assignable, either by written indorsement or by mere delivery. Ib.

149. — The receipts, though dated 1854, and not demanded to be received until 1869, not being by law demandable until one year after completion of the railroad, and the date of the completion not appearing, the court cannot assume that the petitioner has delayed unreasonably long the assertion of his rights. Ib.

IX. MISCELLANEOUS.

150. Action to annul proceedings. In a suit to annul the proceedings authorizing the issuance of county bonds the bondholders are necessary parties. Board v. Texas and Pacific R'y Co., 46 Tex., 316, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 259. As to proceedings in case of fraud, see Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Douglas Co., 18 Kans., 169, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 256.

151. Bond to refund tax. A bond was executed by the officers of a railway company, as obligors, to certain tax-payers, as obligees, reciting that the board of commissioners of the county wherein such tax-payers resided had ordered a special tax to be levied on the property of the obligees and immediately collected, to aid in the construction of the company's line, and that one of said tax-payers, for himself and the others, had appealed from such order, which would occasion delay and injury to the interests of the obligors, and stipulating that, if such tax-payer would "dismiss his said appeal, and thereby permit" the collection of such tax, and if such obligees, naming them, would "pay the special tax so ordered to be collected by said board, for the purpose aforesaid," the obligors would refund to such tax-payers, on or before a day named, "severally the taxes they may severally pay for said purpose into the county treasury," if such railway was not completed to a certain point in such county by said day. The complaint, in an action on such bond by one of such tax-payers, failed to allege that the entire special tax had been paid by the obligees. Held, that the complaint was defective for this reason, as the bond contemplated the payment of the whole of such tax. Hicks v. Zion, 58 Ind., 548. 1877.

152. Change of organization. Although a subscriber for stock in a company is released from his subscription by a subsequent alteration of the organization or purposes of the company, this is only when such alteration is a fundamental one, and when, in addition, it is not provided for or contemplated by either the charter itself or the general laws of the state. Nugent v. The Supervisors, 19 Wallace, 241, 1873; Thomas v. Scotland County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 1, 1874; Washburn v. Cass County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 251, 1875.

153. Division of counties. It is competent for the legislature in dividing a county to provide for a pro rata division of the liability of the old county upon railway aid bonds. Canova v. Baker County, 18 Fla., 512. 1892.

154. Issue of stock. By the act approved December 17, 1872, railway companies which had received aid from counties or townships by taxation were required to issue stock to the parties who had paid the taxes, to the amount by them respectively paid; and the act provided that the issue of stock to a tax-payer should operate to cancel pro tanto the stock held by any county or township under the provisions of the statute of May 12, 1869. Where, pursuant to the latter act, the board of commissioners of a certain county had levied a tax in aid of a certain railway, and had subscribed, and, with the proceeds of the tax, had paid for a certain number of shares of the capital stock of the company, and certificates of stock therefor had been issued to the county, held, that the act of December 17, 1872, so far as it provides for divesting counties of stock already subscribed and paid for at the time of the passage of the act, is not unconstitutional. Lucas v. Commissioners of Tippecanoe County, 44 Ind., 524. 1873.

155. — A county, in accordance with a vote of a duly authorized election, subscribed for $100,000 of the stock of a railway company, payment of which was to be made in bonds of the county; the articles of incorporation of the company provided that, if the instalments of subscriptions were not paid when called for, the amount due should be collected by suit, or the stock with all payments made forfeited, or the stock sold at auction; the by-laws provided that certificates of stock should be issued if desired, upon payment of the first instalment, and that the amount of the instalment should be credited thereon; it was the practice of the company to give, in addition to these, receipts for subsequent payments, and paid up certificates only when all the payments had been made; the county having issued its bonds for $30,000, and refused to issue more, and brought its action to compel the company to issue stock certificates for that amount, it was held that the contract was an entire and indivisible one. Wapello County v. Burlington and Mo. River R. R. Co., 44 Ia., 535. 1876.

156. Offers by municipal authorities. Counties having no power to contract with a railway company to subscribe to its capital stock, except when authorized by a vote of the people, it follows that the county authorities cannot hold out any offer to such a company, prior to any vote upon which the company has a right to rely. People v. Cass County, 77 Ill., 438. 1875.

157. Preferred stock. An act of the legislature authorized the issue of bonds by a county "in subscription for preferred stock" of a railway company, and the act provided that the county "shall receive from the company preferred stock to the amount of the said bonds, which preferred stock shall bear interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum." Held, that this preferred stock meant capital stock, different from other capital stock only in the preference given to it in the matter of dividends. Statè ex rel. v. Cheraw and Chester R. R. Co., 16 So. Car., 524, 1881; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 631.

158. Rights of creditors of corporation. The creditors of an insolvent corporation may enforce a subscription made to the capital stock of the company for a county. County of Morgan v. Allen, 103 U. S., 498, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 92. See, also, Morgan County v. Thomas, 76 Ill., 120. 1875.

159. — A., an alleged creditor of a railway company, whose claim had not been established at law, filed his bill against the latter, averring it to be insolvent, and against a county, a debtor of the company, praying that the debt due from the county be applied to the payment of that claim. There being no assignment to A. by the company of his debt against the county, and no lien upon the fund in the hands of the latter, held, that the bill could not be sustained. Smith v. Railroad Co., 99 U. S., 398. 1878.

160. Statutes. The statutes in relation to subscriptions in aid of railways construed. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co. v. Commissioners of Tipton County, 70 Ind., 385. 1880. See, also, City of Kokomo v. The State, 57 Ind., 152. 1877.

161. Transfer. Tax-payers are concluded by the act of the county court, and by their own failure to assert, by appropriate proceedings, their legal rights, if any they ever had, to prevent the transfer of an original subscription from one company to the other. County of Ray v. Vansycle, 96 U. S., 675. 1877. As to transfer of stock see Spurlock v. Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Mo., 319. 1875.

II. CONDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Contract of Subscription.

- III. CONSOLIDATION.
- IV. EVIDENCE.
- V. ASSESSMENTS.
- VI. FRAUD.
- VII. MISCELLANEOUS.

I. CONTRACT OF SUBSCRIPTION.

1. Acceptance by corporation. Demand of payment and action for its recovery are not evidence of acceptance where a subscription is otherwise invalid. Northern Central Michigan R. R. Co. v. Eslow, 40 Mich., 222. 1879.

2. — It must appear that the subscription has been accepted. Ib.

3. Agency. In a suit against A. upon a stock subscription, evidence was held competent to show that A. assumed to act in taking subscriptions from other persons, and that he took his own and other subscriptions; such evidence was admissible to show that he was bound, although he afterwards erased his name before turning the subscription paper over to the company. Railroad Co. v. White, 10 So. Car., 153. 1878.

4. Agreement by corporation with a contractor. A subscriber to the stock of a railway company, which is authorized to assess its stock when a given number of shares has been taken, cannot object that, after his own liability to assessment has become fixed by the required number of shares being subscribed, the corporation has made a contract by which the builder of the road is to receive a portion of his pay in stock, the contractor having subscribed for that amount of stock, and the contract having been made in good faith by the parties and honestly performed by the contractor. Boston, Barre and Gardner R. R. Co. v. Wellington, 113 Mass., 79. 1873.

5. Agreement not to pay subscription. Where G. gave his check for ten per cent. of his subscription to stock in a railway company, under an agreement with A., who solicited the subscription, that the check need not be paid, held, that, in the absence of authority for A. to make such an agreement, the check was valid, and could be enforced. Syracuse, Phoenix and Oswego R. R. Co. v. Gere, 6 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 636; 4 Hun (N. Y.), 392. 1875.

6. Alterations. Where one having possession of an agreement to take shares in the stock of a corporation, after subscribing in good faith for shares of such stock, induces others to subscribe on the faith of his subscription, and subsequently, without the knowledge of the other subscribers, alters the paper by reducing the number of his shares, and delivers the instrument in that condition to the secretary, who is also a director of the company, this will not affect the liability of one thus induced to subscribe, although, at the time of such delivery, the person making the alteration explains the same to the secretary, who makes no objection thereto. Jewett v. Valley R'y Co., 34 Ohio St., 601, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 21.

7. — In an action upon a subscription, which after its execution had been materially altered without the knowledge or consent of the maker, and the execution of the contract is denied, the plaintiff cannot recover the amount due on the original subscription, without showing that the alteration was not fraudulently made. Berry v. Marietta, Pittsburgh and Cleveland R'y Co., 26 Ohio St., 673, 1875; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 259.

8. — In a suit on a contract of subscription, where the defense was an alteration without defendant's consent, of the amount subscribed, the onus would rest on plaintiff to prove that defendant placed opposite his name, or consented to have placed, the sum sued for. Workman v. Campbell, 57 Mo., 53. 1874.

9. — Where the amount of an original subscription was altered by a third party, a subsequent ratification would be equivalent to a previous authorization of the change. Ib.

10. — The defendant signed a printed paper whereby he agreed to take one share of the capital stock of a railroad company thereafter to be organized, the route of which was described in the paper. Other printed papers, fac similes of the one signed by the defendant, were signed by other persons, all of which papers afterwards were delivered to the persons proposed in them as directors with the intention that they should be used in organizing the company. Thereafter the persons having the papers in charge cut from all of them except one the signatures attached thereto, pasted such signatures upon the remaining paper and filed it, with the requisite affidavit annexed thereto, in the office of the secretary of state for the purpose of organizing the corporation. In an action brought by the corporation to recover the unpaid balance of the defendant's subscription, held, that as the defendant's liability was in no way changed or affected by the mutilation of the paper signed by him, and as the paper was not mutilated by the corporation or by any person for whose acts it was responsible (the directors in what they did having acted as agents of the subscribers), the defendant was not released from his liability upon the agreement. Sodus Bay and Corning R. R. Co. v. Hamlin, 24 Hun (N. Y.), 390. 1881.

11. Amendment to charter. The amendment of the charter of a corporation, without materially changing its purposes, does not have the effect of releasing subscribers to its capital stock. Peoria and Rock Island R. R. Co. v. Preston, 85 Ia., 115; 5 Amer. R'y Rep., 7, 1872; Bucksport and Bangor R. R. Co. v. Buck, 68 Me., 81, 1878; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 10; Cross v. Peach Bottom R'y Co., 90 Pa. St., 392, 1879; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 366.

12. — The original contract between the stockholders of a railroad company, as contained in the charter, cannot be materially or essentially altered by an amended charter so as to bind the subscribers thereto without their consent. May v. Memphis Branch R. R. Co., 48 Ga., 109, 1873; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 395.

13. — By the supplement to an act incorporating an iron and railway company, the name of the company was changed, authority was given to purchase and cancel the original stock, and the main purpose of the new corporation was to be that of a general transportation company. Held, that it was a fair question for the jury whether a combination to change the fundamental purpose of the original act by the supplement and divert the stock of an original subscriber to this new end was not a fraud upon him, and if they so found, an action for the amount of this original subscription could not be sustained. Southern Pennsylvania Iron and R. R. Co. v. Stevens, 87 Pa. St., 190. 1878.

14. — In a suit by the C. R'y Co. to recover subscriptions to its stock, the affidavit of defense averred that a railroad company had been chartered to make a road, one terminus to be Pittsburgh, the other Washington; that the railroad was sold under a mortgage, and the purchasers were chartered under the act of April 8, 1861, as the C. R'y Co., and defendant subscribed to the stock of that company; the plaintiff had completed its line, but to neither of the terminal points designated in the charter of the railroad company, and had abandoned the construction of the road towards Pittsburgh, stopping eight miles short of it, and also two thousand feet distant from Washington. Held, prima facie a good defense. Chartiers R'y Co. v. Hodgins, 77 Pa. St., 187. 1874.

15. Amount necessary to be subscribed. Where the charter of a railway company provided that the minimum capital should be five thousand shares of $50 each, with the privilege of increasing, and that it might be subscribed for or disposed of "in whole or in part, from time to time, as the board of directors may think proper," and empowered the company to act as a corporation upon a subscription of ten per centum of its capital stock and payment of $1 per share, it is not necessary that the whole amount of the minimum capital should be subscribed to enable the company to recover from subscribers. Hanover Junction, etc., R. R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St., 36, 1876; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 442. See, also, Warwick R. R. Co. v. Cady, 11 R. L., 131. 1875.

16. — Where a railway corporation was attempted to be formed under the act of March 1, 1872, and its capital stock fixed in its articles at $1,000,000, and the shares of capital stock fixed at ten thousand, of $100 each, it was held that, until the whole amount had been subscribed, the corporation could have no legal existence, and that, until the whole stock was subscribed, the directors could not make any call or assessment on the shares of those who had subscribed. Allman v. Havana, Rantoul and Eastern R. R. Co., 83 Ill., 521, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 347.

Contract of Subscription.

17. Assignment. Where the subscription is to an existing corporation, its successors or assigns, the completion of the road by its successor, to whom it had assigned all its franchises and property, including such subscription, will enable the latter to enforce the promise in its own name; the building and opening of the road is the essence of the agreement. Michigan, Midland and Canada R. R. Co. v. Bacon, 33 Mich., 466. 1876.

18. — A railroad corporation cannot, under the statute, purchase the subscription notes or obligations given by stockholders to another railroad corporation, and enforce them against the subscribers; and the fact that one railroad company has bought the road-bed of another, intending to complete the road, gives the purchaser no right to purchase the vendor's stock subscriptions and enforce them against the subscribers. West End R. R. Co. v. Dameron, 4 Mo. App., 414. 1877.

19. — Defendant executed a note, payable on demand, for money loaned by the payee, with the understanding that such note should stand against assessments on payee's subscription to the capital stock of defendant, and be delivered up when the stock was issued. Assessments large enough to cover the note were made. Afterwards, and three or four months after its date, the note was transferred to the plaintiff as security for a loan. The difference between the amount of the note and the assessments was paid in cash; and the stock was delivered after the plaintiff took the note. Held, that in a suit brought by the holder of such a note against defendant it was subject to all defenses that it would have been subject to in the hands of the original parties, as it must be considered as having been taken by the plaintiff after maturity, being payable on demand, under circumstances that should have put him upon inquiry, and that parol testimony was admissible to show the understanding between the original parties at the time the note was given. Paine v. Central Vermont R. R. Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 269. 1882.

20. Before organization. An agreement to take stock in a company not yet organized is valid and may be enforced by the company upon its organization. European and

North American R'y Co. v. McLeod, 3 Pugsley (New Brunswick), 8, 1875; Shuart v. Valley R. R. Co., 32 Grattan (Va.), 146, 1879; Peninsular R'y Co. v. Duncan, 23 Mich., 130, 1873; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 243.

21. — The signing of an agreement to take stock in a railroad corporation before the incorporation thereof does not constitute the subscriber a stockholder in the sense to make him liable for assessments subsequently levied. Monterey, etc., R. R. Co. v. Hildreth, 53 Cal., 123. 1878.

22. — The prospectus of an intended company contained a list of "provisional directors," and announced that applications for shares were to be made to "the provisional committee of management." A committee of management, with a chairman, was subsequently appointed by a resolution of the provisional committee, and thenceforward managed the affairs of the company. Defendant made an application for shares in the form prescribed, which contained a promise to pay deposits, and received a letter of allotment from the secretary of the company, stating that scrip certificates would be delivered in exchange for such letter. At the foot of the letter was a receipt for deposits signed by one of the company's bankers. The form of the receipt purported that the amount payable on deposits had been received "on account of the provisional committee." Held, that the defendant's contract was made with the provisional committee at large, and that the committee of management could not maintain an action for the non-payment. Woolmer v. Toby, 10 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 691; 59 E. C. L., 690. 1847.

23. By-laws. Under the railway law of 1871 (Comp. L. 1871, § 2405) subscriptions to the capital stock of a railway company could only be made "in the manner to be provided by its by-laws." A subscription made before any by-laws were adopted gave no rights to either party; and where there had been nothing done to create an estoppel, the subscriber was held not bound by a by-law made afterwards and adopting his subscription. Carlisle v. Saginaw Valley and St. Louis R. R. Co., 27 Mich., 315, 1873; 10 Amer. R'y Rep., 283.

24. Charter. The subscriber to stock is bound by the articles of association, and cannot allege ignorance of their contents. Kisch v. Central Venezuela R'y Co., 8 De Gex, Jones & Smith, 122; 63 Eng. Ch., 122. 1865.

25. Construction. Certain special contracts of subscription construed. Bucksport and Bangor R. R. Co. v. Buck, 65 Me., 536, 1876; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 293; St. Paul, Stillwater and Taylor's Falls R. R. Co. v. Robbins, 23 Minn., 439, 1877; Minneapolis and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Morrison, 28 ib., 308, 1877; Waukon and Mississippi R. R. Co. v. Dwyer, 49 Ia., 121, 1878; Bucher v. Dillsburg and Mechanicsburg R. R. Co., 76 Pa. St., 306, 1874; Van Allen v. Ill. Central R. R. Co., 4 Abbott's Court of Appeal Decisions (N. Y.), 443, 1886; Buffalo and Jamestown R. R. Co. v. Gifford, 87 N. Y., 294, 1882; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 337; Buffalo and Jamestown R. R. Co. v. Clark, 22 Hun (N. Y.), 359, 1880; affirmed, Same v. Same, 87 N. Y., 632, 1882; Stuart v. Valley R. R. Co., 32 Grattan (Va.), 146, 1879.

26. Convertible notes. A contract for the subscription of loan notes convertible into stock of a railway corporation construed. Campbell v. London and Brighton R. R. Co., 5 Hare (Eng. Ch.), 519. 1846.

27. Correspondence. The defendant applied by letter to a projected railway company for one hundred shares, undertaking to accept the same, or any less number, and to pay the deposits. He received a letter of allotment for sixty shares. This letter was headed "Not transferable." In an action by the company against the defendant to recover the amount of the deposits, held, that there was no binding contract, the proposal being absolute, and the acceptance conditional, it containing a qualification that the contract was not to be transferable. Duke v. Andrews, 5 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 496. 1848.

28. Delivery. In a suit in the name of a corporation for the use and benefit of a third person, upon a subscription, where it appeared that the paper was originally got up by a voluntary movement among citizens, and its actual delivery to, or acceptance by, the company was not shown, it is error to rule that the production of the instrument at the trial is evidence of its delivery to the plaintiff. Parker v. Northern Central Michigan R. R. Co., 83 Mich., 23. 1875.

29. — G. was active in soliciting subscriptions for the building of a railway. He took a book from the agent of the company, subscribed therein himself and persuaded others to subscribe, and kept the book about six months. Because of some difference with the agent of the company about the payment for his services, he cut his name out of the book and returned it to the company. In a suit by the latter for the amount of his subscription, held, that he had perfected a contract with the company, and he was just as much bound as if he had left his name in the book. Greer v. Chartiers R'y Co., 96 Pa. St., 891. 1880.

30. Dissolution; successor. Defendant and others signed the following instrument: "We, the undersigned citizens of Unionville and vicinity, pledge ourselves to subscribe for and take stock in and for the construction of the Lake Ontario Shore Railroad to the amount set opposite our names respectively, on condition said road be located and built through or north of the village of Unionville, in Parma." Held, that it was not a subscription to plaintiff's capital; that it was in no sense a party to the agreement, and could not maintain an action thereon, the plaintiff being a new and different company, though owning the same railway as that named in the agreement. Lake Ontario Shore R. R. Co. v. Curtiss, 80 N. Y., 219, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 362.

31. — It appeared that plaintiff's road and property, with its rights and franchises, were sold under a mortgage, that a new company was organized which became the owner thereof, and that the road was afterwards built by the new company; plaintiff did not offer to furnish defendant with stock in the new road. Held, that these facts did not aid the plaintiff; that plaintiff, although not formally dissolved, had in fact ceased to exist for any practical purpose; that its certificate of stock, if now issued, would not represent the road, or anything else of value, and so that defendant would receive no consideration for his subscription, if made, or for his money, if paid. Id.

32. Escrow. Appellee subscribed to the capital stock of appellant, and delivered such subscription to a director of the company, in escrow, not to be delivered to the company except on condition that the county of Kendall failed to vote a subscription to the company. Held, in the absence of proof that Kendall county had failed to vote a subscription to the company, there was no delivery to the company, and no recovery could be had against appellee. Ottawa, Oswego and Fox River Valley R. R. Co. v. Hall, 1 Bradwell (Ill.), 612. 1878.

33. — That the committee, to whom the subscription list had been intrusted, with directions to turn it over to the company whenever they became satisfied that the latter had complied with its conditions, did in fact deliver it in the exercise of their discretion, does not render the contract binding upon the subscribers. Davenport and St. Paul R. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 40 Ia., 477. 1875.

34. Estoppel. An act of parliament (6 Geo. 4, c. xxx), to enable a company to form a railway, prescribed the form of action against the proprietors for calls, and enacted that it should only be necessary to prove that the defendant was a proprietor, and that the calls had been made in pursuance of the act; it also recited that a sum of money had been subscribed by the proprietors, under a contract binding their heirs; whereas, in fact, that sum had not been subscribed, and no contract under seal had been executed by the proprietors. Held, that a defendant who, with a knowledge of the misrecital, had paid previous calls, and acted as a proprietor, was estopped from questioning the validity of the act, upon the ground of the misrecital; and that it was not incumbent upon the plaintiff to show that the defendant had executed a contract under seal, in order to prove that he was a proprietor within the meaning of the act. Cromford and High Peak R'y Co. v. Lacey, 3 Younge & Jervis (Exchequer), 80. 1829.

35. — The defendant signed, with others, a subscription which contained a condition that no assessment of over two per cent. should be laid upon the stock subscribed until the whole sum which should be estimated as necessary to complete the railway should have been subscribed. The defendant was active in soliciting subscriptions; was present and acted at stockholders' meeting for the election of directors, and was himself elected a director, and accepted the office; and was present and acted at different meetings of the directors, at which a surveyor was appointed to locate the line, by-laws were adopted, and resolutions passed for advertising for proposals for constructing the road. He was also present, but it did not appear that he acted, at a meeting at which an assessment of forty per cent. was laid upon the subscribed stock, and a report made by the president and accepted, that he and the secretary had signed a contract for the construction of the road, and that the contractors had commenced work. At one meeting of the directors, at which the defendant was not present, the president and secretary had been authorized to sign the contract referred to, and an assessment of fifteen per cent. had been levied upon the stock, but the defendant was present at the next meeting at which the record of that meeting was read and approved. Held, that the defendant was not estopped by any of these facts from showing that the condition of the subscription had not been complied with, and that it was not binding upon him. Ridgefield and New York R. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 46 Conn., 375. 1878. But see York Tramways Co. v. Willows, 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Eng. Q. B. D.), 492. 1881.

36. — If a subscriber acquiesce in the progress of the work by payment of his subscription, assessed or otherwise, he cannot afterwards object, either to the failure originally to get subscribers to the whole stock or to a material amendment of the charter; but the fact that he merely pays his assessments to have the route surveyed is not sufficient to show such acquiescence. Memphis Branch R. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 57 Ga., 240. 1876.

37. Extension of line. If a statute in force at the time of a subscription authorizes an extension of the line of the railroad, the subsequent exercise of such power by the company will not affect the subscription. Jewett v. Valley R'y Co., 34 Ohio St., 601. 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 21.

38. Extension of time. The consideration of a written contract for the payment of money was the construction of a railway to Leon by July 1, 1872. On the back of the instrument was the following written agreement: "I hereby agree to extend the time of completing the within road to Leon to September 1, 1872, and this note shall have the same value as if the said road is completed by July 1, 1872." Held, that the effect of this written agreement was the creation of a new contract, differing from the first only in date of performance, and that it was sustained by a good and valid consideration. Burlington and Mo. River R. R. Co. v. Penney, 38 Ia., 255. 1874.

39. Illegal increase of stock. It being stipulated in the note that the consideration therefor was to be capital stock of the railway company, which was to be limited to a certain specified amount, an illegal increase thereof would constitute a valid defense to the note, if such illegal stock was not distinguishable from the legal. Merrill v. Gamble, 46 Ia., 615, 1877; Merrill v. Beaver, ib., 646, 1877.

40. — But where the illegal stock can be distinguished from the legal stock, the issue of such illegal stock constitutes no defense to the subscription. Merrill v. Beaver, 50 Ia., 404. 1879.

41. Infancy. To a declaration in debt for calls, charging the defendant as the holder of shares under a railway act incorporated with Stat. 8 and 9 Vict., c. 16, it is no answer to plead that defendant, when he became indebted, was an infant; or that defendant is sued as the registered holder of shares, that when he became so registered he was an infant, and that he has not, since he attained his age, been registered anew, or ratified the original registration, or held the shares except as such registered holder as before mentioned. For (per Lord Denman, C. J., and Patterson, J.), by the express wording of Stat. 8 and 9 Vict., c. 16, an infant is liable for calls. At all events (per Coleridge and Erle, JJ.), if he is sued after obtaining his age, and still holds the shares; for such holding is a ratification. Cork and Bandon Ry Co., v. Cazenove, 10 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 935; 59 E. C. L., 934. 1847.

42. Interest. A subscriber to the capital stock of a corporation, who has failed to pay for the shares as required by the terms of his subscription, is chargeable with interest from the time of the default, and cannot compel the company to issue the stock until both the principal and the interest are paid. Gould v. Town of Oneonta, 71 N. Y., 298. 1877.

43. Married women. When a married woman subscribes to capital stock of a railway company, by which she agrees to take and pay for a certain number of shares of said stock, but makes default in payment, and action is brought to charge her separate property with the amount of such subscription, held, that in the absence of any proof that either party dealt on the credit of such property, equity will not imply or enforce a charge against the same. Rice v. Railroad Co., 32 Ohio St., 380. 1877. But see, contra, Williams v. Urmston, 35 ib., 296, 1880, overruling same.

44. Mortgage. Where a party subscribing to the capital stock of a railroad company executed his note for his subscription, secured by mortgage on real estate, and the company at the same time guarantied to him that his annual dividends should pay the interest on the note, and that, in consideration of the transfer of those dividends, the company would pay the interest on the same, and indemnify the maker against the payment of any interest, and against the payment of the principal also; and it happened that there were no dividends, and the stock was worthless at the maturity of the note, held, that, as against the company, on bill to foreclose, the facts could be set up as a defense, on the ground of recoupment or equitable set-off, and that the same rule applied to a purchaser of the note and mortgage before maturity on bill by him to foreclose. Haskell v. Brown, 65 Ill., 29. 1872.

45. Option. A railroad company having resolved, on the 25th of July, to create a certain number of new shares, gave, at the same time, an option to every registered proprietor to take a certain number of those shares, provided he declared such option on or before the 10th of August following. One of the registered proprietors, residing at Naples, was not apprised of the resolutions until the 12th of August. But on that day he wrote to the secretary of the company declaring his option to take his proportion of the new shares. Held, that the time fixed by the resolutions was final, and that the plaintiff's declaration was too late. Pearson v. London and Croydon R. R. Co., 14 Simons (Eng. Ch.), 541. 1845.

46. Organization of company. By § 1 of an act of incorporation, a railway company was declared to "be a body politic and corporate;" and in a subsequent section it was enacted "that when $100,000 shall have been subscribed, and $1 on each share shall have been paid in, the said company may organize and proceed to work." Held, that this requirement was sufficiently complied with when $100,000 was subscribed, and a sum in gross paid in equal to $1 upon every share subscribed. Held, further, that a failure to comply strictly with these requirements would not affect the corporate existence, but would be an irregularity only, which could not defeat the right of the corporation to recover a stock subscription. S. and A. R. R. Co. v. Ezell, 14 So. Car., 281. 1880.

47. — A subscriber to the stock of a railway company cannot set up in defense to an action upon his subscription any mere irregularity in the organization of the company, provided it be a corporation de facto, proceeding without interference of the state authorities in the construction and completion and maintenance of its road. Monroe v. Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw R. R. Co., 28 Mich., 272, 1873; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 273. See, also, Montpelier and Wells River R. R. Co. v. Langdon, 46 Vt., 284, 1873; Cayuga Lake R. R. Co. v. Kyle, 64 N. Y., 185, 1876.

48. Partnership. The evidence reviewed in case of a subscription by a partnership, and the power of a partner to make a stock subscription considered. Ottawa, Oscego and Fox River Valley R. R. Co. v. McMath, 4 Bradwell (Ill.), 356. 1879.

49. Payable in land. A complaint alleged the subscription by defendant to the stock of plaintiff's company of fifty acres of land, and a refusal to convey, and demanded payment in money for the land so subscribed, without alleging a promise to pay money or a previous demand for money. Held, on demurrer, to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Cheraw and Chester R. R. Co. v. Garland, 14 So. Car., 63. 1880.

50. Payment of first instalment. Payment of five per cent. on the subscription, or something equivalent in effect, is necessary to entitle the subscriber to participate in the organization, or to make the subscription effectual; but if the requisite amount is paid in by the other subscribers, credit might be given for this first payment so as to entitle the subscriber to all the privilege of the rest. Peninsular R'y Co. v. Duncan, 28 Mich., 180, 1873; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 248.

51. — A subscriber to the stock of a corporation cannot escape his liability to pay his subscription on the ground that he did not pay the sum required to be paid by the statute at the time he subscribed. Pittsburgh, Wheeling and Kentucky R. R. Co. v. Applegate, 21 W. Va., 172, 1882; Minneapolis and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Bassett, 20 Minn., 535, 1874.

52. — The act of February 19, 1849, regulating railway companies, provides that where subscriptions are made to the stock of such company previous to the issue of letters patent, no subscription shall be valid unless the party making the same shall, at the time of subscribing, pay $5 on each and every share for the use of the company. Held, that giving a note for a subscription was not a payment within the meaning of the statute. Held, further, that such a subscriber, who had taken no other part in the affairs of the corporation, was not estopped from setting up the absence of such payment as a defense to an action of assumpsit for the subscription. Boyd v. Peach Bottom R'y Co., 90 Pa. St., 169. 1879.

53. — A subscription to the capital stock of a corporation organized under the general railroad act (ch. 140, Laws of 1850), made after the formation of the corporation, is invalid where ten per cent. of the amount subscribed has not been paid; and in an action by the corporation against a subscriber to recover the amount subscribed, the latter is not estopped from denying such payment because of a statement in the subscription paper that ten per cent. has been paid. A statute cannot be evaded by estoppel. New York and Oswego Midland R. R. Co. v. Van Horn, 57 N. Y., 473. 1874.

54. Pleadings. Where the declaration upon a contract of subscription described the contract as containing the ordinary dollar mark prefixed to the figures 500 set opposite the defendant's name, a contract without such mark prefixed to the figures, or to any in the column, and where there is nothing in the instrument to indicate that the sum set opposite the defendant's name meant so many dollars, is variant from that described, and not admissible in evidence under the pleadings. Jacksonville, Northwestern and South-eastern R'y Co. v. Brown, 67 Ill., 201. 1878.

55. — An averment as to a subscription not within the statute, that defendant, being desirous that the company should proceed in the building of its road, etc., in consideration thereof did subscribe and sign such subscription, setting it out, in the absence of any allegation that the company undertook to build the road in response to the subscription or in reliance on it, or that in building it afterwards it acted on such reliance, or that the company or its agents ever prepared, proposed or sanctioned such subscription, or ever received, accepted or in any way recognized it, fails to allege any consideration for the promise declared upon. Parker v. Northern Central Michigan R. R. Co., 33 Mich., 23. 1875.

56. — Pleadings examined in actions upon stock subscriptions. Ruckman v. Ridgfield Park R. R. Co., 38 N. J. Law, 98, 1875; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 31; Lewisburg, etc., R. R. Co. v. Stees, 77 Pa. St., 332, 1875; Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Hall, 26 Ohio St., 310, 1875; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 56; Cheraw and Chester R. R. Co. v. White, 14 So. Car., 51, 1880.

57. — Upon an unconditional promise to pay a corporation a certain sum of money, either as an ordinary debt or as a subscription to its capital stock, it is unnecessary to aver that the requisite amount of capital has been subscribed, as provided by the charter, in order to present a good cause of action. Lail v. Mt. Sterling Coal Road Co., 13 Bush (Ky.), 82. 1877.

58. Release. The abandonment of part of a railway is no defense to a claim for calls; nor is the non-subscription of the prescribed capital a defense. Jennings, In re, 1 Irish Ch., 236. 1851.

59. Right to withdraw. Until the association is ready to file the articles of association, a subscriber may withdraw. Garrett v. Dillsburg and Mechanicsburg R. R. Co., 78 Pa. St., 465. 1875.

60. — If a subscriber permits his name to remain and the articles to be filed, his obligation is final and he cannot set up his omission against his associates. Ib.

61. Sale of stock below par. A corporation may dispose of its stock for less than its face value, and the transaction, as between the corporation and the purchaser, will be valid, unless prohibited by statute, and there is no such prohibition in Colorado. Harrison v. Arkansas Valley R'y Co., 4 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 264. 1882.

62. Signature. Where the signature of a subscription is denied it is competent to show a subsequent ratification, although the signature was originally made without authority. Houston and Texas Central R. R. Co. v. Chandler, 51 Tex., 416. 1879.

63. Street railways. Several persons signed a contract to pay to a street railway company a certain sum each, provided that the company would purchase a particular lot of land and put its depot and other buildings thereon, the subscriptions to be payable on demand "when the sum required is subscribed hereto." At the trial of an action on this contract, it was shown that the amount required to purchase the lot was $2,000, and that this was known before the paper was written, and was stated to the defendant when he signed it, and that a person had agreed to make up whatever was wanting to complete the sum of $2,000; that $600 was subscribed on the paper, and the balance to make up the $2,000 was paid. Held, that the action could be maintained. Springfield Street R'y Co. v. Sleeper, 121 Mass., 29. 1876.

64. — There can be no recovery upon a subscription to the stock of a street railway company, made before its organization, where it is not shown that the defendant, after the subscription of the requisite amount of stock, subscribed articles of association in which were set forth the number of directors to manage the company and their names, as required by § 1, 3 Ind. Stat., 422, and it does not appear that he ever assented to the number or names of the directors. Reed v. Richmond Street R. R. Co., 50 Ind., 342. 1875.

Conditional Subscriptions.

65. Tender of stock. A subscriber cannot defeat a recovery of his subscription on the ground that no certificate of stock has been tendered to him. Slipher v. Earhart, 88 Ind., 178, 1882; South Ga. and Fla. R. R. Co. v. Ayres, 56 Ga., 230, 1876.

66. — A tender of stock held necessary to enable the plaintiff to sue upon a subscription. Lawrence v. Smith, 50 Ia., 708; Cooper v. McKee, 49 Ia., 286, 1878; Courtright v. Deeds, 37 Ia., 503, 1878; St. Paul, Stillwater and Taylor's Falls R. R. Co. v. Robbins, 23 Minn., 439, 1877.

67. Unlawful act of agent. If one subscribes to the stock of a corporation for and in the name of another without authority, he thereby binds himself, and becomes the equitable owner of the stock. A transfer thereof from the person in whose name the subscription is made is not necessary — it is sufficient if the stock be carried to the account of the subscriber on the stock ledger of the company. State ex rel. v. Smith, 48 Vt., 266; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 394. 1876.

68. Validity. Subscriptions are only binding upon the subscribers when they are so made as to bind the corporation; and as the statute creates no obligation on the corporation, except upon subscriptions regularly made, no others can be enforced unless they were made upon some actual consideration or agreement binding the company. Parker v. Northern Central Michigan R. R. Co., 83 Mich., 23. 1875.

69. — A subscriber may show in defense the failure of the corporation to obtain the requisite amount of stock; because his subscription is upon the implied condition that the aggregate amount required by the statute shall be subscribed. Monroe v. Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw R. R. Co., 28 Mich., 272, 1873; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 273.

70. What constitutes a subscription. An agreement to subscribe for stock in a corporation is not a subscription. Mt. Sterling Coalroad Co. v. Little, 14 Bush (Ky.), 429. 1879.

II. CONDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

71. Amount subscribed. A subscription with a supplemental agreement to be payable in work and materials, made in good faith, is valid, and such subscription is properly counted in making up the amount necessary to enable the corporation to collect its subscriptions, where the other subscriptions are conditioned upon a certain sum being subscribed. Richfield and New York R. R. Co. v. Brush, 43 Conn., 86, 1875; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 18.

72. — An agreement to subscribe for shares of a corporation upon a stipulated condition is not binding unless the condition be complied with. So held as to a condition specifying the amount of other subscriptions required. Santa Cruz R. R. Co. v. Schuartz, 53 Cal., 106. 1878.

73. — A conditional subscription held valid and to constitute a part of the amount of the subscription required as a condition precedent to bind other subscribers. Bucksport and Bangor R. R. Co. v. Buck, 63 Me., 81, 1878; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 10.

74. — The defendant subscribed an agreement to take the amount of shares set against his name in the stock of the plaintiff, agreeably to foregoing conditions, one of which was that no assessment, except for a preliminary survey and location, should be made nor any work upon the line commenced until the full amount was secured for its completion to (or as far as to) Newport. The subscriptions were less in amount than the actual cost; and, if a deduction of invalid conditional subscriptions, were much less than the cost estimated by the engineer. Held, that the defendant's subscription was invalid. Belfast and Moosehead Lake R. R. Co. v. Cottrell, 66 Me., 185, 1876; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 35.

75. Assignment. G. executed a promissory note to a railway company to aid in the construction of a road between two points named in the note. At the time of its execution it was understood that the note, with others of like purport, if they reached a certain amount, were to be turned over to another company which was to construct the road; they did not reach the amount, and the road was constructed by plaintiff, who was the assignee of the payee of the note. Held, that upon compliance with the other conditions of the note it was collectible by plaintiff. Merrill v. Gamble, 46 Ia., 615,

Conditional Subscriptions.

1877; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 65; Merrill v. Beaver, ib., 646, 1877.

76. Company not organized. A subscription to the stock of a corporation prior to the procurement of its charter is absolute and a condition attached is void. Caley v. Philadelphia and Chester County R. R. Co., 80 Pa. St., 363. 1876.

77. Completion of railway. A ruling that the word "completed" in a subscription has a different meaning from what it has in a contract for the construction of the road is held not error; the purpose of such a condition, when embodied in a subscription, is accomplished when the road is put in a condition for regular business. Tower v. Detroit, Lansing and Lake Michigan R. R. Co., 84 Mich., 328. 1876.

78. — Whether a railway company has finished its road and put it into full operation is a question for the jury. Toledo and Ann Arbor R. R. Co. v. Johnson, 49 Mich., 148. 1882.

79. — A subscription was conditioned to pay a certain proportion when the railway was graded and a certain further sum when it was ironed. The road was graded but not ironed, and the time for its completion had elapsed. Held, that, as the company did not bind itself to build the road, the contract was not valid for want of mutuality; that nothing short of full performance would render it binding upon the defendant. The subscribers could not be held liable on the grading alone. Gray v. Hinton, 7 Federal Reporter, 81. 1881.

80. — A subscription provided that if the Cincinnati Southern Railway should be permanently located and constructed through Lexington "we will pay the sums set opposite our names in equal instalments at six, twelve and eighteen months from the first of July, 1873, unto Thomas Mitchell, as trustee, . . . to be used and applied by him only toward paying the damages, cost, etc., in acquiring the right of way," etc. The completion of the road held not to be a condition precedent to the payment of the money subscribed. Berryman v. Cincinnati Southern R'y Co., 14 Bush (Ky.), 755. 1879.

81. — The leasing of a part of the road between two points is not a compliance with the contract to construct a road between said points. Lawrence v. Smith, 57 Ia., 701, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 604.

82. — The terms of the subscription being complied with it is no defense that the railway has not been built as described in its charter. Stowell v. Stowell, 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Mich.), 598. 1882. See, also, Chartiers R'y Co. v. Hodgins, 85 Pa. St., 501, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 526.

83. Compliance. Substantial compliance with the conditions of a subscription as to the time of completion of a railway is sufficient. C. D. and M. R. R. Co. v. Schewe, 45 Ia., 79. 1876.

84. — A subscription bound the maker to pay $300 upon the completion of the G. and M. Railroad within a certain time. The articles of incorporation described the initial point of the road as G. Held, that the building of the road to a point three and a half miles from G., and there connecting with another railway over which its trains were run to G., was not a compliance with the condition. Cooper v. McKee, 53 Ia., 239. 1880. But see Detroit, Lansing and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Starnes, 38 Mich., 698. 1878.

85. — Where a written promise was made to pay a railway company $100 if its road was built and equipped and trains running to a given point by a day named, but if not completed on such line within such time the obligation to be void, and the proof showed that the company ran an engine, tender, one passenger coach, and one or two flat cars over the line two days before the time limited, but places on the road were only half tied, and regular trains were not run over the same until several months after the time, it was held that no recovery could be had on the obligation. Paris and Danville R. R. Co. v. Henderson, 89 Ill., 86. 1878.

86. — A right of action on a contract of subscription promising to pay a certain sum "as soon as the cars shall run to B, upon a completed railroad from W.," will not be defeated by the fact that the company building the road does not own the rolling stock by which it is operated. Courtright v. Deeds, 37 Ia., 503. 1873.

87. — The terms of subscription to aid in the construction of a railway contained the stipulation that the money should be paid "in instalments of five per cent. so long as the work should be in actual progress," and that if the railway company named should fail to construct the road, then the amount subscribed should be paid on the same terms and conditions to any other company which would grade and tie a road between the points designated. Held, that the grading and tying were not conditions precedent to the payment of the subscription. Iowa Northern Central R'y Co. v. Bliobenes, 41 Ia., 287. 1875.

88. — Voluntary subscriptions in aid of a proposed railway, when accepted, and the road constructed in accordance with the conditions of the promise, become valid and binding contracts. Michigan Midland and Canada R. R. Co. v. Bacon, 33 Mich., 466. 1876.

89. — By the terms of a contract between W. and a railway company, he became bound to pay the latter $1,500 if within a specified time it should have completed its road to West Union and have done half the grading between that place and the point of intersection with the M. and St. P. Railway. Held, that the company had not complied with the contract by completing the road between West Union and the point of intersection named, while it failed to construct its road to West Union from the other direction, and that the road must have been completed to West Union on the one side and half the grading done on the other. B. C. R. and M. R. R. Co. v. Whitney, 43 Ia., 113. 1876.

90. Construction. Conditional subscriptions construed. Hanover Junction, etc., R. R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St., 36, 1876; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 442; Emmitt v. Springfield, etc., R. R. Co., 31 Ohio St., 23, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 266; Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Brown, 26 Ohio St., 223, 1875; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 341; North and South R. R. Co. v. Winfree, 51 Ga., 318, 1874; Lamoille Valley R. R. Co. v. Marsh, 49 Vt., 87, 1876.

91. Depot. A contract of subscription bound defendant to pay a certain sum to a railroad company upon the construction of its road to a depot, to be located within three-fourths of a mile of the corporate limits of the town of C., for which defendant was to receive certificates of stock. By a subsequent contract he surrendered his certificates of stock on condition that the company should construct its road by D. to said town of C. Held, that, under proper construction of these contracts, defendant was liable on completion of the road to a depot located within the distance of the corporate limits stipulated in the original contract. In determining the distance mentioned, the measurement should be by a straight line from the corporate limits to the depot; and if the depot is in the prescribed limit, it is sufficient, though all the side-tracks and switches are not. Courtwright v. Strickler, 37 Ia., 382. 1873.

92. — Under a contract of subscription to a railroad company of the character above mentioned, the jury were properly instructed that the point from which measurement is to be made, in order to determine whether the depot is built within the distance prescribed, must be the corporate limits of the town, without regard to buildings or improvements. Ib.

93. — A railway company being about to construct its line through a town, the citizens, among whom was one A., agreed to subscribe to the company $150,000, of which A. agreed to pay $500, and also to furnish suitable depot grounds. The company undertook to complete its road in one year. Subsequently the citizens provided depot grounds which proved unsuitable, and it was thereupon agreed that they should buy other grounds, and that the amount paid therefor by each citizen should be credited on his subscription. A. paid his whole $500 to buy depot grounds, the title to which afterwards became vested in the company. Subsequently, the company having failed to complete its road within the time stipulated, A. brought suit against it to recover his $500. Held, that there was no new contract substituted for the old one, and that the company was not released from its obligation to complete the road in the time specified. Held, therefore, that plaintiff was entitled to recover. Texas and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Fitch, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Tex.), 312. 1883.

94. — A subscription list, signed to aid in the construction of a railroad, provided that a certain payment should be made when the road intersected with another "at Wheatland" and "has been permanently located to and within the limits of the town of Wheatland, with a station at the same." Held, that a construction of the road through the town and of the depot just outside of its limits was not a compliance with the terms of the contract. Davenport and St. Paul R. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 40 Ia., 477. 1875.

95. — A railway company obligated itself to locate its depot at the nearest practicable point, within one mile of the court-house. The word practicable was held not to be used in the contract as synonymous with possible. The road was only bound to locate its depot at the nearest point, within one mile of the court-house, at which it could be done at a reasonable and ordinary cost, with reference to all the circumstances under which it was done and in view of the objects and purposes inducing the contract. Wooters v. International and Great Northern R. R. Co., 54 Tex., 294, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 100.

96. Escrow. An agreement between the plaintiff and the citizens of V. stipulated that certain subscription notes should remain in the hands of W. until a certain designated right of way had been secured, when the notes should be "turned over" to plaintiff, who thereupon should enter into an absolute contract for the construction of an extension of its line upon certain specified conditions, and that it would not locate a depot on such extension within seven miles of V. Held, 1. That W. was authorized, without further direction from the parties, to deliver the notes to plaintiff. 2. That a failure to incorporate in the last contract the condition respecting the location of the depot would not constitute a defense to an action upon one of the subscription notes, when, in fact, the condition had been complied with by plaintiff. B., C. R. and M. R. R. Co. v. Palmer, 42 Ia., 222. 1875.

97. Illegal conditions. Persons subscribing to the stock of a corporation must take notice of the law creating it and defining its powers, and if the directors, in order to secure stock subscriptions, propose to do that which they are prohibited from doing by the statute, no subscriber can be heard to say, as against the corporation, that he has been misled and deceived thereby. Peters v. Lincoln and Northwestern R. R. Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 319, 1883; 4 McCrary, 269.

98. Parol conditions. In an action for the amount of a subscription the defendant alleged that it was expressly stipulated by the agent of the company, in the presence of S., that the defendant's subscription was not to be paid until a certain amount had been subscribed. The agent, on cross-examination, denied having made such representations. Defendant then called a witness to prove that the agent had made such representations, although they were made at a time previous to the subscription. The court excluded the offer. Held, that the testimony should have been admitted as tending to corroborate the defendant, and as part of the res gestæ. Rinesmith v. Peoples' Freight Ry Co., 90 Pa. St., 262, 1879; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 374.

99. — Where a note was given for a subscription "to become due and payable when the track of said railroad shall be built" through a named county, and the "cars shall have run thereon," a plea which set up a further condition that the road should be completed through the county within two years was held bad, as attempting to change by parol the written agreement. Cairo and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Parker, 84 Ill., 613. 1877.

100. — Where, previous to signing a subscription, the defendant objected to signing, for the reason that certain conditions on which the subscription was to be made did not appear therein, and was assured by the president of the company that these conditions should be considered a part of the contract, parol evidence of these conditions is admissible in a suit on the subscription, and the non-performance of them is a defense. McCarty v. Selinsgrove and North Branch R. R. Co., 87 Pa. St., 332. 1878.

101. — In a subscription the covenant was to pay money on call. In a suit therefor the defendant offered to prove a parol agreement that he might pay in labor and materials, without offering to show that he attempted to ascertain when and where he could do so, or making a tender thereof. Held, that the offer was not admissible. McClure v. People's Freight R'y Co., 90 Pa. St., 269, 1879; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 371.

102. Resolution of directors. A subscription was "on condition that in the judgment of the directors . . . a sufficient amount is subscribed . . . to grade and bridge the road, including right of way; . . . otherwise these subscriptions shall be void." The directors passed a resolution that in their "judgment . . . sufficient stock had been subscribed," etc. Held, if the board acted in good faith in passing the resolution, the condition was complied with. Cass v. Pittsburgh, Virginia and Charleston R'y Co., 80 Pa. St., 31. 1875.

103. Route. A subscription to the capital stock of a railway company on the condition that the railroad shall pass through a certain place becomes absolute on the location of the road through the place named. Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Stout, 26 Ohio St., 241, 1875; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 361.

104. — A subscription paper set out the termini of a railway and the route over which it would be constructed. Held, that this was a contract that the termini and the route should be as stated; and, if the company materially changed them, a subscriber would be released. A railway company took subscriptions for its road with specified route and termini; it passed a resolution changing them in material points. Held, that this was evidence of abandonment of the route, etc., in the subscription. Caley v. Philadelphia and Chester County R. R. Co., 80 Pa. St., 363. 1876.

105. — In an action by the railroad company against defendant for the balance unpaid upon his subscription for stock, held, that the fact of a failure to comply literally with the provisions of the statute relating to the description of the location of the proposed railroad would not defeat a recovery. Cayuga Lake R. R. Co. v. Kyle, 5 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 659. 1875.

106. — Conditions as to the location of the line of a railway held invalid, and the subscriptions enforced without the conditions. Pittsburgh and Steubenville R. R. Co. v. Woodrow, 1 Pittsburgh, 450. 1858.

107. — In an action upon a contract which stipulated that the obligor would pay a certain sum to a railway company, on condition that the company would build, equip and run a train of cars over a railroad between given points, by a certain time, running on the east line of the obligor's land, the complaint alleged the building of the road between the points within the time named, and the running of the train, and that the track was constructed "upon, or as near as practicable upon, the east line of the lands owned by said defendant, and at all points within fifty feet of said east line," alleging no reason for not building the track on the east line, and no waiver of that condition. Held, that the complaint was bad in not showing performance of the condition precedent. Crane v. Indiana North and South R'y Co., 59 Ind., 165. 1877.

108. — A railway company having filed a location in which the line was divided into three divisions, and in which a portion, extending to a point in the town of P., was designated as the first division, was subsequently empowered by statute to build its road in sections, and the road was so built; afterwards a new location was filed, in which the line was not divided into sections and no point in the town of P. was indicated as the end of the first section. In an action by the company to recover assessments against one who, before the relocation, had subscribed for stock in the first section, held, that the failure to fix the end of the first section in the relocation did not release the stockholder. Boston, Barre and Gardner R. R. Co. v. Wellington, 113 Mass., 73. 1873.

109. — A contract of subscription to stock provided for the building of the H. J. and S. R. R., according to the survey made by the P. and R. R. Co. The original route ran within five hundred feet of M.'s mill. M. contended that this change was material; that it was the location of the original survey which induced his subscription, and that his interests were seriously compromised by the alteration, and in the court rejected. Held, that the court erred, and that he should have been permitted to show that the alteration in the route was, as to him and his interest, a material variation. Moore v. Hanover Junction and Susquehanna R. R. Co., 94 Pa. St., 324, 1880; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 256.

110. — An agreement to pay a railway company a certain sum of money, in consideration that the company will adopt a line along and near a public highway, instead of one already surveyed, is not contrary to public policy and will be enforced. Cedar Rapids and St. Paul R'y Co. v. Spafford, 41 Ia., 292. 1875.

111. — Public policy does not prohibit voluntary contributions to railway companies for purposes of construction, etc., or render void a contract based upon the consideration that the road shall be located in or through a certain locality, unless the public interest is to be sacrificed by it. Berryman v. Cincinnati Southern R'y Co., 14 Bush (Ky.), 753. 1879.

112. — But where officers of such corporations undertake to receive donations for their own private use, or make contracts by which they are to be paid for using an influence to locate a line of railway in a particular locality, such contracts will be held void as against public policy. Ib.

113. Stock. A promise to pay a certain sum to a railroad company when a certain amount of the work of construction is done, with an agreement on the part of the company to deliver to the party, upon the payment of the money, a certificate for a like amount of its capital stock, on demand, is a subscription to the stock of the road to assist in its construction, and not a purchase of stock. Ottawa, Oswego and Fox River Valley R. R. Co. v. Black, 79 Ill., 262. 1875.

114. — The lease of the railway will not discharge such a subscriber. Ib.

115. Terminus. Where a railway company changes a terminus of its road from one county into an adjoining county, under the act of 1872 (69 Ohio L., 163), the mere fact that the route to the new terminus, selected by the company, passes through a portion of a third county, will not invalidate existing subscriptions to the capital stock. Jewett v. Valley R'y Co., 34 Ohio St., 601, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 21.

116. — A change in the terminus of a railway, though made to injure a subscriber to its capital stock, will not release the subscriber. White Hall and Plattsburg R. R. Co. v. Myers, 16 Abbott's Practice (N. S.), 34, 1872; Greeneville, etc., R. R. Co. v. Johnson, 8 Baxter (Tenn.), 332, 1874.

117. Time. Where by the terms of a promissory note the maker undertook to pay a certain sum to a railway company two years after its trains should be running to a point specified, in consideration of the construction of the line and the opening of a certain street within sixty days, held, that the failure to construct the road and open the street within sixty days did not relieve the payer from the obligation of payment. Traer v. Stuart, 46 Iowa, 15. 1877.

118. — In a written instrument, by the terms of which the obligor became bound to pay a certain sum of money to a railway company when the line was completed and the cars running between designated points, the words, "The road to be finished by September 1, 1872," were held not to imply a condition precedent. The obligor was not released from payment by the fact that the road was not completed at the time fixed in the instrument. Davis v. Cobban, 39 Ia., 392, 1874; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 88.

119. — In an action upon a note given to a railroad company, to be paid "when the track of said railroad shall be laid through White county and cars shall run thereon," the defendant pleaded that the sole consideration was that such road should be built within three years from the date of the note, and averred that such road was not built within three years, etc. Held, that the circuit court erred in overruling a demurrer to defendant's plea. The plea was bad on general demurrer. Cairo and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Delap, 7 Bradwell (Ill.), 60. 1880.

120. Voluntary payments; recovery back. An express condition upon which a note was made payable, "that a depot be established within eighty rods of the present town of Wheatland," was not fulfilled by the building of a depot within eighty rods of the limits of the town as extended after the note was given. The recorded plat of the town at the date of the execution of the note will govern in the construction of the contract. Where a note for railway shares was given upon the condition that "a depot be established within eighty rods of the present town of Wheatland," and, before the depot was established, the maker made certain voluntary payments, held, that he could not recover the sums paid if no promise, fraud or mistake were shown. Davenport and St. Paul R. R. Co. v. Rogers, 39 Ia., 298, 1874; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 92; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 85.

121. Waiver. The defendant subscribed for shares of the stock of a railway company payable on certain conditions, one of which was that the road should be built to F. prior to a certain date. Subsequently he gave notes for the amount, payable on the happening of the conditions, except the one above specified. Held, that the omitted condition was thereby waived. Slipher v. Earhart, 88 Ind., 173. 1882.

122. — The officiating as a judge of an election of an incorporated company is a waiver of any alleged condition attached to the subscription for its stock, and renders such subscription absolute. Pittsburgh and Steubenville R. R. Co. v. Proudfit, 2 Pittsburgh, 85. 1860.

III. CONSOLIDATION.

123. Effect upon subscriptions. Three existing corporations were consolidated. A subscription was made after the agreement for consolidation, but before it was filed in the office of the secretary of the commonwealth. Held, that the filing of the contract in the office of the secretary was not necessary to validate the subscription. McClure v. People's Freight R'y Co., 90 Pa. St., 269, 1879; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 371.

124. — A company formed by the consolidation of two or more corporations cannot, under the statute (Comp. L., § 2847), make valid assessments upon subscriptions to the capital of one of the original corporations, before the consolidation papers are filed in the office of the secretary of state; the statute is the only source of the corporate existence of the consolidated company, and its conditions are imperative. Peninsular R'y Co. v. Tharp, 28 Mich., 506. 1874.

125. — Under the railway consolidation act of April 10, 1856 (53 Ohio L., 143), corporations, parties to an agreement to consolidate, continue in the full enjoyment of their powers and franchises respectively, and may accept subscriptions to their capital stock at any time before consolidation is consummated by filing the agreement of consolidation with the secretary of state. Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Brown, 26 Ohio St., 223, 1875; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 341.

126. — Where such companies consolidate under the act of 1856, the new corporation thereby created may perform the conditions named in subscriptions to the capital stock of the original companies, and it may also, by performance of the conditions, accept a continuing conditional offer to subscribe such stock. Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Stout, 26 Ohio St., 241, 1875; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 341.

127. — In a suit by a consolidated company to recover assessments upon a subscription to the stock of one of the original corporations, on the ground of a right by succession under the statute, it is essential to a recovery that a consolidation conforming to the statute be proved. Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Drinker, 30 Mich., 124. 1874. See, also, Detroit, Lansing and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Starnes, 38 Mich., 698. 1878.

128. — A subscriber to stock, in an action against him to enforce the collection of assessments by a new corporation formed by consolidation with another company, may question the validity of the consolidation proceedings wherein he took no part, and is not precluded by the fact that such proceedings were sufficient to make the new company a corporation de facto; and no change in the corporation, violating any of the substantial statutory conditions, can bind a dissenting stockholder. Tuttle v. Michigan Air Line R. R. Co., 35 Mich., 247, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 406; Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Drinker, 30 Mich., 124, 1874.

129. — In case of the consolidation of a Michigan with an Indiana corporation, the objection is not open to a subscriber to the former company, when sued upon his subscription by the consolidated company, that it is not alleged or proved that the statutory amount per mile had been subscribed for the entire road, as well in Indiana as in Michigan, where it clearly appears that the requisite amount per mile of the road in Michigan had been subscribed; this requirement of the Michigan statute has exclusive reference to corporations created there for the construction of roads within that state, and was not intended to have any extraterritorial effect. Monroe v. Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw R. R. Co., 28 Mich., 272, 1873; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 273.

130. — Under § 1 of the act of 1856, as amended May 6, 1869, it is a condition precedent to the right to enter into a joint agreement for consolidation that the lines of road of the contracting corporations be first made, or be in process of construction; and a conditional subscriber, who had no knowledge of the progress of consolidation and in no way contributed thereto, may, in an action by the new company as successor to the old, to recover the amount of his subscription, dispute the corporate existence of the plaintiff, on the ground that, at the date of the agreement to consolidate, the road of the company, to whose stock he so subscribed, was neither made nor in process of construction. Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Stout, 26 Ohio St., 241, 1875; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 361.

131. — Two railway enterprises, having been consolidated, differed so widely in their starting points, and the region of country to be traversed, that an original subscriber to the Houston and Great Northern Company might well object that he had not agreed to or authorized such a union; nor did he, by failing to object to a subsequent enlargement of the charter, which, whether it actually gave such power or not, did not, on its face, purport to give any power to consolidate, preclude himself from objecting to a consolidation making so fundamental a change in the objects of the corporation. International and Great Northern R. R. Co. v. Bremond, 53 Tex., 96, 18:0; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 808.

IV. EVIDENCE.

132. Corporate existence. In a suit upon a subscription to a railway company which recognizes the corporation, the existence of the company cannot be disputed, and questions of the regularity of its organization are immaterial. Parker v. Northern Central Michigan R. R. Co., 33 Mich., 23, 1875; Montpelier and Wells River R. R. Co. v. Langdon, 46 Vt., 284, 1873; Lail v. Mt. Sterling Coal Road Co., 13 Bush (Ky.), 32, 1877.

133. Meetings of corporation. The 8 and 9 Vict., c. 17, s. 161, which makes the entries of minutes of meetings signed by the chairman thereof evidence, does not exclude other evidence of the fact. It is competent, therefore, for the company to prove what was done at those meetings by independent evidence. Inglis v. Great Northern R'y Co., 1 Stuart, Milne & Peddie (House of Lords, Scotch App.), 749, 1852.

134. Minute books. A subscriber, sued upon a stock subscription, is not entitled to a rule to inspect the minute books of the directors' meetings, such inspection being desired for the purpose of framing his plea. Birmingham R'y Co. v. White, 1 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 282; 41 E. C. L., 541, 1841.

135. — A statute made the record of proceedings of the company competent evidence, when recorded, and the "records signed by the chairman of the meeting." Held, that the chairman might sign the records of the meeting at the next meeting. West London R'y Co. v. Bernard, 3 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 873; 43 E. C. L., 1015, 1843.

136. Notes. In case of a subscription to the stock of a corporation, the notes given in payment therefor and the receipt issued by the company for payment for the stock, being connected together and part of the same transaction, are admissible in evidence as part of the same contract. Hedge v. Gibson, 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ia.), 69, 1882.

137. Parol evidence. In an action upon a subscription to pay a certain sum upon the completion of a certain railway, where the declaration avers the contract to have been made for a valuable consideration, and the antecedent negotiations out of which the contract grew are relied upon as constituting such consideration, it is proper to allow such preliminary negotiations to be very fully disclosed, and a wide discretion in that regard must be left with the trial judge.

Assessments.

Tower v. Detroit, Lansing and Lake Michigan R. R. Co., 34 Mich., 328. 1876.

138. — Where the original agreement was entire, and a part only reduced to writing, parol evidence of the agreement is admissible. Bross v. Cairo and Vincennes R. R. Co., 9 Bradwell (Ill.), 363. 1881.

139. Stock book. Where the name of an individual appears upon the stock book of a corporation as a stockholder, the presumption is that he is owner of the stock appearing in his name, and such book is proper evidence, to go to the jury to show that he was a subscriber to such stock. Pittsburgh, Wheeling and Kentucky R. R. Co. v. Applegate, 21 W. Va., 172. 1892.

140. — Where the register of shareholders consists of several volumes, the company's seal fixed to the last volume of the series is a sufficient authentication within 8 and 9 Vict., c. 17, s. 9, to make the register evidence, though the name of the defendant as shareholder appears only in the volume to which the seal is not attached. Inglis v. Great Northern R'y Co., 1 Stuart, Milne & Peddie (House of Lords, Scotch App.), 749, 1852; 15 Scotch Session Cases (2d series), House of Lords Cases, 13, 1852.

141. Subscription books. The subscription books opened and kept by the commissioners are in the nature of official registers, and are competent evidence to prove how much per mile had been subscribed to the capital stock. Monroe v. Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw R. R. Co., 28 Mich., 272, 1873; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 273.

V. ASSESSMENTS.

142. Forfeiture. A stock company, not having express power granted to declare a forfeiture of stock for non-payment, may sue for the amount of subscription to stock, and on failure to collect the full amount subscribed may collect the residue by sale of stock subscribed for. Chase v. East Tenn., Va. and Ga. R. R. Co., 5 Lea (Tenn.), 415, 1880; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 349.

143. — A corporation may maintain a suit upon an express agreement to pay assessments on stock, although by a subsequent provision of the subscription paper it is authorized to sell the stock in case of non-payment. Boston, Barre and Gardner R. R. Co. v. Wellington, 113 Mass., 79. 1878.

144. — A railway act authorized the declaration of forfeiture for non-payment of calls, provided that no advantage should be taken of any forfeiture of shares until notice in writing given nor until the declaration of forfeiture should be confirmed at a general or special meeting of the company. A declaration of forfeiture without such confirmation is no defense to an action for calls. London and Brighton R'y Co. v. Fairclough, 2 Manning & Granger, 674; 40 E. C. L., 800, 1841; Birmingham R'y Co. v. Locke, 1 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 256; 41 E. C. L., 527, 1841.

145. Limitations. Where, in 1860, subscriptions were made, subject to future calls by the directors, and the directors made calls after June 1, 1865, held, that the right of action for the amounts due under such calls did not accrue until after June 1, 1865, and therefore suits brought therefor must be controlled by the statutes of limitation as embraced in the Code, and not by the act of March, 1869. Macon and Augusta R. R. Co. v. Vason, 52 Ga., 326. 1874.

146. Sale of shares for assessments. A subscriber for shares in the stock of a railway company refused to pay the assessments on the shares; the company did not formally declare them forfeited, but procured subscriptions from other persons to the full amount of the capital stock. Held, that the corporation could not sell the shares and sue the subscriber for the difference between the assessment and the sum for which the shares were sold, under the Gen. Stats., ch. 63, § 9. Athol and Enfield R. R. Co. v. Inhabitants of Prescott, 110 Mass., 218. 1872.

147. Transfer. Where a railway act required that a transfer of shares should be only made by written conveyance recorded by the company, and until such transfer the subscriber should be liable for all calls, it was held that a transfer without compliance with this provision would not release a subscriber from liability. Cheltenham R'y Co. v. Daniel, 2 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 673; 43 E. C. L., 675. 1841.

148. — Section 16 of 8 Vict., ch. 16, enacts that no shareholder shall be entitled to transfer any share, after any call has been made in respect thereof, until he shall have paid such call, nor until he shall have paid all calls for the time being due on every share held by him; held, that the section only applies to the transfer of shares on which a call can be and has been made, and has no application to the transfer of shares on which all the calls have been paid; and a company, therefore, is bound to register a transfer of stock, although the transferor be the holder of shares on which there are shares unpaid. Hubbersty v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire R'y Co., Law Reports, 2 Queen's Bench Cases, 59. 1866.

149. — The transfer of shares after a call was held to be no defense to an action on the call. Aylesbury R'y Co. v. Mount, 7 Manning & Granger, 898; 40 E. C. L., 898, 1844; 3 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 489. Contra, Aylesbury R'y Co. v. Mount, 4 Manning & Granger, 651; 43 E. C. L., 836. 1842.

150. When calls may be made. There is nothing in the charter of the Cheraw and Chester R. R. Co. which requires its whole capital stock to be subscribed before calls are made for the payment of subscriptions; and therefore stock subscriptions may be made payable upon such terms as are agreed upon between the corporation and the stockholders. Cheraw and Chester R. R. Co. v. Garland, 14 So. Car., 68. 1890.

151. — A subscription to the stock of a railway company, made and accepted on the express condition "that not more than ten per cent. shall be required to be paid at any one call, nor shall calls be made more frequently than once in sixty days," is not embraced in a previous resolution of the directors requiring the instalment of $5 due on each share of stock at the time of making the subscription to be paid at once, and ten per cent. or $5 on each share subscribed to be paid on the 15th of each month following until the whole amount shall be paid. Mansfield, Coldwater and Lake Michigan R. R. Co. v. Pettis, 26 Ohio St., 259, 1875; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 380.

152. — A railway company authorized by its charter to commence the construction of its line whenever a given number of shares has been subscribed for, can assess the shares when the subscriptions have reached that number, although the whole number of shares has not been determined. Boston, Barre and Gardner R. R. Co. v. Wellington, 113 Mass., 79, 1873; Jewett v. Valley R'y Co., 84 Ohio St., 601, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 21.

VI. FRAUD.

153. Fictitious subscriptions. A subscription contract by W. provided "that not exceeding 700,000l. should be raised." Afterwards fictitious subscriptions were taken to make up the amount to 700,000l. Held, that such subscriptions not being bona fide was no ground for the recovery of the deposit paid upon the subscription of W. Watts v. Salter, 10 Common Bench, 477; 70 E. C. L., 477, 1853; 12 Eng. Law & Equity, 482.

154. Misstatements. A statement on the part of the agent of a corporation as to the pecuniary condition and prospect of his corporation will not avoid a subscription, unless the falsity and fraud of such representations are clearly shown, and unless it is manifest that the condition of the enterprise constituted a material inducement to the subscription. Selma, Marion and Memphis R. R. Co. v. Anderson, 51 Miss., 829. 1876.

155. — To avoid a subscription on the ground of false representation of an agent, it must be shown that the statement was not uttered as an opinion, but as an ascertained and existing fact. It must not only be false in fact, but must also be either known to be so by the party uttering it, or his position must be one that made it his duty to know the truth. Ib.

156. — Subscriptions to a railroad company obtained by fraudulent representations of the plaintiffs, or to which they were privy, will not be enforced. Davis v. Dumont, 87 Ia., 47, 1873; Melendy v. Keen, 89 Ill., 395, 1878.

157. — A farmer and his wife, on the line of a proposed railroad, subscribed to stock in the road and mortgaged their farm upon representations made to them by agents of the road and others, in a time of excitement got up at public meetings, that the road would prove the most lucrative investment of money, a very profitable thing to the neighborhood, etc. The making of the road was begun, and, after a good deal of money had been laid out, it was stopped for want of funds. The mortgage thus got was assigned to a director of the road who was a large creditor of the road. Held, on a bill by him to foreclose, that he was to be taken as an innocent holder for value; and that he was entitled to a decree. Sawyer v. Prickett, 19 Wallace, 146. 1873.

158. — Where a railroad company was seeking to procure local aid for the construction of its road, and in pursuance of this plan its board of directors at a regular meeting adopted a blank form for notes for the purpose of obtaining private subscriptions; and by the order of the board a number of these blanks were delivered to one of the members of the board who was a Swede, and having great influence among the population of that nationality in his neighborhood, employed one C., another Swede of influence, who could not read or write English well, to take the blanks and obtain from the Swedish population in his town subscriptions to the railroad; and C., under the direction and with the consent of said director, made positive assertions of fact to a Swede farmer, who could not read or understand English thoroughly, as to the purport and meaning of the language of the notes, which assertions of fact were false, though believed by the director and C. at the time to be true, and such Swede was induced thereby to sign the note,— such notes being obtained by false assertions of fact, are fraudulent and cannot be collected. Wickham v. Grant, 28 Kans., 517. 1882.

159. — Where the plea averred that the inducement to subscribe for stock was to procure a competing line to another named road, and the agent at the time represented that the road should remain a competing line, but when completed it was leased to the competing road, held, this plea was bad on demurrer, as it fails to aver that the agent falsely and fraudulently made the representations. Fraud must be pleaded and proved. Hays v. Ottawa, Oswego and Fox River Valley R. R. Co., 61 Ill., 422, 1871; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 454.

160. Prospectus. A fraudulent prospectus, when relied upon by the subscriber for shares, is good ground for relief from liability for the subscription. Kisch v. Central Railway of Venezuela, 3 De Gex, Jones & Smith, 122; 68 Eng. Ch., 122. 1865.

161. — Prospectus held not fraudulent. Heymann v. European Central Ry Co., Law Reports, 7 Equity Cases, 154. 1868.

162. Release. A stock subscription is not only an undertaking with the company but with all other subscribers, and a subscriber cannot be permitted to set up a secret parol arrangement with the agents of the company by which he may be released from his subscription whilst his fellow subscribers continue to be bound. Miller v. Hanover Junction and Susquehanna R. R. Co., 87 Pa. St., 95. 1878.

163. — If the sum fixed by the charter had been subscribed, and yet subscriptions had been released so as to reduce the capital largely and materially, without the consent of the subscriber, the effect would be the same as if the stock released had never been subscribed. A mere nominal subscription, to fulfil the letter and break the spirit of the contract, is no substantial compliance with the charter, and when released because it was nominal, it becomes equivalent to no subscription ab initio. Memphis Branch R. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 57 Ga., 240. 1876.

164. Settling aside contract. A railroad company, having failed in prosecuting its undertaking, resolved to return the unapplied portion of the deposits to the shareholders ratably; and, on the first instalment being repaid, the original scrip certificates were called in and new certificates issued, to the effect that the holders were entitled to a further pro rata division of the balance of the company's funds; and, on payment of the final instalment of the unapplied fund, the new certificates were called in, and the shareholders were required to sign a memorandum, undertaking to release the directors when called upon to do so. Held, that the terms on which the old and new certificates respectively were delivered up constituted new contracts between the shareholders and the directors; that the persons entering into such contracts in ignorance of the frauds which were alleged to have been committed by the directors, would, on proof of such frauds, be entitled to wholly undo such contracts, but not to set them aside partially by retaining the instalments and getting rid of the agreement to release the directors; that one shareholder, having no right to make an election for the others, between abiding by the new contracts or setting them aside, could not sue on behalf of himself and all other shareholders to recover from the directors more than the amount which was refunded under the contracts. Grand Trunk R. R. Co. v. Brodie, 9 Hare (Eng. Ch.), 823. 1852.

VII. MISCELLANEOUS.

165. Bill to require issue of stock. A subscriber for stock in a corporation cannot maintain an action for the issue of the stock without showing payment or offer of payment of his subscription. Dakin v. Union Pacific R'y Co., 5 Federal Reporter, 663. 1880.

166. Sale of railway. If a corporation, chartered to construct and carry on the business of a railroad, sells the road without authority of law to another company, it cannot collect unpaid subscriptions of stock from subscribers who did not consent to the sale. South Ga. and Fla. R. R. Co. v. Ayres, 56 Ga., 230. 1876.

167. Seizure of the road by the governor. It is no defense to a suit by a railroad company to recover subscription to stock to plead that the road has been seized by the governor. The charter is not forfeited, and the company may still collect its subscription, especially where suit is brought before the seizure; nor can the subscriber object to pay to the company, when probably his default contributed to the misfortune which he would now plead against the company. Mullins v. North and South R. R. Co., 54 Ga., 590. 1875.

SUBSCRIPTIONS BY STATES.

See ELECTION OF CORPORATE OFFICERS; GRANTS.

1. Bonds. The circumstances stated under which bonds of Florida, payable to bearer, issued in aid of certain railroad companies, signed by her governor and her treasurer, and sealed with her seal, were sold by the active efforts of the governor, and came into the hands of subjects of Holland. Most of the sales were in that country. Held, that, inasmuch as the bonds, though fraudulent in their inception, were put upon the market and sold in a foreign country to a people largely unacquainted with the English language, a case is presented which justifies the court in treating the owners of them as purchasers for value and in good faith, and entitled to relief accordingly. Railroad Companies v. Schutte, 103 U. S., 118, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 1.

2. — The object and purpose of the indorsement of railroad bonds by the state, under the statutes, was to improve their credit and to facilitate their currency. On their face they are negotiable instruments by the general commercial law, which must be presumed to be of force in Boston, where they are made payable, and are capable of transfer by delivery; and the state is liable as the indorser of such paper. State ex rel. v. Cobb, 64 Ala., 127, 1879; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 147.

3. — Except so far as restrained by constitutional limitations, the state has the same power to enter into contracts that any private person has, and is equally bound by the contracts into which it has entered; and when it has become a party to negotiable paper its liability is governed by the same principles of law that apply to other persons in that relation. Id.

4. — coupons. The holders of overdue coupons have no priority over the holders of the bonds. State v. Spartanburg and Union R. R. Co., 8 So. Car., 129. 1874.

5. Consolidation. "An act to promote the consolidation of the Greenville and Columbia R. R. Co." provided, in § 4, for a waiver of the lien of the state on the Blue Ridge Railroad property, and, in § 5, for a like waiver of lien upon the property of the Greenville and Columbia Railroad property, and, in § 7, for the indorsement by the consolidated companies of the bonds of the two companies consolidating. The two companies not having consolidated, held, that the act never took effect. Gibbes v. G. and C. R. R. Co., 13 So. Car., 223, 1879; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 450.

Constitutional Law — Lien.

6. Constitutional law. A limitation upon the power of the legislature in the matter of pledging the credit of the state to aid quasi public works, such as railways, should be strictly construed; and an act of the legislature authorizing an issue of state bonds in aid of a line of railway, differing essentially and fundamentally from the line to which the power thus to aid was limited by the constitution, is, in this respect, unconstitutional and void. Holland v. State of Florida, 15 Fla., 455. 1876.

7. — Where an act was entitled "An act for the sale of the Pacific Railroad, and to foreclose the state's lien thereon, and to amend its charter," held, that after certain sections providing for the sale, a section providing that, in certain contingencies, no sale should be made, was not a violation of the constitutional provision forbidding the release of any state liens upon railways. Woodson v. Murdock, 22 Wallace, 351. 1874.

8. — The state is prohibited by the constitution from becoming a "joint owner or stockholder in any company, association or corporation." The state may grant such franchises to others, but she cannot purchase, own or operate a railway. Holland v. State of Florida, 15 Fla., 455. 1876.

9. — The revenue bond scrip, issued by the state treasurer, under the act of March 2, 1872, "to relieve the state of South Carolina of all liability for its guaranty of the bonds of the Blue Ridge R. R. Co.," being certificates of indebtedness, payable to bearer, issued by the state in its sovereign capacity, with the faith of the state pledged for their ultimate redemption, and intended to circulate as money, are bills of credit, which, by the constitution of the United States, a state is inhibited from issuing, and are therefore null and void. State ex rel. v. Comptroller-General, 4 So. Car., 185. 1872.

10. — The statute and constitution of Wisconsin construed. Sloan v. The State, 51 Wis., 623. 1881.

11. — The amendment to § 2, art. 9, of the Minnesota constitution, adopted November 6, 1860, providing that "no law levying a tax or making other provisions for the payment of interest or principal of the bonds denominated 'Minnesota State Railroad Bonds' shall take effect or be in force until such law shall have been submitted to a vote of the people of the state and adopted by a majority of the electors of the state voting upon the same," impairs the obligation of the contracts therein referred to, and is, consequently, repugnant to the clause in the constitution of the United States that no state shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts, and it is therefore void. State ex rel. v. Young, 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Minn.), 348. 1881.

12. Funding act. After a funding act has been passed, the same may be repealed before acceptance by the bondholders. Durkee v. Board of Liquidation, 103 U. S., 646; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 135. 1890.

13. Guaranty of bonds. A state indorsed the bonds of a railroad company, and was indemnified against loss on account of the indorsement by a statutory mortgage on the railroad property. Held, that the fact that the state could not be sued was no reason why the holders of the bonds so indorsed should not be subrogated to the rights of the state, and have the benefit of the security. Young v. Montgomery and Eufaula R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 606. 1875.

14. — Where a state was an indorser of bonds secured by a statutory mortgage, it was not considered a necessary party in a suit brought by holders of bonds secured by the mortgage to foreclose the same. Ib.

15. — The legislation under which certain bonds were issued by the state of Florida in aid of railroads having been pronounced unconstitutional by the supreme court of that state, this court passes upon the liability of the railroad company as guarantors of such bonds,—the case upon the facts being within the rule of the liability of an indorser of commercial paper. Railroad Companies v. Schutte, 103 U. S., 118, 1890; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 1.

16. Lien. The statutes of Alabama in relation to liens, in case of state aid to railways, construed. Colt v. Barnes, 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ala.), 129. 1879.

17. — The lien of the state on railroads for the security of bonds loaned under the internal improvement laws of 1851–2, is superior to the rights of the holders of tax certificates under the act of 1851–2, ch. 117, providing for county subscriptions and making said certificates receivable for freight and passage over the road. State ex rel. v. Nashville and Chattanooga R. R. Co., 7 Lea (Tenn.), 15. 1881.

18. — In 1864, while the state of Missouri was in full possession of the revenue of the defendant's road upon certain express trusts, which, it was provided, were to continue until the state bonds loaned to the company were paid or exchanged, by an act of January 7, 1865, the county of St. Louis was empowered to loan said company its bonds, which was done and accepted by the company. Section 2 of said act authorized the person who had theretofore been in custody of the earnings of the road for the state (called the fund commissioner) to pay into the county treasury, out of said earnings, a sum sufficient to meet the interest on said bonds loaned by said county as it accrued. Held, that by said act the state waived its lien and right to all the earnings of the company to the extent of the sum required to pay the interest on said bonds, and that the county was pro tanto substituted as to that amount in place of the state, with a lien or charge to that extent as effectual as the state before possessed. Ketchum v. Pacific R. R. Co., 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 78. 1877.

19. — In pursuance of an act of the general assembly of the state of Arkansas, approved July 21, 1868, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of railroads," the state of Arkansas issued certain bonds to the defendant railway companies; the bonds were signed by the governor and countersigned by the state treasurer, and duly delivered to the companies and by them sold for value. On the failure of the state to pay the semi-annual interest, an action was brought against the railway companies to enforce the payment of the same and interest. Held, that there was nothing in the bonds themselves, without indorsement, to bind the companies that received and sold them, to pay either the principal or interest; that conceding the bonds to be invalid on account of the unconstitutionality of the act under which they were issued, as claimed by the defendants, the holders of them were nevertheless entitled to such remedy as the statute gave against the companies which had accepted and sold the bonds, and had thereby ratified the remedies provided by the statute; that there was nothing contained in the statute which would constitute a statutory lien for the benefit of the plaintiffs into whose hands the bonds had come, as against the property of the railway companies. Tompkins v. Little Rock and Fort Smith R'y Co., 18 Federal Reporter, 344. 1883.

20. — Where the state guarantied the bonds of a corporation issued in exchange for outstanding mortgage bonds under a statute which provided that the state should take and retain possession of the bonds so surrendered in exchange as "security to the state, and thereby give the state the lien under the first mortgage until all the bonds now secured by mortgage shall be retired," all of the mortgage bonds not having been surrendered or exchanged, held, that the state could assert the lien of the mortgage bonds so held by it, together with the coupons thereto attached, as of equal rank with the mortgage bonds not exchanged. Gibbes v. G. and C. R. R. Co., 18 So. Car., 223, 1879; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 459.

21. — Where an act of the legislature provided that all the property of a railway company should stand pledged and mortgaged to the state for the payment of certain bonds issued by such company and guarantied by the state, such provision constituted a statutory lien for the benefit of the bondholders as well as the state, which no subsequent statute could postpone. Ib.

22. — A statute authorizing the guaranty by the state of certain bonds of a railway company, to be secured by a statutory lien, was passed in 1861, and the bonds issued and guarantied under the authority of this act bore the caption "Confederate States of America." In 1866, another act was passed which extended the operation of the act of 1861, and authorized the issue of new bonds in exchange for the C. S. A. bonds, also certificates of indebtedness to pay interest past due on the C. S. A. bonds, and bonds for other indebtedness, all of which were to be in like manner guarantied. Held, that the C. S. A. bonds not surrendered were of superior rank to the bonds issued under the act of 1866, but those issued under act of 1866, in exchange for bonds surrendered, could claim a lien only under the latter act, and stood upon the same footing with all other bonds issued under the act of 1866. Ib.

23. — Whether or not the statutory lien given in favor of the state to secure bonds indorsed under the internal improvement aid law can operate in favor of a holder of such bonds and enable him to be subrogated to such lien, is a question that can be decided in no other than a chancery court, and if the chancellor commits error in a decree thereon, it is not to be revised or corrected by a writ of prohibition. Ex parte Brown, 58 Ala., 536, 1877; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 101.

24. — The purchaser of negotiable state bonds sold in open market, without indorsement or guaranty, and issued to a railroad under the "Internal Improvement Act of the State of Tennessee," for the ironing and equipping of the said railroad, has no enforceable right, by contract or otherwise, in the statutory lien vested in said state by said internal improvement act, against the road and equipments of said railroad, for the purpose of enforcing the payment of the principal and interest of said bonds at maturity. Stevens v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 8 Federal Reporter, 678. 1880.

25. — The state of Kentucky waived its lien on the Louisville and Frankfort R. R., if any was retained in the act of March 1, 1847, transferring its interest in the road to the L. and F. R. R. Co., as to subsequent mortgagees, by authorizing the company to issue bonds and secure them by mortgages on the road, by enabling acts passed by the legislature containing no intimations that such liens were to be subject to the prior lien of the state. Newport and Cincinnati Bridge Co. v. Douglass, 12 Bush (Ky.), 678, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 221.

26. — The powers and summary remedies conferred on the state by the statute for the enforcement of the statutory lien can only be exercised by the state; but the state, having failed to exercise them, and disclaimed its liability for the indorsed bonds, they afford no obstacle to a resort to a court of equity by the holders of the bonds for the enforcement of the statutory lien for their benefit; and the fact that the state cannot be made a party to the suit, no relief being asked against it, does not affect the jurisdiction of the court or the equity of the bill. Forrest's Executors v. Luddington, 68 Ala., 1. 1880.

27. — The lien created and declared by the statute may be enforced by the bondholders whenever default is made in the payment of the interest on bonds, indorsed by the state, although the governor is directed by the statute to file a bill for foreclosure on default of the payment of the bonds. Ib.

28. — Persons holding a mortgage on the property of a railway, executed after the indorsement of the company's bonds by the state, are junior incumbrancers, and although they may be proper, they are not indispensable parties to a bill by the holders of the state-indorsed bonds. Forrest's Executors v. Luddington, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ala.), 330. 1893.

29. — When a loan is made by the state and a mortgage taken to secure it in pursuance of the provisions of a public statute, all persons are chargeable with notice of it, and the state will not be prejudiced by the neglect of her agents to have the mortgage recorded. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co. v. The State, 19 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 322; 37 Ark., 632. 1881.

30. — The purpose of the provisions of the act of the legislature of Georgia, passed December 8, 1836, which established a statutory mortgage on all the property of the Macon and Brunswick Railway Company, indorsed by the governor, was to protect the state from loss on account of such indorsement, and their effect was not to make the state a trustee for the bondholders. Cunningham v. Macon and Brunswick R. R. Co., 3 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 418. 1878.

31. Loan to railway company. If the regulation of a subject belongs to the legislature, the choice of means is purely in its discretion, and no other department of the government can intervene, on the ground that the law is unwise. It pertains exclusively to the legislature to say what "stocks" are safe and solvent. Its decision is binding and conclusive on the judiciary, nor can they interpose on the suggestion that the stocks they have selected are unsafe. To attempt to control or restrain the law-making department in this respect would be an encroachment on the functions of another branch of the government. When the state acts as a trustee, it acts through the legislature, and assumes the same measure of responsibility that pertains to it in the exercise of its law-making power. No other mode can be suggested in which the state can manage a fund for charitable uses. State v. Vicksburg and Nashville R. R. Co., 51 Miss., 361. 1875.

32. Mortgage. When a loan is made by the state and a mortgage taken to secure it in pursuance to the provisions of a public statute, all persons are chargeable with notice of it, and the state will not be prejudiced by the neglect of her agents to have the mortgage recorded. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co. v. The State, 37 Ark., 632. 1881.

33. — The Troy and Greenfield R. R. Co. mortgaged its entire railway franchises and property to the commonwealth, under the Stats. of 1854, ch. 226, and 1860, ch. 202, to secure the payment of a loan made by the commonwealth; and subsequently surrendered the same to the commonwealth, under the Stat. of 1862, ch. 156, § 2, which provided that "the right of redemption" should not be barred until a certain time after the completion of the road by the commonwealth. Held, that the court had no jurisdiction, either under the Gen. Stats., ch. 63, § 128, ch. 113, § 2, or ch. 140, §§ 13-35, of a bill in equity, brought by the railway company against the commonwealth, to enforce this right of redemption. Troy and Greenfield R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 127 Mass., 43. 1879.

34. Payments in gold. An implication that a railroad company having an unfinished road in which the state was largely interested should pay gold instead of currency to the state, which has lent to the company sterling bonds of the state, of which the interest was payable abroad, and, of course, in coin, is not inferable from the fact that, unless the contract between the company and the state be so interpreted, the state has not exacted from the company all that was necessary to its own complete indemnification; this being especially true in the case of a contract where, in other parts, a complete indemnification was specifically and carefully provided for, and in one where at the time it was made there was no difference, existing or anticipated, in the value of currency and coin, and the difference having been brought about by events supervening long afterwards. Maryland v. Railroad Co., 29 Wallace, 105. 1874.

35. Receiver. A state indorsed the bonds of a railroad company, upon the express condition that such indorsement should vest in the state the title of all property purchased with the proceeds of said bonds, and should give the state a first lien upon all the property of the company; and that, upon failure of the company to pay the interest or principal of the bonds, the governor should take possession of all its property and sell the same for the purpose of paying said bonds. Default was made by the railroad company in the payment of interest, and the governor took possession of its property, which he advertised for sale. Held, that, at the suit of a holder of bonds of a subsequent issue, which the state had indorsed on the same terms as the first issue, but which indorsement the legislature had declared not binding on the state, the court would not restrain the sale of the road by the governor, nor take the possession thereof from the state, nor appoint a receiver therefor. Branch v. Macon and Brunswick R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 335. 1875.

36. Repeal; constitutional law. The second section of the act of February 25, 1874, repealing all provisions in charters of railroad companies granting state aid, which provided that, should any of said companies claim that they have a vested right to such aid, and apply to the governor for the same, any citizen of the state may interpose by bill to restrain such companies, and the question as to whether such vested right exists shall be for the courts to determine, is unconstitutional in this, that it is in violation of the true intent and spirit of the fifth and thirty-first paragraphs of the first article of the constitution of 1868. Northeastern R. R. Co. v. Morris, 59 Ga., 364. 1877.

37. Sale of railway. The sale of a delinquent railway under the lien of the state had the effect to transfer the railway, its appurtenances and franchises to the purchaser, and, where the purchase was not made by the company itself, to dissolve the corporation. Rogersville and Jefferson R. R. Co. v. Kyle, 9 Lea (Tenn.), 691. 1882.

88. Statutes; construction. By the provisions of ch. 175, Acts 1874-75, the state recognized the bonds of the Wilmington, Charlotte and Rutherford R. R. Co. as valid. Leak v. Bear, 80 N. C., 271. 1879.

89. — The statutes of Mississippi construed. Hemingway v. Vicksburg and Nashville R. R. Co., 52 Miss., 16. 1876.

40. — The statute of Arkansas construed. Tompkins v. Little Rock and Ft. Smith R'y Co., 15 Federal Reporter, 6, 1882; State v. Little Rock, Miss. River and Tex. R'y Co., 31 Ark., 701, 1877.

41. — The Hannibal and St. Joseph loan construed. State ex rel. v. Chappell, 74 Mo., 835, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 118; Ralston v. Crittenden, 3 McCrary (U. S. C.), 332, 1882.

42. — The statutes of South Carolina granting railway aid construed. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 12 So. Car., 814. 1879. See Same v. Same, 17 So. Car., 219. 1881.

43. — The statutes of Florida construed. Doggett v. Railroad Co., 99 U. S., 72, 1878; Holland v. State of Florida, 15 Fla., 455, 1876; Trustees of Internal Improvement Fund v. Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile R. R. Co., 16 Fla., 708, 1878.

44. — The statutes and constitution of Louisiana construed. Williams v. Louisiana, 108 U. S., 637, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 128; Durkee v. Board of Liquidation, 108 U. S., 646, 1880; State ex rel. v. Nicholls, 80 La. An., 1217, 1878.

SUBSCRIPTIONS BY TOWNSHIPS.

See SUBSCRIPTIONS BY CITIES AND TOWNS; SUBSCRIPTIONS BY COUNTIES.

1. Action of township trustees; how far conclusive. After township trustees have passed upon the sufficiency of a petition presented to them calling for an election to decide the question of levying a tax in aid of the construction of a railroad, and the election has been ordered, and the tax voted and levied, the validity of such tax cannot be assailed on the ground that the petition was not signed by one-third of the resident taxpayers. Ryan v. Varga and B. and M. R. Co., 37 Ia., 78, 1873; West v. Whitaker, 37 Ia., 598, 1873.

2. — The trustees having jurisdiction to determine the question, their decision cannot be collaterally assailed, but, like any other judicial determination, remains conclusive until reversed or set aside by writ of error, certiorari, or other direct proceeding provided by law. Ib.

8. Agreement to surrender the stock. Under an act which authorizes a municipal township to subscribe stock in a railroad company, it is not competent for the township to agree to surrender to the company stock of the company for which it subscribes and issues its bonds, and a contract of subscription which contains such an agreement is void. State ex rel. v. Brassfield, 67 Mo., 331. 1878.

4. Amount; excessive. Where the amount of a subscription asked by the petition exceeds two per centum of the assessed value of the taxable property of the township, as shown by the tax duplicate of the preceding year, the levy and assessment of a tax pursuant thereto are illegal and void, and the collection thereof may be enjoined at the suit of a tax-payer. Columbus, etc., R'y Co. v. Commissioners of Grant County, 65 Ind., 427. 1879.

5. — Only two per centum of the assessed value of the taxable property of the township, as shown by the tax duplicate of the preceding year, can be levied at one time, upon one petition and in any one period of two years; but it does not follow that other appropriations cannot be made at other times and upon different petitions. Brocas v. Commissioners of Gibson County, 73 Ind., 543, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 573. See, also, Bish v. Stout, 77 Ind., 253. 1881.

6. Authority to subscribe. A tax or appropriation for a corporate purpose is one for the benefit of the inhabitants of the municipality. Taxes levied by township authorities to aid in the construction of a railroad are for a corporate purpose; and, in this respect, the distinction between a donation in aid of a railroad and a subscription to the capital stock of the corporation is more shadowy than real. The power is granted in consideration of the public benefits, and these are as great in one case as in the other. Chicago, Danville and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Smith, 62 Ill., 268, 1871; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 221.

7. Bonds. Where a township has lawful power to issue bonds or other negotiable securities, dependent only upon the adoption of certain preliminary proceedings, such as a popular election, the holder in good faith has the right to assume that such preliminary proceedings have taken place, if the fact is certified on the face of the bonds by the authorities, whose primary duty it is to ascertain it; and the mere circumstance that the election was presided over and the returns made, not by the supervisor, assessor and collector of the township, ex officio judges of elections, but by a moderator chosen by the electors present, can be of no avail as a defense to the bonds in a suit brought by a bona fide holder. Town of Pana v. Bowler, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 563; 107 U. S., 529. 1882.

8. — Under a law which authorizes the "proper corporate authorities" of a township to issue bonds of the town when so authorized by a vote of the electors at an election called for that purpose, the supervisor and town clerk must be regarded as the proper corporate authorities for the issue and delivery of the bonds, it being but a ministerial act, though they are not such for the purpose of creating the indebtedness. There is a distinction between the creation of a debt and merely executing the evidence of it. Town of Windsor v. Hallett, 97 Ill., 204, 1881; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 76.

9. — A township bond containing a statement that "it is to be converted into a county bond" whenever a certain injunction shall be finally dissolved, and county bonds issued under the order enjoined, not being a promise to pay money absolutely, but a stipulation for bonds thereafter to be issued, is not negotiable in such a sense as to preclude the maker from defenses, although it may be held by the plaintiff for value before due, and without actual notice of the maker's defenses. Merriwether v. Saline County, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 265. 1878.

10. — A township in Missouri voted to subscribe for stock in a railroad company. The proper county court, March 28, 1872, made the subscription, and, June 4th, ordered that the bonds in payment therefor be issued. They were issued in October following, but bore date the day of subscription. They were sealed with the seal of the court, and signed by the clerk and by A., a presiding justice, although the latter did not become such until October. Neither the county court nor the other justice thereof consented to A.'s act. The bonds were not registered, nor was the certificate of registration required by said act of March 30th, indorsed thereon. In a suit by B., a holder for value, upon the bonds, held, that he was charged with notice that A. was not presiding justice at the time they bear date. That the bonds being signed by A. was equivalent to notice that they were not in fact issued before the passage of said act, and that they are consequently void. Anthony v. County of Jasper, 101 U. S., 693. 1879.

11. — The P. C. and F. D. M. R. R. Co. was incorporated by the legislature of Missouri in 1860; by its charter the county court of any county through which the line was located, and any city or town, were authorized to subscribe for stock, and to issue bonds to pay therefor; by § 7 a provision is made for taking a vote of the taxable inhabitants of a strip of country on either side of the road, and if a majority vote in favor of a tax to pay for stock, it is made the duty of the court to levy and collect the tax. Held, that the charter gave no authority to the taxable inhabitants of a strip of country along the road to vote for the issue of bonds, or for an issue of bonds upon a vote in favor of subscribing for stock, but only authorized the levy and collection of a special tax to pay for stock. Dodge v. County of Platte, 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 588; 82 N. Y., 218. 1880.

12. — The court reaffirms the ruling in Harter v. Kernochan, 108 U. S., 562, that the duly signed and countersigned township bonds, payable to the company or bearer, which recite that they are duly issued in compliance with the vote of the legal voters of the township, cast at an election held by virtue of the Illinois acts of February 25, 1867, and February 24, 1869, are valid in the hands of a bona fide holder. Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S., 529. 1882.

Certificate — Conditions.

13. — A township was authorized to subscribe to the stock of a railway company, provided the county commissioners should not be authorized by a vote of the electors of the county to make such subscription.

Held, in view of the decisions of the supreme court of the state, that bonds issued by the township in payment of such subscription were void in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, where the electors of the county had previously voted to subscribe such stock, and it was the duty of the county commissioners to ascertain and declare the result of such vote. Northern Nat. Bank of Toledo v. Trustees of Porter Tp., 5 Federal Reporter, 563. 1880.

14. Certificate. The certificate of the township trustees of the original township is sufficient evidence of the compliance with the conditions by the railway company. Where the township is subsequently divided, the certificate of the trustees of the new township is unnecessary. Meador v. Lowry, 45 Ia., 694, 1877; Sioux City and Pembina R. R. Co. v. Herron, 46 ib., 701, 1877.

15. — The discretion of the trustees is limited to the determination of the facts that the road has been built and that the order of the president of the corporation is accompanied by the necessary estimates. Harwood v. Quinby, 44 Ia., 383. 1876.

16. — The certificate of the township trustees that a company is entitled to receive the tax is not authority for its collection, the only object of such certificate being to authorize the treasurer to pay to the company the amount collected and in his hands. Lamb v. Anderson, 54 Ia., 190. 1880.

17. — The certificate of the clerk of election, required to be executed to the county auditor by ch. 123, Laws of 1876, before the levy of a tax under its provisions is authorized, must contain all the particulars enumerated in said chapter, in addition to a copy of the notice under which the election was held. Held, a reference to such notice for any of the conditions of the tax is not a sufficient compliance with the statute. M. and I. S. R. R. Co. v. Hiams, 53 Ia., 501. 1880.

18. Compliance. While a tax voted to aid in the construction of a railway cannot be collected in instalments, yet, if the company shall not have expended enough in the city or township to entitle it to the whole, it may be entitled to collect the part earned in lieu of the whole. Casady v. Lowry, 49 Ia., 523. 1878.

19. Compromise. Notwithstanding this court holds the act of March 23, 1866, authorizing the issue of township bonds, unconstitutional, and bonds issued thereunder void, yet since the courts of the United States hold the contrary, such bonds cannot be deemed such absolute nullities as not to be the subject of compromise. State ex rel. v. Holladay, 72 Mo., 499. 1880.

20. Conditions. Where a township voted a subscription of $50,000 of the capital stock of a railway company, to be paid in bonds, under a law providing that no bonds should be delivered nor any payment made under such subscription until an amount of work was done on such road in the town, or on such part of the line of the road as the authorities issuing the bonds should designate, equal in value to the amount of bonds to be issued, and the condition of the vote was, that the bonds were to be delivered when work was done in the township to the amount of such bonds, it was held that the building of the road through the town at a cost of only $30,000, or even $11,000, was not a substantial compliance with the conditions, and that the court would not compel the issue of the bonds voted. People ex rel. v. Town of Waynesville, 88 Ill., 469, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 389.

21. — Where a proposition of submission to take stock in a railroad corporation is adopted by the voters of a township, at an election called in pursuance of ch. 90, Laws of 1870, and thereon a subscription is duly made, and the proposition submitted contains a condition that if the county becomes a stockholder in the corporation, or issues bonds to it under any subscription, the subscription of the township is to be null and void, held, that such township subscription is not avoided by the action of the corporation to enforce a pretended subscription of such county and obtain the county bonds therefor, when, on final hearing of the suit, Consolidation of Railways—Contract between two Companies.

the so-called subscription of the county is held invalid for want of power on the part of the subscriber to make it. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Jefferson Co., 31 Kans., 309. 1878.

22. — A township having voted aid to a railway company, the county board ordered one-half the necessary tax to be levied and collected at once, and the other half at a time specified. The first half was duly levied, but more than a year elapsed after the time fixed for the levy of the second half without anything being done. At length, the county board passed a resolution that the remaining half be levied and collected, the line having been permanently located and put in operation in the township, and having spent more upon its road than the total amount of aid subscribed. Held, that the railroad was entitled to have such second half of the necessary tax levied and collected, and that a taxpayer could not, by injunction, restrain the collection of the same. Norton v. Milner, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 639. 1883.

23. — Where a proposition is submitted to the voters of a township, under ch. 90, Laws of 1870, to take stock in the name of the township in a railroad corporation, and three-fifths of the electors voting favor the subscription and the issue of bonds, and thereafter the subscription is made, held, that the subscription is valid, and the county commissioners are bound to issue bonds of such township, after a full compliance on the part of the corporation with the terms and conditions of such submission, notwithstanding the proposition of submission contains a condition to be performed on the part of the township, relating to a transfer of its stock in the corporation, which is a nullity, when such condition, by the terms of the submission, is subsequent to the subscription and the issuance of the bonds. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Jefferson Co., 31 Kans., 309. 1878.

24. Consolidation of railways. Although a subscription for stock of a railroad be duly authorized by the requisite number of the qualified voters of a township, if the company, before the subscription be actually made, becomes consolidated with another, thereby forming a third, the county court is not empowered to subscribe, on behalf of the township, for stock of the new company, and issue bonds in payment therefor. Harshman v. Bates County, 92 U. S., 569. 1875.

25. — The records of the township show that the bonds were directed to be issued and delivered to the consolidated company; the township is therefore, as against a bona fide holder for value, estopped from denying their validity. Harter v. Kernochan, 103 U. S., 562, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 82.

26. — A tax voted to a railway inures to the benefit of a corporation with which it is afterwards consolidated. Wilson v. Salamanca, 99 U. S., 499. 1878. See, also, Atchison, Colo. and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Phillips County, 25 Kans., 261, 1881; 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 326.

27. Constitutional law. Township aid laws held to be constitutional. Renwick v. Davenport and Northwestern R'y Co., 47 Ia., 511, 1877; Petty v. Myers, 49 Ind., 1, 1874; Allison v. Louisville, etc., R'y Co., 10 Bush (Ky.), 1, 1873; Town of Arbington v. Cabeen, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ill.), 591, 1883; Jordan v. Cass County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 185, 1874.

28. — Certain statutes authorizing township aid held to be unconstitutional. Harter v. Kernochan, 103 U. S., 562, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 82; Wyscaver v. Atkinson, 37 Ohio St., 80, 1881.

29. Contract between two companies; validity. Where the railroad company named in the petition entered into a written agreement with the officers of another company, organized to build another line into and through the same township, to the effect that, if the latter company should succeed in so building its railway, it should have the one-half of the appropriation to be voted for, and, if it failed to so build its proposed railway, then the former company should receive but one-half of said aid, and where there was no concealment of such agreement, but the same was made public through the county newspapers and by the circulation of hand-bills, held, that the agreement was valid. Bish v. Stout, 77 Ind., 255. 1881.

Contract to take Township Tax in Payment for Work — Estoppel.

80. Contract to take township tax in payment for work. When the plaintiffs, under a contract for the construction of a railroad for the defendant, agreed to collect and receive in part payment a certain sum from a township tax voted by the people of the township, or from certain subscriptions to stock that had been made, it was held that, to entitle plaintiffs to recover, they must show proper effort and diligence on their part to collect either from the subscription or tax, or some excuse for not so doing. Arnold v. River R. R. Construction Co., 35 Ia., 99, 1872; 5 Amer. R'y Rep., 189.

81. Election. The action of the persons or the tribunal authorized by law to determine the result of an election held for the purpose of ascertaining whether a municipal township shall issue its bonds in aid of an object authorized by law is conclusive, and a bona fide purchaser of the bonds is under no obligation to look beyond it. Township of Rock Creek v. Strong, 96 U. S., 271. 1877.

82. — The constitution of Missouri (art. 11, sec. 14) requires a two-thirds vote to authorize municipal subscriptions to the stock of a railroad corporation. A township voted stock in company A., which afterwards, under a general law of the state, consolidated with company B., and formed thereby a new company, C. Held, that a subsequent subscription by the township to company C., by virtue of the prior vote to company A., was unauthorized, and bonds which on their face recited these facts were void, even in the hands of a bona fide holder for value. Harshman v. Bates County, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 150. 1874.

83. — The words "town meeting" have a definite and well settled meaning in the township law, and are always used to describe the annual town meetings of the electors of the town for the purpose of electing town officers, and transacting such other business as the electors are authorized to transact, or special meetings of the electors for such purposes called pursuant to law. Such meetings are clearly distinguishable from "elections" when there is no other business transacted but to elect officers. Chicago and Iowa R. R. Co. v. Mallory, 101

Ill., 533, 1882; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 139.

84. — Under a law providing for a vote whether a township shall issue bonds in aid of a railroad, which requires the town clerk, upon receiving the proper petition, to "immediately give the notice required by law for an election," etc., it was held that three notices were all that were required to be posted of the time and place of the election, the same as of an annual town meeting, and not five, as the law then required in case of a special town meeting. Town of Windsor v. Hallett, 97 Ill., 204, 1891; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 76.

85. — Where a law authorizing municipal subscriptions by towns in counties under township organization required the elections therefor to be held and conducted in all respects, and returns thereof made, "as in case of annual elections," it was held that the term "annual elections" did not mean town meetings, but was used in the sense of general elections, and therefore that notice of the election, under the general election law, was sufficient. Town of Prairie v. Lloyd, 97 Ill., 179, 1891; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 58.

86. — If the certificates of the clerks of election required by ch. 102, Laws of 1870, are reasonably susceptible of a construction which will show a compliance by them with the provisions of the statute, such construction will be given it, notwithstanding any imperfections in form. Casady v. Lowry, 49 Ia., 523. 1878.

87. Estoppel; third parties. The trustees of B. township, in pursuance of an election, subscribed $17,000 to the stock of the S. M. and P. R. R. Co., and issued and delivered the township bonds therefor. Prior to the election B. and others made a mortgage to the trustees to indemnify the township from all loss upon the subscription. A part of the bonds were negotiated by the company to R. H. before maturity. R. H. applied for a mandamus to compel the township trustees to levy a tax to pay matured interest on his bonds. In that proceeding the supreme court held the bonds unauthorized and void. The mortgaged premises had been conveyed by B. to H. H. H. H. brought a suit to remove the cloud of the mortgage from the lands. Held, that the mortgagor and his grantees were not estopped from asserting the invalidity of the bonds, and that the mortgage should be canceled. Hopple v. Hipple, 83 Ohio St., 116. 1877.

38. Expenses of proceedings. A county is in no way interested in the voting of taxes in its various townships in aid of railways, and cannot be required to pay any part of the expense thereby incurred. McBride v. Hardin County, 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ia.), 221. 1892.

39. Forfeiture. The money in the hands of a county treasurer, arising from a tax voted by a township in aid of a railroad, where the company has forfeited all right to the same, under § 18 of the act of May 12, 1869 (1 R. S. 1876, p. 736), and §§ 1 and 2 of the supplemental act of December 24, 1872 (Acts 1872, p. 56), it not having been diverted into the township funds, belongs to the township, unless it has been demanded by the township tax-payers within two years after the passage of the act of 1872, or within two years after the forfeiture thereof by the company; and such demand, being matter of defense, need not be negatived in the complaint in an action by a township against a county to recover a tax voted by the township. Centre Township v. Commissioners of Marion County, 70 Ind., 562. 1890.

40. Foreign company. That the property and franchises of a railway company are owned by a foreign corporation, that there was a prior existing levy on the township to aid the same line, or that proper notices of election concerning the levy of the tax were not given, are matters which must have been decided by the commissioners before granting the prayer of the petition, and that decision could only be reviewed upon a direct appeal. It cannot be questioned by a suit to enjoin the collection of the tax. Reynolds v. Faris, 80 Ind., 14. 1891.

41. Fraud. When the electors of a township were induced by fraudulent representations to vote a tax to aid in the construction of a railway, the collection of the tax could not be enforced. Sinnett v. Moles, 83 Ia., 25. 1878.

42. Illegal tax; refunding by treasurer of county. Where taxes to aid in the construction of a railway were voted in two or more townships in a county, in one of which, after a part of the taxes had been collected, the tax was declared illegal, it was held that the treasurer was not authorized to refund the taxes illegally collected out of the taxes lawfully collected from the other townships, and that mandamus would lie to compel him to pay the latter over to the company. D. M. and M. R. R. Co. v. Lowry, 51 Ia., 486. 1879.

43. Incorporated towns. For the purpose of a tax in aid of a railway, an incorporated town within a township is part of the township. Reynolds v. Faris, 80 Ind., 14. 1891.

44. Indiana statute. The power of counties and townships to vote aid to railroad companies is conferred and regulated by the act of May 12, 1869, and the supplement and amendatory acts of January 30, 1873, and March 11, 1875. Peed v. Millikan, 79 Ind., 86. 1891.

45. Injunction. Any tax-payer of a precinct has the right by legal proceedings to restrain the sale of the bonds of the precinct illegally issued to aid in the construction of a railway. Allison v. Louisville, etc., Ry Co., 9 Bush (Ky.), 247. 1872.

46. — A bill to enjoin the supervisor of a town from issuing the bonds of a township, charged, "on information and belief, that said company will soon demand of the supervisor of said town all or a part of said bonds, and that there is danger, unless said supervisor is enjoined from issuing said bonds, and the said company restrained from receiving the same, that said bonds will be issued and registered." Held, that this was a specific and positive charge that there was danger that the bonds would be issued and registered, unless the supervisor was restrained from issuing the bonds, and clearly entitled the complainant to an answer. Campbell v. Paris and Decatur R. R. Co., 71 Ill., 611. 1874.

47. — The railway company is not a necessary party defendant in an action brought by a township against the board of county commissioners, to perpetually enjoin them, as agents of the township, from subscribing to the capital stock of such company, and executing bonds therefor, under the authority of a special election, where the petition alleges the conditions precedent to the power of the county board to call the election and make any subscription were not complied with. Township of Dixon v. Comm'rs of Sumner County, 25 Kans., 519. 1881.

48. Legalizing act. The act of the legislature, adopted after this suit was instituted, declaring that the act of the county judge in casting the vote of the precinct in an election for directors of the company, and the act of the commissioners in requesting him to call an election in the precinct, were legal and valid, could not affect the rights of the parties to the suit, or the law as it existed at the time the petition was filed. Allison v. Louisville, etc., R'y Co., 9 Bush (Ky.), 247. 1872.

49. — The judicial being a co-ordinate and independent department of the state government, neither of the other departments can constitutionally interfere with it in the exercise of its exclusive right to determine the law of existing cases. Id.

50. — A legalizing act held valid. Unity v. Burrage, 103 U. S., 447, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 560.

51. — A legalizing act held unconstitutional. Columbus, etc., R'y Co. v. Commissioners of Grant County, 65 Ind., 427. 1879.

52. Limitations. Under chs. 2 and 50, Laws of 1873, it was the duty of the township trustees, after a tax had been voted to aid in the construction of a railroad, and the engineer's estimates, together with an order of the president of the company, had been presented, showing that the statute had been complied with and that the company had expended more than the amount of the tax in the township, to certify the fact to the county treasurer. Harwood v. Quinby, 44 Ia., 885. 1876.

53. — The statute of limitations would not operate to bar an action of mandamus to compel the trustees to perform this duty, in a case where the tax had been voted prior to the enactment of these statutes, until three years after they took effect. Id.

54. Mandamus. A writ of mandate is the proper remedy to oblige the board of commissioners of a county to levy a tax in payment of a township subscription to the stock by a railway company. Board of Commissioners of Decatur County v. The State, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 604. 1883.

55. Narrow gauge railway. The construction of a narrow gauge railway is sufficient compliance with the law, unless it be shown that such narrow gauge road is unable to do the business of the country. Casady v. Lowry, 49 Ia., 538. 1878.

56. Proceedings. Proceedings for township subscription under various statutes examined. Columbus, etc., R'y Co. v. Commissioners of Grant County, 65 Ind., 427, 1879; Petty v. Myers, 49 ib., 1, 1874; Reynolds v. Faris, 80 ib., 14, 1891; Peed v. Millikan, 79 ib., 86, 1891; Commissioners of White County v. Kapp, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 642, 1893; Gavin v. Commissioners of Decatur County, 12 ib., 695 (Ind.), 1892; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Jefferson Co., 21 Kans., 309, 1878; Zorger v. Township of Rapids, 36 Ia., 175, 1872.

57. Published agreement; failure to comply therewith. The fact that the railroad company, prior to the election, caused to be published in a newspaper of the township an agreement or proposition that it would, within a certain time, expend a sum named in the erection of machine shops, etc., and that the company had not expended the amount stated, would not invalidate the tax, nor authorize the issuance of an injunction to restrain its collection. Zorger v. Township of Rapids, 36 Ia., 175. 1872.

58. Purchase of railway. Where taxes are voted by a township to a railway company, upon the condition that it will construct a railway between two points named, such company does not become entitled to such aid by forming an all-rail connection between such points by the purchase of a constructed road of another company for a portion of the distance, though the portion so constructed is entirely outside of the township voting the aid. Iowa, Minn. and North Pacific R. R. Co. v. Schenck, 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ia.), 324. 1881.

59. Railways already built. Townships have no right to vote aid to railways already constructed. Brokaw v. Commissioners of Gibson County, 73 Ind., 543, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 573; State ex rel. v. County Court of Bates County, 57 Mo., 70, 1874. See, also, Lamb v. Anderson, 54 Ia.,

 Employees—Abandonment—Conveyance.

190, 1880; Iowa, Minn. and North Pacific R. R. Co. v. Schenck, 56 Ia., 628, 1881.

60. School trustees' powers. A township not under township organization has no power to become, through the trustees of schools, a stockholder in a railroad company, with power to issue bonds and levy and collect taxes on the property in the township to pay the bonds. People v. Dupuyt, 71 Ill., 651. 1874.

61. Tax books. The validity of the tax did not depend upon its extension on the tax books in the year in which it was voted, and the fact that it was not so extended would not prevent it from being afterward entered thereon as an unpaid tax of a former year. Harwood v. Brownell, 48 Ia., 657. 1878.

62. Tax receipts. An instrument executed by the treasurer of a railroad company in the form of an advance receipt for taxes voted in a certain township in aid of the company, and which provided that it should be received by the company from the county treasurer in payment of so much of such taxes, was held not to be collectible from the company or an indorser until it had been tendered in payment of the taxes specified and refused by the county treasurer. Lisle v. Ia., Minn. and North Pacific R. R. Co., 54 Ia., 499. 1880.

63. When tax becomes due. While, under ch. 48, Laws of 1868, it is the duty of the treasurer to collect and pay into the treasury a tax voted in aid of a railroad, yet the company cannot enforce this duty by mandamus until it shows itself fully entitled to the tax by presenting to the treasurer an order of the president or managing director, accompanied by certified estimates of the engineer, showing that an amount equal to the tax has been expended by the company within the county. Until this is done the tax does not become delinquent. Harwood and Cedar Falls and Minnesota R'y Co. v. Case, 37 Ia., 692. 1873.

64. Where money may be expended. When aid is subscribed by a township for the construction of a railway through the same, the money need not necessarily be expended on that part of the road within the limits of the township, but it may be expended on the road outside its limits.

Brokaw v. Commissioners of Gibson County, 73 Ind., 543, 1881; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 573.

 SUNDAY LAWS.

1. Employees; sales to. Railway employees are bona fide travelers, and the keeper of a hotel may sell them excisable liquors on Sunday the same as to other travelers. Brunton v. Bremner, 4 Cowper's Justiciary (Scotch), 1. 1878.

2. Operation of railways. The running of its passenger trains by appellee, transporting passengers, baggage, etc., on the Sabbath day, is not a violation of § 10. art. 17, ch. 29, General Statutes. Such use of its trains on that day held to be a "work of necessity." Commonwealth v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 80 Ky., 291, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 216.

3. — Necessary repairs of a railway may be made on Sunday. Yonoski v. The State, 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 40. 1882.

4. Street railways. This court is not prepared to hold that the running of street railroad cars on Sunday, in cities and the vicinity thereof, is not a work of necessity, as contemplated by s. 4579 of the Code. Augusta and Summerville R. R. Co. v. Renz, 55 Ga., 126. 1875.

 SUPERFLUOUS LAND.

1. Abandonment. The abandonment by the company of the undertaking for which the lands were purchased will not, independently of the legislative enactments, give the former owner any right to a reconveyance. Astley v. Manchester R'y Co., 2 De Gex & Jones, 453; 59 Eng. Ch., 453. 1838.

2. Contract. A contract for sale of superfluous land construed. Best v. Hamand, Law Reports, 12 Chancery Division, 1. 1878.

3. Conveyance. The mere fact of a railway company purporting to convey away lands acquired by it for the purposes of its undertaking is not conclusive to show that the lands so conveyed are superfluous lands within the meaning of sec. 128 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. Hobbs v. Midland R'y Co., Law Reports, 20 Chancery

Compensation.

Division, 418, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 53.

4. Surface. A railway company purchased land for the purpose of making an underground railway. It excavated the soil, constructed the line, and then built an arch over it, and replaced the surface over the arch. Held, by Fry, J., and by James and Cotton, L. JJ., Baggallay, L. J., doubting, that the company was not authorized, by sec. 127 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, to sell the vacant space over the arch as "superfluous land." "Superfluous land" must be land separated by a vertical, not by a horizontal, boundary, from land required for the purposes of the company. Metropolitan Ry Co., In re, Law Reports, 13 Chancery Division, 607. 1879.

5. Statute. English statutes in relation to superfluous land construed. London and Southwestern Ry Co. v. Gomm, Law Reports, 20 Chancery Division, 562; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 385, 1883; Norton v. London and North Western Ry Co., Law Reports, 13 Chancery Division, 263, 1879; Beauchamp v. Great Western Ry Co., Law Reports, 8 Chancery Appeal Cases, 745, 1868; Coventry v. London, Brighton and South Coast Ry Co., Law Reports, 5 Equity Cases, 104, 1867; City of Glasgow Union Ry Co. v. Caledonian Ry Co., 2 Paterson (House of Lords, Scotch App.), 1946, 1871; May v. Great Western Ry Co., Law Reports, 8 Queen's Bench Cases, 26, 1872.

6. Unused land. Land which is taken compulsorily by a railway company for the purposes of its act, and which is bona fide retained by it with a reasonable expectation of using it for such purposes, does not, at the expiration of ten years from the time fixed for the completion of the works, vest in an adjoining owner as superfluous land, under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 127, merely because, from insufficiency of traffic or from want of funds, the company cannot immediately apply it to such purposes, although it is, in the meanwhile, let out to yearly tenants and applied to purposes for which it is, in its then condition, suitable. Betts v. Great Eastern Ry Co., Law Reports, 3 Exchequer Division, 182, 1878; 31 Eng. (Moak), 212.

7. — The fact that lands are in the vicinity of a populous town is a circumstance to raise a presumption that such lands will be needed on account of the increased traffic of the railway. Hooper v. Bourne, 33 Eng. (Moak), 601; Law Reports, 5 Appeal Cases, 1. 1880. See, also, Hooper v. Great Western Ry Co., Law Reports, 2 Queen's Bench Division, 339, 1877; 21 Eng. (Moak), 145; Hooper v. Bourne, Law Reports, 3 Queen's Bench Division, 258, 1877.

8. — Lands purchased for extraordinary purposes and not taken compulsorily are not to be deemed superfluous lands. City of Glasgow Union Ry Co. v. Caledonian Ry Co., Law Reports, 2 Scotch & Divorce Appeal Cases, 160. 1871.

9. Wall. Where, by agreement, a wall has been built on land dividing the property of an individual from that of the company, and the individual and the company are, by the same agreement, the joint owners of the land on which the wall is built, that circumstance does not affect the individual, so as to prevent him from being considered an "adjoining owner." London and South Western Ry Co. v. Blackman, Law Reports, 4 English & Irish Appeal Cases, 600. 1870.

SUPERINTENDENT OF RAILWAY.

1. Compensation. If there is no special agreement fixing the amount the superintendent of a railroad company shall receive for his services as superintendent, he is entitled to receive the value of such services. Bee v. San Francisco and Humboldt Bay R. R. Co., 46 Cal., 248, 1873; 7 Amer. Ry Rep., 504.

2. — If the superintendent of a railroad company, at the request of the company, before work is commenced in the field, performs work which is not technically within the line of a superintendent's duty, it will be presumed that in doing the work he acted in his capacity as superintendent. Id.

3. — In an action by the superintendent of a railroad company, brought against the company to recover the value of his services as superintendent, if the company claim that his salary had been fixed at a stipulated sum, conversations between the plaintiff and directors of the company are admissible in evidence to show that he dissented from the amount of salary proposed for him by the directors, and that he did not consider his salary as fixed at a stipulated sum. Ib.

SURETYSHIP.

1. Appeal. On the evidence, held that the surety upon an appeal bond was liable without further proceedings against the principal. New Orleans, Mobile, etc., R. R. Co. v. Dugan, 27 La. An., 465. 1875.

SURFACE WATER.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; LIMITATIONS.

1. Contract for drainage. The plaintiff gave a railway company free right of way across his land, but stipulating that it should not cause an overflow of water on his field, which the company contracted that it would observe by constructing a water-way large enough to prevent overflow. The company violated its contract by constructing an insufficient water-way, whereby much of plaintiff's growing crop was destroyed and unplanted ground injured, greater labor being required to prepare it for planting by reason of the overflow. In an action for damages against the company, held, that the damages to which plaintiff was entitled were such as are recoverable in an action of trespass. Sabine and East Texas Ry Co. v. Joachimi, 58 Tex., 456, 1883; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 539. See, also, Mudden v. Railway Co., 36 Ohio St., 46, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 232.

2. Conveyance. A deed gives the company no right to flood the remaining land with water brought by it from other lands when the consideration of the deed is only for the land conveyed. Jacksonville, Northwestern and Southeastern R. R. Co. v. Cox, 91 Ill., 500. 1879.

3. Easement. In an action against a railway company for diverting surface water, and turning it upon the plaintiff's land, the evidence tended to show that the railway embankment obstructed the flow of the surface water from the hills and down a ravine, and that the defendant had dug a ditch on the upper side of the road, and had thereby conducted the water a distance of several rods, and discharged it, through a culvert under the road, upon land of the plaintiff, where it had not been accustomed to flow. The defendant claimed the right to do this, on the ground that it was necessary to the proper construction and maintenance of the railway. The jury returned a verdict of $1 for the plaintiff. The question then arose as to the right of the plaintiff to costs; and the defendant asked the court to rule that, "if the right claimed at the trial existed merely as incident to the right to construct and maintain a railroad, it would not constitute an easement." The judge "declined so to rule, and ruled to the contrary," and thereupon made a certificate that a right to an easement was in fact involved in the action. Held, that no error appeared. Rathke v. Gardner, 134 Mass., 14. 1833.

4. Embankment. A complaint set forth that during the winter season large quantities of water flowed from some distance above plaintiff's premises along-side and parallel to a highway, and passed plaintiff's premises without collecting there; that a railroad company, whose lands adjoined plaintiff's, so constructed an embankment as to cause such water to collect on plaintiff's lands. Held, not a watercourse, and that an action was not maintainable for the obstruction. Wagner v. Long Island R. R. Co., 5 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 163, 1874; appeal dismissed, 70 N. Y., 614, 1877. See, also, Conhocton Stone Road Co. v. N. Y. and Erie R. R. Co., 5 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 651. 1875.

5. Evidence. In an action of trespass on the case for wrongfully and injuriously building an embankment on defendant's own land, so as to cause an obstruction and reflow of water on plaintiff's land, it is not error to refuse introduction of testimony on the part of the defendant, that the drain constructed by the defendant, to carry the water from the land of the plaintiff, was such a drain as is usual and customary to be constructed at such embankments on railroads generally, and have been found sufficient for the purposes of carrying off the water at like places. Beatty v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 6 West Va., 388. 1873.

Statute.

6. Negligence. While a railway company has a right to drain surface water from its road-bed so as to protect the same, the work must be so done as to occasion no unnecessary inconvenience or damage to the adjoining proprietor. And the latter may recover for injuries produced by mere negligence without proving malicious intent. McCormick v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 57 Mo., 433, 1874; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 133.

7. — No action will lie for changing the flow of surface water where reasonable care and skill are used by the railway company. Wagner v. Long Island R. R. Co., 2 Hun (N. Y.), 683, 1874; appeal dismissed, Same v. Same, 70 N. Y., 614, 1877; Morrison v. Bucksport and Bangor R. R. Co., 67 Me., 353, 1877; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Hammer, 22 Kans., 763, 1879. See, also, Munkers v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 60 Mo., 334, 1875; Hosher v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., ib., 329, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 280; Munkers v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 72 Mo., 514, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 79; Mills v. G. and C. R. R. Co., 18 So. Car., 97, 1879; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 55; O'Connor v. Fond du Lac, Amboy and Peoria R'y Co., 52 Wis., 526, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 82; Cairo and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Stevens, 73 Ind., 273, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 58; Cairo and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Hourry, 77 Ind., 364, 1881.

8. — A railroad company has no right, by an embankment or other artificial means, to obstruct the natural flow of the surface water, and thereby force it in an increased quantity upon the lands of another, and if it does so, it is liable for any injury that the owner of the land may sustain by reason thereof. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. Morrison, 71 Ill., 616, 1874; Jacksonville, Northwestern and Southeastern R. R. Co. v. Cox, 91 Ill., 500, 1879; Cornish v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 49 Ia., 378, 1878.

9. Nuisance; limitations. A railway company, by failing to keep open a ditch which ran along-side of an embankment constituting a part of its road-bed, it accumulated the surface water in such quantities as to overflow adjoining lands, the owner of which made constant complaint, but delayed suit until more than seven years after the commencement of this wrong. Held, that each overflow was a distinct trespass, which, being committed without any claim of right by the company, and without the consent of the owner of the overflowed land, could not establish an easement by prescription or limitation. Twenty, and not seven, years is the period of prescription for an easement, such as a right of way or servitude of overflow. A benefit accruing is an essential element in an easement, and no period of prescription can create a right to maintain a nuisance which injures all whom it affects and benefits no one. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Hays, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 832, 1893.

10. Overflow from river. A land owner has no right, by erecting an embankment, to stop the natural flow of surface water or to divert its course so as to throw it upon the land of his neighbor. Overflowed water from a river, in time of flood, is surface water, within the meaning of this rule. Shane v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 71 Mo., 237, 1879; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 64.

11. Pleadings. Where plaintiff charges that his land was flooded and damaged, by the diversion by a railroad company of a stream of water from its natural channel, he cannot recover on proof showing that the injuries were caused solely by surface water. And the distinction between the cases and the relative liability of the company should be explained to the jury under appropriate instructions. Munkers v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 60 Mo., 334, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 234.

SWAMP LANDS.

1. Statute. The statutes in relation to swamp lands construed. Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls and Sioux City R. R. Co., 55 Ia., 157, 1880; Lockwood v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 65 Mo., 233, 1877.

1. Certiorari. The return to the writ is not conclusive but may be controverted. People ex rel. v. Smith, 24 Hun (N. Y.), 66, 1881; Same v. Same, 85 N. Y., 628, 1881.

2. — Assessments against the United Railroad and Canal Companies vacated, because the possession of the land assessed was appropriate to the enjoyment of the company's franchise. State v. Binnering, 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (N. J.), 410. 1880.

3. Description. A government survey with a given number is a description of land well recognized and which can be easily located, but a lot therein of a certain number does not represent any ascertainable part of the survey, unless a plat has been made and recorded by competent authority, which divides the survey into lots. *People v. 5. Franchise. The franchise of a corporation is property; and the franchise of a railroad corporation should be assessed for taxation separate and apart from its other property, and without taking such other property into consideration. Richmond and Danville R. R. Co. v. Brogden, 74 N. C., 707, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 114; Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Brunswick County, 72 N. C., 10, 1875; Wilmington Railway Bridge Co. v. Comm'rs of Hanover County, 72 ib., 15. See Carolina Central R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Richmond County, 74 ib., 83. 1876.

6. Inequality. Whether the valuation of railroad property is represented solely in the valuation of its tangible property, or in the valuation of its tangible property and that of its capital stock, cannot be regarded as, per se, evidence of an unjust and fraudulent discrimination. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Siders, 88 Ill., 320, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 304.

7. — Where assessors generally have assessed property at one-third of its value, but have assessed certain railroad property at its full value, the assessment of the latter will not be reduced on certiorari. People ex rel. v. Dixon, 8 Hun (N. Y.), 178. 1876.

8. Leased lines. Where a bill to enjoin the collection of the tax of a railway company charged that the state board of equalization assessed the capital stock of the company, including its franchise, beyond its actual value, and that, in making this assessment, they added to what they had determined the value of the capital stock, not only the indebtedness of the company, but also the indebtedness of six other railroad companies of which it was lessee, one of which lies without the state, for the payment of none of which the company was liable, such indebtedness of other companies so added being $6,756,000, and this latter fact was admitted by a demurrer, and the court below sustained the demurrer, held, that the court erred in sustaining the demurrer. It was improper to take into consideration the indebtedness of the other companies in fixing the valuation of the property of the company seeking to enjoin the tax. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Cole, 75 Ill., 591. 1874.

9. Machine shops. The act of March 27, 1875, in relation to payment of assessments on branch railroads and machine shops (Sess. Acts 1875, p. 128), does not govern cases of money collected on assessments made prior to the passage of the act (as where assessment was made prior thereto on machine shops in the town of Moberly). State ex rel. v. Ferguson, 62 Mo., 77. 1876.

10. Manner of assessment. The capital stock, franchises, and all the real and personal property of corporations, are justly liable to taxation; and a rule which ascertains the value of all this by ascertaining the cash value of the funded debt and of the shares of the capital stock as the basis of assessment is probably as fair as any other. State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S., 575. 1875.

11. — California. In an action to recover a tax, brought against a railroad company, the company avers in its answer that its superintendent furnished the assessor with a written statement of the real estate belonging to the company; the company cannot, on the trial, be heard to dispute the authority of its agent to give a list of its property, nor to deny that the property contained in the list belonged to the company. People v. Stockton and Copperopolis R. R. Co., 49 Cal., 414. 1874.

12. — In California a railroad must be valued and assessed separately in each county, in the same manner as real estate. Huntington v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 2 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 508. 1874.

13. — The validity of the assessment of the property of a railroad company, and of the provisions of state law discriminating between the assessment for taxation of the property of such companies and the property of individuals; and whether the fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution applies to artificial as well as to natural persons, may depend upon the proper construction of such amendment; and the right of the company to a reduction in the estimated value of its property assessed for taxation, by the amount of the mortgage due thereon, depends upon the construction of said amendment, and constitutes a case for relief arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, and is removable into the circuit court. San Mateo County v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 13 Federal Reporter, 145, 1882; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 1.

14. — Georgia. The act of the general assembly of Georgia, February 28, 1874 (Laws of 1874, page 107), which requires railroad companies to return the value of their property to the comptroller-general to be taxed as the property of other citizens, gives no authority to local or municipal bodies to tax the property of such companies. Savannah v. Atlantic and Gulf R. R. Co., 3 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 432. 1879.

15. — Illinois. Where a lot is returned by a railroad company in its list as being used for tracks, side-tracks, etc., in connection with the road and for railroad purposes, and the board of equalization assess the same, upon which the taxes are levied and paid, an assessment by the local assessor of the same lot will be a double assessment, and the tax extended upon the latter assessment will be illegal. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. The People, 99 Ill., 464. 1881.

16. — Where only a portion of the lot is used for railway purposes, to that extent it is properly returnable to the board of equalization for assessment; and if any portion is not used as railroad track, and is properly assessable by the local assessor, he should so describe it as not to embrace any portion of that which is assessable as track, and thus avoid a double assessment. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. The People, 99 Ill., 464. 1881.

17. — Railroad track should be assessed for taxation by the state board of equalization, but all other real estate of railroad companies, including the stations and other building and structures thereon, must be assessed by the local assessors. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Paddock, 75 Ill., 616. 1874.

18. — Land used by a railway company for its stations and machine shops, beyond the right of way, is properly assessed by the local assessors. Ib.

19. — The object of the legislature, in regard to the assessment of railways, is to subject each railroad company in the state to taxation, in proportion to the value of all its property liable to be taxed, whether tangible or intangible, real, personal or mixed, embracing, among other kinds of property, the franchises granted or exercised within this state. Ohio and Mississippi R. R. Co. v. Weber, 96 Ill., 443, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 101.

Assessments.

20. — Where the local assessor assessed all of the lots in certain blocks, and also two hundred feet off the north side of the same, as the property used for a railroad track, and the county assessor continued the assessment on his books as to the latter strip of two hundred feet, but in transferring the assessment dropped the lots and entered the entire assessment upon the whole of the lots to the remaining two hundred and fifty feet on the south side of the blocks, held, that the latter strip could not be taxed for the entire blocks, but should be held for only a proportionate share of the whole valuation, to avoid double taxation. People v. Ohio and Mississippi R. R. Co., 96 Ill., 411. 1880.

21. — Under the constitutional provision requiring that taxes shall be uniform, where the property belonging to individuals has been assessed at less than its actual value, railroad property in the same county must not be assessed at any greater per cent. of its value. The assessment must be uniform upon every species of property. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Livingston County, 68 Ill., 458. 1873.

22. — Indiana. Under the act of December 21, 1858 (1 G. & H., 85), as it stood at the time for the assessment of taxes for the year 1868, it was contemplated that railways, including all property used in running and operating the same, should be taxed as a unit; the road to be appraised by the appraisers of all the counties through which it may run, at a meeting to be held for that purpose on the line of the road, who were to appraise the value of the road per mile through their respective counties, taking into consideration the location of such line for business, the competition of other roads, its earnings above current expenses and repairs, its condition for present and future business, so as to enable them to arrive at the actual present value of such road, independent of what it cost or the amount of its indebtedness. Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Lafayette R. R. Co. v. Kilner, 69 Ind., 71, 1879; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 413.

23. — Sections 76, 82, 85 and 86, 1 G. & H., 94, 95, 96, all apply to personal property or to such real estate as is assessed in the ordinary method, and not to railways, concerning which the above special mode of taxing was provided. Ib.

24. — In a suit to enjoin the collection of taxes under act of 1865, entitled "An act to secure a just valuation and taxation of all railroad property within the state," etc., held, that, under this act, there are but two instances in which separate pieces of railroad property can be listed and taxed upon their value as pieces of property; one is where the property held by the railroad company is not needed and used for railroad purposes; the other is where the assessment is made by a town or city of railroad buildings, fixtures and machinery connected therewith, within its limits. Terre Haute, etc., R. R. Co. v. Commissioners of Marion County, 1 Indianapolis Superior Court Reports, 380. 1873.

25. — The act in reference to the valuation and taxation of railway property in Indiana (3 Ind. Stat., 418) does not provide for any action by the district board of equalization upon the assessment made by the appraisers; and the only appeal authorized is an appeal from the action of the appraisers to the state board of equalization. Jeffersonville, etc., R. R. Co. v. McQueen, 49 Ind., 64, 1874; Montgomery v. Jeffersonville, etc., R. R. Co., ib., 204, 1874.

26. — Kansas. The proceeding under section 65 of the tax law of 1868 is not a judicial proceeding, but one in assessment, and an exercise of the legislative power of the state. And the fact that witnesses were not sworn, and testimony taken as upon a trial, does not invalidate a proceeding had thereunder. Kansas Pacific Ry Co. v. Comm'rs Ellis Co., 19 Kans., 584. 1878.

27. — The railroad tax law of 1874 established the rule that the valuation of the owner should be accepted in respect to the valuation of railroad property, unless corrected by proceedings under § 65 of the act.

Assessments.

Kansas Pacific R'y Co. v. Comm'rs Wyandotte Co., 16 Kans., 537. 1876.

28. — Kentucky. Railways are liable to taxation for county purposes equally and uniformly with the property of a citizen. Lincoln County Court v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ky.), 320. 1831.

29. — Missouri. Under § 3 of the act of September 20, 1832, it became the duty of the president of the Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co. to furnish an annual statement under oath to the state auditor, showing the actual value of the railroad property, from which statement that officer shall assess the railroad state tax. Held, that this provision did not amount to a contract between the state and the company which rendered invalid the act of March 10, 1871 (Sess. Acts 1871, p. 56), subjecting the road to assessment for taxation by a special board of equalization; and the latter act, so far as inconsistent with the former, repealed it. State v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 60 Mo., 143, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 239.

30. — The exemption of the road, under its charter of 1849, from county taxation still remains in force. Under the above acts the road is not exempt from school taxes. Livingston County v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 60 Mo., 516. 1875.

31. — Nebraska. It is the duty of the proper officers of a railroad company, whose road is situated in more than one county, to list under oath, for assessment and taxation, the road-bed, superstructure, right of way, rolling stock, side-tracks, telegraph lines, furniture and fixtures, and personal property, belonging to such corporation, and transmit the same to the state auditor, on or before the first day of March in each year. Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Lancaster County, 7 Neb., 33. 1878.

32. — All other property of a railroad company is to be assessed by the assessor of the city, ward or precinct in which it is situated, in the same manner as is provided for the assessment of real estate; but land used for necessary side-tracks is not subject to such assessment. Ib.

33. — Nevada. The cash value of a railroad is measured by the amount of cash required to procure it, provided its utility is commensurate with its cost; and the amount of cash required to procure a railroad is the necessary cost of its construction. State v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 10 Nev., 47. 1875.

34. — When a railway company claims that its taxes, as assessed by the county assessor, have been reduced, it must affirmatively show the jurisdictional fact that a complaint was made by it to the board of equalization of the assessor's valuation of the property. State v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 17 Nev., 259. 1893.

35. — If a written statement is not furnished by a railway company to the assessor of all the company's property within the county, as required by law (Stat. 1875, 103), the board of equalization has no power to reduce the assessment made by the county assessor. Ib.

36. — New Jersey. Where an assessment is made upon a corporation in an erroneous name, the assessment may be amended. State v. Montclair and Greenwood Lake R. R. Co., 43 N. J. Law, 524. 1881.

37. — The prosecutor owned ten acres of upland, and claimed to own a right of reclamation over more than twenty acres of land under water in the Hudson river, fronting on the upland. Held, that a valuation of the whole as "thirty acres of land," at so much per acre, did not invalidate a tax based on such appraisal under the Railroad Taxation Act (Rev., p. 1166). State v. Yard, 43 N. J. Law, 121, 1831; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 529.

38. — New York. The capital stock of the relator, a railroad corporation, having its principal place of business at Utica, was assessed at that place by the respondents at $40,000. The relator applied to have this stricken out, upon an affidavit showing that its debts exceeded the value of its personal property, which application was denied. Held, that as it did not appear that the capital stock of the relator, uninvested in real estate on its road, did not exceed the sum assessed against it, that the assessment must be affirmed. People ex rel. v. Shields, 6 Hun (N. Y.), 556. 1876.

39. — North Carolina. The general assembly has no right to confer upon the governor, treasurer and auditor the power to value the tangible real and personal property of a railroad corporation; for such power is vested by the constitution in the township board of trustees alone, and cannot be taken from them. Richmond and Danville R. R. Co. v. Brogden, 74 N. C., 707, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 114; Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Brunswick County, 73 N. C., 10. 1875.

40. — So much of § 11, subsec. 8, ch. 184, of the laws of 1874-75, as provides that railroad beds listed for taxation "shall not be valued at less than $8,000 per mile," without regard to its real value, is in conflict with the constitution, and therefore void. Atlantic and North Carolina R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Carteret County, 75 N. C., 474. 1876.

41. — In revising the tax lists the commissioners of a county ex mero motu, at their August meeting, increased the valuation put upon railway property, and then caused notice to be served upon the company to appear at their September meeting and show cause why the same should not be fixed at the increased sum. Held, that the notice was sufficient, and the action of the board warranted in law. Commissioners of Cleveland County v. Atlanta and Charlotte Air Line R'y Co., 86 N. C., 541. 1882.

42. — Tennessee. An assessment, by which all the real and personal property of the company, both in and out of the state, are footed together, and the average value per mile determined, and that average fixed as the value per mile of the railway in a given county, is not objectionable. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. State, 8 Heiskell (Tenn.), 663, 1874; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 107. This case overruled, and a statute providing for assessment in that manner held unconstitutional. Chattanooga v. Nashville, Chattanooga, etc., R. R. Co., 7 Lea (Tenn.), 561. 1881.

43. Rolling stock. The rolling stock and track of railway companies are required to be assessed for taxation by the state board of equalization, but all other railroad property is to be assessed by the local assessors, and the state board has nothing to do with its valuation, except as a board of equalization. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Siders, 88 Ill., 320, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 804.

44. — The rolling stock of a railroad company, as a general principle, should be assessed and taxed where the corporation has its residence. But this principle of law may be modified by the legislature. And it was competent for the general assembly, by the act of March 10, 1871 (Sess. Acts 1871, p. 56), to say that for the purposes of taxation property of that description should be distributed through the counties, cities or towns through which the road passed, in proportion to its length in those respective localities. State ex rel., etc., v. Severance, 55 Mo., 378. 1874.

45. Road-bed. A railway company cannot be heard to object to the payment of taxes on the ground that the board of equalization has failed to assess the value of the road-beds under the rails, including embankments, bridges, culverts, etc., of all railroad companies in the state, as tangible property. The rule, being uniform, cannot work to the prejudice of one more than another. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Siders, 88 Ill., 320, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 804.

46. Statutes. Various statutes relating to assessments construed. Rio Grande R. R. Co. v. Scanlan, 44 Tex., 649, 1876; Hall v. Houston and Texas Central R'y Co., 39 Tex., 288, 1878; Carolina Central R. R. Co. v. Wilmington, 73 N. C., 73, 1875; Comm'rs of Union County v. Carolina Central R'y Co., 76 N. C., 123, 1877; 14 Amer. R'y Rep., 308; Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. The People, 83 Ill., 467, 1876; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. People, 4 Bradwell (Ill.), 468, 1879; Quincy R. R. Bridge Co. v. Quincy, 77 Ill., 107, 1875; Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co. v. Saline County, 12 Neb., 396, 1882; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 347; Auditor General v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 34 Mich., 59, 1876; Pacific R. R. Co. v. Clerk of Franklin County, 57 Mo., 223, 1874; State v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 75 Mo., 526; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 632, 1882; People ex rel. v. Nester and Delaware R. R. Co., 25 Hun (N. Y.), 186, 1881; Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co. v. Seward County, 10 Neb., 211, 1880.

47. Stock. Corporation stock should be assessed at its actual and not at its par value.

Different Kinds of Tax.

People ex rel. v. Commissioners of Taxes, 64 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 405. 1883.

48. — The assessment of stock at its par value, where the evidence shows the market value to be higher, is valid. St. Charles St. R. R. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 81 La. An., 832. 1879. A law making the market value the basis of assessment is constitutional. Ib.; also New Orleans and Carrollton R. R. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 32 ib., 19. 1890.

49. — The fact that the state board of equalization finds the equalized value of the capital stock of some railroad companies does not exceed the equalized value of their tangible property, thus leaving nothing but the latter upon which to extend taxes, when such assessment is honestly made, and with no fraudulent intent, affords no ground for enjoining the collection of taxes upon another railroad company which is assessed for the capital stock in excess of the value of its tangible property. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Siders, 88 Ill., 320, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 804.

50. — Stock belonging to resident shareholders must be listed by them and not by the corporation, and they are allowed to deduct from the tax on their shares a ratable part of the tax paid upon the corporate property by the corporation itself. Raleigh and Gaston R. R. Co. v. Commissioners of Wake, 87 N. C., 414. 1882.

II. DIFFERENT KINDS OF TAX.

51. Bonds. A railway company is taxed, not for the face of the bonds upon which it negotiates a loan, but for the amount of the loan. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co. v. The People, 46 Mich., 193. 1881.

52. Capital and debt. The act of 1864 provides that railway and horse railway companies should pay a tax of one-fourth of one per cent. on the market value of their capital stock and their funded and floating debt, and that this tax should "take the place of all other taxes on railroads and horse railroad property and franchises within this state." Held, that all the property of a railway company was exempted by the act from all other taxation, whether used for railway purposes or not.

Osborn v. New York and New Haven R. R. Co., 40 Conn., 491, 1873; 5 Amer. R'y Rep., 218.

53. Dividends. A railway company leased its road to another company for nine hundred and ninety-nine years, at twelve per cent. per annum on its capital; the first company increased the number of its shares seventy-one per cent. (the par value of both the original and increased shares being $5), on which the stockholders were to receive seven per cent. dividend, being the same amount they would have received on the original number of shares at twelve per cent. Held, that this increase was not subject to state taxation as a dividend or profit. Commonwealth v. Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago R'y Co., 74 Pa. St., 83, 1873; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 50. See, also, Commonwealth v. Erie and Pittsburgh R. R. Co., 74 Pa. St., 94, 1873; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 66.

54. — Stock dividends and issues of stock proportioned to that previously held by stockholders must stand on the same footing with original stock, and should be taxed as far as it is considered paid in. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co. v. The People, 46 Mich., 193. 1881.

55. — Under s. 15, act July 14, 1870, providing for levy of a tax on interest and dividends paid by corporations, the dividends and earnings of a railway company for the last six months of 1870 are not taxable. Metropolitan R. R. Co. v. Slack, 1 Holmes (U. S. C. C.), 375. 1874.

56. — The issue of what was termed "interest certificates" held to be a scrip dividend, and taxable under the Internal Revenue Law of 1864. Bailey v. Railroad Co., 22 Wallace, 604; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 121, 1874; 106 U. S., 109, 1892.

57. — The undivided profits of a railway company in 1871, carried to an account on the books of the company, known as "unexpended earnings," and used for construction, are liable for taxation under the act of congress amending the act of 1866, passed July 14, 1870, which provides that there "shall be collected for and during the year 1871 a tax of two and one-half per centum . . . on all undivided profits of such corporation which shall have accrued and been earned and added to any surplus, contingent or other fund." United States v. Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon R. R. Co., 17 Federal Reporter, 719. 1893.

58. — The Corporation Tax Act of May 1, 1868, § 1, requiring the taxes to be deducted from dividends, is not repealed by § 4 of act of April 24, 1874, but stands as a necessary part of the system intended to be perfected by the act of 1874. Catawissa R. R. Co.'s Appeal, 78 Pa. St., 59. 1875.

59. — A railroad company in embarrassed circumstances sold a large amount of stock below par, and afterwards paid a dividend on its whole capital, there being no proof that this was profits. Held, that the company was not liable to the tax on profits for this amount. Commonwealth v. Erie and Pittsburgh R. R. Co., 10 Philadelphia, 465. 1873.

60. — The dividend tax law of Pennsylvania construed. Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 94 Pa. St., 474. 1880.

61. — A profit upon the capital of a corporation, either made or passed to the stockholders without declaration of a dividend or a dividend declared, becomes the measure of the state tax upon dividends. Commonwealth v. Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago R'y Co., 74 Pa. St., 88, 1873; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 50.

62. — Dividends declared and payable by railroad companies during the last five months of 1870 are not liable to taxation by the United States. A seizure by a collector of United States revenue is illegal. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co. v. Kenney, 9 Philadelphia, 408. 1873.

63. Freight tax. An act of assembly imposing a tax upon freight sent from this state into any other, or from any other into this, is contrary to the constitution of the United States, and is void. The legislature has the power to lay a tax upon freight carried from place to place with the state. Commonwealth v. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co., 1 Pearson (Pa.), 356, 1866; Commonwealth v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., ib., 379, 1867.

64. Gas rates. Where, by a special act for lighting with gas the town of Chesterfield, by 6 Geo. IV., c. 77, and s. 84, rates are to be imposed on the tenants or occupiers of all houses, warehouses, cellars, vaults, stables, coach-houses, counting-houses, brew-houses, and all buildings, erections, works, tenements and hereditaments, except as after mentioned; and by s. 86 no person is to be rated for or on account of any land whatsoever, held, that a line of railway within the limits of the act is liable to be rated as a work within s. 84, although such a work was not contemplated at the passing of the act. Regina v. Midland R'y Co., 30 Eng. Law & Equity, 399. 1855.

65. Gross receipts. The legislature may lawfully levy a tax upon the gross receipts of a railway, unless there is some exemption therefrom provided in its charter. State v. Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore R. R. Co., 45 Md., 361, 1876; Commonwealth v. Buffalo and Erie R'y Co., 2 Pearson (Pa.), 376, 1870.

66. — The "gross earnings," upon which three per centum is to be paid to the state in lieu of taxes, under the charter of this defendant (Laws 1857, Ex. Sess., ch. 1), do not include the compensation paid to it by another company for the right to run trains over its lines. State v. St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba R'y Co., 30 Minn., 811. 1883.

67. — Where a corporation is assessed on its gross receipts, under the provisions of "An act for the assessment and taxation of express and telegraph companies" (S. & S., 769-771), and pays such assessment to avoid the penalties and disabilities incurred by a refusal to pay, but under protest, and after notifying the treasurer that an action would be brought to recover the same back, such payment is not voluntary, and an action may be maintained to recover back the amount so paid, if the tax is illegal. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Mayer, 38 Ohio St., 521. 1876.

68. Highway tax. Various road tax laws construed. Sioux City and St. Paul R. R. Co. v. County of Osceola, 45 Ia., 168, 1876; Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co. v. Kosuth County, 41 Ia., 57, 1875; Leavenworth, Lawrence and Gulf R. R. Co. v. Clemmons, 14 Kans., 82, 1874; Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Saunders County, 9 Neb., 507, 1880.

69. Income. A tax upon a corporation may be proportioned to the income received as well as to the value of the franchise granted or the property possessed. Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wallace, 206, 1873; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 812.

70. — A state cannot impose a tax on the movement of persons or property from one state to another. Railroad Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wallace, 456, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 483.

71. — The lien of the income tax (Act July 13, 1866, 14 St. at Large, 107; Rev. St., § 8186) relates back, upon demand, to the time when the tax was due, but only attaches to the property belonging to the person from whom the tax was due at the time when the demand for the payment of the tax was made. United States v. Pacific R. R. Co., 1 Federal Reporter, 97; 1 McCrary (U. S. C.), 1. 1890.

72. — The expression "profits used in construction" (within the meaning of § 127 of the Internal Revenue Act of June 30, 1864, 13 Stat., 294) does not embrace earnings expended in repairs, but has reference to new constructions adding to the permanent value of the capital; and when these are made to take the place of prior structures, it includes only the increased value of the new over the old, when in good repair. Grant v. Hartford and New Haven R. R. Co., 93 U. S., 225. 1876.

73. Interest tax. The act of May 1, 1868, does not impose a tax upon corporations, but directs their officers to retain it from the interest of the money due to their creditors, residents of this commonwealth, and pay it into the state treasury. This law is constitutional. Commonwealth v. Reading and Wilmington R. R. Co., 2 Pearson (Pa.), 394. 1875.

74. — During the period when § 122 of the act of June 30, 1864, c. 173, as amended by the act of July 13, 1866, ch. 184, was in force, a railway company paid to alien non-resident holders of its bonds the entire interest due from time to time thereon. Held, that the company, no claim having been made here against it for any penalty, is liable to the United States for five per cent. on the amount so paid, with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent. per annum. United States v. Erie R'y Co., 106 U. S., 327. 1882.

75. — A corporation authorized to build a railway, though not in terms authorized to engage in traffic as a carrier, and which has actually engaged in the carriage of freight and passengers, is liable to the tax on coupons provided for in the act of July 13, 1866. Improvement Co. v. Slack, 100 U. S., 648; Railroad Co. v. Slack, ib., 659. 1879.

76. — A railroad company paid to the holders of its bonds the entire amount of semi-annual interest accruing thereon from January 1 to July 1, 1870. Held, that the proper internal revenue officer of the United States rightfully assessed against the company a tax of five per cent. upon the amount so paid. Railway Co. v. Rose, 95 U. S., 78. 1877.

77. — The "tax of two and one-half per centum on the amount of all interest or coupons paid on bonds or other evidences of debt, issued and payable in one or more years after date," by any railroad company, is a tax on the interest, not as it accrues, but when it is paid. Railroad Co. v. United States, 101 U. S., 543. 1879.

78. — The tax on interest paid by corporations under § 122 of the internal revenue law, as amended by the act of July 13, 1866 (14 Stat., 138), is an excise tax on their business, to be paid by them out of their earnings, income and profits. Railroad Co. v. Collector, 100 U. S., 535. 1879.

79. Land tax. Under the revenue act of 1869, the words "land tax" were not designed to include town and city lots, right of way of railroad companies, etc., though lands lying within the limits of a town or city, and not subdivided, are subject to the tax. Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co. v. Lancaster County, 4 Neb., 293. 1876.

80. License. Under §§ 1211-1213, R. S., the amount of license money to be paid by an applicant for a license to operate a railway in Wisconsin is to be determined by the aggregate mileage of all of the railways operated by such applicant, within the state, during the preceding calendar year, and the aggregate amount of the gross earnings of all of such roads during that time. State ex rel. v. McPettridge, 56 Wis., 256, 1882; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 536.

81. Lien. The internal revenue act of July 13, 1866 (Rev. Stats., § 3186), provides, in reference to certain taxes, that if any person, liable to pay the same, "neglects or refuses to pay them after demand, the amount shall be a lien in favor of the United States from the time it was due until paid, with interest, penalties and costs upon all property and rights of property belonging to such person." Held, that a demand is necessary to create and bring into operation this lien. United States v. Pacific R. R. Co., 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 71: 1877.

82. Passenger fares. A tax levied upon a railway company of ten cents for each passenger carried, so far as it affects passengers carried into or out of the state, is in effect a regulation of commerce, and invalid under the federal constitution. Clarke v. Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore R. R. Co., 4 Houston (Del.), 158, 1869; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 7.

83. Poor rates. Under the charter of defendant it was held that its railway and land should be rated in any particular parish according to its actual value there, although such value was owing in a great measure to station-houses and other works not within the parish. Regina v. London R'y Co., 1 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 558; 41 E. C. L., 670. 1842.

84. School tax. Various statutes in relation to school taxes construed. State v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 75 Mo., 523, 1882; Livingston County v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 60 ib., 516, 1875; Caldwell County v. Same, ib., 521, 1875.

85. Sinking fund. A "sinking fund tax" is a tax raised to be applied to the payment of the interest and principal of a public loan, and it cannot under the statute be levied for the payment of floating indebtedness. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Buffalo County, 9 Neb., 449, 1880; Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. York County, 10, ib., 612. 1880.

86. United States tax. The obligation or duty to pay taxes assessed by the United States is one which may be enforced by suit — by an action at law or a bill in equity, according to the nature of the relief sought. United States v. Pacific R. R. Co., 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 68. 1877.

87. — The internal revenue tax on coupon bonds is payable by the holder, and not by the obligor. Haight v. Pittsburgh, Ft. Wayne and Chicago R. R. Co., 3 Pittsburgh (U. S. C. C.), 105. 1867.

III. COLLECTION OF TAX.

88. Attorney; collection by. Where an attorney has collected taxes from a railway company upon a consent decree, which decree was obtained by such attorney, the county is bound by the acts of the attorney in collecting the same. Conway County v. Little Rock and Ft. Smith R'y Co., 39 Ark., 50. 1883.

89. Chattel mortgage lien. Where the decree, upon a bill to enjoin the levy of a collector's warrant upon personal property of the complainant, issued upon an assessment of the same against a former owner, finds that the mortgage under which the complainant claims was a valid lien on the property prior to the assessment and delivery of the warrants to the collector, this will amount to a finding that the mortgage was properly acknowledged and recorded, or that possession must have been taken under it before it expired, the presumption being in favor of the finding of the court. Binkert v. Wabash R'y Co., 98 Ill., 205, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 113.

90. Collection by court. If no one can be found able and willing to collect the taxes, when levied by the county court to pay creditors who have obtained a decree on interest coupons, on bill filed, this court will entertain jurisdiction. In such case the court will direct the payment of taxes so assessed into the registry, to be applied in satisfaction of complainants' decree; and against each defendant debtor, who shall not so pay within the time specified in the order, an execution will issue. Post & Co. v. Taylor County, 2 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 518. 1879.

91. Collection of taxes for past years. The legislature may properly pass a law for the collection of taxes for past years. The right to pass such law is not affected by lapse of time. North Carolina R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Alamance County, 82 N. C., 259. 1880.

92. Injunction. A collector of taxes, in violation of an agreement between the county court and a railway company, was about to enforce collection of certain taxes assessed against the real estate of the latter; held, that injunction would lie to prevent a sale. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R'y Co. v. Anthony, 78 Mo., 481, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 366.

93. — An injunction will not be granted to restrain the collection of a tax by a sale of the real estate of the tax-payer. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Corcoran, 48 Cal., 65, 1874.

94. Interest. As the taxes against the railway company were not levied till in 1877, interest will not commence till that date, although the tax levied was for previous years. The assessment held to have the same force as if made in 1875, with the exception of the interest. Nashville, Chattanooga, etc., R. R. Co. v. Franklin County, 5 Lea (Tenn.), 707, 1880; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 258.

95. Judgment. The collection of a public tax as much belongs to the authority of the state as its levy and assessment. The tax, when assessed, although levied for a specific purpose, is not a fund which can be dealt with by a court as an equitable asset or chose in action subject to an implied trust, and United States courts have no power to appoint a receiver to collect such taxes even where there is no state officer to perform that duty. Thompson v. Allen County, 18 Federal Reporter, 97, 1882.

96. Limitations. As it was made the duty of the railway company, under the acts of 1866 and 1870, to make returns to the proper United States internal revenue officer, of the amount of income, profits and taxes, when no returns have been made by the company, a failure on the part of the government to demand such tax, or to institute proceedings to recover the same until 1881, cannot constitute a bar to an action to recover such tax, when it does not appear that the delay has prejudiced the company by the disappearance or loss of evidence essential to its defense. United States v. Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon R. R. Co., 17 Federal Reporter, 719, 1883.

97. Penalty. A penalty of $1,000 is the only liability incurred by a railroad company for failing to comply with the provisions of § 121 of the internal revenue act of June 30, 1864 (13 Stat., 284), as amended by the act of July 13, 1866 (14 ib., 138). Erskine v. Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 94

U. S., 619, 1876; Elliott v. Railroad Co., 99 ib., 573, 1878.

98. — The penalty of one hundred per cent. on reassessment of an internal revenue tax, for false omission (Act March 2, 1867), cannot be collected if the reassessment includes a sum not legally taxed. Michigan Central R. R. Co. v. Slack, 1 Holmes (U. S. C. C.), 231, 1873.

99. — Where an action was brought against a corporation under § 120 of the act of June 30, 1864, as amended by the act of July 14, 1870 (16 St., p. 260, § 15), to recover penalties for failure to make return of interest and pay the tax on a bond of the defendant, held, that only one penalty is recoverable for all failures to make the required returns prior to the commencement of the action to recover penalties for such failure. United States v. Brooklyn and Newtown R. R. Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 284, 1882.

100. — The statutes of Nebraska construed. Kane v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 5 Neb., 105, 1876.

101. Pleading. The pleadings examined in actions relating to the recovery of taxes. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Town of Langlade, 55 Wis., 116, 1882; Curtis v. Flint and Pere Marquette R'y Co., 32 Mich., 291, 1875.

102. Replevin. Where certain cars, etc., of a railway company were levied upon for the taxes of another person, for which such property was not liable, the property may be recovered back by replevin. Lake Shore and Mich. Southern R'y Co. v. Roach, 80 N. Y., 339, 1890; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 184. But see Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Hamilton, 16 Federal Reporter, 181, 1888.

103. — Where a train and engine were seized for taxes, and in an action of replevin the verdict was for defendant, held, that the verdict was not sufficient as it failed to specify the amount of defendant's lien. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. St. Clair, 34 Mich., 518, 1876.

104. Seizure. Where the tax collectors proceed summarily to seize property, they must show on what property the assessment is made, and the percentage upon its value. Clinton and Port Hudson R. R. Co. v. Tax Collector, 30 La. An., 626, 1878.

Place of Taxation.

105. Statutes. Various statutes construed. People ex rel. v. Treasurer of Saginaw County, 32 Mich., 260, 1875; Iowa Railroad Land Co. v. Guthrie, 53 Ia., 888, 1890; Iowa Falls and Sioux City R. R. Co. v. Storm Lake Bank, 55 Ia., 696, 1891.

106. Tax lists. The statute regulating the manner in which the lists of delinquent tax-payers shall be made out is directory; and if its essential requirements be complied with, it is sufficient. Houston and Texas Central R'y Co. v. The State, 39 Tex., 148, 1873.

107. — The Kansas statutes in relation to road tax lists construed. Kansas City, Fort Scott and Gulf R. R. Co. v. Tontz, 29 Kans., 460, 1893.

108. Tax sale. Property of a railway company in the limits of towns may be assessed and taxed for municipal purposes. But the cars of the company are not subject to seizure and sale by a ministerial officer to satisfy such taxes. Elizabethtown and Paducah R. R. Co. v. Trustees of Elizabethtown, 12 Bush (Ky.), 233, 1876.

109. — A railway is an entire thing, not legally subject to coercive severance or dislocation. The locomotives, cars, etc., are treated as fixtures of the road. Ib.

110. — Where the property of a railroad company has been sold by the tax collector for the non-payment of taxes which have been remitted, by act of the legislature, before the sale, and the purchaser makes no attempt to assert his right to the property, but allows the company to retain possession, a court of equity will entertain a bill by the railroad company to annul the sale, cancel the deed made to the purchaser, and to enjoin him from asserting any claim to the property. Mobile and Girard R. R. Co. v. Peebles, 47 Ala., 817, 1872.

111. — The mere fact that a railroad company is a purchaser of certain tracts of land at a tax sale does not prove that such purchase is ultra vires, and the tax sale certificate in the hands of the corporation null and void, so as to release the county from the obligation to refund the money in case the sale proves to be invalid. School District No. 15 v. Comm'rs of Allen Co., 23 Kans., 568, 1879.

112. — S. entered into a contract in writing, in 1868, with a railroad company, to purchase certain real estate, and covenanted to pay all taxes which should be lawfully imposed on the premises. Under the contract, he went into possession of the land; paid a small portion of the purchase money, and made valuable improvements. He defaulted as to the payment of taxes for the years 1873, 1874, 1875 and 1876. In May, 1877, there was a settlement between S. and the company, and S. relinquished all his right in the land and all his improvements to the company; the company accepted the surrender of his written contract, and released all its claims against him under the covenants thereof. Held, that S. was thereby relieved of all duty or obligation to pay past or future taxes on the premises; and after such settlement S. was not debarred from acquiring a valid tax title to the premises, on account of his former relation with the railroad company, under the contract of purchase. Shoup v. Central Branch Union Pacific R. R. Co., 24 Kans., 547, 1890; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 123.

113. License. The licensee of real estate cannot acquire a tax title thereto as against his licensor, whose right of possession has continued for more than five years after the execution of the tax deed. Keokuk and Des Moines R. R. Co. v. Lindley, 48 Ia., 11, 1878.

114. — A tax deed confers a prima facie title. New York, Ontario and Western R'y Co. v. Davenport, 65 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 434, 1883.

IV. PLACE OF TAXATION.

115. Foreign bonds. Investments in bonds and stocks of foreign corporations by residents of Ohio may lawfully be taxed in Ohio; and the provisions of the act of April 5, 1859 (3 S. & C., 1438), imposing a tax on such bonds and stocks, are not unconstitutional. Worthington v. Treasurer of Hamilton County, 25 Ohio St., 1, 1874.

116. Foreign held bonds. A state cannot tax the bonds of a railway company held by non-residents. Commonwealth v. Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co., 27 Grattan (Va.), 344, 1876; Appeal Tax Court of Baltimore v.

Land Grants — Special Charters.

Gill, 50 Md., 377, 1878; United States v. Erie R'y Co., 9 Benedict (U. S. D. C.), 67, 1877.

117. Local taxation of railways. After the passage of the act of March 10, 1871, in relation to railroad taxation, the city of Jefferson had no authority under its charter to assess the property of railroad companies situate within its limits, and collect taxes thereon for the year 1871. Pacific R. R. Co. v. Watson, 61 Mo., 57. 1875.

118. Principal office. A certificate of incorporation, which, under the statute, specifies the place where the principal office of the company is to be located, is conclusive as to the location of such office for purposes of taxation. Pelton v. Transportation Co., 37 Ohio St., 450. 1882.

119. Property in transit. The personal property of a non-resident of this state at a railroad station, and awaiting shipment to the residence of the owner, has no permanent situs here, and is not taxable in this state. Standard Oil Co. v. Bachelor, 89 Ind., 1. 1883.

120. Stock held by non-residents. Under ch. 483, Acts 1874, the stock held by non-residents is taxable at the place where the corporation has its principal office. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Baltimore R. R. Co., 57 Md., 31, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 362.

V. LAND GRANTS.

See sub-title EXEMPTION, post.

121. When taxable. When the railroad company became entitled to any portion of the lands granted by act of congress of May 15, 1856, by the completion of any part of its road, as prescribed by federal or state legislation, such portion of the grant thereupon became subject to assessment and taxation. C. R. and M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41 Ia., 153. 1875.

122. — But the land is not taxable till the company is entitled to the patents. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Howard, 51 Cal., 229, 1876; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 98.

123. — If a grant by congress to a railroad company of public land to aid in its construction contains conditions by which the grant is liable to be defeated, the land cannot be taxed while the conditions are in force and are not fulfilled. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Howard, 52 Cal., 227, 1877; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 111.

124. — Lands selected by the Illinois Central R. R. Co., under the act of congress, are liable to taxation when sold by the company and paid for, although no conveyance may have been made. Champaign County v. Reed, 100 Ill., 304. 1881.

125. — The act of the general assembly of Arkansas of January 12, 1853, incorporating the Cairo and Fulton R. R. Co., and exempting forever its capital stock and dividends from taxation, does not exempt the lands granted by the act of February 9, 1853 (10 Stat., 155), to that state, and by her transferred to the company. Railway Co. v. Loftin, 93 U. S., 539, 1876; Same v. Same, 105 ib., 253, 1881.

VI. SPECIAL CHARTERS.

126. Various charters. The Western and Atlantic R. R. Co. is subject to a tax of one-half of one per cent. on its net income, but to no more. State v. Western and Atlantic R. R. Co., 66 Ga., 563. 1881.

127. — The payment of this income tax covers all such property as may be necessary and proper for the use and enjoyment of the franchise secured by the lease to the company, whether it was received from the state or has been purchased since the lease began. Other property of the company would be subject to taxation as the property of individuals. Ib.

128. — The tax of one-twentieth of one per cent. authorized by § 13 of the charter of the Missouri and Mississippi R. R. Co. (Acts 1865, page 86) is the only tax authorized by law to be collected to pay bonds issued under that charter. The common fund of the county collected for the purpose of defraying the current expenses of the county government is not applicable to their payment. State ex rel. v. Macon County Court, 68 Mo., 29. 1878.

129. — One who takes county bonds issued under a statute which limits the rate of taxation that may be imposed for their payment to one-twentieth of one per cent. is chargeable with knowledge of the limitation. Ib.

Exemption.

130. — A provision in an act of the legislature of Delaware, under which the original Wilmington and Susquehanna R. R. Co. was united with the Delaware and Maryland R. R. Co., requiring the new company to pay annually into the treasury of the state a tax of one-quarter of one per cent. upon its capital stock of $100,000, did not prevent a subsequent legislature from imposing a further or different tax upon the company. The amount designated was only a declaration of the tax payable annually until a different rate should be established. Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wallace, 206, 1878; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 312.

131. — Various charters construed. Goldsmith v. Central R. R. Co., 62 Ga., 509, 1879; Goldsmith v. Ga. R. R. Co., 62 Ga., 485, 1879. See, also, Same v. Rome R. R. Co., ib., 473, 1879; Same v. Central R. R. Co., ib., 509; Goldsmith v. Rome R. R. Co., 62 Ga., 473, 1879; Moore v. Holliday, 4 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 52, 1876; State v. Receiver of Taxes of Camden, 39 N. J. Law, 299, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 50; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co. v. Pfaender, 28 Minn., 217, 1877.

VII. EXEMPTION.

132. Authority to create exemption. The legislature of a state or territory has power to exempt property from taxation. Winona and St. Peter R. R. Co. v. Deuel County, 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Dak.), 348, 1882; Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Gaines, 8 Federal Reporter, 263, 1830.

133. Additional works. Additional works, not contemplated in a grant of exemption, will be subject to taxation. Alexandria Bridge Co. v. Dist. of Columbia, 1 Mackey (Dist. of Columbia), 217, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 325.

134. Arbitrators. Under the statute the arbitrators may not determine what property is exempt, but their award reducing the valuation of taxable property is binding. State ex rel. v. Board of Assessors, 30 La. An., 201. 1873.

135. Bonds and mortgages. Bonds of the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. and of the Northern Central R'y Co., not alleged to be secured by mortgages upon property within this state, are not embraced in the terms of the exemption contained in the act of 1876, ch. 260, s. 1, which exempted from taxation "mortgages upon property in this state, and the mortgaged debts respectively secured therefrom." Appeal Tax Court of Baltimore v. Gill, 50 Md., 377. 1873.

136. Branch lines. Upon the amendment of a charter of a railroad company (whose road was exempt from taxation), authorizing it to construct a branch road, the branch road when constructed became subject to the provisions of the original charter, and the right of exemption from taxation therein granted attached with full force to the branch road. Atlantic and Gulf R. Co. v. Allen, 15 Fla., 637. 1876.

137. Certiorari. Where an assessment of taxes has been made in good faith on property which, by the prosecutor's charter, is exempt from taxation, costs will not be allowed to the prosecutor on setting aside the taxes on certiorari, where the application for relief has not been made to the local authorities, unless the defense in the certiorari suit has been conducted vexatiously. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co. v. Newark, 44 N. J. Law, 323. 1832.

138. Change of constitution. The charter of a railroad company exempting it from taxation is not repealed by a constitutional provision adopted after acceptance of the charter, declaring that "no property shall be exempt from taxation, except," etc. Scotland County v. Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska R'y Co., 65 Mo., 123. 1877.

139. — Sec. 16, art. 11, of the constitution of 1865, was not designed to withdraw existing exemptions from taxation. It was intended to operate prospectively only. Ib.

140. Charters and statutes. Various charters and special statutes in relation to exemption construed. State v. Woodruff, 36 N. J. Law, 94, 1872; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 424; State v. Leggett, Comptroller, 41 N. J. Law, 819, 1879; State v. Comm'r of Railroad Taxation, 38 N. J. Law, 472, 1875; *Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio R'y Co. v. 141. — The Central Pacific Railroad is not exempt from taxation. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. State Board, 60 Cal., 35, 1882; Huntington v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 2 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 503, 1874; State v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 10 Nev., 47, 1875; County of Santa Clara v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 18 Federal Reporter, 385, 1883.

142. — The charter of the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. construed, and the property of the company held exempt from taxation. Its hotels, built for use of its general traffic, likewise held to be exempt. But its hotels for summer resort were held taxable the same as ordinary hotel property. State v.

Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 48 Md., 49, 1877. But see Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Dist. of Columbia, 3 MacArthur (Dist. of Columbia), 122, 1879.

143. — The exemption from all taxation and assessment contained in the St. Paul and Pacific Act was not simply a personal privilege conferred upon the company, but was in the nature of a conditional grant, appurtenant to its several lines of railroad, and charged with the perpetual burden of an annual payment of the specified sum therein provided, dating from the time when any portion of such lines, equal in extent to thirty miles, should be completed and in operation. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co. v. Pfaender, 23 Minn., 217, 1877.

144. — In case of a severance and division of such lines of road and the franchises thereto appertaining among the different companies, reference must be had to the time when such first thirty miles of completed road were built and put in operation, in ascertaining and fixing the rate per cent. and amount of gross earnings each company is to pay during any given year as to its line of road. Id.

145. — The franchise of the Atlantic, Tennessee and Ohio R. R. Co. is subject to tax. It is a distinct species of property from that enumerated in the clause of the charter exempting the road-bed, etc., from taxation for a limited period. Atlantic, Tennessee and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Mecklenburg, 87 N. C., 129, 1883.

146. — Shares in the capital stock of the North Carolina R. R. Co. are not exempt from taxation by a legislative enactment that "all real estate held by said company for right of way, for station places of whatever kind, and for work shop location, shall be exempt from taxation until the dividends or profits of said company shall exceed six per centum per annum." Belo v. Comm'rs of Forsyth County, 82 N. C., 415, 1880. See Richmond and Danville R. R. Co. v. Commissioners of Alamance, 84 N. C., 501, 1881.

147. — The charter of the New Haven and Northampton Co. construed, and held that the exemption of a canal company was not lost by its change to a railway company.

Exemption.

Nichols v. New Haven and Northampton Co., 42 Conn., 103. 1875.

148. — amendment to charter. An exemption from taxation contained in the charter of a corporation cannot be repealed without the consent of the corporation. Oliver v. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co., 30 Ark., 128, 1875; St. Louis, Iron Mt. and Southern R. R. Co. v. Loftin, ib., 693, 1875; Atlantic and Gulf R. R. Co. v. Allen, 15 Fla., 637, 1876. But see Hewitt v. N. Y. and Oswego Midland R. R. Co., 12 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 453, 1875; Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 17 So. Car., 219, 1881; Scotland County v. Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska R'y Co., 65 Mo., 123, 1877.

149. — A corporation having an irrevocable charter which provides for a special mode of taxation, and that "no other or further tax or imposition shall be levied or imposed upon the said company," may consent to other taxation, or a different mode of assessment from that specified in its charter, by the acceptance of subsequent legislative acts, without impairing the exemption from general taxation contained in its charter. In such event, the new taxation becomes part of the original contract, and modifies its terms to that extent, leaving the restriction therein on further taxation in full force. State v. Comm'r of Railroad Taxation, 37 N. J. Law, 240. 1874.

150. — The amendment of a town charter authorizing it to levy a tax upon the property of railway companies in the limits of the town does not operate as a constructive repeal of the charter of a railway company passed since the statute of 1856, by which the property of the company was exempted from taxation until the road was completed. Elizabethtown and Paducah R. R. Co. v. Trustees of Elizabethtown, 12 Bush (Ky.), 233. 1876.

151. — An act changing the name of a railroad company, and continuing to it under the new name all its rights, privileges, etc., under its former name, did not revive provisions of the charter granting exemption from taxation which had been repealed by prior amendments. If otherwise, the reviving act, being passed after the adoption of the Code, would not interpose a constitutional barrier so as to prevent the legislature from taxing the company like natural persons. Macon and Augusta R. R. Co. v. Goldsmith, 63 Ga., 463. 1879.

152. Conditions. Under the act of 1839, the exemption from taxation previously granted to the Charleston and Savannah R. R. Co. was revoked by acceptance of that act, and the company was required to complete its road from Charleston to Savannah by January 1, 1870; and it was further provided "that no tax shall be assessed or levied upon said road until the same shall have been completed." In March, 1870, the line was completed to such extent that, by the use under the lease of another company's track for three miles, and by means of a ferry boat belonging to this company, freight and passengers were transported by the company from Charleston to Savannah. Held, that the company was liable to taxation for the year 1870 and all subsequent years. And for the payment of such claim the state can, in court, demand a sale of the road. Hand v. Savannah and Charleston R. R. Co., 12 So. Car., 314. 1879. See Same v. Same, 17 So. Car., 219. 1881.

153. Consideration. An act of the legislature exempting property of a railroad from taxation is not a "contract" to exempt it, unless there be a consideration for the act. Tucker v. Ferguson, 23 Wallace, 537. 1874.

154. Consolidation of railways. A corporation, formed, under an act of the legislature, by the consolidation of existing companies, and "vested with all the rights, privileges, franchises and property which may have been vested in either company prior to the act of consolidation," acquires no greater immunity from taxation than they severally enjoyed as to the portions of the road which belonged to them under their respective charters. Whatever property was subject to taxation would, after the consolidation, remain so. Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Virginia, 94 U. S., 718, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 155.

155. — Immunity from taxation held to pass to a consolidated corporation. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Gaines, 2 Flip-pin (U. S. C. C.), 621, 1880; State v. Comm'r of Railroad Taxation, 37 N. J. Law, 240, 1874; State Treasurer v. Auditor-General, 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Mich.), 565, 1881.

Exemption.

156. — Consolidated companies held subject to taxation, notwithstanding the exemption of the former corporations. Atlanta and Richmond Air Line R. R. Co. v. State, 63 Ga., 483, 1879; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 399; Railroad Co. v. Maine, 96 U. S., 499, 1877; Railroad Co. v. Georgia, 98 U. S., 359, 1878; State v. Northern Central R'y Co., 44 Md., 181, 1875.

157. Constitutional law. Section 28 of art. 2 of the Const. of 1834, to wit: "All lands liable to taxation, held by deed, grant or entry, town lots, bank stock, etc., and such other property as the legislature may, from time to time, deem expedient, shall be taxable," imposed no restriction upon the power of the legislature to stipulate for total or partial exemptions from taxation in charters of incorporation. Knoxville and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Hicks, 9 Baxter (Tenn.), 442, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 197.

158. — The act of February 28, 1874, taxing the Atlantic and Gulf R. R. Co. an amount exceeding one-half of one per cent. upon its annual net income, is not unconstitutional, as impairing the obligations of the contract embraced in its charter. Atlantic and Gulf R. R. Co. v. State, 55 Ga., 312, 1875.

159. Construction. No presumption exists in favor of a contract by a state to exempt lands from taxation. Every reasonable doubt should be resolved against it. Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wallace, 527, 1874; Bailey v. Magwire, 22 ib., 215, 1874; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 470; North Missouri R. R. Co. v. Maguire, 20 Wallace, 46, 1873; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 445; Hoge v. Railroad Co., 99 U. S., 848, 1878; Baton Rouge, etc., R. R. Co. v. Kirkland, 93 La. An., 622, 1881; County Comm'rs Anne Arundel County v. Annapolis, etc., R. R. Co., 47 Md., 592, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 859; Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 10 Bush (Ky.), 43, 1873; Alexandria Bridge Co. v. Dist. of Columbia, 1 Mackey (Dist. of Col.), 217, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 325; Nashville, Chattanooga, etc., R'y Co. v. Marion County, 7 Lea (Tenn.), 668, 1881; Scotland County v. Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska R'y Co., 65 Mo., 123, 1877.

160. Eating-house. Thus, where it appears that it was necessary in 1873, for the proper accommodation of persons traveling by defendant's railway, that defendant should maintain an eating and lodging house for them at Prairie du Chien, beside its road, and that a certain building owned by defendant upon its land adjacent to its road was principally used for that purpose, more than nine-tenths of its business, probably, consisting in furnishing entertainment to travelers by and employes upon said railway, it is held to have been exempt from local taxation; and the facts that plaintiff's tenant (not charged with rent), by whom it was conducted, took the profits thereof, and that commercial travelers, reaching and leaving Prairie du Chien by railway, were entertained at the house for one or more days while transacting their business in that vicinity, will not prevent such exemption, where the house was not kept as a general hotel for the accommodation of the whole public. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co. v. Crawford County, 48 Wis., 666, 1880. See, also, State v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 48 Md., 49, 1877.

161. Elevators. Railway companies are not required to furnish storage for grain transported, after their connection with it as common carriers has ceased, nor can they condemn property for the purpose of erecting "elevators" thereon; and such elevators, erected by the plaintiff company, with the land on which they are situated, are taxable for all purposes. Such elevators are not exempt from taxation as railway property. Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co. v. City of Milwaukee, 34 Wis., 271, 1874.

162. Employes; road work. The employes of the N. C. and St. L. R. R. Co. held exempt from work in the public roads, under the charter of the Nashville and North Western R. R. Co., with which the former company was consolidated. Hawkins v. Small, 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Tenn.), 432, 1881.

163. Foreign corporation. It being settled law that the language by which a state surrenders its right of taxation must be clear and unmistakable, a grant by one state to a corporation of another state to exercise a part of its franchise within the limits of the state making the grant, as above stated, and laying a tax upon it at the time of the grant, does not, of itself, preclude a right of further taxation by the same state. Erie R'y Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wallace, 492, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 206.

164. Gross receipts. The levy of a tax on the gross receipts of the Pacific Railroad held to impair the obligation of a contract for exemption contained in its charter. Pacific R. R. Co. v. Maguire, 20 Wallace, 86, 1873; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 437.

165. — The statute taxing the gross earnings of railway companies in lieu of all other taxation, and making the amount uniform for ten years, is unconstitutional. Ellis v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 8 Baxter (Tenn.), 530. 1876. But see Memphis and Charleston R. R. Co. v. Gaines, 3 Tenn. Ch., 604. 1877.

166. Injunction. A temporary injunction until final hearing will be granted to restrain the assessment of the property of railway companies, where their charters provide for exemption from taxation. Memphis and Charleston R. R. Co. v. Gaines, 3 Tenn. Ch., 478. 1877.

167. — Pleadings considered in an injunction proceeding. Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon R. R. Co. v. City of Marquette, 35 Mich., 504, 1877; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 179.

168. Jurisdiction. In such proceedings to enforce payment of taxes, the fact that the land against which a tax is sought to be enforced is exempted from taxation, does not affect the jurisdiction of the court in which the proceedings are brought, to try and determine the legality of the tax. County of Chisago v. St. Paul and Duluth R. R. Co., 27 Minn., 109. 1890.

169. — federal jurisdiction. Where a state has by valid contract exempted certain property from taxation, it cannot by subsequent legislation subject that property to taxation nor prohibit the United States courts from using their injunctive powers to protect the contract from violation. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Gaines, 2 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 621; 3 Federal Reporter, 266, 1880.

170. Land grants. While the lands here in question were held by the state in trust for the building of a proposed railroad now owned by the plaintiffs, and hence were not subject to taxation, the legislature had the power, in furtherance of that object and in execution of the trust, to exempt such lands from taxation for a term of years; and such power, having been exercised, could, within the discretion of the legislature, be exercised anew by granting an extension of the exemption. Wisconsin Central R. R. Co. v. Taylor County, 53 Wis., 37, 1881; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 532.

171. — The grant to the Illinois Central R. R. Co. construed. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Goodwin, 94 Ill., 283. 1889.

172. — The grant to the St. Paul and Sioux City R. R. Co. construed. County of Nobles v. Sioux City and St. Paul R. R. Co., 26 Minn., 294. 1879.

173. — The Railway Company v. Prescott (16 Wallace, 603) modified and overruled so far as it asserts the contingent right of pre-emption in lands granted to the Pacific Railroad Company, to constitute an exemption of those lands from state taxation. But affirmed so far as it holds that lands on which the costs of survey have not been paid, and for which the United States have not issued a patent to the company, are exempt from state taxation. Railway Co. v. McShane, 22 Wallace, 444, 1874; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 456.

174. Lands. A statute, after laying a certain tax on a "railroad company"—a specific annual tax of one per cent. on the cost of the road,—and reserving a right to impose a further tax upon gross earnings, enacted that "the above several taxes shall be in lieu of all other taxes to be imposed within the state." Held, that the statute imposed a tax in reference to the railroad itself, and had no relation to lands owned by the company and not used nor necessary in working the road, and in the exercise of its franchise, but which it had mortgaged and was holding for sale, even though the chief purpose of the sale was to pay the mortgage debt, a heavy one, and one which had been contracted for the exclusive purpose of building the road. And that these lands might be taxed notwithstanding the above-mentioned agreement. Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wallace, 527. 1874. See, also, Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Moseley, 52 Miss., 127. 1876.

175. — Certain assessments against the Exemption.

United Railroad and Canal Companies vacated, because the possession of the land assessed was appropriated to the enjoyment of the company's franchise. State v. Binninger, 42 N. J. Law, 528. 1880.

176. — Under the act of April 8, 1869, lands acquired by grant, donation or subscription, in aid of the construction of a railroad, were exempt from taxation until conveyed to an actual purchaser. Cairo and Fulton R. R. Co. v. Parks, 33 Ark., 181. 1877.

177. Local improvements. Under the charter of this company, which exempts its property (other than its land grant) from all assessments and taxes whatever, by the territory or future state, or by any county, city, town, village or other municipal authority in the territory or state, its property held by it for the purposes of its railroad is not subject to assessments for local improvements. St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co. v. St. Paul, 21 Minn., 526, 1875; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 435; St. Paul v. St. Paul and Sioux City R. R. Co., 23 Minn., 469. 1877.

178. — In assessing depot grounds of a railway company having an exemption from taxation in its charter for benefits derived from local improvements, supposed benefits arising from the probable increase of business in consequence of increased facilities of access to its depot, cannot be made the basis of assessment. An assessment on that principle would be a tax on the business of the company in violation of the exemption in the act of incorporation. State v. Jersey City, 36 N. J. Law, 56, 1872; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 802.

179. Military reservation. Kansas has power to tax a railway situated exclusively in the Leavenworth military reservation. Ft. Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. Lowe, 27 Kana., 749. 1882.

180. Municipal corporation. Municipal corporations have no power to grant exemption from or commutation of taxes, and a contract which undertakes to do so is void. State v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 75 Mo., 208, 1881; City of New Orleans v. St. Charles St. R. R. Co., 28 La. An., 497. 1876.

181. Privilege tax. Where a corporation is exempted from taxation by its charter for a certain time, such corporation cannot be subjected to a "privilege tax." Grand Gulf and Port Gibson R. R. Co. v. Buck, 53 Miss., 246. 1876.

182. Statute. The statutes of Wisconsin construed. Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co. v. City of Milwaukee, 34 Wis., 271. 1874.

183. — All lots of land necessarily used by the company for its repair shops or yards, or depot grounds, or for the preservation and protection of its track, or for the purpose of obtaining gravel and earth therefrom for its road (the same being adjacent to the road), are exempt from taxation, but dwelling-houses and the land occupied by them are not so exempt. Ib.

184. — Various statutes in relation to exemption from taxation construed. Utah and Northern R'y Co. v. Crawford, 1 Idaho, 770, 1880; Richmond and Danville R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Orange County, 74 N. C., 506, 1876; Petersburg R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Northampton County, 81 N. C., 497, 1879.

185. Steamboats. Steamboats are not railroad property, and are not, although owned and used by a railroad company, exempt from taxation as such, under a charter which exempts such railroad company from taxation. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Irvin, 72 Ill., 452. 1874.

186. Stock. A railway company whose stock is by law exempt from taxation cannot be taxed on property owned and used by it in the operation of its railway and necessary for that purpose. The stock is but the representative of the property. Scotland County v. Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska Ry Co., 65 Mo., 128. 1877.

187. — A corporation claimed exemption from state taxes on its capital stock under the following act of assembly: "The bonds issued and to be issued by said company under the charter, and all municipal bonds now owned by said company, are hereafter to be issued in payment of subscription to the capital stock, and the property, real and personal, which said company now holds or may acquire, shall be exempt from taxation," etc. Held, that this company was not relieved, as the stock was the property of the stockholders, not the corporation which issued it. Commonwealth v. Danville, Ha- selton, etc., R. R. Co., 2 Pearson (Pa.), 400. 1875.

188. Stock owned by state. The provision contained in sec. 6, art. V, of the constitution, exempting property belonging to the state from taxation, does not embrace the interest of the state in business enterprises, such as railroads, and the like, but applies to the property of the state held for state purposes. The railway is taxable although the state owns two-thirds of the capital stock of the company. Atlantic and North Carolina R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Carteret County, 75 N. C., 474. 1876.

189. Time. A provision in the charter of a railroad company that "the capital stock of said company shall be forever exempt from taxation, and the road, with all its fixtures and appurtenances, including workshops, machinery and vehicles of transportation, shall be exempt from taxation for the period of twenty years from the completion of the road, and no longer," does not, after the expiration of that period, exempt from taxation the road, with its fixtures, etc., although the same were purchased with or represented by capital. Railroad Co. v. Gaines, 97 U. S., 697. 1878.

190. — Under a charter declaring that the property of the company shall be exempt from taxation for ten years after the completion of the road, the corporation cannot claim immunity from the beginning of its existence up to the completion of the road. Dennis v. Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific R. R. Co., 84 La. An., 934. 1883.

191. — The provisions of the statute (Laws of Vt., 1874, act No. 1, p. 16) providing for the taxation of railway property are not rendered invalid by reason of the fact that lands improved by having a railroad built on them are not made taxable until they have been so improved for ten years. Wells v. Central Vermont R. R. Co., 14 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 426. 1878.

192. — A railway was by charter exempt from taxation for twenty years, which ended in March, 1877. The taxes assessed for 1878 were assessed in April. The company paid a pro rata amount. Held, the company was liable for all the taxes assessed for 1877. When the taxes were assessed no exemption existed. McClellan v. Memphis and

Charleston R. R. Co., 11 Lea (Tenn.), 386. 1883.

193. Transfer. The purchase of the railway and franchise of the Henderson and Nashville R. R. Co., held not to pass to the purchaser the right of exemption from taxation. Evansville, Henderson and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 9 Bush (Ky.), 433, 1872; Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S., 217, 1876; Railroad Co. v. Commissioners, 103 ib., 1, 1890; Railroad Cos. v. Gaines, 97 U. S., 697, 1878; Railroad Co. v. County of Hamblen, 103 U. S., 278, 1890; Annapolis and Elk Ridge R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Anne Arundel County, 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 422; Same v. Same, 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 403, 1880; 103 U. S., 1.

194. — Under an act of the legislature the state loaned its bonds to a railroad corporation, which, by its charter, was exempt from taxation; said act reserving a right in pursuance of which a subsequent act was passed, providing for the enforcement of the state's lien in a court which was expressly empowered to determine all questions touching the rights of the state and all other parties. In a proceeding instituted by the state against said corporation, it was adjudged, in pursuance of said act, that a sale of the property and franchises of the company would vest the purchasers with "all the rights, privileges and immunities" appertaining to the same. Held, that under the decree immunity from taxation passed to the purchasers; that the state having provided for the adjudication of these questions, and the purchase having been made on the faith thereof, it cannot question the validity of the adjudication. Knoxville and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Hicks, 9 Baxter (Tenn.), 443, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 197.

195. — A statute exempted from paying tax a certain tract known as "B. farm." A part of this land was subsequently occupied by a railway. Held, that the exemption was not affected by this change of occupancy. Todd v. London and South Western R'y Co., 7 Manning & Granger, 366; 49 E. C. L., 368. 1844.

tion imposed by authority of the state government, whether for general or local purposes. Elizabethtown and Paducah R. R. Co. v. Trustees of Elizabethtown, 12 Bush (Ky.), 233. 1876.

197. Water front. The New York, Lake Erie and Western R. R. Co., as the grantee of the Weehawken Docks, is not liable to taxation on lands under water in front of their docks which have never been reclaimed, and over which the tide ebbs and flows. The title to such lands is in the state. State v. Yard, 43 N. J. Law, 632, 1881; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 529.

VIII. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

198. Authority of states. The state may impose taxes upon the corporation as an entity existing under its laws as well as upon the capital stock of the corporation or its separate corporate property. And the manner in which its value shall be assessed and the rate of taxation, however arbitrary or capricious, are mere matters of legislative discretion. Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wallace, 206, 1873; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 312.

199. — The exercise of the authority which every state possesses to tax its corporations and all their property, real and personal, and their franchises, and to graduate the tax upon the corporations according to their business or income, or the value of their property, when this is not done by discriminating against rights held in other states, and the tax is not on imports or tonnage or transportation to other states, cannot be regarded as conflicting with any constitutional power of congress. Ib.

200. California constitution. By art. 13 of the constitution of California, "a mortgage, deed of trust contract, or other obligation by which a debt is secured, is treated, for the purposes of assessment and taxation, as an interest in the property affected thereby," and, "except as to railroad and other quasi public corporations," the value of the property affected, less the value of the security, is to be assessed and taxed to its owner, and the value of the security is to be assessed and taxed to its holder. § 4. But by the same article the "franchise, roadway, road-bed, rails and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county," are to be assessed at their actual value, and apportioned to the counties, cities and districts in which the roads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid therein, no deduction from this value being allowed for any mortgages on the property. Held, that in the different modes thus prescribed of assessing the value of the property of natural persons and the property of railroad corporations as the basis of taxation, there is a departure from the rule of equality and uniformity. San Mateo County v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 13 Federal Reporter, 722. 1882. See, also, County of Santa Clara v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 18 Federal Reporter, 385. 1883.

201. — The provisions of the constitution of California in relation to taxation of mortgages construed. County of San Mateo v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 8 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 238; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 1, 1882; San Francisco and North Pacific R. R. Co. v. Dinwiddie, 8 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 312, 1883; Same v. State Board, 60 Cal., 12, 1882.

202. — The constitution and laws of California making no provision for notice to the owner, and no opportunity to be heard at any stage of the proceedings, are in conflict with the constitution of the United States. Ib.

203. — No deduction is to be made on account of mortgages. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. State Board, 60 Cal., 35. 1882.

204. Coal shipments; tonnage tax. The act of 1872, ch. 274, imposing a tax of ten cents per ton upon all coal mined in the state and transported by any of the ways enumerated to any place in the state or elsewhere, for sale, in so far as it affects to impose the tax upon coal transported from the mines in the state to places beyond the state for sale, is unconstitutional and void, being repugnant to that provision of the constitution of the United States which declares that "congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states." State v. Cumberland and Pa. R. R. Co., 40 Md., 23. 1878.

205. Diversion of tax to payment of railway bonds. Sec. 7 of chap. 93 of the Laws of 1870, p. 90 [and of chap. 84, Comp. Laws of 1879, pp. 796, 797], so far as it attempts to divert any portion of the general county tax or general township tax to the payment of a certain class of township railroad bonds, is void, being in contravention of sec. 4 of art. 11 of the constitution, which provides that "no tax shall be levied, except in pursuance of a law which shall distinctly state the object of the same, to which object only such tax shall be applied." National Bank of Lawrence v. Barber, 24 Kans., 534, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 181.

203. Franchise. The tax authorized by Stat. 1880, ch. 249, entitled "An act relating to the taxation of railroads," is a tax upon railway corporations on account of their franchises and not upon their real or personal estate; and the tax is one which it was constitutionally competent for the legislature to impose. State v. Maine Central R. R. Co., 74 Me., 376. 1883.

207. Length of line. An act which requires every railway company within the state to pay to the treasurer, for the use of the state, a sum of money, determined by the length of its road, is a tax upon property, and is unconstitutional and void, because not laid upon the value of the property. State v. Railroad Corporations, 4 So. Car., 376. 1873.

208. North Missouri Railroad. The ordinance of April 8, 1865, adopted by the people of Missouri, as a part of the constitution of the state established on that day, was, as respected the North Missouri R. R. Co., a true exercise of the taxing power of the state, and not a mere change of the order of disbursing the receipts of the earnings of the company as prescribed by the act of legislature above named. North Missouri R. R. Co. v. Maguire, 20 Wallace, 46, 1873; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 445.

209. Release. Ch. 26, § 9, Laws of 1872, by releasing railway companies from the payment of taxes already levied, impairs the obligation of a valid contract, and is unconstitutional and void. Dubuque v. Illinois Central R. R. Co., 39 Ia., 56, 1874; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 124; Davenport v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 38 Ia., 633, 1874; Iowa Railroad Land Co. v. Woodbury County, 39 ib., 172, 1874.

210. Statutes. The constitutionality and construction of various statutes passed upon. Francis v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co., 19 Kans., 303, 1877; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 20; Dubuque v. C. D. and M. R. R. Co., 47 Ia., 196, 1877; State ex rel. v. Cuge, 34 La. An., 506, 1883; Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Miller, 19 W. Va., 408, 1882; Assessment Board v. Ala. Central R. R. Co., 59 Ala., 551, 1877; State v. Haight, Receiver, 36 N. J. Law, 54, 1872.

211. Town boundaries. The word "town," as used in the constitution of Wisconsin, denotes a civil division of contiguous territory; and under the power granted to county boards by the statute "to set off, organize, vacate and change the boundaries of the towns in their respective counties" (R. S., § 670, subd. 1), such a board cannot make a valid order, changing the boundaries of a town, so that it shall consist of two separate and detached tracts of land. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Town of Oconto, 50 Wis., 189. 1880.

IX. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

212. Action to recover tax. An action at law can be maintained by a city for the recovery of municipal taxes upon the property of a railroad, notwithstanding the legislature may have provided a special remedy therefor. Burlington v. Burlington and Mo. River R. R. Co., 41 Ia., 184, 1875; Dubuque v. Ill. Central R. R. Co., 39 ib., 56, 1874.

213. Decree of federal court. The fact that a decree has been rendered in the circuit court of the United States, enjoining a city from the collection of taxes from a railroad company, in a suit instituted by a stockholder to which the company was neither privy nor party, and of whose proceedings it did not claim the benefit, cannot be pleaded in bar of a recovery of municipal taxes. Ch. 26, § 9, Laws of 1872, releasing the property of railroad companies from the payment of municipal taxes, is in conflict with § 2 of art. 8 of the state constitution, and therefore inoperative and void. Davenport v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 38 Ia., 633. 1874.

Foreign Corporations.

214. Extension of city limits. A tax levied by the city of Troy, in 1872, on real estate not originally included in said city, nor then included in said city by any authority except by an invalid ordinance, is illegal and void. Atchison and Nebraska R. R. Co. v. Maquiklin, 12 Kans., 301. 1878.

215. Gross earnings. The payment, by a railroad company, of a tax of one per centum on the gross earnings of the road, under ch. 169, Acts of 1868, did not relieve the company from the payment of municipal taxes upon property within city limits. Davenport v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 38 Ia., 633. 1874.

216. License. By the provisions of § 5, art. 2, of the charter of Los Angeles, the city is empowered to prescribe either an ordinary action for the recovery of a license tax, or a penalty for non-payment, or both. The city had power under its charter to establish a license tax "for every steam railroad company having a depot in said city," and the fact that the business of defendant extends beyond the city limits does not relieve it from the payment of a license tax for conducting its business within the city. City of Los Angeles v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Cal., 59. 1892.

217. Stock. A city has the right to tax its citizens for stock owned by them in a foreign railway company, although a tax has been paid thereon in the state where the corporation is located. Seward v. City of Rising Sun, 79 Ind., 851. 1881.

X. FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

218. Authority to tax. The legislature has the power to impose taxation upon foreign corporations to whatever extent it may, in its discretion, choose as the condition upon which they shall be allowed to exercise their franchises and privileges in this state. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lieb, 76 Ill., 172, 1875; Commonwealth v. Buffalo and Erie R'y Co., 2 Pearson (Pa.), 376, 1870; Burlington and Southwestern R'y Co. v. Putnam, etc., Counties, 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 289, 1879; State v. American Express Co., 7 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 227, 1876.

219. — A railroad four hundred and fifty-five miles long, forty-two miles of which were in a state other than that by which it was incorporated, held to be "doing business" within the state where the forty-two miles were, within the meaning of an act taxing all railroad companies "doing business within the state, and upon whose road freight may be transported." Erie R'y Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wallace, 493. 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 208.

220. Gross receipts. The state of Indiana cannot tax that part of the gross receipts of an Illinois corporation in its treasury in Illinois which was earned in doing business in Indiana. The taxing power cannot be exercised on persons and property beyond the territory or jurisdiction of the state. State of Indiana ex rel. v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 531; 16 Federal Reporter, 193. 1883. Contra, Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Mayer, 28 Ohio St., 521. 1876.

221. License; federal corporation. A company incorporated by an act of congress is not a foreign corporation within the meaning of the Revenue Act of June 7, 1879, § 16 (Pamph. Laws, 120), and although it does business in Pennsylvania, is not, therefore, obliged to take out the license and to pay the tax provided for by said section. Commonwealth v. Texas and Pacific R. R. Co., 98 Pa. St., 90. 1881.

222. Railway in two states; valuation. A statute provided for taxing railways one per cent. upon a certain valuation of their franchise and property, with a provision that when only part of a railway lay in Connecticut the company owning such road should pay one per cent. on such proportion of the valuation as the length of its line lying in that state bore to its entire length. A corporation owning a railway that ran from the southern line of the state to the Massachusetts line on the north, took a perpetual lease, upon a fixed rent, of two Massachusetts railways, one connecting at the state line with its own road, and the other with the latter at its northern terminus, and thereafter the two roads in Massachusetts were operated and maintained by the Connecticut company, as if they were its own property and the three roads were one entire road. Held, that the Connecticut company was not to be regarded as "owning" the Massachusetts roads, within the meaning of the statute, and that it was not therefore entitled to a deduction from the valuation of its property on account of them. State v. Housatonic R. R. Co., 48 Conn., 44, 1880; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 238.

223. Statutes. The statutes of Pennsylvania construed. Commonwealth v. Erie R'y Co., 98 Pa. St., 127. 1881.

224. Stock. By the provisions of the act of May 11, 1878 (73 Ohio L., 436), a resident owner of shares of stock in a foreign corporation is required to list the same for taxation, notwithstanding the capital of the corporation is taxed in the state where the corporation is located. The provisions of said act subjecting such shares of stock so owned to taxation in Ohio are constitutional. Bradley v. Bander, 36 Ohio St., 28. 1890.

XI. STREET RAILWAYS.

225. Charter; license. A charter held not to be a contract limiting the amount of license fees. Railway Co. v. Philadelphia, 101 U. S., 538. 1879. See, also, Union Passenger R'y Co. v. City of Philadelphia, 83 Pa. St., 429, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 431.

226. — A franchise conferred by the legislature on private persons to construct a railroad track through the streets of a city, and to run cars thereon, and prescribing certain conditions to be performed by the grantees, is not a contract in such sense as to exempt the occupation of operating the road from proper police regulations, or from taxation by the municipal authorities in cases authorized by law. San Jose v. San Jose and Santa Clara R. R. Co., 58 Cal., 475. 1879.

227. — The fact that the railroad extends and the cars are run beyond the corporate limits does not exempt the occupation from taxation by the municipality. Ib.

228. — The appellee, the Union R. R. Co., has an easement in the way occupied by its road, and whether under or over a public street, it is an element of value to the road, and as such should be included in the valuation of the road itself. An easement enjoyed in the bed of a public street may be assessed and taxed as real estate. Appeal

Tax Court of Baltimore v. Western Md. R. R. Co., 50 Md., 274. 1878.

229. Exemption. Under a contract between a municipal corporation and a street railroad company, that "the road, rolling and live stock of said company" should be exempted from taxation, stables, shops, houses for storage of lumber, and other like conveniences were not exempted. Atlanta R. R. Co. v. Atlanta, 66 Ga., 104. 1880.

230. — The word "road" is not a technical word requiring explanation by the testimony of experts; nor does it alter the case that the president of the road, and another witness interested therein, testified that, at the time the franchise was granted, they understood it to include such appurtenances or conveniences as "rolling and live stock of the company, stables, shops," etc. Ib.

231. Statute. The statute of Maryland construed. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Baltimore R. R. Co., 57 Md., 81, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 363.

XII. GENERAL MATTERS.

232. Application of payments. The taxpayer has the right to pay the full amount of any one tax listed against him, while refusing to pay others; and where plaintiff deposited a sum of money with the county treasurer, with instructions not to apply it to the payment of certain taxes, and the treasurer, receiving no further instructions, after April 1st used it pro tanto for the discharge of the taxes which plaintiff had forbidden to be paid, held, that plaintiff was not bound by the act of the treasurer, and that the money should have been appropriated as plaintiff directed. Iowa Railroad Land Co. v. Carroll County, 39 Ia., 151. 1874.

233. Apportionment. Matters of apportionment of railway taxes determined. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co. v. State Board of Equalization, 64 Mo., 294, 1876; Union Trust Co. v. Weber, 93 Ill., 346, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 533; Wilson, Receiver, etc., v. Weber, 96 Ill., 454, 1890; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 112; *State Auditor v. mond and Danville R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Alamance, 84 N. C., 504, 1881; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 339.

234. Branch lines. Where branch lines were worked at a loss, on account of the increased traffic furnished to the main line, such losses should not be deducted in rating for taxation. Regina v. Great Western Ry Co., 6 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 179; 51 E. C. L., 178. 1844. See, also, Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington R. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 10 Bush (Ky.), 43. 1873.

235. Bridges. Various questions determined in relation to taxation of bridges. Quincy Bridge Co. v. County of Adams, 88 Ill., 615, 1878; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 378; State v. Mutchler, 41 N. J. Law, 98, 1879; State v. Mutchler, 42 N. J. Law, 461, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 395; Hudson River Bridge Co. v. Patterson, 11 Hun (N. Y.), 525, 1877; State ex rel. v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 9 Mo. App., 532, 1881; Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Ry Co. v. Binkert, 106 Ill., 298, 1883; Cook v. City of Burlington, 59 Ia., 251, 1882; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Davenport, 51 Ia., 451, 1879; Dunlieth and Dubuque Bridge Co. v. County of Dubuque, 55 Ia., 553, 1881; Hudson River Bridge Co. v. Patterson, 74 N. Y., 363, 1878.

236. Carrying mails. By the act of July 13, 1866 (14 Stat., 185, § 103 of the act of 1864, as amended), "every . . . corporation owning . . . any railroad . . . engaged or employed in . . . transporting the mails of the United States upon contracts made prior to August 1, 1866, shall be subject to and pay a tax of two and one-half per cent. of the gross receipts" from such service. In a suit against a railroad company to recover said tax no express contract for carrying the mails was proved, but it appeared that the company had been carrying them, and that the services for which it had been paid commenced before August 1, 1866, and continued without interruption until January 1, 1870. Held, that the law implies that a contract was entered into prior to August 1, 1866; that the company is liable for that tax. Railroad Co. v. United States, 101 U. S., 543. 1879.

237. Change of rate. The right of the state to impose a tax, rate or imposition in future cannot be taken away by a mere implication arising from a direction to pay a certain sum. Union Passenger R'y Co. v. City of Philadelphia, 83 Pa. St., 429, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 431.

238. Compromise. The attorney-general may assume control of suits for the collection of taxes and may take appeals in such cases. County of Sacramento v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 61 Cal., 250. 1883.

239. — The attorney-general has no authority of himself to settle tax executions at less than their full amount; such authority must come from the state in order to bind it. State v. Southwestern R. R. Co., 66 Ga., 403. 1881. See, also, State v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 9 Nev., 79. 1878.

240. Consolidation of railroads. In Tomlinson v. Branch, 15 Wall., 460, and City of Charleston v. Branch, ib., 470, it was held that the respective roads and property of the two companies, which had become consolidated in the hands of the South Carolina R. R. Co., retained their original status towards the public and the state the same as if the consolidation had not taken place; that the entire line of road between Branchville and Charleston was subject to taxation; and that "prima facie the railroad terminus and depot in Charleston, and the property accessory thereto, belong to the South Carolina Canal and R. R. Co. portion of the joint property." Repairs and improvements upon the old line become a part thereof and subject to taxation. Branch v. City of Charleston, 92 U. S., 677. 1875.

241. — Where two or more corporations with a special exemption from general taxation, the amount of taxation being dependent upon certain precedent acts to be done by such corporation thus to be exempted, are incorporated into a new corporation, which is neither required nor able to do and perform the acts which are to precede such limited and special exemption, the new corporation cannot claim such exemption. State v. Maine Central R. R. Co., 66 Me., 433, 1877; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 323.

242. Contractors. Contractors binding themselves to construct and equip a railroad, and who are to receive therefor subscriptions to the stock and bonds and mortgages on the road, and are to furnish and pay for all materials, labor and machinery, and who are placed in possession of the road to enable it to perform the contract, and authorized to operate the road, and receive the earnings thereof, paying to the railroad company the net profits, are not vested with the franchise and right of way, and are not the owners of the road for purposes of taxation. Union Trust Co. v. Weber, 96 Ill., 346, 1880; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 588.

243. — The listing or assessing of railroad property in a wrong name as owner forms no ground for enjoining the collection of the tax thereon. Property is liable to pay a tax without reference to its ownership. Ib.

244. Counties. County boundaries and unorganized counties considered. State ex rel. v. Francis, 28 Kans., 495, 1880; Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Langlade County, 56 Wis., 614, 1888.

245. Depots on leased ground. The city of Baltimore had leased two lots of ground to the P., W. and B. R. R. Co., for ninety-nine years, renewable forever, and which lots were improved by the lessee, by the erection thereon of depots, shops, etc. Held, that under the Acts of 1876, ch. 159 and ch. 260, the company should be assessed only with the value of the leasehold estate, subject to the rent reserved in the lease; the interest and estate of the city in the premises being exempt by statute from taxation. Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore R. R. Co. v. Appeal Tax Court of Baltimore, 50 Md., 397, 1878. See, also, Appeal Tax Court of Baltimore v. Western Md. R. R. Co., 50 Md., 274, 1878.

246. Elevated railways. Foundations for piers or columns placed in a public street, by an elevated railroad, by legislative authority, whether standing alone, or with columns and a superstructure thereon, are properly taxable as real estate. People v. Commissioners, 19 Hun (N. Y.), 460, 1879; affirmed, Same v. Same, 82 N. Y., 459, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 348.

247. — In assessing such foundations and superstructures the assessors are not confined to the consideration of the land covered thereby, but may consider their position and its incidents, and the business and profits to be derived therefrom. Ib.

248. — The manner of assessment and taxation of elevated railways determined. People ex rel. v. Tax Commissioners, 19 Hun (N. Y.), 460, 1879.

249. Elevators. The warehouses and elevators of a transportation company are taxable for local purposes. County of Erie v. Erie and Western Transportation Co., 87 Pa. St., 434, 1878.

250. Express companies. A license or privilege tax imposed by a state on the business of an express company engaged solely in commerce between the states, where there is no intention by this means to obstruct or prohibit the business, is not unconstitutional. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co. v. Nolan, 14 Federal Reporter, 582, 1882.

251. — A railroad company which organizes an express company and carries on a regular express business as a part of the business of the railroad company, under the management and control of its officers and by its own agents, is subject to pay a privilege tax imposed by the statute upon express companies. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co. v. State, 9 Lea (Tenn.), 218, 1882.

252. — The city of Montgomery has authority, under its charter, to levy and collect a specific tax on all express companies doing business within its corporate limits; and this power is not taken away as to the Southern Express Company, by that provision of the act in relation to said company, approved February 26, 1872, which declares: "Nor shall any municipal corporation levy any percentage tax upon the receipts of said company," nor by any other provisions of said act. City Council of Montgomery v. Shoemaker, 51 Ala., 114, 1874.

253. Estoppel. The failure of a taxpayer to take steps to prevent an illegal levy of taxes will not estop him to resist their collection. State ex rel. v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 74 Mo., 163, 1881.

254. Federal corporation. The license tax on foreign corporations does not apply to a federal corporation. Commonwealth v. Texas and Pacific R'y Co., 1 Pennypacker (Pa.), 215, 1881.

255. Ferries. The liability of ferry corporations carrying between different states determined. Irvin v. New Orleans, St. Louis and Chicago R. R. Co., 94 Ill., 105,

General Matters.

1879; Commonwealth v. Gloucester Ferry Co., 98 Pa. St., 105, 1881.

256. Illegal tax. Where the county commissioners of Sedgwick county, in levying taxes for the year 1874, levied for current expenses a tax of one percent., which tax was all that they had any power to levy during that year for that purpose, and then, in addition to said tax, and apparently without any authority, they levied another tax of eight mills on the dollar to meet a deficit in the county revenue of the preceding year, held, that the levy of said eight-mill tax was illegal. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Woodcock, 18 Kans., 20, 1877.

257. — recovery back. Taxes illegally levied and paid under protest by a railway company cannot be recovered back from the county commissioners. Commissioners of Pawnee County v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co., 21 Kans., 749, 1879. See, also, Ranny v. Bader, 87 Mo., 476, 1878.

258. — An action will not lie to recover from the county for taxes, paid under a misapprehension in regard to the ownership of the taxed property, where the tax-payer had full knowledge of all the facts upon which his claim of title is based. The rule applied to tax paid on a railroad land grant. Dubouque and Sioux City R. R. Co. v. Webster County, 40 Ia., 16, 1874. See, also, Railroad Co. v. Commissioners, 98 U. S., 541, 1878.

259. — In Wisconsin an action by a railway company to restrain the state from collecting taxes and penalties was held to be improperly brought; such action could only be brought after having been presented to and disallowed by the legislature. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co. v. State, 53 Wis., 509, 1881.

260. — Demand for illegal tax must be made before instituting suit to recover back such tax paid under protest. Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co. v. Buffalo County, 14 Neb., 51, 1883.

261. Injunction. The nature and extent of the jurisdiction in equity to restrain the collection of taxes considered. The jurisdiction will only be exercised to prevent irreparable injury. Parmley v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R. R. Co., 8 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 13, 1874; Bailey v. Atlantic and

Pacific R. R. Co., 8 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 22, 1874; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Williams, 16 Kans., 195, 1876; Burlington and Mo. River R. R. Co. v. York County, 7 Neb., 487, 1878; Oliver v. Memphis and Little Rock R. R. Co., 30 Ark., 128, 1875; Wright v. Southwestern R. R. Co., 64 Ga., 783, 1880; Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Carr, 1 Wyoming, 96, 1872; Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Gaines, 2 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 621, 1880; Houston and Texas Central R. R. Co. v. County of Presidio, 53 Tex., 518, 1880; International and Great Northern R. R. Co. v. Smith County, 54 ib., 1, 1880.

262. Jurisdiction of federal courts. The jurisdiction of the United States courts in matters of taxation determined. Manhattan R'y Co. v. Mayor of New York, 18 Federal Reporter, 195, 1883; United States v. N. Y., New Haven and Hartford R. R. Co., 10 Benedict (U. S. D. C.), 144, 1878.

263. Lands outside of right of way. Where a railway company has completed its road and appendages, so far as is at present contemplated, at its several stations, the land lying outside the roadway limitation of one hundred feet, not being in actual use, nor in present contemplation of use by the company, is liable to taxation. State v. Collector of Middle Township, 38 N. J. Law, 270, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 47; State v. Fuller, 40 N. J. Law, 323, 1878; State v. Wetherell, 41 N. J. Law, 147, 1879.

264. Leased lines. Where the charter authorizes a railway company to acquire, by lease, purchase or otherwise, any extension of its road, necessary and proper to its business, and provides that all property so acquired shall become part of the property of such corporation, and in pursuance thereof it leases other railroads forever, and provides by the terms of the leases that the roads so leased shall become, and be operated as, a part of the main line of the company leasing, the property so leased will, if not for all purposes, at least for the purposes of taxation, be regarded as the property of the company operating it under such leases. Huck v. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co., 66 Ill., 352, 1877.

missioners of Shawnee County v. Topeka Equipment Co., 26 Kans., 363. 1881.

266. — Where one railroad company builds a car hoist and lays a third rail upon its own ground, and at its own expense, which is attached to and becomes a part of the soil, another railroad company using the same jointly with the owner, for which it pays a compensation, cannot be taxed for one-half its value. Irvin v. New Orleans, St. Louis and Chicago R. R. Co., 94 Ill., 105. 1879.

267. — A contract between two railroad companies, whereby one is to take charge of the road of the other, with all its equipments, and operate the same as a continuous line with its own line, and exercise all the rights and privileges of the other under its franchise, for a consideration named, does not change the ownership of any of the property of the latter company, and the rolling stock of such company is liable to distraint for taxes assessed upon its capital stock. Archer v. Terre Haute and Indianapolis R. R. Co., 102 Ill., 493, 1883; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 249.

268. — When the charter of a railroad company declares "that the said railroad and the property of said company shall not be subject to be taxed higher than one-half of one per cent. on its annual income," in measuring a tax imposed on the property of said company, the per cent. is to be counted on the gross and not on the net income. The lease of the road to another company by authority of the legislature does not affect the basis of taxation. The income contemplated by the charter is not the annual rental, but the earnings of the road. The act authorizing the lease not having any provision in regard to taxation, the limit in the charter was not lost or changed by the lease. Goldsmith v. Augusta and Savannah R. R. Co., 62 Ga., 468. 1879.

269. — Assessment held valid in a special case. Railroad Co. v. Vance, 96 U. S., 450. 1877.

270. Legalizing acts. Since the legislature has the power to pass a general law for the levy and collection of special taxes, for the purpose of paying judgments, without limitation as to rate, it may rightfully legalize levies in excess of lawful authority at the time they are made. Iowa Railroad Land

Co. v. Soper, 89 Ia., 112; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 29, 1874; Same v. Sac County, 89 Ia., 124, 1874.

271. Levy. Levy of taxes under various statutes examined. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Dawson County, 12 Neb., 254, 1882; Burlington and Missouri River R. R. Co. v. Lancaster County, ib., 324, 1882; Same v. Clay County, 13 ib., 367, 1882; Town of Lebanon v. Ohio and Mississippi R'y Co., 77 Ill., 539, 1875; Va. and Tenn. R. R. Co. v. Washington County, 30 Grattan (Va.), 471, 1878.

272. Mortgage. A conveyance of land to trustees to secure a debt is only a mortgage, and does not preclude the owner from claiming the title in fee and seeking relief from an illegal tax. Flint and Pere Marquette R'y Co. v. Auditor-General, 41 Mich., 635. 1879.

273. Payment; tender of state coupons. The interest coupons upon Virginia bonds are receivable for taxes, and, in case of the refusal of the tax collector to receive them, he may be enjoined from collecting the tax by distress. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Allen, 17 Federal Reporter, 171. 1888.

274. Practice. Practice in correcting errors of taxation considered. Goldsmith v. Southwestern R. R. Co., 62 Ga., 495, 1879; Same v. Ga. R. R. Co., ib., 542, 1879; Hoge v. Richmond and Danville R. R. Co., 93 U. S., 1, 1876; United States v. Erie R'y Co., 107 U. S., 1, 1882.

275. Receiver. Property in the hands of a receiver is not exempt from taxation. Stevens v. New York and Oswego Midland R. R. Co., 13 Blatchford (U. S. C. C.), 104, 1875; State v. Board of R. R. Comm'rs, 41 N. J. Law, 235, 1879.

276. Release. That the commissioners' court acquiesced in the unconstitutional act of 1870 (which remitted certain taxes assessed against the railroad company), by not requiring the tax collector to collect or account for the said company's tax the previous year, is no surrender of the claim or bar to its subsequent assertion. Perry County v. Selma, Marion and Memphis R. R. Co., 58 Ala., 546, 1877; 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 372.

277. Right of way. Town lots used by a railroad company as right of way, and assessed under the denomination of "railroad track," are only liable for taxes as right of way, and cannot be taxed both as right of way and as town or city lots. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Miller, 72 Ill., 144, 1874. See, also, State v. Collector of Middle Township, 38 N. J. Law, 270, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 47.

278. Rolling stock. The land constituting the right of way of a railroad, with the ties, rails, etc., in place on the track, and turn-outs, depot grounds, and the buildings on the same, are real estate, but the rolling stock is made by statute, for the purposes of taxation, personal property. Union Trust Co. v. Weber, 96 Ill., 346, 1880; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 588.

279. — The rolling stock of the appellant was held alternately at Wilmington, Del., and Baltimore, Md., seldom staying over night in Baltimore. Its principal place of business was in Philadelphia. Held, that such rolling stock was not taxable in Baltimore. Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore R. R. Co. v. Appeal Tax Court of Baltimore, 50 Md., 397, 1878; Appeal Tax Court of Baltimore v. Northern Central R'y Co., ib., 417, 1878.

280. Side-tracks. Land held and used by a railroad company for side-tracks, switches and turn-outs must be regarded, within the meaning of the revenue law, as a part of the right of way of the company, notwithstanding it may have machine-shops, depots, round-houses and other superstructures thereon, necessary for the successful use of the road. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. The People, 98 Ill., 350, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 94.

281. Sleeping cars. The carriage of passengers from one state to another in sleeping cars is interstate commerce and cannot be regulated or taxed by a state. State of Indiana ex rel. v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 561; 16 Federal Reporter, 193, 1889; Appeal Tax Court of Baltimore v. Pullman Palace Car Co., 50 Md., 452, 1878.

282. — A privilege tax on the running and using of sleeping cars on railroads in this state, not owned by the railroads, is constitutional and valid, although the owner may be a foreign corporation, and the cars may be used for the accommodation of passengers traveling through the state. Pullman Southern Car Co. v. Gaines, 3 Tenn. Ch., 587, 1877.

283. — By a written agreement with the Pullman Palace Car Co., a railroad company employed on its road sleeping cars of the car company, hauled the same, furnished fuel and lights, kept them in running order, and received its ordinary fare for the transportation of passengers in them. The car company was bound to keep in repair the carpets, upholstery and bedding, excepting repairs necessary from accident and casualty while being run on the road; received the fare for the extra accommodation, and furnished its own employees to receive the same and wait upon passengers. Held, that although the general property in the cars was in the car company, yet the railroad company had such a community of interest that, for the purposes of taxation, they must be regarded, under the statute, as belonging to the rolling stock of the railroad company, and subject to be taxed as such. Kennedy v. St. Louis, Vandalia and Terre Haute R. R. Co., 62 Ill., 395, 1872; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 345.

284. — By the second section of 5 and 6 Vict., c. 79, and the schedule to that act, a duty at the rate of five per cent. is made payable upon all sums received or charged for the hire, fare or conveyance of passengers conveyed for hire upon any railway. The defendant, by a local act, was prohibited from charging to its passengers more than specified sums per mile, which sums were to include all expenses incidental to their conveyance, except government duty. The defendant, in addition to the sum charged by it to its passengers for conveyance, charged to and received from such passengers a further sum at the rate of five per cent. on the former, to cover the government duty. The crown claimed duty on the latter sum as well as on the former. Held, affirming the decision of the exchequer division, that the crown was entitled to duty on the whole amount received from the passengers, even though such amount should exceed the maximum charge for conveyance fixed by the local act. Attorney-General v. London and North Western R'y Co., Law Reports, 6 Queen's Bench Division, 216, 1880; 20 Eng. (Moak), 572; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 578; Attorney-General v. London and North Western R'y Co., Law Reports, 6 Queen's Bench Division, 216, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 592; Same v. Same, Law Reports, 5 Exchequer Division, 247, 1880.

285. Statutes. Various statutes in relation to taxation construed. Porter v. Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis R. R. Co., 76 Ill., 561, 1875; Chicago, Pekin and Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Raymond, 97 ib., 212, 1881; State ex rel. v. Union Trust Co., 68 Mo., 463, 1878. See, also, State v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R'y Co., 71 ib., 88, 1879; Whelen v. Catawissa R. R. Co., 9 Philadelphia, 220, 1874; Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Comm'rs of Saunders County, 7 Neb., 228, 1878; New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., In re, 7 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 406, 1880; Sleight v. The People, 74 Ill., 47, 1874; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co. v. Jaques, 20 Kans., 639, 1878.

286. Steamboat lines. A railway company was empowered by its charter to own and run steamboats in connection with its line. Instead of doing this it made an arrangement with a steamboat company in which it had no interest, to run its boats from its wharves, freight being way-billed through and the gross receipts divided in certain proportions. The court inclined to regard the arrangement as an indirect method of exercising its charter rights with regard to running steamboats, and the premises used by the steamboat company as not liable, by reason of such use, to local taxation. Osborn v. Hartford and New Haven R. R. Co., 40 Conn., 498, 1878; 5 Amer. R'y Rep., 226.

287. Stock and stockholders. The tax on the value of stock should be abated to the extent of the tax upon the corporate property. Raleigh and Gaston R. R. Co. v. Commissioners of Wake, 87 N. C., 414. 1882.

288. — The value of all property owned by a corporation, in whatever consisting, and including the franchise, is the true and fair measure of the value of all its stock. Ib.

289. — A stockholder in a railway company cannot, in his own name, institute proceedings to set aside the illegal levy of taxes against the corporation until he has first made an honest and earnest effort to induce the corporation to take the necessary steps to obtain relief. Huntington v. Palmer, 104 U. S., 482. 1881.

290. Street improvements. Railway property held subject to taxation for street improvements. City of Ludlow v. Cincinnati Southern R'y Co., 78 Ky., 357, 1880; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 231; New York, New Haven and Hartford R. R. Co. v. New Britain, 49 Conn., 40, 1881.

291. Telegraph companies. An occupation tax imposed on a telegraph company, which graduates the tax according to the business done, regardless of a distinction between business done wholly within the state and business done in part without the state, is free from the objection that it regulates or obstructs interstate commerce. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. The State, 55 Tex., 314. 1881.

292. — The act to provide for a uniform assessment of property (Acts 1872, p. 57) does not contain any provision in relation to the manner of assessing the capital of foreign corporations. The stock of a foreign telegraph company owning and operating a line of telegraph in Indiana cannot be assessed under the provisions of that statute. Riley v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 47 Ind., 511. 1874.

293. — The city of Richmond has the lawful right to impose a license tax upon a foreign telegraph company having an agency and doing business in the city. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Richmond, 26 Grattan (Va.), 1. 1875.

294. Title of land in county. Where a county under obligation to convey its swamp lands to a railroad company, under contract between them, refuses so to do, it will be thereby estopped from afterward claiming that during such time the title was in the company, and thus subject to taxation. Iowa R. R. Land Co. v. Story County, 36 Ia., 48. 1872.

295. Void order abating taxes. The district attorney is authorized to commence suit for delinquent taxes stricken off the delinquent list by a void order of the county commissioners. State v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 10 Nev., 87. 1875.

I. CONTRACTS.

II. TRANSMISSION OF MESSAGES.

III. GENERAL MATTERS.

I. CONTRACTS.

1. Contract with railway company. Certain contracts in relation to telegraph lines construed. Railroad Co. v. Telegraph Co., 38 Ohio St., 24, 1882; Pittsburgh and Connelleville R. R. Co.'s Appeal, 92 Pa. St., 177, 1881; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Western and Atlantic R. R. Co., 91 U. S., 238, 1875.

2. Construction. A contract for placing and using an additional wire upon a line of telegraph poles construed. Marietta and Cincinnati R. R. Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ohio), 387, 1832.

3. Illegal clauses. A railway company, authorized and required by the act of its organization to construct a telegraph line, entered into a contract with a telegraph company for the construction of such line. Held, such contract could not be avoided by the railway company, either as a usurpation of its function or for want of capacity to make it. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Kansas Pacific R'y Co., 4 Federal Reporter, 284, 1880.

4. — Such contract also provided for the transmission without charge, by the telegraph company, of the family, private and social messages of the executive officers of the railroad. Held, that as such free use of the telegraph was not limited to the officers who made the contract, it could be rescinded after the expiration of thirteen years. Ib.

5. Injunction. Where a contract was made between two telegraph companies, whereby it was agreed that certain unassigned messages should be sent on the wires of one of the companies, and the other company, pending the life of the contract, should sell out all its property to a third company, its members taking stock in and becoming members of the company created by such consolidation, it is no ground for an injunction at the suit of one of the original parties to the contract against such consolidated company to prevent carrying out the consolidation agreement. Compagnie Francaise v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 842, 1891.

II. TRANSMISSION OF MESSAGES.

6. Cipher messages. In order to make a telegraph company liable for ulterior and remote consequences for a failure to properly transmit a message, the importance of which, from the face of the message, it could not be advised, it is the duty of the sender to disclose to the company the purport and meaning of the communication. So, where a cipher message is sent, of the import of which the company is not advised, only nominal damages, or the cost of the message, can be recovered. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Martin, 9 Bradwell (Ill.), 587, 1891.

7. Condition as to time of claiming damages. A condition printed on a telegraph blank, "that no claim for damages shall be valid unless presented in writing within twenty days from sending the message," is reasonable and valid. A delay in receiving the dispatch, though caused by a mistake of the company, would not modify the condition or extend the time, if a reasonable time was left, after the knowledge of the mistake, to present the claim. Heiman v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 57 Wis., 532, 1883.

8. Damages. In case of delay or total failure of delivery of dispatches, relating to matters not connected with business, the company should not escape with mere nominal damages on account of the want of strict commercial value in such messages. Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe R'y Co. v. Levy, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Tex.), 96, 1888; Same v. Same, ib., 90. See, also, Logan v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 84 Ill., 468, 1877; So Relle v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 55 Tex., 308, 1881.

9. — In case of failure to deliver a message, the company is only liable for such damages as naturally flow from the breach of contract, or such as may fairly be supposed to have been within the contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was made. First National Bank of Barnesville v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 30 Ohio St., 555, 1876.

Transmission of Messages.

10. — Where, in an action against a telegraph company for damages, resulting from failure to deliver a message for four days, directing plaintiff to "ship his hogs at once," the measure of damages is the difference between the market value of the hogs on the day plaintiff was enabled to place them on the market, after receiving the dispatch, and their value on the day he could, if there had been no delay in the delivery, have gotten them into market by the ordinary course of transportation. Manville v. Western Union Tel. Co., 87 Ia., 214. 1873.

11. — One B. sent a telegram by defendant's line to plaintiff, asking for $500. By the negligence of defendant's employes the message was changed to $5,000, which sum plaintiff sent to B., who, upon receipt, appropriated it to his own use and absconded. In an action to recover damages, the referee allowed the amount of the loss. Held, error; that defendant's negligence was not the proximate cause of the loss, as the embezzlement of B. did not naturally result therefrom, and could not reasonably have been expected. Lowery v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 60 N. Y., 198. 1875.

12. — option deals. Although a speculation in cotton futures may be an illegal contract, yet an agent who incurs expense or loss on behalf of his principal in carrying out such contract may recover the amount thereof from his principal. If such loss or expense was caused by the improper transmission of a telegram from the principal to the agent, the former, on paying the loss to the agent, would have sustained a damage through the negligence of the telegraph company, for which he could recover from it. The illegality of the speculation would not relieve the company from damages resulting from its negligence in transmitting a telegram according to its contract for a valuable consideration. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Blanchard, 63 Ga., 220. 1832.

13. Degree of care required. The highest degree of care is not required of telegraph companies in the transmission of messages over its lines; if ordinary care is exercised by its agents, employes or operators, it is sufficient to exonerate them from liability for loss or damage. White v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 710, 1892; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Fontaine, 58 Ga., 433, 1877.

14. Delay. A telegraph company is in some respects like a common carrier, and is under a duty to perform the service it undertakes in a prompt and skilful manner, and for any breach of this duty it is liable to the party injured, whether he be the sender or receiver of the message. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Hope, 11 Bradwell (Ill.), 289. 1883.

15. — It is incumbent upon the company to show, at least, that it used ordinary care and diligence in attempting to deliver the message. Pope v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 9 Bradwell (Ill.), 233. 1831.

16. Duty to transmit. Upon payment or tender of its usual charges, a telegraph company is bound by law to transmit any dispatch couched in decent language which is placed in the hands of its agent for that purpose, though it may refuse to transmit one couched in indecent terms. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Ferguson, 57 Ind., 495. 1877.

17. Evidence. In a suit against a telegraph company for damages resulting from alleged failure to deliver a message, parol evidence of the contents of the message may be resorted to by the plaintiff to establish the contents of the message, and this without the necessity of first giving the defendant notice to produce the written message. Reliance Lumber Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 58 Tex., 894. 1883.

18. — In an action against a telegraph company for damages for mistake in the transmission of a message, it is within the discretion of the court to require the company to produce the original message and the copies as received at the other points upon its line where it was written down. Phelps v. Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co., 46 Wis., 266. 1879.

19. — In an action against a telegraph company for failure to transmit a message, by reason of which the plaintiff lost the advantage of certain contracts made by him with other parties, the action is not founded on such contracts, but on the contract of the company to transmit and deliver the message; therefore said contracts with other parties may be proved, under the allegations of the complaint, to have been in writing. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Hopkins, 49 Ind., 223, 1874. Contra, Reliance Lumber Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 58 Tex., 394, 1883.

20. Exclusive privilege. A telegraph company having a grant from a railroad of an exclusive right to construct a line along the right of way is entitled to an injunction against actual interference with its line, but not against such interruption of its business as results from mere competition by other companies constructing rival lines along said railroad. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. American Union Telegraph Co., 9 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 72, 1879.

21. Half-rate messages. A telegraph company is not a common carrier. It may impose reasonable terms upon the sender of a message, and may properly restrict its liability in sending "half-rate" messages. Schwartz v. Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.), 157, 1879; Aiken v. Telegraph Co., 5 So. Car., 853, 1874; Jones v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 18 Federal Reporter, 717, 1883. Contra, so far as such limitation attempts to excuse negligence. Hibbard v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 33 Wis., 558, 1873; Candee v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 34 Wis., 471, 1874.

22. Indiana statute. The statute of Indiana in relation to messages construed. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Hamilton, 50 Ind., 181, 1875; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Fenton, 52 Ind., 1, 1875; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Meek, 49 Ind., 53, 1874; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lewelling, 58 Ind., 367, 1877.

23. Liability for fictitious messages. If the agent of a telegraph company at one of its stations, with power to delegate his authority, employs another person to transmit and receive messages, and such other person sends a false message purporting to come from the cashier of a bank, directing another bank to pay a fictitious person a sum of money, and the sender then personates the fictitious person and obtains the money, without any neglect on the part of the bank, the telegraph company is responsible to the bank for the same. Bank of California v. Western Union Tel. Co., 52 Cal., 280, 1877.

24. Libel. A telegraph company is liable for the transmission of a libel over its lines. Silver v. Dominion Telegraph Co., 2 Russell & Geldert (Nova Scotia), 17, 1831.

25. Limitation of liability. While a telegraph company may, by special agreement, or by reasonable rules and regulations, limit its liability to damages for errors in the transmission and delivery of messages, it cannot stipulate or provide for immunity from liability, where the error or mistake results from its own negligence. Such a stipulation or regulation, being contrary to public policy, is void. Telegraph Co. v. Grinwald, 87 Ohio St., 301, 1831; Womack v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 58 Tex., 176, 1893; White v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 710, 1883; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Blanchard, 68 Ga., 299, 1882; Candee v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 34 Wis., 471, 1874; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Neill, 57 Tex., 233, 1892.

26. — A regulation that a telegraph company will not be responsible for the correctness of messages, unless repeated, is not so far contrary to private interest or the public good as to justify a court of justice in pronouncing it void. Passmore v. Western Union Tel. Co., 9 Philadelphia, 90, 1873; Passmore v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 78 Pa. St., 233, 1875; Becker v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 11 Neb., 87, 1881. Contra, Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Tyler, 74 Ill., 163, 1874; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Blanchard, 68 Ga., 299, 1882.

27. Market reports. It is no part of the corporate duty or business of a telegraph company to collect and send out market reports, and though it voluntarily contracts to do so, it may terminate such contract, and it cannot be compelled to enter into another. Metropolitan Grain and Stock Exchange v. Mutual Union Telegraph Co., 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 531; 15 Federal Reporter, 847, 1883.

28. — The sender of an unrepeatable message, written upon a blank of the company having a printed heading in which it is specified that the company shall not be liable for errors in the transmission of any unrepeatable message beyond the amount received for sending the same, cannot recover a greater sum for a mistake in its transmission, not caused by gross negligence or fraud.

Transmission of Messages.

Redpath v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 112 Mass., 71, 1873; Grinnell v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 113 Mass., 299, 1873. But see, as to delay in delivery, Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Fenton, 52 Ind., 1, 1875.

29. Mistakes. Where a telegraph operator made a mistake in transcribing a message received at his office and delivered the next day, his admission of the fact, made several days afterwards, is not evidence against the company, it being no part of the res gestæ. Aiken v. Telegraph Co., 5 So. Car., 358, 1874.

30. — Where a telegraph company undertakes to furnish market reports from a point beyond its own line, it will be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the report was correctly delivered to it at the place where its own line commences. The burden is upon the telegraph company to show that a mistake in the report occurred from causes which would relieve it from liability. Turner v. Hawkeye Telegraph Co., 41 Ia., 458, 1875.

31. — Where the inaccuracy in the transmission of a message is proved, the onus of relieving the telegraph company sending the same, from the presumption of negligence thereby raised, rests upon the company, by showing that the error was caused by some agency for which it is not liable. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Tyler, 74 Ill., 168, 1874.

32. — In an action for damages for negligence in the transmission of a message by a telegraph company, whereby the sender of the message suffered pecuniary loss, the burden of proof rests upon the plaintiff to show that the error or mistake occurred through the culpable carelessness and gross negligence of the operators or employees of the company; a simple mistake in transmitting a dispatch is not sufficient to render the company liable. White v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 710, 1882.

33. — Where the terms of a message are seriously changed, and the name of the sender entirely disfigured, either by the transmission or copying, it will import negligence on its face. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Meek, 49 Ind., 53, 1874.

34. — A telegraph company, having received and transmitted a message, but with an error in its terms, resulting in loss to the sender, proof of due care by the company, or of the absence of negligence and carelessness on its part, is a good defense to an action brought to recover for such loss. Pinckney v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 19 So. Car., 71, 1882.

35. Penalty. The statutes of Indiana providing penalties against telegraph companies construed. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Artell, 69 Ind., 190, 1879; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Adams, 87 Ind., 598, 1882; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gougar, 84 Ind., 176, 1882; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Roberts, 87 Ind., 877, 1882; Carnahan v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 89 Ind., 526, 1883; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lindley, 63 Ind., 871, 1878.

36. Pleadings. The pleadings in an action against a telegraph company, for failure to send a message, examined. May v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 112 Mass., 90, 1873; Pinckney v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 19 So. Car., 71, 1882; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Meek, 49 Ind., 53, 1874.

37. Printed blanks. Where a telegraph company furnishes its customers printed blanks containing the terms upon which it proposes to transmit messages, a delivery to the company of a message written upon one of such blanks is an acceptance of the terms and constitutes a contract between the parties. Young v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 65 N. Y., 163, 1875; Womack v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 58 Tex., 176, 1882.

38. Repeated messages. A telegraph company received a message from a banking house acting as agent of the plaintiff, directed to another banking house in New Orleans, to protect his note then about to mature. The price of repeating the message was paid as demanded by the regulations of the company. The message never reached its destination, nor could it ever be traced beyond a town in a county adjoining the one from which it was sent. There was no testimony showing that the company was negligent in selecting competent employees, or that the facts above stated were ever communicated to any of its general officers, or that the company ever approved the conduct of the operator who undertook to transmit the message. The duty of the operator who transmitted the message was to inquire after it, and, if necessary, to repeat it. His failure to do this was negligence which subjected the company to such actual damages as the plaintiff sustained from a failure to deliver the message. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brown, 58 Tex., 170. 1882.

39. Sunday law. The statutory penalty given by "An act to regulate electric telegraph companies" (1 R. S. 1876, p. 868) cannot be recovered by a person who has delivered his message for transmission and delivery on Sunday. A contract for transmitting a message, made on Sunday, is void, and the retention of the dispatch and of the consideration paid by the sender does not constitute a ratification. Rogers v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 78 Ind., 169. 1881.

III. GENERAL MATTERS.

40. Eminent domain. The power of appropriating private property for public purposes and deferring payment, which exists in the state, or in some instances in public corporations, is not vested in and cannot be constitutionally exercised by a private corporation. Under the general act for the incorporation of telegraph companies (L. 1848, c. 263, as amended by L. 1853, c. 471), the payment of compensation to owners along the proposed route is a condition precedent to the right to erect lines, and applies to public roads, streets and highways and any other lands which the company is authorized to occupy. Dusenberry v. Mutual Tel. Co., 11 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 440. 1883.

41. — A telegraph company, by condemnation proceedings, does not acquire the fee to the land, or the right to use it for any other purpose than to erect and maintain telegraph lines upon it. This, of course, gives the company the right, at all times, when necessary to construct or to repair the line, to enter upon the strip condemned, doing as little damage as possible. The company cannot cultivate such strip, or take exclusive possession of it, or enjoy it for any other purpose. Lockie v. Mutual Union Telegraph Co., 103 Ill., 401. 1883.

42. — A contract ceding to a telegraph company the exclusive right of operating and maintaining its lines over the right of way of a railroad company, even if otherwise valid, cannot debar the state, in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, from authorizing the establishment of another telegraph line over the same right of way. New Orleans, Mobile and Tex. R. R. Co. v. Southern and Atlantic Telegraph Co., 58 Ala., 211, 1875; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 135.

43. — The question of damages in the location of a telegraph line examined. Mutual Union Telegraph Co. v. Katkamp, 103 Ill., 420. 1882.

44. Exclusive grant by a state. The section of an act of a state legislature which purported to give the exclusive right to a telegraph company, incorporated by it, to erect and use lines of telegraph within certain counties of the state, is in conflict with the act of congress approved July 22, 1866, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of telegraph lines, and to secure to the government the use of the same for postal, military and other purposes," and the section conferring such exclusive right is therefore null and void. Pensacola Telegraph Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 648. 1875.

45. Foreign company; power to transact business. The congress of the United States having exercised its power to regulate commerce between the states as to the construction of telegraph lines, no state can directly, or indirectly, by legislative prohibition or otherwise, exclude a foreign telegraph company from doing business within its limits. American Union Telegraph Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 67 Ala., 26. 1880.

46. Highway. A telegraph company laying its lines over a highway must compensate the owner of the fee. Board of Trade Telegraph Co. v. Barnett, 107 Ill., 507. 1883.

47. — In a suit for injuries from defendant's negligence in permitting its telegraph wires to be down and lying across a highway at a certain spot, proof that defendant's poles and wires were down at other places a few miles distant from the place of the injury, and at other times within a few months of the time of the injury, would seem to be admissible to show defendant's negligence.

General Matters.

Randall v. Northwestern Telegraph Co., 54 Wis., 140. 1883.

48. Injunction to restrain injury to telegraph. Where the record shows that the plaintiff was a railroad company owning and operating a line of railway, and that it was constructing a telegraph line along its road, which was a necessary adjunct to the road to aid in the safe operating of the same, and that the defendant cut down three telegraph poles and threatened to prevent by violence the construction of the telegraph line, and having been temporarily enjoined from interfering with the building of the telegraph, held, that it was error to dissolve the injunction upon a showing that was evenly balanced whether the plaintiff had the right of way or not. The restraining order should have been continued until the rights of the parties could be finally determined. St. Joseph and Denver R. R. Co. v. Dryden, 11 Kans., 186. 1873.

49. Lease. A lease of a telegraph line, fixtures and apparatus confers no authority or power on the lessee to build new lines on new routes. Philadelphia v. Western Union Tel. Co., 11 Philadelphia, 327. 1876.

50. Monopoly. An agreement by which the receipts and expenses of two telegraph companies, incorporated under the laws of the state of New York, are added together and divided between the two companies in certain proportions fixed by the agreement, is within the powers conferred upon such corporations by the statute of that state, and is not ultra vires. Benedict v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 214. 1878. Such agreement is not against public policy. Ib.

51. — The statute of Florida approved December 11, 1886, so far as it grants to the Pensacola Telegraph Co. the exclusive right of establishing and maintaining lines of electric telegraph as therein specified, is in conflict with the acts of congress and therefore inoperative against a corporation of another state. Pensacola Telegraph Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 98 U. S., 1. 1877.

52. — A contract between a railway company and a telegraph company, whereby each was to contribute, in certain respects, in establishing a telegraph line along the railroad, and the telegraph company was to operate the same, when completed, on certain terms, and in which the railway company agreed to give the telegraph company the exclusive right of way, so far as it legally might, and to discourage competition, was held not to be contrary to public policy, so far as it went to the exclusion of competitors from the line of poles occupied by the telegraph company. If the railway company authorized any other telegraph company to put up another line upon the same poles, a court of equity would enjoin such act. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Chicago and Paducah R. R. Co., 66 Ill., 246. 1877.

53. — It is not competent for a railroad company to grant to a telegraph company the exclusive right to establish lines of telegraph communication along its right of way, such contracts being in restraint of trade and contrary to public policy. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Burlington and Southwestern R'y Co., 11 Federal Reporter, 1; 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 180, 1832; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. American Union Telegraph Co., 65 Ga., 160, 1880.

54. Navigable streams. Those navigating a public navigable stream for commercial purposes have the primary and paramount right to it, and every interference with or obstruction of the navigation, or hindrance to the free passage of vessels, is prima facie a nuisance. Telegraph cables so laid or suspended in navigable waters as to catch upon the keels, or to come in contact with vessels navigating the stream, and which, but for such cables, would pass without difficulty or interruption, are improperly placed, and injuriously interrupt navigation. Blanchard v. Western Union Tel. Co., 60 N. Y., 510, 1875; reversing Same v. Same, 8 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 775, and Same v. Same, 67 Barbour (N. Y.), 223, 1874.

55. Pacific railroads. The statutes, in relation to telegraphs on the Pacific railroads, construed. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Union Pacific R'y Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 721, 1890; Same v. Same, 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 418, 1890; Same v. Same, 8 Federal Reporter, 423; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 553, 1890; Same v. Same, 3 Federal Reporter, 1; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 581; 1893; Central

General Matters.

Branch Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 3 Federal Reporter, 417; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 551, 1880.

56. Poles. It is competent for city authorities, unless bound by an absolute contract permitting telegraph poles and wires to stand where they are, to take reasonable measures to have the same removed. Mutual Union Telegraph Co. v. City of Chicago, 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 539; 16 Federal Reporter, 309, 1883.

57. — In a suit against a telegraph company for injuries sustained by the falling of one of its poles, the evidence tended to show that the accident was occasioned by an unusually severe snow storm; there was evidence also from which the jury could have found that the line, as originally constructed, was sufficient for such storms as could have been reasonably expected. The court refused to charge that defendant was not bound so to make or manage its line as to guard against storms of unusual severity, the occurrence of which could not be reasonably expected. Held, error. Ward v. Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co., 71 N. Y., 81. 1877.

58. — On the trial of an action against a telegraph company for negligently permitting telegraph poles to fall and suspend the wires across a highway, where a question is raised as to the soundness of the poles, it is error to admit evidence of the condition of other poles forty or sixty rods away, without any showing that they were of the same kind, put up at the same time, and equally exposed. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Levi, 47 Ind., 552. 1874.

59. — A telegraph company placed its poles at a sufficient distance from the traveled portion of a highway to be safe from collision with vehicles passing along it, under ordinary circumstances. Held, that it was not liable for the damages resulting from an accident arising from the breaking and fall of one of the poles, where the proximate cause of the fall was a collision with a runaway team. Allen v. Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co., 21 Hun (N. Y.), 22. 1880.

60. — The breaking of a telegraph pole by a runaway team, where the pole is placed at a safe distance from the traveled portion of a highway, whereby another team is frightened and runs away and causes an injury, will not render the telegraph company liable for the damages. Allen v. Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co., 21 Hun (N. Y.), 22. 1880.

61. — The right to erect telegraph poles in the streets of a city does not carry with it the right to erect broken and unsightly poles. Forsythe v. Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Co., 12 Mo. App., 494. 1883.

62. — The erection of a telegraph pole so as to incommode the public gives an individual no right of action to abate the nuisance unless he has sustained special damage. Gay v. Mutual Union Telegraph Co., 12 Mo. App., 485. 1883.

63. — It appeared by the affidavits that defendant cut plaintiff's poles in a highway and carried them to the ditches and side fences of the road, and left them. Held, that, conceding the poles and wires could have been made the subject of a conversion after they had been severed, no such conversion actually took place; also, that as an order of arrest was granted for the cutting, as well as the conversion, even if such conversion took place, the order should be vacated, for the reason that the right of arrest is not applicable to all the causes of action. American Union Telegraph Co. v. Middleton, 80 N. Y., 408. 1880.

64. Powers of cities. Notwithstanding telegraph lines are instruments of commerce, a city has the right to determine how, in what manner, and upon what condition, a telegraph company shall enter the city and pass through it. Mutual Union Tel. Co. v. Chicago, 16 Federal Reporter, 309. 1883.

65. Railway right of way. A telegraph company has no authority, under the statutes of New York, granting it power to erect its lines along public roads, streets and highways, to erect its poles and lines upon the right of way of a railway company. New York City and Northern R. R. Co. v. Central Union Telegraph Co., 21 Hun (N. Y.), 261. 1880.

66. — A railway company may erect or cause the erection of a telegraph line within its right of way. Prather v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 39 Ind., 501, 1883; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Rich, 19 Kans., 517, 1878.

Injunction.

67. — The statutory right to construct a line of telegraph "directly across" a railway does not authorize the construction of the same by excavation "under" the railway. South Eastern Ry Co. v. European Telegraph Co., 9 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 363. 1854.

68. Stock. Under the laws of New York, a telegraph company may issue stock for the purchase of the property, etc., of any telegraph company organized under the laws of this or any other state, upon complying with certain statutory provisions. Williams v. Western Union Tel. Co., 48 N. Y. Superior Ct., 349, 1882; Hatch v. American Union Tel. Co., 9 Abbott's New Cases (N. Y.), 223, 1881. See, also, Williams v. Western Union Tel. Co., 9 ib., 419, 1881; Same v. Same, 9 ib., 497, 1891; 1 N. Y. Civil Procedure Rep., 194, 1881.

69. Statutory control; previous contracts. The statute (Session Laws of 1879, ch. 36, amending Gen. Statutes, p. 342, § 8) requiring all telegraph and telephone companies to receive dispatches from all other telegraph and telephone lines, and transmit them on payment of the usual charges, could not operate to compel the Connecticut corporation to do what it had no right to do by virtue of a previous contract. A Massachusetts statute to the same effect was to be regarded as applying to the action of the Massachusetts corporation as a carrier of speech in that state, and as not affecting its right to manufacture its instruments and sell or lease them in other states as the owner of the patent. American Rapid Telegraph Co. v. Connecticut Telephone Co., 49 Conn., 352. 1881.

70. Streets. Where the poles of a telegraph line in an incorporated town are erected outside of the streets and on private property, and the wires hung thereon, where they overhang the streets, are placed at an elevation sufficiently high not to impede, obstruct or endanger the full, free and safe use of the streets, the town authorities have no right to destroy them. American Union Telegraph Co. v. Town of Harrison, 31 N. J. Eq., 627. 1879.

71. — Under § 8 of the general telegraph law, the authorities of an incorporated town have a right to designate the street route on which a telegraph line shall pass through the town, but they have no right to refuse to allow the line to pass at all. Id.

72. Summons; service. Sufficiency of service on a telegraph company determined. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Lindley, 62 Ind., 371. 1878.

73. Taxation. In respect to its foreign and interstate business, a telegraph company is, as an instrument of commerce, subject to the regulating power of congress, and, if it accepts the provisions of title 65 of the Revised Statutes, it becomes an agent of the United States, so far as the business of the government is concerned. Where it has accepted those provisions, state laws, so far as they impose upon it a specific tax on each message which it transmits beyond the state, or which an officer of the United States sends over its lines on public business, are unconstitutional. Telegraph Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S., 460. 1881.

74. — Stat. 1880, ch. 248, entitled "An act for the taxation of telegraph companies," is constitutional, and a tax imposed under its provisions is valid. State v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 73 Me., 518. 1882.

75. Ticker in "bucket shop." A telegraph company cannot be compelled to furnish a telegraph "ticker" to an office in which gambling contracts in grain are made. Bryant v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 17 Federal Reporter, 825. 1883.

TENANTS IN COMMON.

1. Injunction. The court will restrain one tenant in common from the wilful destruction of the common property; but where a railroad company had obtained a lease from five out of six tenants in common, and had, against the wishes of the remaining tenant in common, built a railway on the property, which, at law, had been held to be an ouster, the court refused to interfere by injunction to prevent the dissenting tenant in common removing the rails, etc., though the rent agreed to be paid by the company was three times the former rent. Durham and Sunderland R. R. Co. v. Wason, 3 Beavan (Eng. Ch.), 119. 1840.

Miscellaneous.

TERMINUS.

1. Charter. The amended charter of the Pacific Railroad Co. gave the right to construct a road "from the Mississippi river, or any point in the city of St. Louis," and its charter required that its roads should be commenced within seven years and completed within ten years thereafter. The company chose the point at which it would commence, and built its road westward from that point. Held, that, having maintained that location for twenty years, it could not then change its terminus; and that, having failed to build its branch roads within the time prescribed, it could not build a branch road to continue from its terminus eastward to the Mississippi river, nor treat a track laid between these points as a mere switching or spur track. Atlantic and Pacific R. R. Co. v. St. Louis, 3 Mo. App., 815. 1877.

2. Contract. G. conveyed a lot to defendant for use as its terminus at Windsor, the consideration and condition of the grant being the establishment of the terminus at that point. Held, that the contract was not violated by the ferriage of defendant's cars to Detroit. Geauyeau v. Great Western Ry Co., 8 Ontario Appeal Reports, 412. 1878.

TEXAS CATTLE LAW.

See CARRIAGE OF LIVE STOCK.

1. Constitutional law. An unconstitutional law, prohibiting railway companies from carrying Texas or Cherokee cattle into or through Illinois will afford no excuse for a refusal or delay in receiving and shipping such cattle when offered. Such a statute can neither be regarded as imposing obligations nor as affording protection. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Erickson, 91 Ill., 613. 1879.

2. — The constitutionality of the act to prevent the importation of Texas or Cherokee cattle into Illinois, approved February 27, 1867, has been frequently affirmed and recognized by this court in numerous cases, and as there is nothing in the amendment to that act, approved April 16, 1869, to which the reasoning in these cases is not equally applicable, it seems that the question of the constitutionality of the amendment is settled. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Gasaway, 71 Ill., 570. 1874. See, also, Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S., 465, 1877; 15 Amer. R'y Rep., 325.

3. Construction. By the act of 1869, Texas and Cherokee cattle may be brought into Illinois at any time, if first acclimated or wintered in either of the states of Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska or Wisconsin; but it is made a penal offense to own such cattle, unless they shall have been brought into Illinois between October 1 and March 1 of the following year. Frye v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 73 Ill., 393. 1874.

4. Seizure of cattle. The fact that a contract for the transportation of cattle provides that the owner shall be entitled to pass, free of charge, on the train with the cattle to take care of them, and that the cattle are to be fed, watered, loaded and unloaded by him at his own risk, does not confer on him the right to decide when, where, and under what circumstances, the loading and unloading shall take place; but rather imposes on him the duty of loading and unloading wherever and whenever the exigencies of the transportation may, in the judgment of the company, render it necessary. McAlister v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 373, 1891; 74 Mo., 351.

5. — The seizure and sale of the cattle by state officials under an unconstitutional law will not render the carrier liable for the resulting damages. Ib.

TICKET OFFICE.

1. Lease; general agent. The powers of the general agent of the owner of a railroad are such as will warrant him in executing a lease of property to be used as a ticket office for the road. Ecker v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 8 Mo. App., 223, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 357.

TICKETS.

See BAGGAGE; CONDUCTOR; COUNTERFEITING; INJURIES TO PASSENGERS; MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

1. Action for failure to produce ticket. A by-law by a railway company imposed upon a passenger failing or refusing to produce his ticket the liability to pay the amount of the fare from the station whence the train, by which such passenger traveled, had originally started. Held, that there must be a demand of the specific amount of such fare, in order to enable the company to recover it. Brown v. Great Eastern Ry Co., Law Reports, 2 Queen's Bench Division, 408, 1877; 21 Eng. (Moak), 185.

Change of Location of Depot — Conditions.

2. Change of location of depot. A suit was brought against a railroad company for failing to carry plaintiff to its original depot. It appeared that the company had abandoned its old depot for one half a mile short of that terminus. Held, that although the change had been adopted only a few weeks prior to his purchase of ticket, yet, the running of the trains having been uniformly to the new depot since that change, would be considered as a usage of the company, in reference to which plaintiff must be held to have contracted. That a fortiori such is the case where plaintiff knew of the change at the time of procuring his ticket. Martindale v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 60 Mo., 508. 1875.

3. Classes. By 8 Vict., c. 20, s. 108: "If any person, having paid his fare for a certain distance, knowingly and wilfully proceed in any such carriage beyond such distance, without previously paying the additional fare, . . . and with intent to avoid payment thereof, he shall for every such offense forfeit 40s." By s. 108: "The company, subject to this and the special act, may make regulations for regulating the traveling upon or using and working the railway." By s. 109: "For better enforcing the allowance of all and any of such regulations, it shall be lawful for the company, subject, etc., to make by-laws, . . . provided that such by-laws be not repugnant to the laws of that part of the United Kingdom where the same are to have effect, or to the provisions of this or the special act." By a by-law made under the above act "any person traveling without the special permission of some duly authorized servant to the company, or by a train of a superior class to that for which his ticket was issued, is hereby subject to a penalty not exceeding 40s., and shall in addition be liable to pay his fare according to the class of carriage in which he is traveling from the station where the train originally started, unless he shows that he had no intention to defraud." The appellant was convicted in a penalty of 10s. under this by-law for traveling in a first-class carriage with only a second-class ticket; but it was found as a fact that he had no intention to defraud the company. Held, that the conviction must be quashed, for without deciding whether the by-law did or did not make proof of the absence of fraudulent intention an exemption from the penalty as well as from the extra fare, it was, if it made the fraudulent intention immaterial in the case of the penalty, repugnant to 8 Vict., c. 20, s. 103, and ultra vires the company. Bentham v. Hoyle. Law Reports, 8 Queen's Bench Division, 289. 1878.

4. Commutation. Where the holder of a commutation ticket, in violation of its terms, has permitted it to be used by other persons, the company has the right to take up the ticket and demand payment of fare, and, upon failure of payment, to expel the offending person from its train. Freidenrich v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 53 Md., 201, 1879; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 280.

5. Conditions. Outside the cover of a paper book of coupons forming a railway ticket, issued to the plaintiff by the defendants, was printed the name of their railway, the words "Cheap return ticket, London to Paris and back, second class," and a statement of the period and journey for which the ticket was available, but no reference to the inside of the cover. On the inside, and apparent on turning the leaf, was a condition limiting the responsibility of the defendants to their own trains. The plaintiff having been injured while traveling by virtue of the ticket, in a French train, sued the defendants. They set up the condition. The plaintiff had not read and did not know of it. The jury were directed that if it was brought to his notice it would afford a defense, and, on being asked the question, suggested in Parker v. South Eastern Ry Co., (3 C. D., 416), whether what was done by the company was reasonably sufficient to bring the condition to the notice of the plaintiff, answered that it was not, and found a verdict in his favor. He moved for judgment.

Conductor's Check — Contract without the State.

Held, distinguishing Henderson v. Stevenson (L. R., 2 H. L. (Sc.), 470), that the whole book was the contract accepted by the plaintiff, and that he, therefore, could not reject the condition which was one of its terms, and that judgment should be entered for the defendants. Burke v. South Eastern R'y Co., Law Reports, 5 Common Pleas Division, 1, 1879; 30 Eng. (Moak), 671.

6. Conductor's check. A conductor's check, given to a traveler in lieu of one of several coupons attached to his ticket, is a full equivalent therefor, and if the traveler fail to produce it to another conductor on a demand made before the distance for which the check is good has been traveled, and refuses to pay his fare, he may lawfully be ejected. Jerome v. Smith, 48 Vt., 280; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 387. 1876. But see Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Griffin, 68 Ill., 499. 1873.

7. Connecting lines. The sale for one sum of a railroad ticket, composed of coupons invalid if detached, and each bearing the name of the railway company selling it, empowering the purchaser to pass over the connecting roads of different corporations, does not make the selling corporation liable to the purchaser for an injury received upon a connecting road. Hartan v. Eastern R. R. Co., 114 Mass., 44. 1873.

8. — If one of several companies, composing a public line of travel, by agreement with the others, receive fare and give a "through ticket" over the entire route, the company selling the ticket shall be regarded as the agent of the other companies, when the ticket itself imports this and nothing else appears. Nashville and Chattanooga R. R. Co. v. Sprayberry, 20 Amer. R'y Rep., 55; 9 Heiskell (Tenn.), 852, 1872; Furstenheim v. Memphis and Ohio R. R. Co., 9 Heiskell (Tenn.), 238, 1872.

9. — Where a railroad company issues a ticket entitling the holder to a passage over its own and connecting lines to the place of destination mentioned in the ticket, and there is no limitation in it upon the right of the holder to transfer it to another, held, that, upon the refusal of a connecting line to accept the ticket, and of the contracting company to furnish a local ticket over that line or the amount of money necessary to procure one, the holder has a right of action against the original contracting company for breach of contract; and this right is assignable, under the laws of the state of Colorado, so as to give a right of action to the assignee. Hudson v. Kansas Pacific R'y Co., 9 Federal Reporter, 879; 3 McCrary (U. S. C.), 249, 1882.

10. Continuous passage. M. purchased a through emigrant ticket at reduced rates. The ticket, among other things, provided that it should not be transferable. At Omaha the ticket was taken up by the conductor and a check given calling for "one continuous passage" to San Francisco. At Palisade M. left the train and sold the check to C., who attempted to use it on the same train. Held, that C. was not entitled to travel upon the check. Cody v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 4 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 114. 1876.

11. — Where a ticket provides that it shall be good only for a continuous trip, and for two days only, held, that such stipulation is valid, and the holder has no right to stop off for a few days and then renew his journey without payment of fare. Livingstone v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., 21 Lower Canada Jurist, 13, 1876; Craig v. Great Western R'y Co., 24 Upper Canada (Queen's Bench), 504, 1865; Briggs v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., ib., 510, 1865. See, also, Gale v. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co., 7 Hun (N. Y.), 670. 1876.

12. — A ticket good for a continuous passage over several lines construed. Held, that it was good for a continuous passage over each line and not merely good for a continuous passage over the entire connecting lines. Auerbach v. N. Y. Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 89 N. Y., 281, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 334.

13. Contract without the state. A person purchasing in another state, where such sale is lawful, a railway ticket from a dealer who is not an authorized agent of the company, may maintain an action in the courts of Pennsylvania for the refusal of the company to carry him between a point in the state where he bought the ticket, and a point within Pennsylvania, in pursuance of the terms of said ticket. Sleeper v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 100 Pa. St., 259, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 291.

Coupons — Failure to Show Ticket.

14. Coupons. A traveler on a railroad train, traveling on a commutation coupon ticket, which provides that the coupons shall be void if detached by any other person than the conductor, and that the ticket shall be shown to the conductor each trip, who shall detach the coupons for the number of miles to be traveled, technically violates the contract by detaching the coupons himself. If, while detaching the coupons, his attention be called by the conductor to the fact that it is his duty to detach them, the passenger should at once desist, and hand the ticket and coupons to the conductor, in which event it would be the duty of the latter, if he saw the coupons detached, or could readily ascertain by inspection that they had not been detached from the ticket, to accept them. But the conductor would not be bound to receive the detached coupons without seeing the ticket. Louisville, Nashville, etc., R. R. Co. v. Harris, 9 Lea (Tenn.), 180. 1882.

15. Damages. A passenger bought a ticket from one point to another on the line of a railway and return. She went to the latter point, but when she started to return the conductor informed her, on entering the car, that she could not return on that ticket; that if she did he would have to pay the fare. She thereupon left the train, and remained until the next train, on which she returned home without extra charge. She sued the railway company. Held, that the suit was founded on a breach of contract, and actual damages only could be recovered; or if none, then nominal damages. Exemplary damages cannot be allowed for a breach of contract. Goins v. Western R. R. Co. of Alabama, 68 Ga., 190. 1881.

16. Damages for wrongful act of ticket agent. If, by means of improper information, given by a ticket agent, a passenger is misled in the purchase of his ticket, the company will be liable for the resulting damages. But such incorrect information will not entitle him to remain upon the train, without payment of fare, in violation of the rules of the company. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co. v. Pierce, 47 Mich., 277, 1882; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 340. The same principle recognized. Yorton v. Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western R'y

Co., 54 Wis., 284, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 822; Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Nuzum, 60 Ind., 533, 1878.

17. — A railway passenger has a right to act upon the conduct and directions of the agents of the corporation in relation to tickets. Lake Erie and Western R'y Co. v. Fix, 88 Ind., 881, 1882; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 109.

18. Discrimination. Railway companies have no right to discriminate between persons, and sell tickets to some and refuse others. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co. v. Rinard, 46 Ind., 293, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 328.

19. Drover's pass. Where a passenger had the right, under a "stock pass," to return on defendant's cars from St. Louis to Knob Noster, and was actually on the return trip, held, that, under the pass, he had the right to stop at Eureka, an intermediate station, and was not liable to pay fare to the latter place. Graham v. Pacific R. R. Co., 66 Mo., 536. 1877.

20. Effect of purchase of ticket. The purchase of a ticket by a person on a company's railway, between two stations, creates the relation of carrier and passenger between them, with all the duties the law imposes on each. Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific R'y Co. v. Rector, 104 Ill., 296, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 261.

21. — The ticket given to a passenger, upon payment of his fare, is a receipt merely, and not a contract. Logan v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R'y Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Mo.), 141. 1883.

22. Failure to show ticket. A by-law of the respondents' company provided "that a passenger should show and deliver up his ticket to any duly authorized servant of the company whenever required to do so for any purpose, and that any person traveling without a ticket, or failing or refusing to show or deliver up his ticket as aforesaid, should be required to pay the fare from the station whence the train originally started to the end of his journey." The appellant had a ticket entitling him to travel on the lines of the respondents and the L. and S. W. R'y Co. from Charing Cross or Cannon street to Windsor and back. Having come to Waterloo Junction station on the respondents' line, where he had to change trains, he had for this purpose to go from the respondents' station to that of the L. and S. W. R'y Co. On passing out of the respondents' station he was asked to show his ticket, but refused to do so. There was no intention to defraud on the appellant's part. The respondents summoned him under the above by-law, and he was convicted in the amount of the fare from the station whence the respondents' train by which he traveled had started. Held, that the conviction must be quashed. Saunders v. South Eastern R'y Co., Law Reports, 5 Queen's Bench Division, 456, 1880; 29 Eng. (Moak), 384.

23. Failure to stop at station. In an action against a railway company for failing to stop a train and allow a passenger to alight at a station for which he had purchased a ticket, where the evidence tended to show that the defendant ran two daily trains that stopped at the station for which the passenger held the ticket, and also ran a through train which, by the company's rules, was not allowed to stop at that station, and that when the ticket was taken up by the conductor he informed the plaintiff that he must get off at a station before reaching the one for which he held the ticket or go to the next station beyond, and that the plaintiff voluntarily went on to the station beyond, it was error to instruct the jury that if the plaintiff purchased his ticket for the station at which he wished to stop he had a right to enter the first train due after he purchased the ticket, unless he was informed, before he entered the train, that it would not stop at the station for which the ticket was purchased. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R'y Co. v. Nuzum, 50 Ind., 141, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 396.

24. — If a person purchase a ticket for a certain station, and expressly for a particular train, and at the time of the purchase he is informed by the agent that the train will stop at that station, he will have a right to take passage on such train, and it will be the duty of the company to allow him to leave the train at that station. Ib.

25. — A passenger must take notice of the published rules of a railway company. He is not entitled to damages if he takes a train which, by such rules, does not stop at the station to which he desires to go. Trotlinger v. East Tenn., etc., R. R. Co., 11 Lea (Tenn.), 533. 1883.

26. — The words "good on passenger trains only," contained on a ticket issued and sold by a railway company to a passenger, do not amount to a contract that all of its passenger trains will stop at the stations designated on the ticket. In an action by the passenger, against the company, to recover damages for carrying him beyond his destination named on the ticket, the complaint should aver that the train on which he was so carried was one which, under the regulations of the company, should have stopped at that station. Ohio and Mississippi R'y Co. v. Swarthout, 67 Ind., 567. 1879.

27. Family ticket. A son or daughter residing with the father does not cease to be a member of his family when he or she arrives at the age of twenty-one or eighteen, respectively, by reason of that fact alone. The right to use a family commutation ticket is not confined to parents and their minor children. Chicago and Northwestern Ry Co. v. Chisholm, 79 Ill., 584. 1875.

28. Form of. Where a railway company had employed a band to attend an excursion on its road, at a fixed sum of money and a ticket for a lady to each member, and the prepared tickets for the ladies contained the following words only: "Maine Central R. R., July 30, 1877. Dexter,"—which was different from common tickets,—in a suit by a brother of a member of the band for refusing to carry him on such a ticket, held, that an instruction that the ticket did not, on its face, entitle him to a passage, is not erroneous. Crosby v. Maine Central R. R. Co., 69 Me., 418. 1879.

29. Fraud; traveling without ticket. A by-law of a railway company provided that "any passenger traveling without a ticket, or failing or refusing to show or deliver up his ticket" to any duly authorized servant of the company when required to do so, "shall be required to pay the fare from the station whence the train originally started to the end of his journey. Held, that, as against a passenger who had, in good faith, traveled a short distance upon the line without having procured a ticket, this by-law was unreasonable and void, inasmuch as it was in substance an attempt to inflict a penalty for doing without fraud that which, by the joint operation of ss. 108 and 109 of 8 Vict., c. 20, can be punished only if done fraudulently. London and Brighton R'y Co. v. Watson, Law Reports, 8 Common Pleas Division, 429, 1878; 80 Eng. (Moak), 277.

80. Free pass for life. The free pass given by the lessor, the N. C. R. R. Co., was only a license, without any consideration in law, which that company could revoke at pleasure, and did revoke by leasing the road to the defendant. Turner v. Richmond and Danville R. R. Co., 70 N. C., 1. 1874.

81. Freight trains. A railway company allowed passengers to ride on way-freight trains, under a rule that "passengers will not be carried on any way-trains unless they are provided with tickets. Way-freights will not stop at stations where tickets are not sold to receive nor to let off passengers." Held, that the rule was a reasonable one. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co. v. Greenwood, 79 Pa. St., 373, 1875; Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 77 Ind., 507, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 467; Falkner v. Ohio and Mississippi R'y Co., 55 Ind., 369, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 262; St. Louis and Southeastern R'y Co. v. Myrtle, 51 Ind., 566, 1875.

82. — Where a certain freight train was in the habit of carrying passengers to a certain station, and, before the company had made any different rule or regulation in this respect, the plaintiff purchased a ticket for such station, but was informed by the conductor that he would not stop there, and advised to take passage upon another extra train, to which he applied and was refused passage, and the plaintiff entered the first train, informing the conductor of the facts, and was by it carried to the next station beyond the one named in his ticket, held, that the company was liable to the plaintiff in compensatory damages. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Fisher, 66 Ill., 152, 1872; St. Louis and Southeastern R'y Co. v. Myrtle, 51 Ind., 566, 1875.

83. — A railroad company, as a common carrier, may make reasonable rules for the regulation of its business and the performance of its public duties; but in the adoption of these rules regard must be had to the convenience and interest of the traveling public. It may forbid the transportation of freight and passengers on the same trains, or may require passengers traveling on freight trains to procure tickets before entering the cars; but, in such cases, reasonable facilities for procuring tickets, at or about the time of the arrival or departure of the trains, must be afforded, according to the established usage of all railroads; and it is not reasonable, while allowing passengers to travel on freight trains, to afford them no opportunity to procure tickets, except at such hours as would make it more expeditious to travel by the passenger trains. Evans v. Memphis and Charleston R. R. Co., 56 Ala., 246, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 350.

84. Larceny. A passenger railway ticket, in a ticket office of the company, is not the subject of larceny at common law, nor under the Delaware statutes. State v. Hill, 1 Houston's Criminal Reports (Del.), 420. 1874.

85. Limitation as to time. A ticket, good for a certain number of fares, sold at a reduced rate, and limited as to time, is of no validity after the expiration of such time. Powell v. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis R. R. Co., 25 Ohio St., 70, 1874; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 477; Hill v. Syracuse, Binghamton and New York R. R. Co., 63 N. Y., 101, 1875; Grand Trunk R'y Co. v. Cunningham, 11 Lower Canada Jurist, 107, 1865.

86. — The holder of a railway ticket, by the terms of which he agrees to "use the same on or before the expiration" of a day named, complies with the terms of that limitation when he enters upon the transit before midnight of the day named. Evans v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R'y Co., 11 Mo. App., 463. 1882. See, also, Auerbach v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 89 N. Y., 281, 1882; reversing Same v. Same, 60 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 332, 1881.

87. — An indorsement upon a limited ticket by a conductor, showing it had been used to an intermediate station before the expiration of the time specified, or an allowed use of it for a portion of the distance thereafter, with an indorsement showing it, is not such a waiver of the condition as allows a further use of the ticket. Hill v.

Loss — Mileage Ticket.

Syracuse, Binghamton and New York R. R. Co., 63 N. Y., 101. 1875.

88. — A railway ticket issued during the day of December 8th, and limited to be used within two days from the date sold, did not expire until twelve o'clock on the night of December 8th. Georgia Southern R. R. Co. v. Bigelow, 68 Ga., 219. 1881.

89. — The Statute of 1871, ch. 223, which declares that the holder of a ticket shall have the right to stop over at any of the stations along the line of the railroad, and that such ticket shall be good for a passage for six years from the time it is first used, applies only to transportation within the territorial limits of Maine; the statute has no extraterritorial force, and consequently does not apply to a ticket from Portland to Montreal, while the ticket is being used beyond the limits of the state of Maine. Carpenter v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., 72 Me., 388, 1891; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 432.

40. — While such a ticket is being used in New Hampshire, Vermont or Canada, the rights of the passenger will be governed and controlled by the laws of those places and not by the laws of Maine; but in the absence of proof to the contrary, the law of those places will be presumed to be the same as the common law of Maine, and not the same as the statute above cited. Id.

41. Loss. A passenger has no right to travel upon a ticket which he has lost. Duke v. Great Western R'y Co., 14 Upper Canada (Queen's Bench), 369, 377. 1857.

42. — A passenger having presented his ticket to the conductor, it was punched and returned to him. The passenger mislaid the ticket, and for a time was unable to find it. The conductor afterwards again called for the ticket, and, as the passenger was unable to find it, he was ejected from the car, without any demand of payment of fare. Held, that his expulsion was wrongful. Robson v. New York Central and Hudson River R. Co., 21 Hun (N. Y.), 387. 1880.

43. Mileage ticket. A mileage ticket stipulated that it should be good only for a certain period, and that, if presented after the expiration of that time, the conductor should take up the ticket and collect the fare. Held, that its use a number of times in violation of the condition would not estop the company to take it up and eject the passenger from its train upon refusal to pay fare. Sherman v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 40 Ia., 45, 1874; 8 Amer. R'y Rep., 410.

44. — Where the holder of a thousand miles ticket, expressed to be "good for six months only," after the period had elapsed, having first obtained legal advice that the ticket was good till the thousand miles were traveled, and before the ticket was exhausted, took his seat in the baggage car of a train, refused payment of fare otherwise than by offering his ticket, and was forcibly ejected from the train; held, that the ticket was void; that the holder was not a passenger, but became a trespasser on entering the baggage car, and, upon his refusal to get off, might be ejected, with the use of any force necessary to that end, and at a point contiguous neither to a station nor dwelling-house; that the statute (Wagn. Stat., 307, § 23) had no application to such case. Lillis v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 64 Mo., 484. 1877.

45. — A railway company, being the owner of one line and the lessee of another, the two forming a continuous railway between Indianapolis and St. Louis, sold a "thousand mile" ticket, authorizing the purchaser to travel three hundred miles upon one of said roads and seven hundred miles upon the other, having black figures representing the one road and red figures the other, with directions to conductors to punch out the black figures, representing the number of miles traveled on the western division of the road, and the red figures for the miles traveled on the eastern end. On the back of the ticket were printed conditions, signed by the purchaser, among which was a stipulation that the miles traveled each trip should be indicated by the conductor punching out corresponding figures on the opposite side. After all the red figures had been punched out, the purchaser offered the ticket for passage on a train on the eastern division of the through line, which the conductor refused to accept, though there were black figures not punched out, amounting to the number of miles for which it was offered; and the holder of the ticket, refusing to pay his fare or to leave the car unless forcibly ejected, was put off by the train men. Held, that the terms expressed on the ticket constituted a contract between the seller and purchaser of the ticket, and that his refusal to pay fare and to leave the car, on request, justified his expulsion. Terre Haute and Indianapolis R. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 47 Ind., 79, 1874; 8 Amer. R'y Rep., 287.

46. Mistake. As between a conductor and passenger, the ticket is conclusive evidence of the passenger's right to travel, and he must produce it when called on. The conductor is not required to correct mistakes made by ticket agents. Frederick v. Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon R. R. Co., 37 Mich., 342. 1877.

47. No right to travel upon, except in direction named. A ticket with the words "Portland to Boston" imprinted on it, purchased in Portland under no contract other than what is inferable from the ticket itself, does not entitle the holder to a passage in a direction the reverse of that indicated on the ticket. A ticket with the words "Portland to Boston" on it does not entitle the holder to a ride from Boston to Portland, although the holder has been permitted to take such rides on similar tickets over the same railway before, and a conductor on another train at another time on the same road gave his opinion to the holder that the ticket would be good for a passage either way. Keeley v. Boston and Maine R. R. Co., 67 Me., 163, 1878; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 339.

48. Parol evidence. A ticket is not such a written contract as will exclude the introduction of parol representations made at the time of its sale. A parol representation made to the purchaser of a ticket, that it gave the right to stop off at any point on the line, is admissible in evidence. Robinson v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co., 2 Lea (Tenn.), 534. 1879.

49. Penalty. Questions of penalty under the English statutes determined. Dearden v. Townsend, Law Reports, 1 Queen's Bench Cases, 10, 1865; Woodard v. Eastern Counties R'y Co., 101 E. C. L., 977; 4 Law Times (N. S.), 336, 1861; Regina v. Freere, 20 Eng. Law & Equity, 143, 1855; Dyson v. London and North Western R'y Co., Law Reports, 7 Queen's Bench Division, 32; 2 Amer. & Eng.

R. R. Cases, 629, 1881; Queen v. Freere, 4 Ellis & Blackburn, 598; 82 E. C. L., 598, 1855.

50. Rates of fare; excess charged on train. A regulation of a railway company, that a passenger who shall purchase a ticket before entering its cars shall be entitled to a discount from the advertised rates of fare, but if such ticket is not purchased, the full rate of fare shall be charged, is a reasonable regulation, and does not violate a rule prescribed by statute, that the rates of fare shall be the same for all persons between the same points. Swan v. Manchester and Lawrence R. R. Co., 132 Mass., 116, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 327; Hoffbauer v. Davenport and Northwestern R'y Co., 52 Ia., 342, 1879; Bordeaux v. Erie R'y Co., 8 Hun (N. Y.), 579, 1876.

51. — The company is not bound to keep its ticket offices open at or for any particular time, and the fact that a passenger is unable to procure a ticket in consequence of the office being shut, will not entitle him to be carried to his place of destination upon payment of the amount for which he could have procured a ticket at the office had it been open. Bordeaux v. Erie R'y Co., 8 Hun (N. Y.), 579. 1876.

52. Refusal to carry; master in one train holding tickets for servants in another. A by-law of the defendant, a railway company, was as follows: "No passenger will be allowed to enter any carriage without having first paid his fare and obtained a ticket. Each passenger, on payment of his fare, will be furnished with a ticket, which such passenger is to show when required, and to deliver up before leaving the company's premises, upon demand." The plaintiff took tickets for himself, his servants and horses, by a particular train on the defendant's railway. The train was afterwards divided into two. The plaintiff traveled in the first train, taking all the tickets with him. When the second train, with the servants and horses, was about to start, the plaintiff's servants were required to produce their tickets, and on their being unable to do so, the defendant refused to carry them. Held, in an action by the plaintiff for not carrying his servants, that, as the defendant contracted with the plaintiff, and delivered the tickets to him and not to the servants, the defendant could not, under the by-law, justify its refusal to carry. Jennings v. Great Northern Ry Co., Law Reports, 1 Queen's Bench Cases, 7. 1865.

53. Right to compel purchase of ticket. A railway company may establish and enforce a rule requiring a person desiring passage on its trains to procure, and to exhibit to its employes, a ticket entitling him to such passage, before entering the cars. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis Ry Co. v. Vandyne, 57 Ind., 576, 1877; 18 Amer. Ry Rep., 454.

54. Rules. Carriers of passengers may lawfully require those seeking to be carried to purchase tickets when convenient facilities to that end are afforded, to exhibit them to the person designated by the carrier for that purpose, and surrender them after securing their seats, when required by the person in charge. Such requirements are reasonable ones to protect the carrier against imposition and the fraud of its employes. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Reed, 75 Ill., 125. 1874.

55. Sale; delivery to purchaser. It is the duty of a ticket agent to use reasonable care in delivering a ticket to the purchaser. Where the purchaser, after paying for the ticket, is called away, it is no delivery to put the ticket on the counter in his absence. Quigley v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 5 Sawyer (U. S. C. C.), 107. 1878.

56. Season tickets. A passenger has no right to travel on a lost season ticket. A condition requiring him to exhibit his ticket is a reasonable one. Cresson v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 11 Philadelphia, 597. 1875. See, also, Cooper v. London, Brighton and South Coast Ry Co., Law Reports, 4 Exchequer Division, 88; 81 Eng. (Moak), 384, 1879.

57. Stop-over tickets. A regulation by a railway company, by which a passenger who has paid his fare between two points on the line, but desires to stop over at an intermediate point, is required to procure a stop-over ticket from the conductor, and present it to the conductor of the train on which he seeks to complete his journey, as evidence of his right to do so without further payment, is a reasonable regulation. Yorton v.

Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western Ry Co., 54 Wis., 234; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 322, 1882. The same principle recognized. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Ry Co. v. Pierce, 47 Mich., 277. 1882.

58. — A lay-over ticket limited to five days from its date, held valid and the condition enforced. The condition is not waived by checking the passenger's baggage. Wentz v. Erie Ry Co., 5 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 556, 1874; Churchill v. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co., 67 Ill., 390, 1873; Wentz v. Erie Ry Co., 3 Hun (N. Y.), 241, 1874.

59. — If a passenger who has purchased a ticket from a railroad company which is silent on the subject of his stopping over, stops over before he reaches the point to which the ticket entitled him to ride, he cannot resume his journey on that ticket. If a passenger on the railroad leaves the train before he has arrived at the point to which his ticket entitled him to ride, he voluntarily terminates his contract with the company to carry him to such point. Drew v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 51 Cal., 425, 1876; 13 Amer. Ry Rep., 222.

60. — The defendant's ticket agent represented to the plaintiff that it was necessary to purchase but one ticket to enable him to pass over the road, stopping over one night at an intermediate station, and that the conductor would give a stop-over check for that purpose. At the time these representations were made, and in consequence of them, the plaintiff having informed the agent of his desire to stop over, purchased the ticket, paying the fare demanded for the whole distance. On the second day his ticket was refused by the conductor, upon the ground that it was indorsed "good for this day only," and, the plaintiff refusing to pay the fare demanded, was expelled from the cars. Held, in an action against the company, that such representations of the ticket agent were admissible in evidence, and that the conductor, having been informed thereof, was not authorized to expel the plaintiff without first offering to return the excess of fare paid, or to deduct it from the fare demanded, although the rules of the company prohibited passengers from stopping over upon such tickets. Burnham v. Grand Trunk Ry Co., 63 Me., 293. 1873.

Miscellaneous.

61. Stoppage of trains at station. A passenger, having a ticket to a certain destination, cannot demand to be taken there in order to alight, if the train, by the rules of the company, does not go to or stop at such station. It is the duty of the passenger to ascertain what train will stop at his destination. Logan v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R'y Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Mo.), 141, 1882; Beauchamp v. International and Great Northern R'y Co., 56 Tex., 239, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 307; Ohio and Mississippi R'y Co. v. Applewhite, 52 Ind., 540, 1876.

62. Tourist ticket; non-transferable. The respondent, who was traveling on the G. W. Railway in a train going to N., produced the "forward half" of a tourist return ticket from L. to N. and back. This ticket had been originally issued to another person and was stated on the back thereof to be not transferable. The original taker had used the ticket as far as H. on the way from L. to N., but then proceeded on a different route, and, consequently, not having given up the forward half of the ticket, sold it to the respondent, who was traveling with it between H. and N. Held, that the respondent was liable to be convicted under 8 and 9 Vict., c. 20, s. 103, for traveling without having previously paid his fare, with intent to avoid payment thereof. Langdon v. Howells, Law Reports, 4 Queen's Bench Division, 337. 1879.

63. Transfer. Where a non-transferable ticket contained a condition that "I, failing to comply with this agreement, either of the companies may refuse to accept this ticket," held, that this did not give the conductor the right to take it up, but merely to refuse to receive it. Post v. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co., 14 Neb., 110, 1883; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 845.

64. — A regulation of a railway company providing for the sale of tickets at a reduced rate upon condition that they be used only by the persons purchasing the same is reasonable and proper, and a third party cannot, by purchasing such ticket, acquire the right to travel on the same. A party holding such ticket, who refused to pay his fare and was expelled from the cars, cannot recover damages therefor. Ib.

65. — The measure of damages in such case would not exceed the value of a ticket of the same class between the points named. Ib.

66. Verbal contract. A verbal contract cannot be shown to vary the terms of a railway ticket. Melville v. Baltimore and Poto-mac R. R. Co., 2 Mackey (Dist. Col.), 68, 1882.

TOLLS.

1. Levy by market town on property carried by railway. The Brecon Markets Act, 1862 (25 and 26 Vict., c. clxxxvi), vested in the market company certain tolls which had been immemorially received by the corporation of Brecon for cattle, goods and carriages passing to, through or from the borough. A railway company, under the sanction of an act of parliament passed in the same session, acquired land (not being a highway) on which it constructed a railway and station within the borough of Brecon, whence passengers, goods and cattle were conveyed by other lines of railway to other places beyond the limits of the borough. The rights of the corporation and of the market company were expressly reserved by the railway act, but there was no provision either in that or in the railway act enabling them to levy tolls on the railway. Held, that the Brecon Market Company was not entitled to toll in respect of cattle, goods or carriages passing along the railway. Brecon Markets Co. v. Neath and Brecon R'y Co., Law Reports, 7 Common Pleas Cases, 555. 1872.

2. Sale of cars for tolls. By the 8 and 9 Vict., c. 20, s. 97, it is provided that if, on demand, any person fail to pay the tolls due in respect of any carriage, etc., it shall be lawful for the company to detain and sell the carriage, etc., of the party liable to such tolls, and out of the moneys arising from sale to retain the tolls. Held, that a demand of the sum actually due for tolls is a condition precedent to the right to sell under this

TRAMWAYS.

See STREET RAILWAYS.

1. Interference with by railways. By s. 58 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 and 9 Vict., c. 20), "if, in the exercise of the powers by the special act granted, it be found necessary to cross, cut through, raise, sink or use any part of any road, the company shall cause a sufficient road to be made instead of the road interfered with." A railway company, under the powers of its special act, and in execution of the works relating to a line of railway which it was empowered to make, adapted to the purposes of such line so much of a tram-road as was applicable thereto. In an action by the owners of collieries who were entitled to use the tram-road, for special damage, under s. 55 of Stat. 8 and 9 Vict., c. 20, held, that s. 53 referred to crossings and interferences with roads for temporary purposes, and not to acts done in the conversion of a road into the railway, and therefore the action was not maintainable. Tanner v. South Wales Ry Co., 83 Eng. Law & Equity, 140. 1856.

TREASURER.

1. Action against; account. An account will be ordered as of course where defendant admits he is an accounting party. But if the liability to account is denied (as here by former settlement), no order of reference or other issue can be had until the alleged bar is passed upon. Therefore, in an action on the bond of a railway treasurer, where the defendant's accounting character is admitted in the answer, but a settlement with the company pleaded in bar of an account, the court did not err in submitting an issue to the jury in relation to the settlement as a preliminary matter. Atlantic, Tennessee and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Morrison, 82 N. C., 141. 1890.

TRESPASS.

See CONTRACTORS; EMINENT DOMAIN; EJECTMENT; FENCES; FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER; HIGHWAYS; INJURIES TO DOMESTIC ANIMALS; WHEAT.

1. Action for rent. A land owner cannot sue a railway company for rent when he has never consented to the use of his land, and has warned the company not to use the land. Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon R. R. Co. v. Harlow, 87 Mich., 554. 1877.

2. Collision of train with trespassing animal; liability of owner. A railway company is entitled to the unobstructed use of its railway; and where its cars and engine are thrown off the track and damaged in consequence of a collision with an ox, which was upon the track through the negligence of its owner, the injury is the direct result of the owner's negligence, and he is liable therefor. Annapolis and Elkridge R. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 60 Md., 88, 1883; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 436.

3. Contractor and railway company. A railroad company, by whose direction a contractor for the construction of its road enters and builds the road upon land which it has acquired, subject to an existing lease, is liable, as a joint tort-feasor, with the contractor and his servants, for damages done by them in the prosecution of the work to the crops of the lessee. Ullman v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 67 Mo., 118. 1877.

4. Corporation. A corporation cannot be made responsible for a trespass committed by individuals before it had an existence. Berry v. San Francisco and North Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Cal., 435. 1875.

5. — Railroad corporations may commit trespass. Mobile and Montgomery R. R. Co. v. McKellar, 59 Ala., 458, 1877; Maund v. Monmouthshire Canal Co., 8 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 159, 1843.

6. Costs. In an action of trespass upon lands the complaint alleged title and possession in plaintiff, both of which allegations were specifically put in issue by the answer. Plaintiff claimed damages for injuries to the freehold by the deposit of earth and rubbish thereon, as well as for the entry. Plaintiff recovered less than $30. Held, that, as to entitle plaintiff to recover for the injury to the freehold, it was necessary to allege and prove his title, the question of title arose upon the pleadings; and that, consequently, a certificate that it arose on trial was unnecessary to entitle plaintiff to costs. Kelly v. New York and Manhattan Beach R. R. Co., 81 N. Y., 233. 1890.

7. Damages. In an action to recover damages for a trespass alleged to have been committed by destroying the plaintiff's fences, and by trampling and destroying the grain and herbage growing on his land, the plaintiff cannot recover for injury done to the grain by the cattle of a third person, for any period of time after the original entry and trespass. Berry v. San Francisco and North Pacific R. R. Co., 50 Cal., 435. 1875.

8. — Where a railway corporation constructs its road over the land of another, without condemnation or right, the measure of damages will be the amount of the injury directly resulting from the act complained of, where no malice or oppression is shown, or, in other words, the difference between the value of the land when the injury began, and such value as affected by it. Chicago and Iowa R. R. Co. v. Baker, 73 Ill., 316. 1874.

9. — For unlawful excavation, and removal of his soil, a party is entitled to recover not the cost of refilling, but the amount of the diminution of the value of the property injured by such excavation and removal. Karst v. St. Paul, Stillwater and Taylor's Falls R. R. Co., 22 Minn., 118. 1875.

10. — Where defendant, as employe of a railway company, pulled down the house of plaintiff, held, that the proper measure of damage was the amount by which the land was lessened in value by the defendant's wrongful act. Hosking v. Phillips, 8 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 163. 1848.

11. Ditches. A party who enters another's land and commits a trespass by digging a ditch does not thereby acquire a right to re-enter and fill up the ditch. He would be liable as a trespasser if he did so re-enter. Kansas Pacific Ry Co. v. Muhlman, 17 Kans., 224, 1876; 9 Amer. Ry Rep., 428.

12. Erection of fence; damages. The appellee took down a stone wall and erected a fence in front of the appellant's houses, which fence was a part of a line of fence which the appellee had erected around its tracks for the protection of the same from intrusion, to facilitate the management of its business and the safety of the trains moving upon its road. There was nothing to show that the appellee did not do this in good faith, and with an endeavor to keep the fence within its own lines and on its own land. In an action of trespass quare clausum fregit against said corporation, it was held that the appellee was not guilty of a wanton and malicious trespass on the appellant's close, and there was no evidence to justify vindictive damages. Sapp v. Northern Central Ry Co., 51 Md., 115. 1873.

13. Estoppel. When land is appropriated by a railway company in the construction of its road-bed, without recourse to the method pointed out for the condemnation of the same, the right of the owner to compensation is not waived by his standing by and permitting the company to construct its road over his land. Neither is his right to recover the land lost if the company refuses to make compensation. Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio R. R. Co. v. Pfeuffer, 56 Tex., 66, 1881; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 373. See, also, Rusch v. Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western Ry Co., 54 Wis., 136, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 609.

14. Evidence. In an action of trespass against a railway company for entering upon land and building its railway, evidence that the land owner had sold cross-ties, cut from the same land, to the railway company is inadmissible. Northeastern R. R. Co. v. Hawkins, 62 Ga., 164. 1873.

15. — In an action of wilful trespass against defendant for constructing and operating its railroad across a village lot of plaintiff, whereon was a house, in which she resided, testimony tending to show the effect upon the use of the house, and the discomfort and annoyance to the plaintiff by reason thereof, is competent, no question being raised as to the sufficiency of the averments in the complaint. Spencer v. St. Paul and Sioux City R. R. Co., 19 Amer. Ry Rep., 416; 22 Minn., 29, 1875; Wampach v. St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co., 23 Minn., 84, 1875.

Highway — Principal and Agent.

16. Highway. Where the locus in quo was a national road, the fee being in the state, the town having only the care and superintendence of it and the duty of keeping it in repair, there is no such possession as will enable the town to maintain this action. No such possessory right in a road exists in a corporation. St. Louis, Vandalia and Terre Haute R. R. Co. v. Town of Summit, 3 Bradwell (Ill.), 155. 1878.

17. Injunction; lease. When a railway company is in possession under a claim of right or title as against the plaintiff, and in no way connected with him in estate, a court of equity will not enjoin the company from making a lease or conveyance on the ground that it would be a cloud upon the plaintiff's title. Spofford v. Bangor and Bucksport R. R. Co., 66 Me., 51. 1876.

18. Injury to child. A lad about ten years of age was forcibly put on board of a freight train by its brakeman, and against his will was carried for a distance of five miles. He returned home on foot, running most of the way, and was taken sick and became permanently crippled in both legs. Held, that the action of the brakeman was a trespass, and if the conductor of the train was present, and directed or consented to the acts of the brakeman, they were joint trespassers, and if the sickness resulted directly from their acts, they were liable in an action of trespass. Drake v. Kiely, 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Pa.), 592. 1879.

19. Injury to mill site; homestead. Where a railway company, having no right of way, so constructs its road-bed across an unperfected homestead as to obstruct a mill race and destroy the use of the mill on it, the measure of damages is the difference between the value of the mill site and machinery before the obstruction and after it. Hot Springs R. R. Co. v. Tyler, 36 Ark., 205, 1880; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 145.

20. License. Where a railroad is located on land other than that granted, but with the knowledge of the owner, who makes no objection, but declares his intention to claim damages, the company cannot be held as trespasser or wrong-doer. Hosher v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 60 Mo., 329, 1875; 9 Amer. R'y Rep., 230.

21. — Where the owner of land has allowed the construction of a railway over it, he is chargeable with knowledge that the track is of such a permanent nature that it cannot well be removed or abandoned. Harlow v. Marquette, Houghton and Ontonagon R. R. Co., 41 Mich., 336. 1879.

22. — Where a land owner has allowed a railway company to construct and operate its road over the land with the understanding that the rights of parties as to damages should be adjusted thereafter, and the company takes statutory proceedings to ascertain the damages, the owner should present all his claims for settlement in these proceedings, and cannot split his demand and reserve part of it for future litigation. But if such proceedings are not resorted to, he would have a suitable remedy for the enforcement of his rights in some other way. Ib.

23. Mining coal; damages. In an action of trespass for taking coal from the plaintiff's mine, he may recover the value of the coal at the mouth of the pit, less the cost of carrying it there from the place where it was dug, allowing the defendant nothing for digging. Illinois and St. Louis R. R. and Coal Co. v. Ogle, 82 Ill., 627. 1876.

24. Municipal corporation. A city is liable for the unlawful acts of its authorities in tearing down a railway depot. Pontchartrain R. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 27 La. An., 162. 1875.

25. Ouster; re-entry. If a party in possession of real estate is wrongfully ousted by another, the latter cannot by such wrongful act acquire a possession which it will be a trespass in the former to disturb, provided the re-entry of the person so wrongfully ousted involves no breach of the peace. Illinois and St. Louis R. R. and Coal Co. v. Cobb, 94 Ill., 55. 1879.

26. Pleading. The pleadings in case of a trespass committed by a railway company in the construction of its track considered. Boeckler v. Mo. Pacific R'y Co., 10 Mo. App., 448, 1881; Isaacson v. Minneapolis and St. Louis R'y Co., 27 Minn., 463, 1881.

27. Principal and agent; res adjudicata. Although, in actions of trespass, a judgment against one defendant is no bar to an action against another, yet judgment and payment thereof would be, and the record would be admissible to prove the judgment. For similar reasons the record of acquittal of one defendant is admissible in an action against another, in connection with proof that the latter is sought to be charged for the same acts only by virtue of his relation, as principal, to the former. Where the real actor, none the less liable personally because acting for another, is not guilty, it necessarily follows that the party for whom he acted cannot be. The principal can be no more guilty by reason of the act of his agent than if he had committed the act in person. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R'y Co. v. Goldberg, 2 Bradwell (Ill.), 228. 1878.

28. Remedy. Ejectment will lie against a railway corporation by the owner, for land taken, where the land has not been condemned under proceedings instituted for that purpose, in the mode prescribed by the constitution and laws. Smith v. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co., 67 Ill., 191. 1878.

29. — Where a railway company enters upon land under color of a proceeding in the probate court to appropriate the same, without first making or securing compensation in money, and constructs thereon a railroad and commences to operate the same, after which the owner obtains a reversal of the proceeding and commences an action to recover possession of the land, the mere fact of delay, without proof of knowledge of or acquiescence in the acts of the company, will not estop the owner from maintaining such action. Bothe v. Dayton and Michigan R. R. Co., 37 Ohio St., 147. 1881.

30. — A railroad company which enters upon land and appropriates a right of way without proceedings to condemn, or contract with the owner, or rendering him compensation therefor, is a mere trespasser and acquires no right to hold the land. Hibbs v. Chicago and Southwestern R'y Co., 39 Ia., 340. 1874.

31. — That the owner of land permitted a railway company to enter upon it and construct its road does not give the company title to the right of way, to estop him to maintain an action of ejectment against it. Conger v. Burlington and South Western R'y Co., 41 Ia., 419. 1875.

32. — In subsequent condemnation proceedings by the railroad company to acquire the right of constructing the road over such land, it is not regularly proper for the commissioners or the jury, in case of appeal, to include in their assessment the damages which the land owners suffered prior to the filing of the commissioners' award. For all such damages the land owner has his remedy as for trespass. Leber v. Minneapolis and Northwestern R'y Co., 29 Minn., 256, 1882; Hartz v. St. Paul and Sioux City R. R. Co., 21 Minn., 358, 1875; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 430; Chicago and Iowa R. R. Co. v. Davis, 86 Ill., 20, 1877.

33. — Where one of two tenants in common deeded the right of way through their premises to a railroad company upon certain conditions, and the company entered but failed to comply with the conditions, the tenant granting the deed can maintain an action to recover damages for the breach of contract, and the other, the entry being without her consent, for the trespass. Rush v. Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern R'y Co., 57 Ia., 201, 1881; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 298.

34. — Where a railway company in building its road-bed, without taking the steps prescribed by law to condemn its right of way, unlawfully takes possession of land, and suit is brought by the land owner to recover damages for such trespass, the damages should include compensation for the injury inflicted and such punitive damages as are authorized by law, but not the value of the land so used or appropriated; and the jury trying such cause should be so instructed. Anderson, etc., R. R. Co. v. Kernodle, 54 Ind., 314. 1876.

35. — In such a suit no judgment that the court trying such cause is authorized to render will give such company a title to the land so appropriated. Ib.

36. — The commencement of the construction of its road by a railroad company upon the land of a private person without his consent, or without first having paid or secured to him compensation, is a trespass for which a right of action immediately accrues. Leber v. Minneapolis and Northwestern R'y Co., 29 Minn., 256, 1882; Rusch v. Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western R'y Co., 54 Wis., 186. 1882.

Removal of Improvements.

87. — The owner of land which has been unlawfully taken and occupied by a corporation authorized by law to appropriate land cannot maintain an action for the value of the land so taken and also damages accruing by reason of such appropriation, if the circumstances are such that he may recover the land itself. In such case the owner may recover compensation and damages, by special proceedings, under § 21 (69 Ohio L., 88, 95; Rev. Stat., §§ 6148-6450), or the land itself, as in other cases of unlawful entry. Atlantic and Great Western R. R. Co. v. Robbins, 85 Ohio St., 531. 1890.

88. — An action was brought in trespass to try title against a railway company, and for damages for destruction of fences and orchards, for fencing in twenty acres, and other items of damage, with a prayer in the alternative; for restoration of the premises, for damages and injunction; or that, if the railway company was entitled to have a right of way condemned, that it be set aside by metes and bounds. The plaintiff, it was shown, had conveyed by deed a right of way over the land to the company. Held, that the admission of evidence showing the depreciation of the value of the entire property by reason of the location and construction of the railway, connected with the fact that the greater part of the charge related to the condemnation of the right of way and measure of damages in such cases, all of which resulted in an inconsistent verdict, was such error as to require a reversal of the judgment. Houston and East Texas R'y Co. v. Adams, 53 Tex., 476. 1883.

89. — Where a railway company entered upon the land of C. and built its railway, and C. brought an action of trespass quare clausum fregit against the company, and recovered judgment, which was paid, and C. afterwards peaceably retook possession of the premises, after which the railway again entered and rebuilt its track, held, that C. might recover damages in a second suit. Illinois and St. Louis R. R. and Coal Co. v. Cobb, 82 Ill., 183. 1876.

40. — When damage is done to lands held by a corporation, the party by whose negligence such injury was caused cannot escape liability by showing that the corporation was not permitted by its charter to acquire title to the property, or that it acquired it for purposes unauthorized by law. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Green Bay and Minnesota R. R. Co., 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 331. 1882.

41. Removal of improvements. If a building be erected upon land without the assent and agreement of the owner of the land, it becomes at once a part of the realty, and is the property of the owner of the freehold. Hence, where a railroad company, having obtained a decree for the condemnation of a tract of land, without the knowledge of the owner, erected upon it a building of a permanent character for a depot, and afterward the decree was adjudged to be void, held, that the building had become a part of the realty, and could not be removed by the company; and it made no difference that it was set upon posts and could be taken away without injury to the ground. Hunt v. Missouri Pacific R'y Co., 76 Mo., 115. 1882.

42. — A railway company which has constructed its track upon a person's land, without filing a written location or presenting a plan thereof, or paying or tendering any damages for the land so taken, cannot enter upon the land for the purpose of removing the track laid upon the road-bed and structures placed upon the land; such property becomes a part of the realty; and the fact that the original entry and construction were made without objection by a mortgagor in possession cannot avail against the title acquired by the mortgagee by the subsequent foreclosure of his mortgage. Meriam v. Brown, 128 Mass., 891. 1880.

43. — The trespass consisted in constructing a railroad across a farm without the right to do so having been acquired by ascertaining and paying compensation to the owner. Held, that if the ties and rails increased the value of the farm, that should be considered in determining the amount of damages; but if the farm was in no way benefited or enhanced in value by the ties and rails being laid across it, no deduction from the damage done to the farm should be made on account of the value of the ties and rails. In other words, conceding that the ties and rails became the property of the land owner, their value could not be set off

44. Streets; abutting property. In an action against a railroad company for trespass in constructing and operating its railroad for six years upon a public street in front of plaintiff's lots, where the complaint does not allege the existence of any buildings on the lots, or injury to the use of the lots, or any special damage whatever, plaintiff cannot recover for loss of the use of the lots, loss of rent of shops, or loss of custom in business. Wampach v. St. Paul and Sioux City R. R. Co., 21 Minn., 334, 1875.

45. — It seems that in a complaint against a railroad company for trespass in laying its track in a public street, between the center thereof and plaintiff's lots, it is sufficient for plaintiff to allege his ownership of the lots, and the commission of the trespass thereon; and that the plaintiff's ownership of the fee of the street — the locus in quo — will be implied from the averment of his ownership of the adjacent lots. Spencer v. St. Paul and Sioux City R. R. Co., 21 Minn., 303, 1875; Wampach v. Same, ib., 361, 1875.

46. Tenant. A landlord cannot, ordinarily, maintain an action of trespass quare clausum fregit for an unlawful entry upon the premises demised during the continuance of the term. Wentworth v. Portsmouth and Dover R. R. Co., 55 N. H., 540, 1875.

47. — Although possession of land for the construction of a railway may have been obtained from a tenant by fraud, yet an injunction will not be granted, at the suit of the land owner, restraining the owners of the railway from using it when completed, or from interrupting the plaintiff's workmen in removing the railway. Deere v. Guest, 1 Mylne & Craig (Eng. Ch.), 516, 1886.

48. Title to land. Where a person claims to be the owner of a certain piece of land as against all the world, and is in possession thereof by a tenant to whom he has leased the same, such person may maintain an action against a mere wrong-doer for injuries done to the land, although such person has never had actual and personal possession of the land, and although his title to the land may be ever so defective. Such possession and such claim of ownership is prima facie evidence of ownership as against any person, and is conclusive evidence of ownership as against a mere wrong-doer. A mere wrong-doer cannot dispute the title of the person so in possession, and so claiming ownership. So held, where a railway company trespassed and dug ditches, causing an overflow of lands. Pacific R. R. Co. v. Walker, 12 Kans., 601, 1874.

49. — In making proof of title in an action of trespass to the realty, when the title is put in issue, if the plaintiff puts in evidence the deed only of his immediate grantor, and the grantor is not the United States, he should show further that he is in possession under the deed. McCormick v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 47 Ia., 345, 1877.

50. Timber. In an action for the conversion of timber against an innocent purchaser from a person who had previously converted the property to his own use and had afterward added to its value by his own labor, the measure of the damages is the value of the timber when first taken from the owner, whether the first taker was a wilful or an involuntary trespasser. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. Co. v. Hutchins, 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ohio), 219, 1881.

51. — Timber was cut from lands of B. by trespassers, who converted it into cord-wood and railroad ties, thus increasing its value three-fold. It was then sold to an innocent purchaser, who was sued by B. for the value of the wood and ties. Whatever might be the rule of damages against the trespassers, as against innocent purchasers B. cannot recover the value of the timber as enhanced by the labor of the wrong-doers, after it was severed from the realty. Railway Co. v. Hutchins, 32 Ohio St., 571, 1877.

52. — The owner of timber trees cut from his land by a trespasser cannot be divested of his title thereto, although the trespasser has converted them into railroad ties and sold them to a bona fide purchaser. Strubbee v. Cincinnati R'y Co., 78 Ky., 481, 1880.

53. — A railway company is not responsible for the acts of its employees in going beyond its right of way to cut telegraph poles, where such trespass is against the company's orders. Fairchild v. New Orleans and Northeastern R. R. Co., 60 Miss., 931. 1883.

Children — Expulsion from Train.

54. — Pleadings in an action for trespass in cutting timber examined. Atlantic and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Freeman, 61 Mo., 80. 1875.

55. — In a suit by the owner of land for damages for timber cut thereon by the license of the vendor, and for the vendor's use, the unrevoked parol license given by the vendor prior to the purchase by complainant is no defense. Paine v. Northern Pacific R. R. Co., 14 Federal Reporter, 407, 1882; 4 McCrary, 588.

56. Wilful trespass. Where a trespass has been wilfully committed, and persisted in after earnest remonstrance, with circumstances of aggravation, it is not error to instruct the jury that they are at liberty to give exemplary damages. Newman v. St. Louis and Iron Mountain R. R. Co., 2 Mo. App., 402. 1876.

57. — One who enters upon the land of another under a bona fide claim of right is guilty of no criminal offense; therefore, where an employe of a railroad company was ordered to fell trees upon land adjacent to its track, which had been conveyed by the owner for right of way, etc., held, not to be indictable for wilful trespass. State v. Crosset, 81 N. C., 579. 1879.

58. — Upon complaint made against T., before justices, under Stat. 3 and 4 Vict., c. 97, s. 16, for wilfully trespassing on the premises of a railway company, and refusing to quit them on request made, it appeared that T. had gone on to the premises for the purpose of repairing, under a contract to do so, a carriage which was there, by the permission of the company, and which belonged to a third party; that he had previously been prohibited by the company from entering; and that upon being requested by the company to quit, he refused to do so, insisting on his right to remain for the purpose of completing the repair, without which repair the carriage could not quit the yard. The magistrate having refused to convict, held, on appeal under Stat. 20 and 21 Vict., c. 43, that the justices were not bound to convict, inasmuch as it was competent to them, if they thought fit, to decide that T. was not a wilful trespasser. Jones v. Taylor, 1 Ellis & Ellis, 20; 102 E. C. L., 20. 1858.

TRESPASSERS.

1. Children. Where a boy, aged about seven years, was injured while attempting to climb up the ladder of a freight car while in motion along a public street in a city, and it appeared that the train was not being run at an unlawful rate of speed, it moving not faster than four miles an hour, that the train was properly manned, with every employe at his station, and that the train was under perfect control, and being run with the greatest care and caution, it was held that the company was not liable. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Stumps, 60 Ill., 409. 1873.

2. Evidence. When the evidence is not only undisputed, but the facts are clear and convincing, and admit of but one conclusion, it is the duty of the court to decide, as a matter of law, whether the ultimate fact involved therein, namely, the existence of negligence or contributory negligence, has or has not been sufficiently proven. So held, where a boy climbed upon a freight train and was injured through his own fault. Buckley v. New York and Harlem R. R. Co., 43 N. Y. Superior Ct., 187. 1878. See, also, Finney v. Northern Pacific R. R. Co., 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Dak.), 17. 1883.

3. Expulsion from train. Where a brakeman kicked a trespassing boy from the platform of the car, when the train was running about ten miles an hour, held, that the case was properly for the jury; the putting the boy off the car was in the scope of the brakeman's duty; the illegality of the manner of doing the act did not exonerate the company. Hoffman v. N. Y. Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 87 N. Y., 25, 1881; 46 N. Y. Superior Ct., 526, 1890; 44 N. Y. Superior Ct., 1, 1878. See, also, Rounds v. Delaware, Lackawanna, etc., R. R. Co., 5 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 475, 1874; 3 Hun (N. Y.), 329, 1874; affirmed, 64 N. Y., 126, 1876; Hoffman v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 4 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (N. Y.), 537, 1881; Pennsylvania Co.

v. Toomey, 91 Pa. St., 256, 1879; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 461.

4. — The company is liable for the wilful acts of an employe engaged in the expulsion of a trespasser. Carter v. Louisville, New Albany and Chicago R'y Co., 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ind.), 847. 1882.

5. Riding upon train; personal injury. A boy was permitted by a conductor to ride on the train to sell newspapers, in violation of the regulations of the company, and was killed by an accident. Held, that the boy was a mere trespasser, and the company was not liable. Duff v. Allegheny Valley R. R. Co., 91 Pa. St., 458, 1879; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 1.

TRIAL.

1. Practice. Matters in relation to trial of causes determined. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Wilson, 1 Wyoming, 807, 1875; Mayor of New York v. Broadway and Seventh Avenue R. R. Co., 54 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 323, 1878.

TROVER.

See BAILMENTS; CARRIAGE OF MERCHANDISE; LAT-ERAL RAILWAYS; MORTGAGE.

1. Assignment. An action of trover is not assignable. R. S., § 3462. Wallen v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R'y Co., 74 Mo., 521. 1881.

2. Conversion of money found on cars. Defendant H. found a sum of money in one of plaintiff's cars which he delivered to the conductor to be restored to the owner, if called for. The conductor delivered it to plaintiff's treasurer. Subsequently H. demanded the money, and which being refused he brought action therefor and recovered a verdict. After the verdict defendant M., the owner of the money, demanded it of plaintiff, whereupon an action was commenced to restrain proceedings upon the verdict. Held, that the refusal to deliver to H. was evidence tending to show a conversion, but was not an actual conversion, nor did it affect the title or claim of M.; that upon his appearance and demand of the money, all right of H. thereto was ended, and that plaintiff not having had an opportunity to interpose this defense, was entitled to the aid of equity to restrain the enforcement of the verdict; but that the question as to whether plaintiff or H. had the right to the custody of the money for the owner could not be raised in this action, as it was disposed of in the original action; and as it must be assumed that H. was right in bringing his action and proceeding to verdict, he was entitled to be allowed his taxable costs therein. New York and Harlem R. R. Co. v. Haas, 56 N. Y., 175, 1874; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 178.

8. Cord wood. Proper measure of damages for the taking of cord wood held to be the value of the wood, with six per cent. interest from time of taking. Charles v. St. Louis and Iron Mountain R. R. Co., 58 Mo., 458. 1874.

4. Delivery by mistake. The plaintiff, a railway company, delivered to the defendant, through mistake, three cars of oil, which the defendant converted to his own use. Held, that the defendant might show that he received the oil unwittingly, and that he had received from the plaintiff no more oil than he was entitled to receive, and that, if there was a mistake, it was the plaintiff's. Waring v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 76 Pa. St., 491. 1874.

5. Evidence. Defendant offered evidence that the staves were cut from land owned by the president of the corporation, in connection with evidence that the president had directed the taking of them. There was no evidence that he had not granted permission to plaintiffs to cut the staves, and no other evidence that they belonged to him. Held, that the offer was properly rejected. Allen v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R'y Co., 72 Mo., 386. 1880. See, also, Dunn v. St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern R'y Co., 70 Mo., 663. 1879.

6. Pleading. Pleadings in actions of trover examined. Gregory Point Marine R'y Co. v. Selleck, 43 Conn., 320, 1876; Macon and Western R. R. Co. v. Meador, 67 Ga., 672, 1881.

7. Railway ties. Where ties were taken and used by a railway subcontractor, and the road was in use before it was delivered to the company, the owner of the ties, after waiting until they had become realty, cannot bring trover against the corporation as for their conversion. Detroit and Bay City R. R. Co. v. Busch, 43 Mich., 571, 1830; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 171; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Mich.), 151, 1880.

TRUST.

See MORTGAGE.

1. Adverse possession. A trustee cannot claim adversely to those for whom he acquired and holds the property. Railroad Co. v. Durant, 93 U. S., 576. 1877.

2. Attachment. When a railway company deposits its funds with a trustee for the purpose of paying its coupons, such fund is not thereafter subject to attachment. Rogers Locomotive Works v. Kelly, 21 Hun (N. Y.), 899, 1879; 88 N. Y., 234, 1882.

3. Death of trustee. A trust to sell or improve lands; to invest and reinvest the proceeds; to collect rents and income; to pay taxes, assessments, commissions and other annual expenses and charges; to pay over the net income, and to divide the estate, vests a fee simple title in the designated trustees, not limited to the life-time of the donor's children, which trust descends to the heir at common law, the eldest son of the survivor of the trustees, and his contract to sell lands of the estate may be specifically enforced. Zabriskie v. Morris and Essex R. R. Co., 33 N. J. Eq., 22, 1880; Morris and Essex R. R. Co. v. Zabriskie, 34 ib., 282, 1881.

4. Deed. A conveyance in trust construed. Allegheny R. R. Co. v. Casey, 79 Pa. St., 84. 1875.

5. Corporation stock. Where railway stock is deposited with a trustee for the benefit of a party named, and the cestui que trust desires to sell the stock, but the donor of the trust refuses to consent, a court has no power to compel such consent. Vanderbilt, In re, 20 Hun (N. Y.), 520. 1880.

6. Deposit of bonds. Bonds deposited in trust for the benefit of certain creditors will be applied in accordance with the terms of the trust, although such deposit was not made with the knowledge of the creditors to be benefited thereby. Rogers Locomotive Works v. Kelley, 88 N. Y., 235, 1882; reversing Same v. Same, 19 Hun (N. Y.), 393, 1879.

7. Donations to officer for railway company. The acting president and active manager of a railroad company, by an oppressive exercise of his powers, procured donations of property to be made to him in trust for the railroad company. Held, that his action was illegal, and that it affected the company, and that the effect was that he held the property in trust for the donors, and not the company. Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. Durant, 3 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 343. 1874.

8. Expense of execution of trust. Where a large body of land is conveyed to trustees to secure the payment of the principal and interest of a great number of railway bonds, which have a long time to run before maturity, and the grantor, the railway company, in the trust deed reserves the right to sell the lands and pay the proceeds of the sales thereof to the trustee, after deducting expenses incurred in executing the trust, it may retain the proper amount for expenses in making the sales, and may also pay the taxes out of the proceeds thereof. Nickerson v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. Co., 17 Federal Reporter, 468; 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 455. 1881.

9. — One jointly interested with others in a common fund, and who, in good faith, maintains the necessary litigation to save it from waste and destruction, and secure its proper application, is entitled in equity to reimbursement of his costs as between solicitor and client, either out of the fund itself, or by proportional contribution from those who receive the benefit of the litigation. Trustees Internal Improvement Fund of Florida v. Greenough, 12 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (U. S. S. C.), 345. 1882.

10. — Where a large number of bonds issued by a corporation are secured by a trust fund, which is being wasted and misapplied by the trustees, or which they refuse or neglect to apply to the payment of the bonds, a holder of a portion of such bonds who, in good faith, files a bill to secure the due application of the fund, and succeeds in bringing it under the control of the court for the common benefit of the bondholders, is entitled to have his costs, counsel fees and necessary expenses of the litigation, that is to say, his costs as between solicitor and client, paid out of the fund before its distribution. Ib.

11. — Such a complainant, however, is not entitled to an allowance for his private expenses, such as traveling fares and hotel bills, nor for his own time or personal services. Ib.

12. Misapplication of funds; res adjudicata. A creditor's bill which sought to follow, as trust money, funds of a bank invested by its officers in a railroad company, was dismissed, on the ground, among others, that the identity of the property purchased with the money of the bank could not be ascertained. Held, that such decree was a bar to a new bill brought for the same purpose, and substantially the same as the first, except that it contained an averment which was not in the first bill, to the effect that the complainant had reduced to judgment his claim against the officers of the bank for the misappropriated funds. Case v. New Orleans and Carrollton R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 236. 1876.

13. Operation of railway by trustees; fences. Where a railroad has been taken possession of under a mortgage, by trustees for bondholders, and is being operated by them, and where, by the mortgage, power is given to them to make repairs and additions to the road, they may be held for a performance of the duties imposed by the statute in relation to fences. Jones v. Seligman, 81 N. Y., 190, 1890; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 236.

14. Right to purchase obligations of cestui que trust. There is no rule of law or equity that incapacitates a trustee from purchasing the obligations of his cestui que trust which have become largely vested in a third person. If they are valid obligations they may be sold and transferred to any one, and such transfer will pass a good title to them. Clark v. Flint and Pere Marquette R'y Co., 5 Hun (N. Y.), 556. 1875.

TUNNELS.

See EMINENT DOMAIN.

1. Diversion of water. A railway company having constructed a tunnel on its own land, thereby diverted the subterranean water from plaintiff's land contiguous to the tunnel. Held, that the company was not liable for the diversion of this underground water, the same being done in the exercise of the ownership of defendant's own land. Galgay v. Great Southern and Western R'y Co., 4 Irish Common Law, 456. 1854.

2. Excavation; child. The railway tunnel connecting the Union depot in St. Louis with the Illinois and St. Louis bridge was, at a point where it was uncovered, and within the line of a public street, left unguarded, exposing a perpendicular wall fourteen feet in depth below the surface of the street. The petitioner, a boy four years of age, strayed away from his home, about two blocks distant, under circumstances not disclosed by the testimony, fell into this excavation, and sustained a fracture of the thigh bone. It appeared that his parents were poor and unable to employ a servant to look after him; that he sustained no other injury except physical pain and suffering; that the tunnel was in custody of receivers of this court. Held, that the unguarded excavation was a nuisance, the continuing of which rendered the receivers liable to pay out of the fund in their charge damages for any injury of which it was the proximate cause; that the petitioner was in law incapable of negligence, and that the burden of showing contributory negligence on the part of the parents, such as, imputed to the petitioner, would bar a recovery, rested with the respondents. Morgan v. Illinois and St. Louis Bridge Co., 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 96. 1878.

3. Streets. A railroad company constructing its road in a tunnel or archway under a public street does not impair its right to the exclusive use of the ground over the tunnel. Junction R. R. Co. v. Boyd, 8 Philadelphia, 224. 1870.

TURNPIKES.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; STREET RAILWAYS.

1. Crossings. Where a railway and turnpike are constructed at the same time, but the railway company's chartered rights are prior in time, it is the duty of the turnpike company to construct the necessary railings or banisters, and for an injury resulting from this neglect the turnpike company alone, not the railway company, is liable. Zucarello v. Nashville and Chattanooga R. R. Co., 8 Baxter (Tenn.), 364, 1874; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 188.

2. — In trespass for disturbing the bed of a turnpike road, by building a railroad thereon, the measure of damages is the damage actually sustained by reason of the acts of the defendant, not the entire value of the land composing the bed of the road. Stockton, etc., Gravel Road Co. v. Stockton and Copperopolis R. R. Co., 53 Cal., 11, 1878.

3. Location of railway. The charter of a railway company provided that, if the line should intersect any highway, the company should restore it to its former usefulness; and that the railway should be so located within the town of H. that in its construction and use it should not interfere with a certain turnpike road so as to obstruct, impede or endanger public travel. The location of the road was to be approved by the railway commissioners, and a special committee appointed by the superior court was to determine whether the company had complied with this requirement of its charter. The road was located for two miles in the town of H., close beside the turnpike, the traveled path of which was in some places changed to make room for the road. The commissioners approved the location, and the committee reported that the company had complied with the requirements of its charter. Thirty years afterwards, when the turnpike had become a highway, the increase of travel upon the highway, and of the number and speed of the trains on the railway, had rendered the proximity of the track to the highway a much greater injury to the public than it was at first, and the attorney for the state applied for a mandamus to compel the company to change the location of its road and to restore the highway to its former usefulness. Held, that the provisions of the charter were not intended to impose upon the company the duty of removing all danger incident to the operation of the railway. That no further legal duty was imposed upon the company by reason of the increased danger from the increase of travel on the highway and of the number and speed of the trains. State v. New Haven and Northampton Co., 45 Conn., 331, 1877.

4. — right of owner of fee; laying railway on turnpike. When a turnpike company, having merely the right of way along the line of its road, laid down a railway track, it is liable for damages to the owner of the land. Even if the claimant has given a release of damages to the turnpike company, it would still be liable, on changing a road that could be used by the whole neighborhood into one merely beneficial to the company. The claimant should be allowed for the future damages to his property that would result from the ordinary use of the railroad. Mumma v. Harrisburg R. R. Co., 1 Pearson (Pa.), 24, 1851.

TURN-TABLE.

1. Injury to children. Facts stated which were held sufficient to render a railway company liable in damages for injuries inflicted upon a child while it was playing on a railway turn-table. Evansich v. G., C. and S. F. R'y Co., 57 Tex., 123, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 182.

2. — To hold a railroad company liable for the consequences of its negligence in leaving a turn-table unfastened and unguarded, it is not necessary to show that the company was the owner of the turn-table. It is sufficient if it appears that it was in the charge or under the control of the company. Nagel v. Missouri Pacific R'y Co., 75 Mo., 658, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 702.

3. — The question of negligence in leaving a turn-table exposed to use of children is one for the jury. A. and N. R. R. Co. v. Bailey, 11 Neb., 332, 1881; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 742; Kansas Central R'y Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 22 Kans., 686, 1879.

4. — Where a turn-table was situated in an exposed place near a populous city, where boys often play, and yet was left without locks or fastenings, and without being watched or guarded or even fenced in, and a boy hunting his father's cow went to the turn-table with other boys, and rode and played upon it, and was injured by means

thereof, and the jury found that the railway company leaving the turn-table in that condition was guilty of negligence, and was liable for the injuries to the boy, held, that the verdict of the jury is conclusive. And where the jury also find in such case that the boy is not guilty of contributory negligence, which finding has been approved by the trial court, held, that under the circumstances of this case the verdict cannot be disturbed by the supreme court. Kansas Central R'y Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 22 Kans., 686. 1879. See, also, Kansas Central R'y Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 18 Kans., 84. 1877.

5. — Where a turn-table, not covered with plank or walled except where the rails of the switch intersected, was constructed, not near to any public street or place where the public were in the habit of passing, but in an isolated place, and a boy about nine years old, while he and others were turning and riding upon it, was seriously hurt, it also appearing it was latched, but not locked, it was held, in an action by the boy to recover for the injury, that, in view of the isolated position of the table, the railway company was not guilty of such negligence as to render it liable. St. Louis, Vandalia and Terre Haute R. R. Co. v. Bell, 81 Ill., 76. 1876.

6. — Persons operating a turn-table in a public street are bound to such vigilance as may be reasonably necessary to prevent collisions. Schureman v. Mo. R'y Co., 7 Mo. App., 570. 1879.

7. — It is negligence on the part of a railroad company to omit to secure its turn-tables so that children cannot revolve them. If a child is injured in consequence of such an omission, the company will be liable, and the fact that the turn-table was being revolved by other children at the time will make no difference. Nagel v. Missouri Pacific R'y Co., 75 Mo., 653, 1882; 10 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 702. See, also, Keefe v. Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 21 Minn., 207, 1875; 19 Amer. R'y Rep., 231.

8. — The fact that the turn-table of a railway company, on which a child of tender years was injured, through the negligence of the company's agents, was located on the premises of the company, cannot affect the right of the child to recover for the damage inflicted. Evansich v. G., C. and S. F. R'y

Co., 57 Tex., 126, 1882; 6 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 182.

9. — An instruction to the jury to find for plaintiffs if they "believe from the evidence that plaintiffs negligently permitted their son to wander from his home and go upon the turn-table of defendant, and that the son was killed by said turn-table, and that he was so young and inexperienced as not to possess sufficient judgment to warn him of the danger of the place or character of the machinery, and that he was killed by negligence and carelessness of defendant in not properly guarding and protecting said turn-table and keeping children from playing on the same," was held to be clearly erroneous; but it was also held, that, because of said instruction, the court would not reverse the judgment where it appeared that there was no evidence whatever that plaintiffs ever assented to, or approved of, their child going on the turn-table; but on the contrary, they prohibited his so doing. Koons v. St. Louis and Iron Mountain R. R. Co., 65 Mo., 592, 1877.

10. — The custom of other railroads, as to keeping their turn-tables locked, is immaterial upon the issue whether or not the defendant railroad was guilty of negligence in not doing so. Ib.

11. — The opinions of witnesses who are not experts, as to whether or not a turn-table is a dangerous machine, and as to whether or not it was gross carelessness to leave it unfastened or uncovered, are not competent evidence. Ib.

ULTRA VIRES.

See HIGHWAY.

1. Aid to state fair. Corporations possess the powers expressly conferred by law, and such implied powers as are necessary to enable them to exercise the powers expressly granted, and no others; yet, although there may be a defect of power in a corporation to make a contract, if a contract made by it is not in violation of the charter of the corporation, or of any statute prohibiting it, and the corporation has by its promise induced a party, relying upon such promise and in execution of the contract, to expend money and perform his part of the contract, the corporation is liable on the contract. A railway company may be held liable upon a subscription made to secure the location of a state fair. State Board of Agriculture v. Citizens' Street R'y Co., 47 Ind., 407. 1874.

2. Bills of exchange; acceptance. It is not competent for a company incorporated in the usual way for the formation and working of a railway, to draw, accept or indorse bills of exchange; and the question is properly raised by a plea denying the acceptance, though the acceptance was given by order of the directors and under the common seal of the company. Bateman v. Mid-Wales R'y Co., Law Reports, 1 Common Pleas Cases, 499. 1866.

3. Contract to borrow money. Where a corporation is created for certain purposes, with power to sue and be sued, and to borrow money for the completion of those purposes, and to secure the repayment of such money by an instrument which on its face imports a covenant for repayment, if money be so borrowed and so secured, and not duly repaid, an action may be maintained against the corporation on breach of the covenant, although there are no specific statutory provisions enabling it to bind itself by such a covenant. Eastern Union R'y Co. v. Hart, 14 Eng. Law & Equity, 535; 17 Jurist, 89; 22 Law Jour. (N. S., Exch.), 20; 8 Exch., 116; 8 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon, 116. 1852.

4. Canal company; contract. It is not ultra vires for a canal company, having the right to draw water from a public river for its chartered purposes, to agree to discharge its waste water at a certain point. Armstrong v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 38 N. J. Law, 1, 1875; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 1.

5. Cartage. A railway company has the right, incidental to its business, to engage in the cartage of merchandise to and from its depots. Attorney-General v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., 16 Decisions des Tribunaux (Lower Canada), 91. 1865.

6. Contract. Where a corporation has entered into a contract which has been fully performed on one part, and nothing remains but for it to pay the consideration money, it will not be allowed to set up that the contract was ultra vires. Oil Creek and Alle- gheny River R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Transportation Co., 88 Pa. St., 160, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 322. See, also, Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co. v. Union Pacific R'y Co., 1 Federal Reporter, 745; 1 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 541. 1880.

7. — The managing body of a railway company has no power to enter into a contract fixing and regulating the future traffic which may be carried upon a line of railway which the company may thereafter be empowered to construct, so as to give to another railway company an interest in such traffic and profits. The court will not by implication import conditions, not expressed, into an agreement, unless there is something in the agreement which shows that the parties must have intended such conditions. Midland R'y Co. v. London and North-western R'y Co., Law Reports, 2 Equity Cases, 524. 1866.

8. — A contract made with a town for right of way through its streets, conditioned that the railway company should extend its road a certain distance beyond the town, was held not to be ultra vires. Indianola v. Gulf, Western Texas and Pacific R'y Co., 56 Tex., 594. 1882.

9. — A contract of a New York corporation, giving the control of its road to a foreign connecting company, is authorized by the statute and is not void as against public policy. Ogdensburg and Champlain R. R. Co. v. Vt. and Canada R. R. Co., 16 Abbott's Practice, N. S. (N. Y.), 249. 1874.

10. Diversion of corporate funds. A railway company incorporated by act of parliament cannot, even with the assent of all its shareholders, legally enter into a contract involving the application of any portion of its funds to purposes foreign from those for which it was incorporated. East Anglian R'y Co. v. Eastern Counties R'y Co., 11 Common Bench, 775; 73 E. C. L., 775. 1851.

11. Docks. If the directors of a railway company become, for the purposes of the company, lessees of land, with a privilege to use docks, and agree to pay rent and royalties to the owner of the docks, and enter into other conditions which, by a state of circumstances subsequently created, appear to be unreasonable and impolitic, such stipulations and conditions cannot, on that account, be treated as ultra vires of the directors. Taff Vale Ry Co. v. Macnabb, Law Reports, 6 English & Irish Appeal Cases, 169; 6 Eng. (Moak), 1. 1878.

12. Estoppel. Although negotiable securities issued by a corporation without authority of law, or in violation of a statute, are inoperative and void even in the hands of innocent holders, yet if the company in such case knowingly permits the other contracting party, without objection, to go on and perform the contract on his part, and thereby obtains and appropriates to its own use money, property or labor in furtherance of some legitimate corporate purpose, it will be estopped from denying its liability on such contract. Peoria and Springfield R. R. Co. v. Thompson, 108 Ill., 187, 1882; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 101.

13. Furnishing means to aid another company. An agreement by a railway company to contribute towards the parliamentary deposit required for bills promoted by another company is ultra vires. So also is an agreement to take shares in future extensions of another company. So also an agreement to make traffic regulations applicable to future extension. Maunsell v. Midland Great Western Ry Co., 1 Hemming & Miller (Eng. Ch.), 130. 1863.

14. Guaranty of bonds. A railway company has power, upon a sufficient consideration, to guaranty the payment of the bonds of another railroad corporation. Low v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 53 Cal., 53, 1877; 9 Amer. Ry Rep., 366.

15. Harbors. A railway company held not bound by a contract for improving a harbor. Caledonian, etc., Ry Co. v. Helensburgh Harbor Trustees, 39 Eng. Law & Equity, 28. 1856.

16. Illegal contracts. The promoters of a railway company contracted with a land owner, being a peer of parliament, to pay him £20,000 personally, for his countenance and support in obtaining its act, such sum to be independent of the ordinary payment for land, severance, and other usual compensation. After the passing of the act the directors of the company, when formed, ratified the contract, but having doubts whether, under the Lands Clauses Act, the land owner was entitled to the money personally, they covenanted by deed to pay interest upon the amount, which was to be retained by the company or paid into court. A separate agreement stipulated for the quantity of land to be taken for the railway, and the amount to be paid by the company. Held, that the original contract, and the contract by the directors after the formation of the company to pay a sum of money for countenance and support previously given in procuring the act, were ultra vires of the company, and could not be enforced against the company as payment of expenses of obtaining the act, under the sixty-fifth section of the Companies Clauses Act, or otherwise. Earl of Shrewsbury v. North Staffordshire Ry Co., Law Reports, 1 Equity Cases, 598. 1863.

17. Irredeemable bonds. Under an authority to borrow money a railroad company has no right to raise money by the issue of irredeemable bonds, entitling the holder merely to a share of the earnings after the payment of certain dividends to stockholders. Taylor v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 7 Federal Reporter, 396. 1881.

18. Lands. Where land is donated to a railway company, and the title is fraudulently taken by the officers of the company to themselves, the company cannot maintain a suit to acquire the title, if, by its own charter, it is forbidden to take and hold the lands. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Green Bay and Minnesota R. R. Co., 11 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 334. 1882.

19. — Where an act creating a railway company; or giving new powers to an existing company, authorizes the purchase of lands for extraordinary purposes, a person who agrees to sell his land to the company is not bound to see that it is strictly required for such purposes; if he does not know of any intention to misapply the funds of the company, but acts bona fide in the matter, he may enforce performance of the contract. Eastern Counties Ry Co. v. Hawkes, 35 Eng. Law & Equity 8. 1855.

20. — An agreement by a railway board of directors to take land and pay for it in three months from the passage of the incorporation act is valid, and its stipulations enforceable after the passage of the act. Taylor v. Chichester and Midhurst Ry Co., Law Reports, 4 English & Irish Appeal Cases, 628. 1870.

Lease—Rights of Stockholders.

21. — Corporations acquiring title to lands along the line of a railroad may recover damages for injuries to such lands arising from the negligence of the receiver of such road and his agents engaged in operating the line, notwithstanding they acquired such title for purposes foreign to the object of their creation. Such fact is no defense to an action for damages for injury to their lands. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. v. Green Bay and Minnesota R. R. Co., 12 Federal Reporter, 773. 1892.

22. Lease. The acceptance of rent by a corporation under a lease which it had no power to make would not validate the lease. Ogdensburg and Lake Champlain R. R. Co. v. Vt. and Canada R. R. Co., 6 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 488; 4 Hun (N. Y.), 712, 1875; 63 N. Y., 176, 1875.

23. Loaning money. A railway company has power to loan money to aid in a work auxiliary to its main business; so held where money was loaned to aid in building an elevated railway. Cheever v. Gilbert Elevated R'y Co., 43 N. Y. Superior Ct., 478. 1878.

24. Musical festival; guaranty of expenses. It is beyond the powers of a railway company chartered by the legislature, or of a corporation organized under the St. of 1870, ch. 224, for the manufacture and sale of musical instruments, to guaranty the payment of expenses of a musical festival; and no action can be maintained against such corporations upon such a guaranty, although it was made with the reasonable belief that the holding of the festival would be of great pecuniary benefit to the guarantors by increasing their proper business, and the festival has been held and expenses incurred in reliance upon the guaranty. Davis v. Old Colony R. R. Co., 131 Mass., 258, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 548.

25. Issuance of debentures. Certain debentures held to have been issued without authority. Fountaine v. Carmarthen R'y Co., Law Reports, 5 Equity Cases, 316. 1868.

26. Notice of legal powers. A company is presumed to know the extent of the legal powers of another company with whom it is dealing, and the company is a proper party defendant to a suit in respect of such dealings, although the bill seeks to make the directors personally liable. Salomons v. Laing, 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 303. 1830.

27. Pipe lines. The Oil Creek and Allegheny River R. R. Co. agreed to pay the Pennsylvania Transportation Co., an oil-pipe line, a certain sum per barrel on all oil transported by it, in consideration that the pipeline would deliver all the oil under its control to the railway company for transportation; the pipe-line performed its part of the agreement and brought suit to recover the price agreed on. Held, that the railway company could not set up as a defense that the contract was ultra vires. Oil Creek and Allegheny River R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Transportation Co., 83 Pa. St., 160, 1876; 16 Amer. R'y Rep., 322.

28. Pledge of corporate bonds. Where the bonds of a corporation were issued on the understanding that they were to be sold for cash, but were in fact pledged to a creditor as collateral security for corporate notes held by him, the objection that this disposition of them is unlawful is one that is open only to the corporation or its stockholders, unless it also affected some existing right; it cannot be raised by one who holds the property of the company under a voluntary conveyance or by a purchaser, at judicial sale, of the equity of redemption. Beecher v. Marquette and Pacific Rolling Mill Co., 45 Mich., 103. 1891.

29. Purchase of stock in another corporation. The funds of a company cannot legally be devoted to the purchase of stock in another railway company (Stat. 8 Vict., c. 17). Balfour v. Edinburgh and Northern R'y Co., 10 Scotch Session Cases (2d series), 1240, 1848; Elkins v. Camden and Atlantic R. R. Co., 36 N. J. Eq., 5, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 590; Milbank v. N. Y., Lake Erie and Western R. R. Co., 64 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 20, 1882.

30. Rights of stockholders. A stockholder of a corporation will not be allowed, after a reasonable time, to disturb and rescind a contract made by his corporation, after the same has been fully executed, on the ground that it is ultra vires, and in excess of the corporate powers granted by the charter of the corporation. Taylor v. South and North Alabama R. R. Co., 13 Federal Reporter, 152. 1882.

81. Rolling stock. A contract by one corporation to supply rolling stock for the use of another, held, not ultra vires. Attorney-General v. Great Eastern R'y Co., Law Reports, 5 Appeal Cases, 473, 1880; 38 Eng. (Moak), 768. See Same v. Same, Law Reports, 11 Chancery Division, 449; 37 Eng. (Moak), 672. 1879.

82. Running arrangements. An agreement whereby one railway company grants running powers over its line to another company in consideration of the guaranty of dividends upon certain preferred stock is not ultra vires. South Yorkshire R'y Co. v. Great Northern R'y Co., 9 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 55, 1853; Great Northern R'y Co. v. South Yorkshire R'y Co., 9 Welsby, Hurlstone & Gordon (Exchequer), 642, 1854; 25 Eng. Law & Equity, 482.

83. Sale of railway. A railway company having the right of constructing a particular line of road, with general power to purchase all kinds of property of whatever nature or kind, may purchase from another company a road constructed upon that line, if the latter company had power to sell and dispose of the same. As a general rule, a corporation cannot transfer its franchises, nor a railroad company its road, without legislative authority. Branch v. Jesup, 106 U. S., 468, 1882; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 558.

84. Steamboats and ships. The charter of the Green Bay and Minnesota R. R. Co. construed to empower it to contract with a steamboat line to run in connection with its railway, and to guaranty certain gross earnings to the steamboats. Green Bay and Minnesota R. R. Co. v. Union Steamboat Co., 107 U. S., 98. 1882.

85. — A company established for one purpose cannot, against the will of any dissentient minority (however small), undertake a business foreign to its original object. Thus a railway company cannot become a steamboat company. Lyde v. Eastern Bengal R'y Co., 36 Beavan (Eng. Ch.), 10. 1866. See, also, Colman v. Eastern Counties R'y Co., 10 ib., 1. 1846.

86. — A railway company had authority to keep steam vessels for the purpose of a ferry. Held, that such vessels, when otherwise unemployed, might be used by the company for excursion trips to the sea; though a company incorporated for the purpose of making a railroad cannot, with the dissent of one of the shareholders, carry on a trade distinct from the purposes for which it was incorporated. Forrest v. Manchester, etc., R'y Co., 30 Beavan (Eng. Ch.), 40. 1861.

87. — In an action against a corporation to recover damages occasioned by the negligence of its employes, it is no defense to show that the act from which the injury resulted was not authorized by the charter, if the corporation in any clear and explicit manner recognized the act as done in its business, as by employing agents to superintend it, or receiving the profits arising from it. So held where a railway company operated a line of steamers upon which a passenger was injured. Hutchinson v. Western and Atlantic R. R. Co., 6 Heiskell (Tenn.), 634, 1871; 12 Amer. R'y Rep., 16.

88. Street railways. A contract by which a street railway company transfers the entire control of the road, with all its franchises, receiving in return only a fixed rent, paid in the form of a dividend to its stockholders, is ultra vires and void. Middlesex R. R. Co. v. Boston and Chelsea R. R. Co., 115 Mass., 847, 1874; 7 Amer. R'y Rep., 469.

89. Superfluous land. Where a railway station is erected upon arches, the land under the arches is not "superfluous land" within the meaning of the Lands Clauses Act of 1845. Therefore such land cannot be sold as superfluous. Mulliner v. Midland R'y Co., Law Reports, 11 Chancery Division, 611, 1879; 27 Eng. (Moak), 818.

40. Who may object to illegal act. A bondholder of one railway company is not the proper person to object to the right of another company to own shares of the stock of the former. If it exceeded its corporate power in purchasing, they belong to the vendor; the state incorporating is the party offended if a violation of the charter is committed. Matthews v. Murchison, 15 Federal Reporter, 691. 1883.

41. Wharves. A railway communicated with a river, upon the banks of which the company was empowered to erect wharves, etc., and take tolls. The navigation of the river having become deteriorated, the company was about to support a bill for improving it. An injunction was granted to restrain the application of the funds of the company toward that object. Companies having funds for objects which are distinctly defined by act of parliament cannot be allowed to apply them to any other purpose whatever, however advantageous or profitable that purpose may appear to be to the company, or to the individual members of the company. Munt v. Shrewsbury and Chester R'y Co., 13 Beavan (Eng. Ch.), 1. 1850.

Miscellaneous.

UNDERGROUND RAILROAD.

1. Statute. To authorize a general term of the supreme court, acting under ch. 582 of the Laws of 1890, to appoint commissioners to determine whether and in what manner an underground railroad shall be constructed, it must be shown affirmatively, by a statement of the facts, that application for the consent of the owners of the property bounded on the line of the proposed railroad has been made and refused, and that the persons to whom the same was made were in fact the owners of at least one-half in value of such property. Broadway Underground R'y Co., In re, 23 Hun (N. Y.), 698. 1881.

UNION DEPOTS.

1. Controversy between companies. The court may interfere between two railway companies entitled to the joint use of a station by prescribing regulations for its management; but such interference ought not to take place without grave occasion. The court may also direct a partition of the station, and appoint a receiver, if necessary. But where provisions exist for the settlement of disputes on the above subjects by arbitration, the court will withhold its intervention until the remedy thus provided has been resorted to. Shrewsbury and Birmingham R'y Co. v. Stour Valley R'y Co., 21 Eng. Law & Equity, 628; 2 De Gex, Macnaghten & Gordon, 866. 1853.

2. Change of line. Under the statute of 1871, ch. 343, providing for the establishment of a union passenger station in the city of Worcester for five railway companies whose roads lead into the city, and for making corresponding changes in their several tracks and locations, and for regulating the use thereof and the compensation therefor in the transportation both of passengers and of freight, and providing in § 10 that the Boston, Barre and Gardner R. R. Co., one of the said corporations, "may extend its railroad to said union passenger station, and for that purpose may locate, construct and maintain its railroad within the location of any other railroad corporation in said city, at such places and upon such terms as the parties agree, or, in case of disagreement, as the board of railroad commissioners determines," the commissioners have no power to authorize the Boston, Barre and Gardner R. R. Co. to take as well as to use lands within the location of another railway in the city, and it is their duty, upon a petition to them by the company whose lands they authorize the above named corporation to use, to fix the compensation to be paid by the latter corporation to the former. Worcester and Nashua R. R. Co. v. R. R. Commissioners, 118 Mass., 561. 1875.

3. Ladies' waiting room. Where several railway companies have provided in their depot building, in a large city, separate waiting rooms for ladies and gentlemen, a regulation that no gentleman without a lady shall be allowed to enter and remain in the ladies' room is not only reasonable, but absolutely necessary to enable the companies to discharge a duty they owe the public, of protecting females, while at the depot, from violence and insult. Toledo, Wabash and Western R'y Co. v. Williams, 77 Ill., 354. 1875.

4. St. Louis. The statute in relation to the St. Louis Union Depot construed. Union Depot Co. v. City of St. Louis, 76 Mo., 393, 1882; State ex rel. v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 3 Mo. App., 180, 1876.

UNITED STATES PROPERTY.

1. Construction of railway. Under acts of congress of March 3, 1819, and April 28, 1828, the secretary of war had authority to Railway Bonds — Evidence — Sale of Rails.

grant the right to build a railway over the property of the United States at Harper's Ferry. United States v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 1 Hughes (U. S. C. C.), 188. 1875.

 USURY.

1. Railway bonds. Neither a natural person nor a corporation can legally sell its bonds, bearing the highest legal rate of interest, at a discount, for the purpose of borrowing money. Such a sale is in effect a loan and is usurious. Comm'rs of Craven County v. Atlantic and North Carolina R. R. Co., 77 N. C., 289. 1877.

2. Statute. The usury law of Georgia construed. Caswell v. Central R. R. and Banking Co., 50 Ga., 70. 1878.

 VENDOR'S LIEN.

1. Evidence. The evidence held insufficient to sustain a vendor's lien upon a railway. Cross v. Burlington and South Western R. R. Co., 51 Ia., 683. 1879.

2. Injunction. The court will not, for the purpose of enforcing the lien of an unpaid vendor against a railway company for his purchase and compensation money, interest and costs, restrain the company from running trains or engines over the land until the sale (directed by the order) of the land agreed to be taken. Lycett v. Stafford and Uttoxeter R'y Co., Law Reports, 13 Equity Cases, 261. 1872.

3. Purchase of railway. Certain parties purchased a railroad and received a deed therefor, but left a part of the purchase price unpaid, and then procured an act of the legislature, by which they, as purchasers and owners, were incorporated. Held, that the company so formed took the railroad subject to the vendor's lien for the unpaid purchase money. North Carolina R. R. Co. v. Drew, 3 Woods (U. S. S. C.), 691. 1879.

4. Railroad ties. A written contract for the sale of land stipulated that the vendee should cut the timber growing upon it into railway ties, upon which the vendor should have a lien to the extent of the purchase price of the land. The vendee sold to a railroad company, whose agent received and paid for them with full notice of plaintiff's lien. Held, that the company was bound by its agent, and bought the ties subject to the rights of the notice to lien-holder. Slater v. Burlington and Mo. River R. R. Co., 88 Ia., 261. 1874.

5. Right of way. A vendor of land to a railway company which has entered and used it for the purpose of its railway is entitled to the same lien on the land for the unpaid purchase money, and the same remedies for enforcing it, as an ordinary vendor. Wing v. Tottenham and Hampstead Junction R'y Co., Law Reports, 8 Chancery Appeal Cases, 740, 1868; Galt v. Erie and Niagara R'y Co., 15 Grant Ch. (Upper Canada), 637. 1869. See, also, Slater v. Canada Central R'y Co., 25 ib., 363. 1878.

6. — Where a decree had been obtained by a vendor against a railway company for specific performance of a contract for sale, in which inquiries were directed to ascertain the amount due for damages and costs, and the amount, when found due, together with the purchase money, was ordered to be paid, but was not declared to be a charge on the land, held, that the vendor was not entitled, under the liberty to apply, to enforce by petition a lien on the land for the sums due, especially as there were incumbrancers, not parties to the suit, whose rights would be affected by such lien. Attorney-General v. Sittingbourne and Sheerness R'y Co., Law Reports, 1 Equity Cases, 636. 1866.

7. Sale of rails. A contractor agreed with a railway company to construct its line, taking stock in payment, and bargained with an importer that the importer should furnish him the rails upon credit upon a deposit, pro rata as they were delivered, of the stock as collateral security, it being agreed by all parties that the rails were to be delivered directly to the company, which would forward the contractor's stock directly to the importer. The importer bonded a cargo of rails, taking the warehouse receipt in his own name, and forwarding to the contractor a bill of parcels, which the contractor assigned to the company. The corporation and the contractor having become insolvent, the collateral security was not furnished, and, the rails not being paid for, the importer refused to transfer the warehouse receipt. Upon a bill in equity by the company against the importer, to compel the delivery of the rails, held, that the corporation had an interest in the agreement between the contractor and the importer, which equity would enforce; but that the importer had a lien upon the rails for the unpaid purchase money, whether the title in them had or had not passed to the contractor; and that the company was entitled to the rails upon payment of what was due the importer. Ware River R. R. Co. v. Vibbard, 114 Mass., 447. 1874.

8. Specific performance. Bill by unpaid vendors against two railway companies — the purchasers and the lessees — in possession of the land for specific performance of the contract, for payment of the purchase money, for an injunction against both companies, for a declaration of lien, and that it might be enforced by a sale, and that a receiver might be appointed of the rents and profits of the purchaser's estate. The court held that the lessees were properly made parties, declared a lien as against both companies and gave leave, in case the money should not be paid, to apply for an injunction and for the appointment of a receiver to enforce the lien. Bishop of Winchester v. Mid-hants Ry Co., Law Reports, 5 Equity Cases, 17. 1867.

9. Subrogation. A person who pays a debt of a railroad company, incurred under contracts of purchase for rolling stock, which, if not paid, would entail serious loss and embarrassment to the company, under agreement with the company for security for repayment by subrogation to the rights of the vendors under the contract, is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the vendors to the amount of his advances. Coe v. New Jersey Midland Ry Co., 27 N. J. Eq., 110. 1876.

VENDOR AND VENDEE.

See CARRIAGE OF MERCHANDISE.

1. Damages; penalty. Where a railway company, having constructed its road-bed through a city lot, entered into a written contract with the owner, thereby to acquire a right of way over the lot, in consideration of a given amount in money, and of an agreement on its part that it would do certain work on specified streets leading to or around the lot, where they were intersected by the railroad, within a time prescribed by the contract,—a stipulation in such contract, that for any failure on the part of the company, after the time within which it agreed to do the work, it would pay the owner $1 per day for each day it was in default, will be construed to have been intended by the parties as a penalty, and not as liquidated damages; and on a breach of the stipulation the owner would be entitled to recover the actual loss or injury sustained by him therefrom, which is the diminution of the value of the lot resulting from the obstruction or interruption by the railroad of the streets on which the work was to be done. Hooper v. Savannah and Memphis R. R. Co., 69 Ala., 529. 1881.

2. Death of vendor; costs of obtaining deed from infant heirs. A land owner contracted with a railway company to sell it a certain portion of his land; he died; and the legal estate in the lands in question descended to infants. Held, that inasmuch as the vendor, knowing that the purchasers would take that portion of his lands, had suffered the legal estate therein to descend to infants, he had thereby occasioned the necessity for a suit, in order to procure a conveyance of the legal estate, and that the costs of the suit must be defrayed out of the purchase money. Midland Counties Ry Co. v. Wescomb, 2 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 211. 1840.

3. Delivery to carrier. The rule that delivery to the usual carrier, with proper instructions, is to be considered delivery to a consignee who has ordered goods from a distance without giving special directions as to shipment, is applicable to a case where the goods shipped are not all of the particular grade ordered, if they have been received by the consignee with knowledge of the fact and without objection. In such case, in the absence of any warranty by the consignor, he is not liable for damage to the goods occurring while they are in the hands of the carrier. Graff v. Foster, 67 Mo., 512. 1873. See, also, Wigton v. Bowley, 130 Mass., 252, 1881; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 828.

Intoxicating Liquor — Right of Re-entry.

4. — If a man places his wheat in a railroad car under a contract to sell it, by the terms of which contract it is not to be removed until paid for, he does not thereby part with his right of possession, and he has the right to remove the same from the car if not paid for. Toledo, Wabash and Western Ry Co. v. Gilvin, 81 Ill., 511. 1876.

5. — Where corn is shipped by railroad for a purchaser, a bill of lading forwarded to him, and a draft drawn on him for the price, which is paid, the title to the grain will, ipso facto, be transferred to and vested in such purchaser, but the acceptance and payment of drafts drawn on general account, without reference to any particular lot forwarded, will not pass the title. Cobb v. Illinois Central R. R. Co., 88 Ill., 394, 1878; 21 Amer. Ry Rep., 317.

6. Intoxicating liquor. Where an agent takes in Michigan a verbal order for liquors and transmits it to his principals in Ohio for approval, and the latter there approve it and ship the goods to a common carrier in Ohio, and the vendee accepts the goods in Michigan, paying the freight charges, the contract is an Ohio contract, and not a Michigan one; and the transaction is not within the Michigan prohibitory liquor law. Kling v. Fries, 88 Mich., 275. 1876.

7. Loss of goods in depot; when title passes. Cider was sold by G. to P., upon an agreement that P. would pay for the cider upon production of the shipping receipt. The cider was placed in the defendant's depot to be loaded, and the shipping receipt not yet made out. The cider was lost by the neglect of the carrier. Held, that the title to the cider had not yet passed from G., and that he could recover for the loss. Gilbert v. N. Y. Central R. R. Co., 6 Thompson & Cook (N. Y. Supreme Ct.), 662. 1875.

8. Payment of purchase money into court. The plaintiff agreed to sell lands to a railway company at a sum to be paid on completion, with interest at four per cent. from the date of the agreement. The company was to be at liberty to take possession on making a certain deposit. If from any cause, other than default of the vendor, the purchase was not completed in six months, the interest was, from the expiration of the six months, to be at the rate of five per cent.

The deposit was made, and possession taken. The company, when pressed to complete, more than three years after the date of the agreement, alleged inability from want of funds. Held (affirming the decision of Stuart, V. C.), that the plaintiff was not entitled to an order, on motion, for payment of the balance of the purchase money into court. Pryse v. Cambrian Ry Co., Law Reports, 2 Chancery Appeal Cases, 444. 1867.

9. Purchase money deposited in bank; failure of bank. Plaintiff contracted with the B. W. and S. Ry Co. to sell lands at 4,069l. Pending the investigation, the company requested permission to enter and carry on its works, offering to pay the purchase money into a bank in joint names. Plaintiff consented, if the payment or deposit were to be made into his own bankers, and interest at 5l. per cent. paid up to the time of completion. The money was so paid in, and the company entered and worked. The bank failed. Held, that the plaintiff, and not the company, was liable for the loss. St. Paul v. Birmingham Ry Co., 23 Eng. Law & Equity, 87; 17 Jurist, 1176. 1853.

10. Purchase of railway; liability of vendee for prior acts of vendor. By the Statute of 1874, ch. 55, the Old Colony R. R. Co. was authorized to purchase the rights, franchise and property of the Middleborough and Taunton R. R. Co., and the latter was empowered to convey to the former its franchise and property, rights, easements, privileges and powers, and thereupon the former company was to "be subject to all the duties, liabilities, obligations and restrictions to which said last named corporation may be subject." Held, that the Old Colony R. R. Co., upon the completion of the purchase and conveyance, became directly liable in an action of tort for damage occasioned by the prior neglect of the Middleborough and Taunton R. R. Co. New Bedford R. R. Co. v. Old Colony R. R. Co., 120 Mass., 397. 1876.

11. Right of re-entry; ejectment. Where a contract for the sale of land contains a provision that upon default of the vendee, in payment of the principal or interest, or in any other stipulation of the contract, the vendor may re-enter, and the vendee makes default, and, on demand, refuses to deliver possession, Change of — Evidence — Misconduct.

the vendor may maintain ejectment. Central Pacific R. R. Co. v. Mudd, 59 Cal., 585. 1881.

12. Sale of wood. Where anything remains undone necessary to convey the title to personal property which is sought to be delivered to the vendee by the vendor under a contract for the sale and delivery of the same, an action on the contract for the value of the property cannot be maintained by the vendor. But where such thing remains undone through the vendee's fault, he may be liable for a breach of such contract. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co. v. McGuire, 62 Ind., 140. 1878.

13. Statute of frauds. The making of substantial improvements, pursuant to an oral agreement to convey the real estate improved, by a vendee in possession prior to and at the time of the agreement, is such a part performance as takes the agreement out of the statute of frauds. Pfiffner v. Stillwater and St. Paul R. R. Co., 28 Minn., 348. 1877.

14. — A delivery to a common carrier specified in a verbal contract of sale does not take it out of the operation of the statute of frauds; there must be an acceptance by the vendee or an authorized agent, and an authority to receive for transportation carries with it no implied authority to accept. Allard v. Greasert, 61 N. Y., 1. 1874.

15. Stoppage in transitu. Goods were shipped by the vendor on board of a general ship, belonging to a firm of which the purchaser was a member, and registered in the purchaser's name. Three parts of the bill of lading (by which the goods were deliverable at Goole to the purchaser or assigns) were handed to the vendor, and the fourth part retained by the master. Held, that the delivery on board was not delivery to the purchaser, so as to preclude stoppage in transitu before the delivery of the goods at Goole. Schotsmans v. Lancashire and Yorkshire R'y Co., Law Reports, 1 Equity Cases, 849. 1865.

16. Usage. A. sold grain to B. for cash; B. did not pay for it, but sold and delivered it to C., who was ignorant that it was not paid for. A. replevied the grain. At the trial there was proof of a custom in the grain trade on cash sales to deliver the grain to the buyer before payment, and to allow him time for payment not exceeding ten days, and also of a usage for the buyer in such cases to sell the grain at any time after delivery to him. Held, that title to the grain passed to C. Goodwin v. Boston and Lowell R. R. Co., 111 Mass., 487. 1873.

VENUE.

1. Change of. The provisions of the Code relating to the granting of a change of venue in civil actions are applicable to proceedings on appeal from an award of damages for right of way by a sheriff's jury. Whitney v. Atlantic Southern R'y Co., 53 Ia., 651, 1890; 21 Amer. R'y Rep., 175.

2. — An application of a railroad company for a change of venue, based on the affidavit of an agent whose duty it is to investigate the facts connected with all claims against the company, and who is conversant therewith, is sufficient. Jones v. Chicago and Northwestern R. R. Co., 36 Ia., 68. 1872. See, also, Hedge v. Gibson, 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ia.), 69. 1882.

3. — Various questions of practice on changes of venue determined. Bannigan v. Central Iowa R'y Co., 58 Ia., 671, 1892; 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 491; Edwards v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 48 Cal., 460, 1874; Hall v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 49 Cal., 454, 1875; Houston and Texas Central R'y Co. v. Ryan, 44 Tex., 426, 1876; Taylor v. Atlantic and Pacific R. R. Co., 68 Mo., 397, 1878; Pa. Canal Co. v. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co., 2 Pearson (Pa.), 298, 1877.

VERDICT.

1. Evidence. The verdict will be sustained in the case of a conflict of evidence, unless it appears that it was not the result of an honest and intelligent exercise of judgment. Moody v. St. P. and S. C. R'y Co., 41 Ia., 284. 1875.

2. Misconduct. Discussion by a juror, outside of the jury room, of a case pending and undecided before him, is the clearest evidence that he is not an unbiased and impartial juror, notwithstanding his disclaimer of the influence of such discussion upon his own mind. Poole v. Chicago, etc., R. R. Co., 2 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 251. 1831.

Collision—Carrier's Charges—Degree of Care Required.

3. — To render invalid a verdict arrived at by aggregating the several amounts which the different jurors are in favor of, and dividing the result by twelve, there must have been an agreement on their part in advance to be bound by the verdict thus obtained. Hamilton v. Des Moines Valley R. R. Co., 36 Ia., 81. 1872.

4. Motion to direct verdict; waiver. Where, in an action to recover for personal injuries, a motion asking the court to direct a verdict for defendant on the ground of plaintiff's contributory negligence was overruled, and a verdict for the plaintiff was subsequently set aside upon motion of the defendant upon the same ground, it was held that the defendant, by filing the latter motion, waived the error, if any, committed by the court in overruling the former. Laverenz v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 53 Ia., 321. 1890.

5. Practice. Various matters of practice determined. Fallon v. Brooklyn City, etc., R. R. Co., 56 N. Y., 652, 1874; Dougherty v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 62 Mo., 554, 1876; Kelley v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 53 Wis., 74, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 469; Steele v. Charlotte, Columbia and Augusta R. R. Co., 11 So. Car., 589, 1878; Wilson v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 62 Cal., 164, 1882; Ebersole v. Northern Central R. R. Co., 23 Hun (N. Y.), 114, 1880; Thompson v. Cincinnati, Lafayette and Chicago R. R. Co., 54 Ind., 197, 1876; Pitzer v. Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago R'y Co., 80 Ind., 560, 1881.

6. Successive verdicts set aside. To permit, even after three trials, a verdict to stand without evidence, is to plunder a citizen under the form of law. Lodge v. Railroad Co., 10 Philadelphia, 158. 1874.

7. — There had been three verdicts for the same party, the last sustained by the circuit court. Although the supreme court may be of the opinion that the weight of evidence is against it, yet the verdict and judgment will not be disturbed. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co. v. Graves, 78 Ky., 74. 1879.

VESSELS.

1. Collision. The anchoring of a vessel in an unsafe place is a negligent act, and if she is run into and injured by another vessel, or if persons in charge of her are injured, and the improper anchorage was a proximate cause of the injury, no action lies against the owner of the colliding vessel. Lambert v. Staten Island R. R. Co., 70 N. Y., 104, 1877; Thompson v. Same, ib., 598, 1877.

WAREHOUSEMEN.

See CARRIAGE OF MERCHANDISE; FIRES; FORMER ADJUDICATION.

1. Carrier's charges. A warehouseman, with whom freight, on which the charge for transportation is unpaid, is stored by a common carrier, and who, without the knowledge or consent of the common carrier, delivers the property to the consignee, is liable to the common carrier for the amount of his charges. Compton v. Shaw, 1 Hun (N. Y.), 441. 1874.

2. Conversion; damages. The defendant, as a warehouseman, held for the plaintiffs corn belonging to them. G., an agent of the plaintiffs, obtained sixty quarters from the defendant, promising to forward it a delivery order from the plaintiffs. T. subsequently contracted to purchase sixty quarters of corn from the plaintiffs, and, having obtained from the plaintiffs a delivery order to himself, indorsed it to G., who forwarded it to the defendant as the delivery order which he had promised to send to it. T. was unable to pay for the corn, and G. never accounted to the plaintiffs for the price of the sixty quarters of corn which G. had obtained. Held (overruling the exchequer decision), by Bramwell and Thesiger, L. JJ., that, although there had been a conversion of the sixty quarters of corn by the defendant, the plaintiffs were only entitled to nominal damages. Hiort v. London and Northwestern R'y Co., Law Reports (4 Exchequer Division), 188, 1879; 81 Eng. (Moak.), 441.

3. Degree of care required. As to goods in their possession merely as warehousemen common carriers are bound to no more than ordinary care or such as a man of ordinary prudence would use in respect to his own property placed in like circumstances. Pike v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 40 Wis., 583, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 447; White v. Colorado Central R. R. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S. C. C.), 559, 1878.

Fire — Refusal to Deliver Grain at Warehouse.

4. — After the responsibility of a railroad as a common carrier has ceased, it may charge for storage of goods as warehousemen, in which case it will be liable for ordinary care in relation to the goods. But where they are acting in good faith as mere depositaries, without pay, they are only responsible for slight care, and would not be liable for an act of ordinary negligence on the part of their servant in taking care of the goods. So held where flour had been received by the consignee and placed in a separate part of the depot at his request, and there stored gratuitously, where it was injured by leakage of coal oil. Brown v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., 54 N. H., 585, 1874; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 195.

5. Fire. A prima facie case of negligence is made out against a warehouseman who refuses to deliver property stored with him, upon proof of demand and refusal. Such evidence alone is sufficient to show a conversion by him. But if it appear that the property, when demanded, had been burned, the burden of proof is then on the bailor to show that the fire was the result of the negligence of the warehouseman. Wilson v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 62 Cal., 164. 1882.

6. — In an action to recover of a railroad company for the loss of goods delivered to it for transportation, where it was admitted by the pleadings that the goods were destroyed by fire while in defendant's warehouse, and alleged that such fire occurred through defendant's negligence, held, that the burden of proof was upon the plaintiff to establish such negligence before he could recover. Denton v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 52 Ia., 161. 1879.

7. — The evidence examined in an action for damages for negligence in management of a lamp by a warehouseman. Wilson v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 7 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 400; again reported, 9 ib., 161 (Cal.), 1882; Kronshage v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 45 Wis., 500, 1878.

8. — Putting a large quantity of powder (one hundred and sixty kegs) in the same warehouse with plaintiff's goods was negligent conduct, for which defendant is liable in damages to the extent of the loss resulting to plaintiff from the presence of such powder in the warehouse. A fire occurring in defendant's warehouse, where plaintiff's goods were stored, there being a large quantity of powder in the same house, if the firemen who resorted to the place for the purpose of extinguishing the fire were, by the presence of powder in the house, hindered and prevented from saving plaintiff's goods, the powder may be regarded as the proximate cause of the loss. White v. Colorado Central R. R. Co., 5 Dillon (U. S. C. C.), 428. 1879.

9. Measure of damages; loss of samples. Where a commercial traveler deposited a case of patterns in a waiting-room of the defendant and it was lost, held, that the plaintiff, in an action against it as a warehouseman for negligence, could not recover damages beyond the actual value of the article lost. There is no undertaking on the part of warehousemen to be answerable beyond the actual value of the article, except by special contract. Anderson v. North Eastern R'y Co., 6 Hurlstone & Norman (Exchequer), American Reprint, 914; 4 Law Times (N. S.), 216. 1861.

10. Place of delivery. If the place of consignment can be reached by any track of which the railroad company is the owner or lessee, or in the lawful use, or which can be lawfully and rightfully used by it, the company is bound to deliver at that place. But this is the extent of the duty imposed by the constitution. The contrary interpretation would involve the fundamental law in the absurdity of commanding the performance of an unlawful act. A carrier cannot be compelled to deliver over the track of another company. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co. v. Hoyt, 1 Bradwell (Ill.), 374. 1878.

11. Refusal to deliver grain at warehouse. To make a railway company liable under § 82, ch. 114, R. S. of 1874, for not delivering grain to the consignee, or place of consignment, the freight must be in bulk, and must be consigned to the warehouse or place in question at the time of shipment. A demand at the place of destination is not, of itself, sufficient. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Stanbro, 87 Ill., 195, 1877; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 180.

12. — In a simple action on the case, without reference to the statute, against a railway company, for not delivering grain shipped in bulk to a particular warehouse, the true measure of damages is the necessary cost of moving the cars to the place required. If the suit is under the statute, the depreciation in the price of the grain may be considered. Ib.

13. Watchman. Where the daily average of goods stored in a railway warehouse does not exceed $500, ordinary care does not require the company to keep a night watch about such warehouse, or to have some one to sleep therein. Pike v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 40 Wis., 583, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 447; Kronshage v. Same, 40 Wis., 587, 1876.

14. — Plaintiff's goods (of the alleged value of less than $900) having been destroyed by fire in defendant's depot, it was error to submit to the jury the questions, whether the goods might have been saved if a night watch had been provided, or if some one had slept in the depot. Ib.

15. Warehouse on railway. A warehouse on a railway right of way is not a fixture. Evans v. McLucas, 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (So. Car.), 810. 1881.

16. When carrier's liability ends. Where goods are carried to their place of destination and there deposited in a warehouse, are kept safely for the consignee until he has had reasonable time to remove them, and are afterwards destroyed by fire, the company is not liable for them as a common carrier. Lemke v. Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R'y Co., 39 Wis., 449, 1876; 18 Amer. R'y Rep., 406; Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston R. R. Co. v. Maris, 16 Kans., 333, 1876; Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Friend, 64 Ill., 303, 1872.

WAREHOUSE RECEIPTS.

1. Construction. Warehouse receipts for grain in store should be construed by their terms and by commercial usage. In commerce they would be understood to represent the title to the quantity of grain specified, and changes in bulk caused by delivery and shipments would not affect the title of the holder of receipts, and he could call for his proper quantity so long as that much remained in store. Nor would the consumption of the grain by the warehouseman make any difference so long as the quantity is kept good. But if the grain is all consumed by the owner's express or implied consent, it may fairly be assumed that the owner and the receptor have agreed upon a sale to the latter, especially if the receipts imply that the bailment may be converted into a sale at the option of the parties. Ledyard v. Hibbard, 48 Mich., 431. 1882.

WARRANTY.

See CONVEYANCE.

1. Sale of railway bonds. A statement in an advertisement of railway bonds for sale, that "the road is in successful operation and earning net more than the interest on all its bonds," held to be a representation, not that the road was earning that amount at the exact date of the advertisement or during the time it might appear in the newspaper, but that the road was then on a paying basis and was steadily earning net more than the interest on all its bonds. Blake v. Watson, 45 Conn., 323. 1877.

WAR OF 1861.

See CARRIAGE OF MERCHANDISE; CONFISCATION; INJURIES TO EMPLOYEES.

1. Capture of property. The carrier is liable if he negligently expose property to capture by a public enemy, in consequence of which it is captured and destroyed. Caldwell v. Southern Express Co., 1 Flippin (U. S. C. C.), 85. 1866.

2. Carriage of Confederate soldiers. When, during the late war, a company of men, organized as soldiers, though unarmed, were on their way from Columbus to Atlanta, with the open intent to offer themselves to Governor Brown for service as soldiers in the Confederate army, and a railroad company received them on its car as soldiers, with their baggage, the transportation to be paid for by the state or Confederate authorities, it was held that both the company of men and the railroad company were engaged in an illegal transaction, and the rule in pari delicto applies to a suit against the railroad company for negligence in its duty as a common carrier. Redd v. Muscogee R. R. Co., 48 Ga., 102, 1873; 11 Amer. R'y Rep., 890.

8. — But when it appeared by the proof that one of the soldiers having with him a negro slave, and the railroad company refused to carry the slave as a soldier, or as a part of or adjunct to the company, but demanded and received from the soldier fare for said slave as an ordinary passenger, the rule in pari delicto does not apply, and if the owner of the slave is injured by the negligence of the road he can recover for the injury. Ib.

4. Circulating notes of railway company. The circulating notes of a railway company, payable in either gold, silver or Confederate money on demand, were issued in 1862. After the war had closed, a demand, so as to compel the company to elect whether to pay in Confederate notes or other currency, became unnecessary, as the payment of Confederate money was then illegal. Miss. and Tenn. R. R. Co. v. Green, 9 Helskell (Tenn.), 588. 1872.

5. Confederate money. A payment of a school fund loan in Confederate money during the war by a railway company held void. New Orleans, St. Louis and Chicago R. R. Co. v. State, 52 Miss., 877. 1875.

6. — Deposits of Confederate money are payable in accordance with the value of such money at the time of the deposit. Georgia R. R. and Banking Co. v. Dabney, 52 Ga., 515. 1874.

7. — Contracts made during the war in one of the Confederate States, payable in Confederate currency, but not designed in their origin to aid the insurrectionary government, are not, because thus payable, invalid between the parties. Wilmington and Weldon R. R. Co. v. King, 91 U. S., 8. 1875.

8. — Allowing stockholders, during the war, to pay up their entire stock subscribed in the then depreciated Confederate currency, before regular calls were made, is illegal on the part of the directors, but the act of the directors, being ultra vires, will not discharge other stockholders from paying for their stock in proper calls made, because such act is a mere nullity and will not prevent the company from still collecting from those who paid in such currency the real amount due by them. Macon and Augusta R. R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga., 814. 1876.

9. Confiscation; railway stock. The decree of the Confederate courts confiscating the stock of the Petersburg R. R. Co. is wholly void. The company was held liable to the stockholders for the dividends accruing, computing the same according to the market value of Confederate money at the time the dividends were declared. Keppel v. Petersburg R. R. Co., Chase's Decisions, 167. 1868.

10. Impressment. A mere notice of seizure of property for war purposes, unaccompanied by any act of possession, does not constitute an impressment of the property. Central R. R. and Banking Co. v. Atlantic and Gulf R. R. Co., 50 Ga., 444. 1873.

11. Limitations. The statute of limitations was suspended by the war of the rebellion. Ellis v. Atlantic and Gulf R. R. Co., 61 Ga., 862. 1878.

12. Military control of railway. Where a railroad company was under the military control of the government, and operated by its officers in the transportation of troops, munitions of war and supplies, so that it was not in the free and unrestrained exercise of its franchise, held, that the company was not liable as a common carrier for refusing to receive freights for transportation, it not being safe to undertake their carriage. Phelps v. Illinois Central R. R. Co., 94 Ill., 548, 1880; Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Phelps, 4 Bradwell (Ill.) 258, 1879. See, also, Cobb v. Ill. Central R. R. Co., 38 Ia., 601. 1874.

13. — A common carrier is not liable for property received within the Confederate lines for transportation, which was seized and destroyed by Confederate soldiers in obedience to military orders, and of which no notice was given to the consignor. Nashville and Chattanooga R. R. Co. v. Estes, 10 Lea Water Tanks—Action for Damages.

(Tenn.), 749, 1832; 3 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 492.

14. — If a citizen and a railroad company were ordered by the military authorities to transport the cotton of defendant in error from Chattanooga to Atlanta during the war, and they obeyed, and a part of the cotton was lost or destroyed, but not through the negligence or fault of the railroad company, it would not be responsible for such loss. It was the duty of defendant in error, having notice of such orders and the transportation of his cotton, to look after it himself. If loss ensued from his failure to do so, he must bear it. Railroad Co. v. Hurst, 11 Heiskell (Tenn.), 625. 1872.

15. Mortgage bonds; Confederate money. Notes issued by the Confederate government having become the currency in which contracts were made and business conducted in the insurrectionary states, during the recent civil war, and such notes having been designated by general custom as notes for so many "dollars," parol evidence is admissible, where suit is brought . . . to enforce a contract payable in "dollars," and made during the war, to prove — the above condition of things being first shown — that the term "dollars," as used in the contract, meant, in fact, Confederate notes. In the absence of such evidence the presumption of law would be that by the term "dollars" the lawful currency of the United States was intended. Confederate Note Case, 19 Wallace, 548. 1873.

16. — The interest payable on a railway mortgage bond, issued as above mentioned, follows the character of the principal, and is payable in like currency. Ib.

17. Public enemy. The destruction of property by the Confederate army cannot be set up by a common carrier in Tennessee as the act of the "public enemy." Nashville and Chattanooga R. R. Co. v. Estis, 7 Heiskell (Tenn.), 622. 1872.

18. — A railroad company ceased to be a common carrier while its road was in the hands of the Confederate authorities, appropriated to military uses. Ib.

19. — Whether spirits delivered to a railroad company for transportation were destroyed by the order of the Confederate authorities, as a military measure to prevent their falling into the hands of the approaching federal army, or as a matter of public necessity for the safety of the people in the neighborhood, in either case such destruction would be a good defense for the company whose road was at the time in the hands of said authorities. Ib.

20. Slave accompanying troops killed on trains. Where the question at issue was whether a slave, for the killing of which the action was brought, was on the cars of the defendant as a passenger or as an attachment to a military organization then being transported to Atlanta for the purpose of entering the service of the Confederate States in the war against the United States, evidence showing who paid the fare of such slave is material. Muscogee R. R. Co. v. Redd, 54 Ga., 33. 1875.

21. — The conversation between the soldier in whose employ said slave was and the conductor, as to the payment of his fare, showing a demand therefor by the latter, was admissible. Ib.

WASTE WATER.

1. Water tanks. Where a railway company turns its waste water from a tank upon the premises of another, where it spreads and freezes, doing damage to the property of the owner, the company cannot claim exemption from liability on the ground that the freezing of the water was an act of nature, as such a result, from its wrongful act, might have been foreseen. To excuse from liability for an act of nature in combination with the defendant's own act, it must be such as could not have been foreseen and prevented by the exercise of ordinary care and prudence. Chicago and Northwestern R'y Co. v. Hoag, 90 Ill., 339. 1878.

WATERCOURSES.

See BRIDGES; EMINENT DOMAIN.

1. Action for damages. It is not error in the court below to dismiss an action against a railroad company on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction thereof, because the charter of the defendant's company provides the manner in which a party injured by the construction of its road shall proceed to recover damages, where the complaint does not allege that the cause of action arose from the construction of said road. Cole v. Carolina Central R'y Co., 74 N. C., 587. 1876.

2. — In an action for damages it was claimed that the railway company had negligently caused a pond of water by which malaria was produced. By way of amendment plaintiff sought to set up the allegation that the embankment had exposed to sun and air earth that had been previously covered by water, thus causing malaria. Held, that the amendment contained a new cause of action. Central R. R. and Banking Co. v. Wood, 51 Ga., 515, 1874; 8 Amer. R'y Rep., 9.

3. — Where a declaration alleges the construction of a dam by a railway company on its land adjoining that of the plaintiff, and thereby overflowing the land of the latter, and the proof shows the closing of a culvert under its road by the defendant, through which the water was accustomed to flow, this will sustain the allegation in the pleading, and there will be no variance. Illinois and St. Louis R. R. and Coal Co. v. Fehringer, 82 Ill., 129. 1876.

4. Bridges. Congress has authority to regulate or prohibit the construction of bridges across the Mississippi river. It can also delegate that authority to one of the chiefs of a department. The United States has the right to prevent their construction otherwise than as prescribed by congress, and the federal courts have jurisdiction for that purpose. Under these acts the secretary of war had the right to determine whether the construction of a bridge at a given point would seriously affect the navigation of the river and to declare that a bridge should not be there built. United States v. Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. Co., 5 Bissell (U. S. C. C.), 410, 1873; Same v. Same, ib., 420.

5. — The legislature of the state of Kansas has the power to pass an act authorizing the organization of a corporation to build a bridge across the Missouri river at a place where said river forms the boundary line between the state of Kansas and the state of Missouri. Hunt v. Kans. and Mo. Bridge Co., 11 Kans., 412. 1873.

6. — When the charter of a railroad company gives it the right to construct its road across a watercourse only on condition that the same should be restored to its former state or in such manner as not to impair its usefulness, a bridge erected over such watercourse which does not fulfil this condition of the charter is both a public and private nuisance, as much so as if it had been erected without legislative authority. Healy v. Joliet and Chicago R. R. Co., 2 Bradwell (Ill.), 435. 1878.

7. — The defendant was authorized by its act of parliament to construct a railway bridge across a navigable river. The act provided that it should not be lawful to detain any vessel navigating the river for a longer time than sufficient to enable any carriages, animals or passengers, ready to traverse, to cross the bridge, and for opening it to admit such vessel. The defendant employed a contractor to construct the bridge in conformity with the provisions of the act of parliament, but, before the works were completed, the bridge, from some defect in its construction, could not be opened, and the plaintiff's vessel was prevented from navigating the river. Held, that the defendant was liable for the damage thereby caused to the plaintiff. Hole v. Sittingbourne R'y Co., 6 Hurlstone & Norman (Exchequer), 498. 1861.

8. — Plaintiffs owned several lots fronting on a navigable river, and were accustomed to use their water front in fastening logs, putting in rafts and shipping lumber. Defendant, by permission of the legislature, built a bridge over the river, and an embankment. Held, that plaintiffs are entitled to recover for any injury to their riparian rights caused by such bridge and embankment. Chapman v. Oshkosh and Mississippi River R. R. Co., 33 Wis., 629. 1873.

9. — Where the erection of a railroad bridge across a river in a city causes a permanent injury or depreciation in the value of a lot in the immediate vicinity which is used for dock purposes, such injury is a proper element of damages, and it is proper to allow the lot owner to show such damage by proving the value of his property before the erection of the bridge and its value after, or, in other words, to prove how much less the property would sell for in consequence of the building of the bridge. Chicago and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Stein, 75 Ill., 41. 1874.

10. — A cause of action for damages caused by overflow, resulting from the insufficient width of a bridge, accrues when the overflow occurs, and not upon the construction of the bridge. Moison v. Great Western R'y Co., 14 Upper Canada (Queen's Bench), 109, 1856; Vanhorn v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., 18 ib., 356, 1859. But see Carron v. Great Western R'y Co., 14 ib., 192. 1856.

11. — A railroad corporation held liable in damages for building a bridge across a river with a pier, turned obliquely to the course of the river, in such a manner as to turn the water of the stream, in time of freshets, upon the plaintiff's grass land, thereby throwing sand and earth upon it, and gully-ing and washing away the same, it appearing that the bridge could, at an additional expense, have been erected with safety to the railroad, in such a manner as not to injure said land. Held, that the plaintiff was not estopped from maintaining his action for the damage so caused to his land by reason of having previously, by deed, conveyed to the said railroad corporation a portion thereof, for the purposes of a railroad, and, in consideration of the purchase money, released all claims for damages which might be awarded by commissioners, inasmuch as the commissioners could have appraised and awarded only such damages as would have resulted from the construction and use of the road in a legal and proper manner. Spencer v. Hartford, Providence and Fishkill R. R. Co., 10 R. I., 14, 1871; 6 Amer. R'y Rep., 150.

12. Change of channel. A person owning land abutting on a river, through which a creek flows and empties into the river, may, as against proprietors on the opposite side of the river, change the channel and mouth of the creek upon his own land and for his own protection or convenience, if, in so doing, both in the inception and execution of the work, he exercises reasonable care and caution not to injure the rights of others. Cincinnati, etc., R. R. Co. v. Carr, 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 533; Railroad Co. v. Carr, 33 Ohio St., 448. 1882.

13. — In a suit against a railway company for the construction of its road-bed in such a manner as unnecessarily to turn the current of a stream against the plaintiff's land and wash away his soil, the plaintiff may recover for prospective as well as past injury; and a recovery of prospective damages will bar an action for subsequent damage, though caused by an unusual freshet. Foirle v. New Haven and Northampton Co., 112 Mass., 334. 1873.

14. Contract. Contract for the diversion of a watercourse construed. Oursler v. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., 60 Md., 338. 1838.

15. Crossing of railway. Where a railroad company is authorized by its charter to cross any stream in the line of its road, coupled with the duty to restore the stream so crossed to its former state, or to such state as not to impair its usefulness, it was held to apply to streams not navigable as well as to those that were navigable, as legislative authority was as necessary to cross the one as the other. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Moffitt, 75 Ill., 524. 1874.

16. Culverts. A railway company, in constructing its line and works, is bound to bring to their execution the engineering knowledge and skill ordinarily known and practiced in such works. There is no liability on a company for not constructing a culvert so as to pass extraordinary floods. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Sulphur Spring School District, 96 Pa. St., 35, 1880; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 166.

17. — It is the duty of railroad companies to provide by culverts or other means for the safe passage of accumulated water, and they are liable in damages for injuries to adjacent lands by overflow or back-water, caused by their failure or neglect to perform this duty. Carriger v. East Tenn., Va. and Ga. R. R. Co., 7 Lea (Tenn.), 389. 1881.

18. — A railway company constructed a culvert to carry off water from land adjacent to the railway. No complaint was made by the owner of the land of the insufficiency of the culvert, and no application was made to justices for additional accommodation works within the five years limited by the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 73. An injury having subsequently arisen to the land from the insufficiency of the culvert to carry off all the water, an action in respect of such injury was brought by the occupier against the railway company in which it was alleged that the culvert was insufficient. Held, on demurrer, that the action would not lie. Colley v. London and North Western Ry Co., Law Reports, 5 Exchequer Division, 277, 1880; 81 Eng. (Moak), 691.

19. Delaware river. Bridge over the Delaware river held lawful. Attorney-General v. Delaware and Bound Brook R. R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq., 1. 1876.

20. Ditches. A railway company is responsible for damages occasioned by cutting line ditches whereby surplus waters are made to flow upon adjoining lands. Grand Trunk Ry Co. v. Miville, 14 Decisions des Tribunaux (Lower Canada), 469. 1864.

21. — A railroad company, for the purpose of draining a lake into an adjacent river, connected the two by a ditch dug for the most part on its right of way, but where it emptied into the river on land of another. When the water in the river was high it ran through the ditch into the lake and flooded the adjoining country. If no part of the ditch had been dug, except so much as was outside the right of way, the same thing would have happened. If no part had been dug except what was on the right of way, it would not have contributed to the overflow. The company which dug the ditch sold its right of way and other property to another company, and after the sale the lands of an adjoining proprietor were damaged by an overflow from the river. In an action against the latter company to recover the damage, held, that it was not liable. Wayland v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Ry Co., 75 Mo., 548, 1882; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 543.

22. Diversion. Where it is practicable in the building of a railroad to construct a culvert which will allow the passage of the water of a stream in its natural channel, it is negligence not to do so, and a land owner injured by such failure may recover damages. Van Orsdol v. Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Ry Co., 56 Ia., 470, 1881; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 53.

23. — In an action to recover damages sustained by reason of the negligent construction of a railroad over the plaintiff's farm, the fact that the road is built as railroads usually are in such locations is no defense. Ib.

24. — A right of action to recover for permanent injuries to land resulting from the negligent construction of a railroad thereon accrues at the time the first injury is sustained, and not necessarily from the date of the construction of the road. Ib.

25. — In procuring right of way railway companies do not thereby acquire the right to divert a stream of water from its natural channel, to the injury of the land owner. Stodghill v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 43 Ia., 26, 1876; 14 Amer. Ry Rep., 398.

26. — Where the erection of an embankment for the track of a railway closed the natural channel of a stream and diverted the water from a tract of land, it was held that the injury caused to such land thereby was a permanent one, for which damages might be at once fully recovered. Stodghill v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 53 Ia., 341. 1880.

27. — A judgment recovered in an action for such injury would be a bar to future actions to recover for a continuation of the embankment, or for its abatement. The fact that in such action the jury were erroneously instructed not to take into account any future injury by reason of the maintenance of the embankment would not alter the effect of the judgment as an adjudication of all questions which were, or ought to have been, tried in the action. Ib.

28. — The payment of damages for the diversion of a stream is no bar to recovery for damages for subsequent failure to keep the channel open. McLeod v. European and North American Ry Co., 1 Hannay (New Brunswick), 574. 1869.

29. — A grant was made to use certain water and lay down pipes to carry the same, but the size of the pipes and amount of water to be taken were not defined. Pipes were laid, and the water they could supply used for a number of years. Held, that this limited and construed the extent of the grant, and the grantee was liable for damages occasioned by the diversion of a greater quantity of water than originally used, caused by taking up such pipes and replacing them by larger ones. Onthank v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. Co., 8 Hun (N. Y.), 131, 1876; Onthank v. Lake Shore and Michigan Southern R. R. Co., 71 N. Y., 191, 1877.

80. — If the water is that of a stream or natural watercourse, and it was diverted from its natural channel, the company is liable; provided, however, that plaintiff could not recover for damages which he might have averted at comparatively small cost. The company is bound to make sufficient ditches and passages to conduct the water away and prevent it from injuring plaintiff; but if it fails to do so, it is the duty of plaintiff to use all reasonable means to avert and avoid injury by the construction of ditches and levees himself within a reasonable time, if the same can be done at a reasonable amount of labor and expense. MunTERS v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 72 Mo., 514, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 79.

81. — Before 1800, a canal company, under powers of an act of parliament, diverted for the purposes of the canal a considerable part of the water from a brook, which flowed through the plaintiff's land, at a point above the plaintiff's land, the rest of the water continuing to flow in its natural channel. In 1847 an act was passed authorizing the defendant to purchase the canal, to discontinue the use of it, and to fill it up and sell such parts as were not used for the railway. Under these powers the use of the canal was discontinued in 1853, and in 1861 the defendant made a cut by which it restored to the brook, at a point above the plaintiff's land, the water which had been diverted from it. In 1865 the defendant conveyed the part of the canal on which it had made the cut to a purchaser in fee. The bed of the stream, owing to the diminished scour of the water, from 1800 to 1853, had been silted up, so as to be insufficient to carry off the water coming down in extraordinary floods. In 1866 such a flood occurred; the water overflowed the plaintiff's land and damaged his crops; upon which he brought an action against the defendant. Held, that, there being no obligation imposed upon the canal company to continue the diversion, the plaintiff had no right of action. Mason v. Shrewsbury and Hereford R'y Co., Law Reports, 6 Queen's Bench Cases, 578. 1871.

82. — Where the plaintiff stood by and saw the defendant at great expense divert the course of a small stream, which previously had touched the corner of her premises, without objection, until the work of such diversion had been completed, she will not be entitled to a mandatory injunction restoring the stream to its original channel. Slocumb v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 57 Ia., 673. 1832.

83. — A railway company was restrained from taking a large quantity of water for the use of its station from a river under the control of conservators, credit being given to the evidence on their part that taking such water would impede the navigation, against the evidence on the part of the company that taking such water would produce no appreciable effect. Decree of the master of the rolls affirmed. Attorney-General v. Great Eastern R'y Co., Law Reports, 6 Chancery Appeal Cases, 572. 1871.

84. — But where the taking of the water only interfered with the working of a mill for a few minutes each day, the court refused to interfere. Earl of Sandwich v. Great Northern R'y Co., Law Reports, 10 Chancery Division, 707; 27 Eng. (Moak), 218. 1878.

85. — The land owner is not to be prevented from the reasonable and prudent use of his land by reason of the improper construction of the railroad, but if, using his land in a reasonable and prudent manner, he suffers damage from such improper construction, he may recover his damages, notwithstanding such use of his land was subsequent to the construction of the railroad. Perley v. B., C. and M. R. R. Co., 57 N. H., 212. 1876.

86. Dog river. Dog river bridge in Alabama held lawful. Peters v. New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga R. R. Co., 56 Ala., 528. 1876.

87. Equity. A court of equity may compel the removal of obstructions to the flow of water in a watercourse. Lamar v. Railroad Co., 10 So. Car., 478. 1878.

88. Evidence. Evidence held sufficient to sustain a verdict for damages for overflow caused by an embankment. Fogerty v. Minneapolis and St. Louis R'y Co., 80 Minn., 185. 1888.

Floods — Multiplicity of Suits.

39. — A farmer may testify as to the value of the grass destroyed by flood. Byrne v. Minneapolis and St. Louis R'y Co., 29 Minn., 200. 1883.

40. Floods. A proprietor of lands situated nearly a mile from a railway has at common law a right to sue for damages for injury done to his property in consequence of the operations of the railway company. That railway companies are bound so to construct their works as to protect proprietors of lands on a lower level, not only from the effects of usual and ordinary floods, but also of unusual and extraordinary falls of rain, unless these occurrences are such as could not be reasonably anticipated. Circumstances considered in which damages were awarded for injury caused by the insufficiency of railway works. Potter v. Hamilton and Strathaven R'y Co., 3 Scotch Session Cases (3d series), 83. 1864.

41. — Where a corporation has exercised ordinary care in the construction or repair of bridges and culverts over watercourses on private land, and is not otherwise guilty of negligence, it cannot be made liable for damages occasioned an adjacent proprietor by extraordinary floods choking or washing out the channel of the stream. Illinois Central R. R. Co. v. Bethel, 11 Bradwell (Ill.), 17. 1832.

42. Injunction. A court of equity may enjoin proceedings at law involving an estoppel. This principle applied to an estoppel in relation to use of water in the present case. Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures v. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co., 83 N. J. Eq., 329. 1880.

43. — Defendant made excavations on its own land for the purpose of changing in part the flow of a stream. Although the company was working on its own land, the plaintiffs were held to have had notice of the intended works of the company, and having acquiesced for eighteen months, during which the company had expended a large sum of money on the works, they were precluded from asking for the interposition of this court by injunction. Illingworth v. Manchester and Leeds R'y

Co., 2 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 187. 1840.

44. Land made by filling along shore. Soil acquired and redeemed from the water by filling in is in no sense alluvion or accretion which would become the property of the shore-owner, but is the property of the state or its grantees, in whom the title to the land between high and low-water mark is; and no right exists in the shore-owner, who has dedicated to the public streets to the limit of his ownership, to charge such newly-made land with the burden of an easement over it. Hoboken v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 16 Federal Reporter, 816. 1833.

45. Levee. Damages for overflowing land by the construction of a railroad levee cannot be diminished by the enhanced value given to the land, in common with other lands in the vicinity, by the presence of the road. St. Louis, Iron Mt. and Southern R'y Co. v. Morris, 35 Ark., 623, 1830; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 43.

46. — The act of April 30, 1839, "authorizing the building and repairing of levees to protect lands from overflow," is in contravention of the bill of rights, inasmuch as, under its provisions, private property may be taken without reference to the public welfare; and, also, inasmuch as no provision is made therein for the assessment of compensation by a jury. The body of men provided for in the act is not a jury within the meaning of the constitution. They are not authorized to hear testimony, nor are they subject to judicial direction in the hearing of the case. Smith v. Atlantic and Great Western R. R. Co., 25 Ohio St., 91, 1874; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 478.

47. License to change. When a license to fill up a watercourse is obtained from a corporation in possession as owner in consideration of a promise to reopen and restore the watercourse when requested so to do, the licensee, when sued for a breach of his promise, is estopped from setting up that the ownership and maintenance of the watercourse by the corporation are ultra vires. Hamilton and Rossville Hydraulic Co. v. Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton R. R. Co. 29 Ohio St., 341. 1876.

48. Multiplicity of suits. Where several plaintiffs bring different suits at law against one defendant, some for diminishing their supply of water and another for backing water on his mill-wheel, no ground for interference to prevent multiplicity of suits is shown, although the alleged injuries are done in the use by the defendant of one stream. Lehigh Valley R. R. Co. v. McFarlan, 30 N. J. Eq., 135. 1878. See, also, Same v. Society for Establishment of Useful Manufactures, ib., 145. 1878.

49. Navigable streams. It is not necessary that a stream, to be navigable, be so declared by any statute of the state or United States. Usefulness for purposes of navigation for rafts, boats or barges gives navigable character to a stream, reference being had to its natural state rather than to its average depth the year round; and this character may be proved by parol. Little Rock, Mississippi River and Texas R. R. Co. v. Brooks, 39 Ark., 403. 1882.

50. — A party who suffers injury from a public nuisance, a. g., in having his raft, boat or barge stopped by the building of a railroad bridge across a navigable stream, may have his action against the nuisance for damages. Ib.

51. Obstruction. A private person cannot maintain an action for the abatement of a nuisance caused by interrupting the navigation of a navigable stream, unless he suffers damage peculiar to himself, and differing from that suffered by the public who have occasion to use the stream. Jarvis v. Santa Clara Valley R. R. Co., 53 Cal., 438. 1877.

52. — Where a railroad company placed a protection to a draw-bridge in a river, whereby the approach of vessels to dock was obstructed, and the value of the lot upon which the dock was placed was permanently depreciated, and afterwards the owner of the lot and dock sold the same to his wife, and conveyed the legal title to her, it was held that she could not maintain any action against the company for placing the obstruction in front of the dock. Chicago and Alton R. R. Co. v. Maher, 91 Ill., 312. 1878.

53. — Where a railroad company constructed a bridge across a stream not navigable, but affording a large volume of water, by driving piles with spans of only seventeen feet, and leased its road to another company, which, while operating the same as lessee, built a new bridge at the same place, constructed in the same manner, except that the spans were enlarged to fifty feet, but left the piles of the old bridge standing, a portion of the tops being cut off, after which these two companies consolidated, forming a new one with a different name, and the new company continuing to operate the road and use the bridge in such condition, held, that the new company was liable in damages to a riparian owner above, whose land was overflowed and injured in consequence of an obstruction of the stream by drift, etc., caused by the manner in which the bridge was constructed and used, and that no notice to abate the nuisance was necessary to the action. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Moffitt, 75 Ill., 524. 1874.

54. — The plaintiff was the owner of land, lying within the angle formed by the intersection of a highway with an embankment, constructed on the lands of the defendant, upon which its tracks are laid. Prior to the construction of the embankment, large quantities of water flowed during the winter season and in very rainy weather, along the highway, and passed the land of the plaintiff without collecting there. The embankment prevented this water flowing off the land of the plaintiff, and caused it to collect thereon. In an action brought to recover damages for the injuries occasioned thereby, held, that there could be no recovery. Wagner v. Long Island R. R. Co., 2 Hun (N. Y.), 638. 1874.

55. — An action to recover damages for illegally obstructing a navigable river is an action in tort. Doughty v. Atlantic and North Carolina R. R. Co., 78 N. C., 22. 1878.

56. — The court cannot pronounce a simple obstruction in a navigable river to be a nuisance. It is a fact to be found. Delaware and Hudson Canal Co. v. Lawrence, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 163. 1878.

57. Overflow. Where a railroad company, by filling up a trestle under its road, and by making ditches, cattle-guards and culverts too small to carry off the water, overflows adjoining lands, and the owner of such lands sustains damages by reason thereof, the railroad company is liable to the owner of the lands for the amount of the damages actually sustained. Mississippi Central R. R. Co. v. Caruth, 51 Miss., 77, 1875; Mississippi Central R. R. Co. v. Mason, 51 Miss., 284, 1875.

58. — A railroad company in constructing its road over a natural watercourse is required to leave such openings as are sufficient to afford an outlet for all water (from whatever source it may come, and in times of floods and freshets, as well as at other times) which may reasonably be expected to flow through such watercourse. Union Trust Co. v. Cuppy, 26 Kans., 754, 1892; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 562.

59. — Railroad companies, acting within the limits of their franchises, and using due skill and care in the construction and operation of their roads, and having the right of way, are not liable as trespassers, nor for injuries to outside property, which are the natural and unavoidable effect of the road. St. Louis, Iron Mt. and Southern R'y Co. v. Morris, 85 Ark., 622, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 48.

60. — The fact that a railway company owns a right of way over the plaintiff's land does not authorize it to make such a change thereon, by structures or otherwise, as to flow water back upon the land of the plaintiff or others and thereby inflict an injury. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Carey, 90 Ill., 514. 1878.

61. — It is no defense to an action for damages for an overflow occasioned by an insufficient bridge, to show that the bridge stood upon a public street and was used by the public, where the bridge was constructed by a railway company as a part of its embankment. Houston and Great Northern R. R. Co. v. Parker, 50 Tex., 380. 1878.

62. — A railroad company building a levee across a branch which overflows, and thereby causes a greater overflow of adjoining lands, is not relieved from damages therefor by making ditches and trestles that carry off the water as fast as the branch would when not overflowed. St. Louis, Iron Mt. and Southern R'y Co. v. Morris, 85 Ark., 622, 1880; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 48.

63. — A railway company is not liable for damages to any person from the overflow of the water of a stream caused by the necessary and proper elevation of its road-bed, not in the channel of the stream, but upon its own land. Moyer v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 88 N. Y., 351, 1882; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 531.

64. — A railway company is liable for ordinary care in the construction of its culverts, to provide against ordinary rains, but is not required to provide against extraordinary overflows, such as would not be reasonably anticipated. Houston and Great Northern R. R. Co. v. Parker, 50 Tex., 380, 1878; Ellet v. St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern R'y Co., 76 Mo., 518, 1892.

65. — canal. The defendant, owner of a canal, being threatened by an overflow of flood water from a neighboring river, and fearing damage to its premises situated on the banks of the canal, placed across it, at a point above its premises, planks reaching from the bottom of the canal to the coping stone, which was some inches higher than the surface of the canal water. The flood water afterwards broke into the canal at a point above the barricade of the planks, and opposite to the plaintiff's premises, which were also situated on the banks of the canal above the premises of the defendant, and, being penned back by the planks, the water rose in the canal until it flooded the plaintiff's premises. In an action brought to recover damages for the injury so caused, held, that the defendant was not liable, on the ground that the water which did the mischief was not brought there by it, and that there is no duty on the owner of a canal, analogous to that on the owner of a natural watercourse, not to impede the flow of water down it. Nield v. London and North Western R'y Co., Law Reports, 10 Exchequer Cases, 4. 1874.

66. — contract. An agreement of a railroad company, in consideration of the right of way through one's lands, to so build its road-bed as to protect the lands from overflow, imposes upon it, as an artificial person, a personal obligation, for a breach of which it, or a company afterwards consolidated with it, would be liable to an action at law for damages. Sappington v. Little Rock, Mississippi River and Texas R. R. Co., 37 Ark. 23, 1881; 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 380.

Overflow.

67. — damages. Where the usual outlet of water is obstructed so as to overflow the plaintiff's lands, he may recover for the loss of or injury to the crops of hay, etc., or the expense of securing them, in addition to the loss by the depreciation of the land. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Carey, 90 Ill., 514. 1878.

68. — The rule for assessing damages for overflowing land by the construction of an embankment is, to take the actual value of the land at the completion of the work, supposing the consequences to be known, compare it with what the value would have been if the overflow had remained as before the construction of the embankment, and fix the damages at the difference. St. Louis, Iron Mt. and Southern R'y Co. v. Morris, 85 Ark., 622, 1890; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 48; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co. v. Carey, 90 Ill., 514, 1878.

69. — The rule is well settled that when an injury to land occasioned by the commission of a nuisance is of a permanent character, and goes to the entire value of the estate, recovery for the whole injury should be had in a single suit, and a second action cannot be maintained for its continuance. But this rule does not apply to a case where, by reason of the diversion of a stream of running water, the plaintiff's land is annually overflowed and his crops injured. Such injury does not go to the entire value of the estate, but, being of yearly recurrence, is susceptible of periodical apportionment, and may, therefore, be redressed by successive actions. Van Hoozier v. Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. Co., 70 Mo., 145. 1879.

70. — dams. In an action for damages for injuries caused by the overflow of plaintiff's premises, alleged to have been occasioned by the construction of dams by the defendant, it was held that plaintiff was not entitled to recover, because the evidence showed that plaintiff would have suffered like injury if the dams had been removed. Langdon v. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. Co., 48 Ia., 437. 1878.

71. — drain. A company which, for its own profit, undertakes to maintain a delph or drain for carrying off water, is responsible for damage done to the occupier of adjoining land by the bursting of a bank of the delph after an unusual rainfall, though the mischief would not have happened but for the neglect of the persons whose duty it was to keep the outlet of certain dimensions, whereby the water in the delph was penned back. Harrison v. Great Northern R'y Co., 3 Hurlstone & Coltman (Exchequer), 231. 1864.

72. — embankment. A railroad company, in constructing its road across a basin-shaped piece of low land, raised an embankment with a culvert or water-way through which water, collected on one side of the road from the adjacent highlands and from the overflow of a neighboring creek, escaped to the other side and damaged the adjoining premises. Held, that the company was liable; and so far as the overflowed water from the creek contributed to the injury, the liability was the same, whether the overflow was caused by the act of the company in building a bridge over the creek too narrow for the volume of water or not. McCormick v. Kansas City, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs R. R. Co., 70 Mo., 359. 1879.

73. — Where, by reason of the breaking of a culvert, water has accumulated against an embankment of a railway, held, that in letting off the accumulated water the company was only liable for damages resulting from negligence. Cairo and Vincennes R. R. Co. v. Howry, 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 62 (Ind.). 1881.

74. — The grant of a right of way across one's land to a railroad company is no license to it to overflow the grantor's lands by the unskilful construction of a levee on the right of way. St. Louis, Iron Mt. and Southern R'y Co. v. Morris, 85 Ark., 622, 1890; 5 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 48.

75. — The defendant's railway passed across lowlands adjoining a river, over which the flood waters used to spread themselves. Those lowlands were separated from the plaintiff's land by a bank, constructed under certain drainage acts, and which protected the plaintiff's land from the floods. By the construction of the defendant's railway without sufficient openings, the floods could not spread themselves as formerly, and were penned up and flowed over the bank on the plaintiff's land. Held, that, though the defendant had constructed its line according to the provisions of its act, it was liable for an unforeseen injury to the plaintiff, arising from the mode in which the railway was constructed. Lawrence v. Great Northern R'y Co., 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 656; 16 Adolphus & Ellis (N. S.), 643; 71 E. C. L., 643; 20 Law Journal (N. S., Q. B.), 293; 4 Eng. Law & Equity, 265. 1851.

76. — title. The surviving wife may maintain an action against a railway company for an injury occasioned by the overflow of the homestead, resulting from the negligent construction of the railway. Houston and Texas Central R. R. Co. v. Knapp, 51 Tex., 592. 1879.

77. Pipe lines. A foreign corporation, without any authority whatever, laid a pipe for transporting oil on the bottom of a navigable river, on lands belonging to the state, and underneath a draw-bridge of complainant. At that point the channel was so deep and wide as that the laying of the pipe there would not interfere with the bridge. An injunction to restrain such pipe laying was refused. The laying of the pipe line did not interfere with the draw-bridge. United New Jersey R. R. and Canal Co. v. Standard Oil Co., 33 N. J. Eq., 123, 1880; 1 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 33.

78. Riparian rights. The grantor, owning the lands under water on the side of the pier, an easement therein to a reasonable distance will pass to the grantee. Knickerbocker Ice Co. v. Forty-second St., etc., R. R. Co., 65 Howard's Practice (N. Y.), 210. 1883.

79. — The owners of land bordering upon a navigable stream own to high water mark. The act of congress subsequently declaring the stream non-navigable does not extend the rights of the land owners. Wood v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R. Co., 11 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases (Ia.), 499, 1883; Houghton v. C. D. and M. R. R. Co., 47 Ia., 370, 1877.

80. — By force of the statute, a riparian owner, when he extends his shore front, must, if the high water line is substantially a straight line, so extend his side lines as to make them rectangular with such high water line. When the high water line is not straight, the extension of the shore front must be divided proportionately among the riparian owners. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western R. R. Co. ads. Hannon, 37 N. J. Law, 276. 1875.

81. — By the common law, where land lies adjacent or contiguous to a navigable river in which there is an ebb and flow of the tide, any increase of soil formed by the gradual and imperceptible recession of the waters, or any gain by the gradual and imperceptible formation of alluvion, from the action of the water, belongs to the proprietor of the adjacent or contiguous land. And the right to accretion, thus formed, is considered as an interest appurtenant to the principal land, and belonging, in the nature of an incident, to the ownership of that, rather than as something acquired by prescription or possession in the ordinary sense of those terms. Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. v. Chase, 43 Md., 23. 1875.

82. — Where the owner of land not abutting upon a river took water from the stream with the license of the riparian owner and used it for cooling purposes, returning it to the stream unpolluted, held, that a lower riparian proprietor had no grounds for an injunction to restrain such use. Kensit v. Great Eastern R'y Co., Law Reports, 23 Chancery Division, 585. 1883.

83. Springs. The owner of a farm conveyed to a railroad company a portion thereof, upon which was a spring from which he had been accustomed to conduct water by wooden pipes to supply his farm. The deed contained a provision "excepting and reserving from the above described premises the spring issuing from said land, with the privilege, as now held by the parties of the first part, in the use and occupation of said spring, with access to and from said spring to repair, relay with logs or otherwise, without any damage whatever to said spring in consequence of the construction of said railroad." Held, that the title passed subject to the easement, and that it was entitled to use and enjoy the land in all lawful ways not inconsistent with the right reserved to the grantor. That it was entitled to lay its tracks over the spring on protecting its waters from injury, so as not unnecessarily to interfere with the enjoyment of the easement reserved by the grantor. Mat-

theurs v. Delaware and Hudson Canal Co., 20 Hun (N. Y.), 427. 1830.

84. Statute of frauds. An agreement between the owner of an artificial watercourse and a railway company, whereby the former consents that the latter, in building its road, may fill the channel and divert the water into a new channel on its own land, in consideration that the railroad company will open the old channel and restore the water thereto whenever requested, is not a contract for an interest in land within the meaning of the statute of frauds. Hamilton and Rossville Hydraulic Co. v. Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton R. R. Co., 29 Ohio St., 841. 1876.

85. Tunnel. The act of March 21, 1874, extending the time for the completion by the Hudson Tunnel R. R. Co. of its proposed tunnel, did not confer upon that company, organized under the general railroad law, the right to construct its tunnel in the land of the state under the waters of the Hudson, without first obtaining consent of the board of riparian commissioners. Attorney-General v. Hudson Tunnel R. R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq., 176. 1876.

86. — The western terminus of the Hudson river tunnel is defined in the certificate to be on the "western shore of the Hudson river, and within or near Jersey City or Hoboken." The word "shore" is not used in its strictest sense, but in the more extended and popular sense; as that Jersey City is built on the western shore of the Hudson river. State v. Hudson Tunnel R. R. Co., 33 N. J. Law, 543, 1876; 13 Amer. R'y Rep., 82.

WATER-POWER.

1. Compensation. The right to carry water over a railway, for water-power, is property which cannot be taken or destroyed without compensation. Arnold v. Hudson River R. R. Co., 55 N. Y., 631. 1873.

2. — Plaintiffs declared for injury to their mills, water-power, etc., and appurtenances, by filling up a watercourse with dirt, so that the works had to be abandoned. Held, that the evidence of the value of the superintendent's house and other improvements on a single tract of land on which the works were erected was relevant. Little Schuylkill Navigation, etc., Co. v. French, 81, Pa. St., 866. 1876.

3. Diversion. The plaintiff, the owner of a mill operated by the waters of the Tonawanda creek, brought an action to restrain the defendant from diverting the water of the creek by pipes and conducting it to tanks and reservoirs to be used in supplying its engines, and to recover damages for such diversion. It appeared that the defendant's acts materially reduced and diminished the grinding power of the plaintiff's mill, and had damaged him to the extent of $500. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a perpetual injunction restraining such diversion, and to the amount of the damages sustained. Garwood v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 17 Hun (N. Y.), 356, 1879; affirmed, Garwood v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 83 N. Y., 400, 1881; 2 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 493.

4. Mill pond. Where a railroad company would be entitled to protection in laying a track over lands condemned under its charter, from an overflow of water, its licensees to lay a track over the same lands are entitled to the same protection. An injunction to restrain a defendant from raising the water from his mill pond above a certain height is not mandatory; but if it were strictly mandatory, that would not constitute a valid objection to it. Longwood Valley R. R. Co. v. Baker, 27 N. J. Eq., 166. 1876.

WEIGHT AND MEASUREMENT.

See CARRIAGE OF MERCHANDISE.

1. Elevators. Subd. 29 of § 12, title 3, ch. 77 of 1870, authorized the common council of the city of Albany to make ordinances "in relation to the inspection and sealing of weights and measures, and enforcing the keeping and use of proper weights and measures by vendors." Held, that it only authorized the inspection and sealing of weights and measures used by vendors, and was not applicable to scales used by defendant at one of its grain elevators. Hittenbach v. New York Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.), 129. 1879.

Authority to Maintain — Trespass.

WHARVES.

See EMINENT DOMAIN; INJUNCTION; INJURIES TO PASSENGERS.

1. Authority to maintain. The legislature may lawfully grant to a railway company the power to make and maintain a wharf. City of New Orleans v. New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga R. R. Co., 27 La. An., 414. 1875.

2. Municipal authority. By its charter and the statutes of Louisiana the city of New Orleans was authorized to erect and maintain wharves within its limits, and to collect wharfage. Held, that no right of the city was infringed by a subsequent enactment of the general assembly of that state granting to a railway company the authority to inclose and occupy for its purposes and uses a specifically described portion of the levee and batture, and maintain the wharf it had erected on its property within those limits, and exempting it from the supervision and control which the municipal authorities exercise in the matter of public wharves. Railroad Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S., 163, 1881; 9 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 144.

3. Negligence in construction. Where it was alleged that the negligence consisted in the defendant not providing cap logs for its pier, it was error to overrule and offer to show that placing cap-logs thereon would interfere with the loading of vessels in the course of the business of the company. Philadelphia and Reading R. R. Co. v. Ervin, 83 Pa. St., 71. 1879.

4. Obstruction. The plaintiff, in 1839, with the assent of the company, made a siding on his land connecting the railway with a wharf, part of which was in his own occupation and the other part in that of certain tenants; and down to the year 1857 the company carried coals and other goods for the plaintiff and his tenants, placing the trucks on the siding and so sending them down to the wharf. In the course of that year, however, the company (with a view, as the jury thought, of diverting the trade from the plaintiff's wharf to another wharf in which it was interested) gave the plaintiff notice, under another section of its act, that, after the 30th of September, it would no longer provide him with locomotive power for the conveyance of his goods along its line; and on the 1st of October it placed carriages and other things across the junction for the purpose (as the jury found) of permanently obstructing and preventing the plaintiff and his tenants from having access to the wharf by means of their railway. Neither the plaintiff nor his tenants had availed themselves at this time of the authority given to them by the act of parliament to provide locomotive power of their own, and consequently they were not in a position to be actually obstructed. The tenants, however, finding their trade destroyed, removed from the plaintiff's wharf, and carried their business to the company's wharf. Held, that these wrongful acts of the company constituted such a permanent obstruction and injury to the plaintiff's right to the use of his siding as to entitle him as reversioner to maintain an action. Bell v. Midland R'y Co., 10 Common Bench (N. S.), 237; 100 E. C. L., 287. 1861.

5. Personal injuries; custom officer. The owners of a wharf where foreign laden vessels discharge are liable to customs officers who are required to visit the premises in the performance of their duties for personal injuries received, while in the exercise of due care, because of the unsafe or unstable condition of the wharf. Low v. Grand Trunk R'y Co., 72 Me., 313. 1881.

6. Trespass. To a declaration charging the defendant with breaking and entering upon a certain dummy or landing-stage of the plaintiffs, the same being a barge of the plaintiffs moored to a wharf in the river Orwell, and embarking and disembarking from the same passengers and others on, to and from divers ships and vessels, and mooring ships and vessels against the same, the defendant pleaded that the Orwell was a navigable river and common highway; that he had a right to land and was desirous of landing passengers from his steam-vessel at the wharf; that the plaintiff's dummy or landing-stage at the time when, etc., was permanently moored and fixed alongside the wharf, so that his passengers could not embark or disembark there without his vessel being moored thereto and his passengers passing over the same, etc. Held, on demurrer, a sufficient answer to the declaration, the dummy appearing to be a permanent obstruction of the defendant's right to use the river as a highway, which he could only exercise by removing it or passing over it. Eastern Counties Ry Co. v. Darling, 5 Common Bench (N. S.), 821; 94 E. C. L., 821, 1859.

7. Wharfage dues. The joint resolution of the legislature of Louisiana of March 6, 1869, does not confer upon the railroad company or those claiming under it the right to collect wharfage dues from vessels, etc., landing at the levee front of its riparian property. Ellerman v. New Orleans, Mobile and Texas R. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S. C. C.), 120. 1875.

WHISTLE.

See INJURIES TO DOMESTIC ANIMALS; FRIGHTENED TEAMS; SIGNALS.

1. Injunction. Section 1 of the act of March 29, 1879 (Acts 1879, p. 173), provides, in substance, that it shall be the duty of all railway companies, operating in Indiana, to have attached to every engine a proper whistle, and that such whistle "shall, when such engine approaches the crossing of any turnpike or other public highway, and when such engine is not less than eighty nor more than one hundred rods from such crossing," be sounded "continuously, from the time of sounding such whistle until such engine shall have fully passed such crossing." It further provides that it shall not be so construed as to interfere with any city ordinance which has been or may be passed, regulating the management or running of such engine or railroad within the limits of such city. Held, that the statute is a police regulation, within the scope of legislative authority, and is constitutional and valid. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis Ry Co. v. Brown, 67 Ind., 45. 1879.

WILFUL ACTS.

See INJURIES TO PASSENGERS; INJURIES TO EMPLOYEES; INJURIES TO DOMESTIC ANIMALS; TRESPASS.

1. Acts outside of employment. Where a servant goes outside of his employment, and, while not acting in pursuance of the authority given him, inflicts a wilful injury upon one not intrusted to his care by the employer or on one to whom the master owes no duty, the act will be that of the servant alone, and the master cannot be held responsible for it. Chicago and Eastern R. R. Co. v. Flexman, 103 Ill., 546, 1883; 8 Amer. & Eng. R. R. Cases, 354; Hudson v. Missouri, Kansas and Texas R. R. Co., 16 Kans., 470. 1876.

2. Assault; abduction of child. "It is common knowledge" that if the conductor of a train stops his train, pursues a boy into the father's house, with a pistol in his hand, seizes the boy, and carries him off on the train, these wrongful acts are not within the scope of his employment; consequently, the railway company is not liable in damages for such wrongful acts, without allegation and proof that it commanded, authorized or ratified them. Gilliam v. South and North Alabama R. R. Co., 70 Ala., 263. 1881.

3. Fire. The defendant objected that it did not appear but that the casting off of the burning brand was the wilful act of the person who did it, and not within the scope of his employment. Held, that, in the absence of proof to the contrary, it was to be presumed that the fireman or engineer did the act in question in the performance of his usual duties. McCoun v. N. Y. Central and Hudson River R. R. Co., 66 Barbour (N. Y.), 333. 1873.

4. Trespasser; injury by employe. The plaintiff, a boy of thirteen years, and three other boys were trespassers upon a freight train of defendant, moving at a rapid rate from New York towards the Harlem river, and were ordered to get off the car by the defendant's brakeman. The plaintiff begged to stay, but finally jumped or fell from the train, influenced by the threats of the brakeman that unless he got off the train he would kick him off, and by his leaving or falling from the train under these threats he was injured. The brakeman was not engaged in the performance of his duty in attempting to remove the plaintiff from the cars while they were in motion. His threats and his acts were alike unjustifiable in that view. His act was wilful and the defendant was not liable. Hughes v. New York and New Haven R. R. Co., 86 N. Y. Superior Ct., 222, 1873.

5. — But for wanton and wilful acts within the scope of his employment the employer is liable. Murphy v. Central Park, etc., R. R. Co., 48 N. Y. Superior Ct., 96, 1882; Northwestern R. R. Co. v. Hack, 66 Ill., 233, 1872.

1. Practice in writ of error considered. Railroad Co. v. White, 101 U. S., 98, 1879.

WINDING-UP ACT.

See INSOLVENCY.

1. Agreement to repay deposit. An allottee of shares paid his deposit and received an undertaking from the directors that the deposit should be returned in the event that a special act was not obtained. Held, that the allottee was not a proper contributory in the winding up, the scheme having failed. Dover and Deal Ry Co., In re, 15 Eng. Law & Equity, 830; 22 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S., Chanc.), 15; 16 Jurist, 1109; 1 Drewry, 226, 1852.

2. Allotment to stockholders. P. M., a member of the managing committee of a provisionally registered railway company, had allotted to him and accepted one hundred shares. At a meeting of the managing committee, at which P. M. was president, an instruction was given to the allotment committee to allot the shares according to a scheme, by which five hundred shares were reserved to each member of the managing committee. A report was made by the secretary at a subsequent meeting, that the allotment committee had allotted the shares according to the scheme. No entry appeared in the allotment book of the allotment of the five hundred shares to each managing committee-man. Under an order for winding up the company, the master placed the name of P. M. on the list of contributories for one hundred shares, and afterwards for five hundred more shares. On appeal from the decision as to the five hundred shares, it was held that his name should remain for four hundred of them, besides the original one hundred, in respect of which no appeal was made. Oxford and Worcester Ry Co., In re, 8 Eng. Law & Equity, 129; 15 Jurist, 345, 1851.

3. Dissolution of corporation. The act of 1869 provides that the superior court, as a court of equity, may, on the application of any stockholder, pass a decree dissolving and winding up any corporation, where such corporation has abandoned its business and has neglected for an unreasonable time to wind up its affairs and distribute its effects among its stockholders. Held, in a case where a railway company had so abandoned its business and neglected to wind up its affairs, that it was not a sufficient ground for a refusal of the court to dissolve the corporation; that the company had received its franchise from other states as well as from Massachusetts, the dissolution affecting only the franchise conferred by that state. Hart v. Boston, Hartford and Erie R. R. Co., 40 Conn., 524, 1873.

4. Conditional subscription. A. applied by letter for shares in a provisionally registered railway company, and received a letter of allotment of certain shares, on which he was required to pay the deposit; and the letter, with the banking receipt appended thereto, was to be exchanged for scrip upon A.'s executing the parliamentary contract and subscribers' agreement. A. paid the deposit, but did not execute any deed. The scheme having been abandoned, and an order made for winding up the company, the master, in settling the list of contributories, placed A.'s name upon the list, but the vice-chancellor, on appeal, ordered it to be removed. Held, by the house of lords, affirming the decision of the vice-chancellor, that A.'s name had been properly removed from the list of contributories. That A. had not subjected himself to any other obligation or responsibility than to take certain shares in the proposed company in the event of its being in fact established, which it never was. That the Stat. 7 and 8 Vict., c. 110, did not alter the existing law so as to render an allottee of shares liable beyond what his own contract had done. Hutton v. Thompson, 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 708. 1851.

5. Contributories. A. consented by letter to have his name placed on the list of the provisional committee, subject to his approval of the line, and "so that he should be held free from all liabilities;" he attended two meetings, but took no part in the proceedings, and left before any resolution was formally passed or recorded. A few days afterwards he desired that his name might be struck out of the provisional committee, and that was accordingly done. A. afterwards paid 65*l.*, under protest, towards the expenses of the concern. Held, that A. was not a contributory within the meaning of the statute. Roberts, Ex parte, 6 Eng. R. R. & Canal Cases, 310, 1850; Norris v. Cottle, ib., 317, 1850.

6. — A party consented to have his name placed on the list of provisional committeemen, and agreed to take shares. Shares were allotted to him, but he did not pay the deposits thereon until after the undertaking had been abandoned, and he never executed the subscribers' agreement or parliamentary contract, without which it was expressly stated he could take no interest in the company. The master struck his name off the list of contributories. Held, upon appeal from this decision, that he had brought himself within the rule in Uphill's Case, 2 House of Lords Cases, 674, and his name must be replaced on the list of contributories. Direct Shrewsbury R'y Co., In re, 7 Eng. Law & Equity, 28; 20 Law Jour. Rep. (N. S., Chanc.), 479; 1 Simons (N. S.), 281. 1851. See, also, Manwaring's Case, 10 Eng. Law & Equity, 109; 16 Jurist, 263. 1852. See Same Case, 10 Eng. Law & Equity, 222; 16 Jurist, 392. 1852.

7. Shares held as collateral. A. advanced money to B. on the security of railway shares. They were transferred into the name of C. to secure A., and subject thereto for B. C. died insolvent. Held, that A. was not liable, at the suit of the company, for the arrears of calls on the shares. B., not being the registered owner, is not liable. Newby R'y Co. v. Moss, 14 Beavan (Eng. Ch.), 64. 1851.

8. Injunction. A court of equity has no jurisdiction to restrain a creditor of a joint-stock company from suing one of the members, on the ground that an order has been made for winding up the affairs of the company. In Matter of Dover and Deal R. R. Co., 17 Simons (Eng. Ch.), 18. 1850.

YARD OF RAILWAY.

1. Joint use. The Junction R. R. Co. was incorporated to construct a road from a point on the Philadelphia and Reading Railway to a point on the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railway. The line traversed ground of these roads and of the Pennsylvania Railway, that of the last company being the central part of the line and used as its "yard." The line was promoted by the three companies; they owned the stock, their presidents were officers in the Junction Co., which constructed all the line except the portion through the "yard;" this was constructed by the Pennsylvania Co. under the direction of Thompson, its president, who was also president of the Junction Co. No measures had been taken to condemn the land through the "yard," for the Junction Co. The Junction Co. by bill asked for a decree that it was entitled to the "exclusive ownership, possession and use" of that portion through the "yard." Held, that it was not entitled to such decree. Pennsylvania R. R. Co.'s Appeal, 80 Pa. St., 265. 1876.
